Beginning with an open enrollment period in 2013, Exchanges will help individuals and small employers shop for, select, and enroll in high-quality, affordable private health plans that fit their needs at competitive prices. Exchanges will assist eligible individuals to receive premium tax credits or coverage through other Federal or State health care programs. By providing one-stop shopping, Exchanges will make purchasing health insurance easier and more understandable.

Principles and Priorities

The following principles and priorities will inform federal funding and technical support for State establishment of Exchanges:

- Establishing a State-based Exchange. Establishment of an Exchange is a critical step that States must take to be on track for achieving certification of an Exchange by January 1, 2013 under Section 1321. Establishment of an Exchange requires a planning process leading to State action, by legislation or other means, to create an Exchange entity with the authority necessary to meet all the Exchange requirements of the Affordable Care Act. In States that choose, now or at a later point in the process, not to establish an Exchange, HHS will work with the State to establish an Exchange.
- Promoting Efficiency. Exchanges must be mindful of costs for consumers, employers, and the federal government. Exchanges should have the flexibility to respond to local market conditions and take actions to facilitate competition among plans on price and quality. Successful Exchanges will adapt to changes in the market by redesigning and modifying business plans as opportunities develop, and will have the flexibility to deal with insurers, agents, and other business partners in a manner that serves the Exchange's interest in maximizing value for consumers.

- Avoiding Adverse Selection. Successful Exchanges will avoid adverse selection by ensuring that those who buy through the Exchange are a broad mix of the healthy and the less healthy. The tax credits, which can only be accessed through the Exchanges, and insurance reforms required by the Affordable Care Act will reduce the potential for adverse selection against the Exchange, but will not eliminate it. States have flexibility to provide consistent regulation inside and outside the Exchange, and to take additional action to prevent adverse selection under section 1311(e)(1)(B). The federal government will work with States to maximize State flexibility in this area.
- Streamlined Access and Continuity of Care. Section 1311(d)(4)(F) requires Exchanges to evaluate and determine eligibility for applicants in Medicaid, the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP), and other health programs. Exchanges must also comply with all applicable federal statutes relating to nondiscrimination. The federal government will provide critical building blocks and financial support for achieving an efficient enrollment process including verification of eligibility for tax credits. Successful Exchanges will use those building blocks to streamline access for consumers, while also promoting seamless access for applicants eligible for other health programs beyond the Exchange coverage options. Successful Exchanges will upgrade information technology (IT) systems and other business operations, and improve continuity of care across health programs.
- Public Outreach and Stakeholder Involvement. Section 1311(d)(6) requires Exchanges to consult with a broad range of stakeholders in carrying out their activities. Successful Exchanges will undertake aggressive and multi-faceted outreach to inform the public of their services and coverage options. Successful Exchanges will work closely with consumer advocates, national insurers, and community-based insurers, including potential new market entrants, to create a competitive climate that will offer purchasers a range of product offerings.
- Public Accountability and Transparency. Accountability requires transparency. Section 1311(d)(7) requires public reports on Exchange activities, and Section 1311(e)(3) requires additional reporting, which should include standardized data reporting on price, quality, benefits, consumer choice and other factors that will help measure and evaluate performance. Successful Exchanges must ensure public accountability in areas such as objective information on the performance of plans; availability of automated comparison functions to inform consumer choice; fair and impartial treatment of consumers, plans and other partners; and prohibitions on conflict of interest.
- Financial Accountability. Section 1313 provides for the efficient and non-discriminatory administration of Exchanges, and seeks to prevent fraud and abuse. Successful Exchanges will streamline enrollment and minimize acquisition expenses; implement policies to prevent waste, fraud and abuse; and promote financial integrity.

Statutory Requirements

The Affordable Care Act includes two basic types of federal requirements for Exchanges, most of which are found in Section 1311. These include: 1) minimum functions Exchanges must undertake directly or, in some cases, by contract; and 2) oversight responsibilities the Exchanges must exercise in certifying and monitoring the performance of Qualified Health Plans (hereafter referred to as “plans”), as defined in Section 1301. Plans participating in the Exchanges must also comply with State insurance laws and federal requirements in the Public Health Service Act.

In defining the authority and duties of an Exchange, States in authorizing legislation or other governing documents should incorporate, by reference or explicit provisions, the federally-required Exchange functions and oversight responsibilities.

a. Exchange Functions

Section 1311(d)(4) specifies core functions that an Exchange must meet:

- Certification, recertification and decertification of plans
- Operation of a toll-free hotline
- Maintenance of a website for providing information on plans to current and prospective enrollees
- Assignment of a price and quality rating to plans
- Presentation of plan benefit options in a standardized format
- Provision of information on Medicaid and CHIP eligibility and determination of eligibility for individuals in these programs
- Provision of an electronic calculator to determine the actual cost of coverage taking into account eligibility for premium tax credits and cost sharing reductions
- Certification of individuals exempt from the individual responsibility requirement
- Provision of information on certain individuals identified in Section 1311 (d)(4)(I) to the Treasury Department and to employers
- Establishment of a Navigator program that provides grants to entities assisting consumers as described in Section 1311(i)

Additional Exchange functions include:

- Presentation of enrollee satisfaction survey results under Section 1311(c)(4)
- Provision for open enrollment periods under Section 1311(c)(6)
- Consultation with stakeholders, including tribes, under Section 1311(d)(6)
- Publication of data on the Exchange’s administrative costs under Section 1311(d)(7)

b. Oversight Responsibilities

Section 1311(c) requires the Secretary to develop regulatory standards in five areas that insurers must meet in order to be certified as qualified health plans by an Exchange:

- Marketing

- Network adequacy
- Accreditation for performance measures
- Quality improvement and reporting
- Uniform enrollment procedures

Additional areas where Exchanges must ensure plan compliance with regulatory standards established by the Secretary include:

- Information on the availability of in-network and out-of-network providers as identified in Section 1311(c)(1)(B) and (C), including provider directories and availability of essential community providers
- Consideration of plan patterns and practices with respect to past premium increases and submission of plan justifications for current premium increases under Section 1311(e)(2)
- Public disclosure of plan data identified in Section 1311(e)(3)(A), including claims handling policies, financial disclosures, enrollment and disenrollment data, claims denials, rating practices, cost sharing for out of network coverage, and other information identified by the Secretary
- Timely information for consumers requesting their amount of cost sharing for specific services from specified providers as described in Section 1311(e)(3)(C)
- Information for participants in group health plans as described in Section 1311(e)(3)(D)
- Information on plan quality improvement activities as specified in Section 1311(g)

Clarifications and Policy Guidance

States should consider the following issues in establishing an Exchange.

- Organizational Form. Section 1311(d) gives States the option to establish the Exchange as a governmental agency or nonprofit entity. Within the governmental agency category, the Exchange could be housed within an existing State office, as it is in Utah, or it could be an independent public authority, as it is in Massachusetts. Regardless of its organizational form, the Exchange must be publicly accountable, transparent, and have technically competent leadership, with the capacity and authority to take all actions necessary to meet federal standards, including the discretion to determine whether health plans offered through the Exchange are “in the interests of qualified individuals and qualified employers” as Section 1311(e)(1) requires. The Exchange also must have security procedures that meet the data and privacy standards necessary to receive tax data and other sensitive information needed for enrollment. The type of organization may affect the federal tax treatment of an Exchange, including potential income taxation (depending upon whether a nonprofit organization qualifies as a tax-exempt organization), annual filing requirements, the availability of tax-exempt bond financing, and FICA liability for employees.

- Operating Model. States have a range of options for how the Exchange operates from an “active purchaser” model, in which the Exchange operates as large employers often do in using market leverage and the tools of managed competition to negotiate product offerings with insurers, to an “open marketplace” model, in which the Exchange operates as a clearinghouse that is open to all qualified insurers and relies on market forces to generate product offerings. In both cases, consumers will end up with options, and States should provide comparison shopping tools that promote choice based on price and quality and enable consumers to narrow plan options based on their preferences.
- Small Business (SHOP) Exchanges. Small business customers offer unique challenges but also powerful opportunities for Exchanges. Successful Exchanges will streamline the process for small businesses. Federal rules will provide a framework for SHOP Exchanges, including options for how employers can provide contributions toward employee coverage that meet standards for small business tax credits.
- Risk Adjustment. Federal rules in 2011 will outline risk adjustment methods and require all health plans to report demographic, diagnostic, and prescription drug data. Further guidance addressing risk adjustment rules and formulas will be provided in subsequent regulations. As specified by the law, federal rules will apply risk adjustment consistently to all plans in the individual and small group markets, both inside and outside of Exchanges. Federal rules on reinsurance payments will apply to all plans in the individual market, and rules on risk corridors will apply to all qualified health plans in the individual and small group market, as specified in the law.
- Performance Measures. Standardized public data reporting will be needed to evaluate Exchange performance and assure transparency. Federal rules will require accurate and timely public disclosure of coverage data and other key performance measures to facilitate research, analysis, and evaluation. Given that Exchanges are likely to pursue diverse strategies on several issues, analysis of performance metrics will be critical to identifying best practices that can be shared and used to improve the performance of all Exchanges.
- State Choices. Federal rules will clarify that the following policy areas, among others, are State decisions, although HHS may offer recommendations and technical assistance to States as they make these decisions:
  - Whether to form the Exchange as a governmental agency or a non-profit entity
  - Whether to form regional exchanges or establish interstate coordination for certain functions
  - Whether to elect the option under the Affordable Care Act to use 50 employees as the cutoff for small group market plans until 2016, which would limit access to exchange coverage to employer groups of 50 or less
  - Whether to require additional benefits in the Exchange beyond the essential health benefits
  - Whether to establish a competitive bidding process for plans

- Whether to extend some or all Exchange-specific regulations to the outside insurance market (beyond what is required in the Affordable Care Act)
- State Authority. The federal government will work with the Governor of the State as the chief executive officer unless authority to operate the Exchange has been delegated to a specific authority through state law.

Federal Support

Forty-eight States and the District of Columbia were awarded their first Exchange grants under Section 1311 in September 2010. Those grants were for planning purposes and the next round of grants will be for the purpose of establishing an Exchange. The opportunity to apply for grants will be announced in February 2011 and will become available on a rolling basis throughout the next three years. States will have to meet certain milestones in order to be awarded grants in 2011, and the size of State awards may be related to the number of milestones met. States that are not able to meet required milestones by spring 2011 may apply for grants later in the year. Necessary Exchange costs will be fully funded by HHS until 2015. After January 1, 2015, Exchanges must be self funded.

The first document includes maps of where we believe the “new” eligibles would be (by county). There are actually three maps – one representing 100% enrollment, one representing 75%, and one at 57%.

The second document provides you information about the eligibles, economic impact, reduced uncompensated care, federal matching rates, etc. (I provided notes on the second page to explain the numbers on the first page.) Also, wanted to point out that we did use the 2007 economic impact study - - newer IMPLAN values are not available at this time (ie, for tax revenue). We did talk with the OTC regarding this and they believe, because of other factors occurring since 2007, that the number we have would be pretty well on target.

And, then on another note, we learned today that this will be an “opt-out” eligibility group rather than an “opt-in”. This changes things a bit now; in order to “opt-out” we would probably need legislation.

Let me know if you have any questions.

HHS NEWS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

States receive more flexibility, resources to implement Affordable Insurance Exchanges

More than half of states now creating marketplaces to help millions of families and small businesses buy insurance

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) today awarded nearly $220 million in Affordable Insurance Exchange grants to 13 states to help them create Exchanges, giving these states more flexibility and resources to implement the Affordable Care Act. The health care reform law gives states the freedom to design Affordable Insurance Exchanges – one-stop marketplaces where consumers can choose a private health insurance plan that fits their health needs and have the same kinds of insurance choices as members of Congress.

The Department also released several Frequently Asked Questions providing answers to key questions states need to know as they work to set up these new marketplaces. Critical among these are that states that run Exchanges have more options than originally proposed when it comes to determining eligibility for tax credits and Medicaid. And states have more time to apply for "Level One" Exchange grants.

Today's awards bring to 29 the number of states that are making significant progress in creating Affordable Insurance Exchanges. States receiving funding today include: Alabama, Arizona, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Tennessee, and Vermont.

"We are committed to giving states the flexibility to implement the Affordable Care Act in the way that works for them," HHS Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said. "Exchanges will give consumers more choices and make it easy to compare and shop for insurance plans."

In the new Exchanges, insurers will provide new information such as an easy-to-understand summary of benefits and costs to consumers. The level of detail will sharpen competition between carriers which will drive costs down.

HHS also released today a set of Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) in anticipation of state legislative sessions beginning in January. Answers will help advance state policy development for Exchanges. For example, they clarify that Exchange grants can be used to build a state Exchange that is operational after 2014; that state-based Exchanges will not be charged for accessing Federal data needed to run Exchanges in 2014; and that state insurance rules and operations will continue even if the Federal government is facilitating an Exchange in the state. HHS will also allow greater flexibility in eligibility determinations, allowing, for example, a state-based Exchange to permit the Federal government to determine eligibility for premium tax credits.

Of the 13 states awarded grants today, 12 are receiving Level One grants, which provide one year of funding to states that have already made progress using their Exchange planning grant. The 13th state, Rhode Island, is receiving the first Level Two grant, which provides multi-year funding to states further along in the planning process.

Forty-nine states and the District of Columbia have already received planning grants, and 45 states have consulted with consumer advocates and insurance companies. Thirteen states have passed legislation to create an Exchange.

States have many opportunities to apply for funding. To accommodate state legislative sessions and to give states more time to apply, HHS also announced a six-month extension for Level One establishment grant applications. Applications now will be accepted until June 29, 2012 (the original deadline was December 30, 2011).

Subject: How Obamacare WORSENS Poverty

There are many arguments to be marshaled about the ill effects of Obamacare – but a little-seen analysis issued several weeks ago offers a devastating indictment about how the law will effectively hurt the very people it is designed to help. In testimony before a Ways and Means subcommittee hearing, the Urban Institute’s Gene Steuerle discussed the “poverty trap” developed by means-tested government programs – a trap that Obamacare will both extend and worsen.

The “poverty trap” is best demonstrated graphically, as Steuerle’s testimony illustrates. The chart below shows a hypothetical example whereby a family (single parent and two children) can receive nearly $30,000 in government benefits with no household earnings, but only about $10,000 in government benefits with $35,000 in household earnings:

Another chart shows a similar example from a slightly different graphical perspective. The chart (Figure 4) shows the effects of rising income on a single parent with two children in Alabama whose income rises from the federal poverty level to twice poverty. Under that situation, if the family's income rises by about $17,000, the family will LOSE over $10,000 in government benefits. As a result, "income would rise by only about $6,900—an effective average marginal tax rate of about 60 percent, to which must be added any loss of health insurance benefits." These examples, and so many more like them, often lead families to ask the obvious question: If I will lose so many government benefits by generating additional income, why work?

And in the main, Obamacare WORSENS this problem, rather than improving it. By extending insurance subsidies up the income scale, it does eliminate the Medicaid "cliff," whereby individuals may stop working now in order to remain eligible for Medicaid benefits (because Medicaid eligibility isn't determined on a sliding-scale basis – you're either eligible for it, or you're not). But extending the subsidies up to four times poverty only EXTENDS this "poverty trap" further up the income ladder to middle-income individuals – who now will face the same "cliff" that some Medicaid beneficiaries currently face. Families will forego making $1,000 of additional income if it will cost their household $5,000 or more in insurance subsidies – as it will for families who barely exceed the 400% cut-off for subsidy eligibility. No wonder the Congressional Budget Office said that the law's "phaseout of the [health insurance subsidies] as income rises will effectively increase marginal tax rates, which will also discourage work."

Ronald Reagan famously said that the nine most terrifying words in the English language are "I'm from the government and I'm here to help." By penalizing success and discouraging work, Obamacare is the quintessential example of that truism. Because, by trapping people in a cycle of poverty and dependence on government assistance, Obamacare doesn't enhance true security for millions of low-income Americans – it UNDERMINES it.

I would check with Andrew or Alex and see if there is a response to this. I know we have heard this from constituents via phone. I have just thanked them for their call. I would see if GMF has responded to any of these comments in her public appearances, if not, we probably need to draft a response that explains the grant.

Governor Fallin:

I can't believe you accepted a $54 million "Early Innovator Grant" from the federal government to establish an Oklahoma-based Health Insurance Exchange. In a time when states need to declare 10th Amendment Sovereignty and be weaned away from the federal "breast", I can't believe that the Governor of Oklahoma decides to take "free" monies from the federal government, which is BROKE, to enslave us to a president who seems to want to destroy this country in every way he can.

I did not vote for you. I'm trying to back you, but when I see you do things like this, I wonder how you got enough votes to be governor. I'm willing to give you a chance, but this is a big mistake. You need to send that money back to D.C. Yes, Oklahoma would like the money but not at the expense of our future. ObamaCare is no good. It can't be revised. There is absolutely nothing good in it. It needs to be totally destroyed, but in the mean time, Oklahoma does not need to have a chain around our neck.

Sincerely,
Steve Jackson

(CBS News' "The Early Show")

The following is a transcript of "TOWN HALL WITH REPUBLICAN LEADERS," which took place Monday, June 13, 2011 at the Newseum in Washington D.C.

Participating were: South Carolina's Governor Nikki Haley, Florida Congressman Alan West, Wisconsin Congressman Paul Ryan, architect of the House budget plan, and Oklahoma Senator Tom Coburn

The event was hosted by "Face the Nation" anchor Bob Schieffer and "Early Show" co-anchor Erica Hill, with CBS News business and economics correspondent Rebecca Jarvis.

ERICA HILL:

Hello and welcome to this special hour of the Early Show coming to you from the Newseum in Washington, D.C. Our focus this morning, the economy. A town hall with Republican leaders. Here to answer your questions, just as President Obama did in a similar event last month. I'm Erica Hill, along with CBS News chief Washington correspondent and host of Face the Nation, Bob Schieffer.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Hi, everybody. Well, we're here to talk with key Republican leaders this time about the economy. According to a recent CBS News poll, 79 percent of Americans believe the economy is bad. More than half of us are concerned about ourselves or someone in our household losing their job.

ERICA HILL:

And unemployment, of course, is back above nine percent. Gas prices still around $4 a gallon in many areas. And across the country, there are signs of a double dip in the housing market. Major economic issues affecting millions of Americans. So, today, we've invited a cross-section of folks to ask Republican leaders what they can do to alleviate some of that pain. Folks have submitted their questions about the issues they find most important. And we'll also be hearing from viewers who sent their questions in on line.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

So, basically, we know what the questions is, they don't. (LAUGH) But joining us are four distinguished Republican officials. Beginning with Congressman Paul Ryan of Wisconsin. He, of course, is chairman of the House Budget Committee and the author of the Republican budget plan.

ERICA HILL:

Also with us, Florida Congressman Allen West and South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley, who were both elected in the Republican wave from the 2010 Midterm Elections.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

And finally, Oklahoma Senator, Tom Colburn, who served with Congressman Ryan on the president's-- deficit commission. We want to say welcome to all four of you.

VARIOUS:

Thank you. Thank you for having us. (APPLAUSE)

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Okay. So, let's get the-- let's get right to it. Our first question is from Trey Lewis. And this is for all four of you on the panel here. So, Trey?

TRAE LEWIS:

Good morning, everyone. There are many ways that people as though President Obama isn't using to stimulate and make the economy more robust. If you were in the position to do so, what would be the one thing you would do to stimulate and grow the economy that President Obama isn't doing?

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Start Congressman?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

One thing? (LAUGH)

ERICA HILL:

Well, 30 to 45 seconds each. You can each have time to answer.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

First of all, I-- I'd go in the opposite direction on spending, on taxes, on debt and deficits. Get rid of all the uncertainty in the economy. He's promising huge tax increases on successful small businesses. I wouldn't do that. Keep taxes low and get spending under control so we don't have a debt crisis. If we have a debt crisis and we have a huge interest rate increase. We have an inflation problem. That's causing uncertainty in the economy. It's making it harder for businesses to create jobs. So, I would go in a different direction than he has gone on fiscal policy. And that's exactly what we've done in the house. Is offered a different direction on fiscal policy. Keep taxes and spending low, not high.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

I think the exact same thing we Paul is talking about is creating the economic and fiscal policies that create confidence in the American consumer and also our small business owners. What I see down in my district is the-- small businesses are the economic engine that drive this country. But yet-- when you look at some of the regulations that are coming in and that's restricting the access to capital for them to grow. And you look at some of the tax policies which are gonna preclude them from hiring more Americans. When you drive by in South Florida on U.S. Federal Highway 1, you see all those closed storefronts. You just have to think about maybe there were six to eight Americans that once occupied those storefronts.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Governor?

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

You know what I would like to see this president do is really lead and asked for a balanced budget, which he has yet to do. And I think that's incredibly important. But from a governor's perspective, everything I've tried to do to govern in South Carolina has been stopped by President Obama. Whether it's how we're gonna deal with the health care crisis. He's mandating more on our states and we can't afford it. Whether it's creating jobs. He's actually got the National Labor Relations Board suing a great American company for creating jobs in South Carolina.

Or when it comes to illegal immigration, he's stopping my labor director from allowing her to enforce the laws that are in place. So, you know, the key is let the states have the flexibility and the freedom they need to have. In order for us to govern, which at the end of the day is really down to the states. The federal government needs to get out of the way. We need-- a president that really understands, let the state understand what the Tenth Amendment's all about. Let them have states rights and let them handle their states in the way they need to.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Senator?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

I-- I-- I think what needs to happen is we need to identify the real problem. And the real problem is America's anxious. It doesn't have confidence about where we're goin'. And that's, I think, a leadership deficit on behalf of my friend, President Obama. I think we need to talk (UNINTEL) and honestly to the American public about the depth of our problems. They're not unsolvable, but they're unsolvable until we address them and identify 'em.

And what Washington's big habit is we treat the symptoms of the problem rather than the problem. And so, being honest and saying, "We don't have any choice. We have to eliminate $9.7 trillion out of the federal government's expenditures over the next ten years to not go in the tank. Now, they can dispute that, but that's the fact. And if anything short of that will not solve the problem for your future or your children's future."

There's $2.5 trillion sittin' on the sideline in this country right now that could be invested if people had confidence and clarity about the future. And I don't believe-- President Obama has delivered that. And I think as soon as he does, you're gonna see a big turnaround in the economy. Regardless of what we do on the other things. Is we've gotta have confidence that we believe in our future. And I think that future is lacking, because we haven't had the leadership to put-- put that forward.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Well, that certainly-- gives you the Republican view of what's wrong with the economy right now. So, that gives us--a place to start here. Erica?

ERICA HILL:

A nice overview. We want to move on to our next question now. Nancy Logan's an executive assistant who's currently between jobs. And chances are Nancy may look familiar if you were with us at last month's town hall. She was here. She asked the president-- pretty much the same question. So, your chance now to ask it of Republican leaders.

NANCY LOGAN:

Thank you, Erica. Hello. I was given a three-year adjustable rate loan modification that ends in less than a year. And the rate is likely to go up significantly, where I won't be able to afford my monthly mortgage payment. I can't refinance my house or move in-- move into a fixed rate mortgage, because I owe more than the house is worth. My question is, what is your party in Congress doing to help Americans like myself who are stuck in this home mortgage process dilemma.

ERICA HILL:

And we want to toss this one to Congressman West, because I know in Florida, I believe, it's 46 percent of homes are under water.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Yeah, if-- it's an incredible situation down in Florida, where, of course, the subprime mortgage industry really--took a toll. And I think the most important thing that we have to do is from the policies we're creating up here is set the conditions by which we can reduce the size and the scope of this federal government to get money back into your pockets. So that you can stay into your home. So that you can have this job growth.

I think that one of the problems that we have seen, if you go back and you look at the Community Reinvestment Redevelopment Act, you know, when government all of a sudden got involved into the mortgage industry, I mean, soon or later, 30 years down the road, well, you see what happens. When all of a sudden we start to take those-- those mortgage-backed securities and we're selling them freely between banks and also to form banks, then we have all this bad paper out there.

So, I think the most important thing is get back to sound economic principles that work. And not come up with the band-aid-- remedies like this $8,000-- mortgage credit that we give, which we saw really did not do anything to stimulate the-- the mortgage industry.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Senator-- I mean, Congressman?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, I'm gonna say like Tom Coburn said. Why is this happening? It's happening because the economy's in the tank. There's no confidence. People don't feel confident about the future. So, they're not going out and taking a risk and buying a home and therefore bringing your home value up.

So, this is a symptom of a bad economy. So, let's fix the economy. And there's a lot of things I hope we can get into about what is necessary to get this economy growing. Because Washington's throwing a bunch of programs at you. And it's still not working. It's cost a lot of taxpayer liability. There's no substitute for economic growth and confidence in this economy to bring that market back up so you're not under water any more.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

All right. Let's go-- to-- Robert Johnson. Who has-- I think a fairly interesting question here. Mr. Johnson?

ROBERT JOHNSON:

Thank you, Bob. Good morning. There's a lot of agreement that we need to balance the budget and reduce the deficit. How realistic are we in achieving those goals if we do not reinstate or raise at least some taxes?

BOB SCHIEFFER:

I want to ask-- Senator Colburn to ask that question, because Senator Colburn voted against the continuation of the Bush tax cuts last December. Kind of got the Republican reservation there. He wanted them offset. So, should taxes be off the table, Senator Coburn?

(OVERTALK)

SEN. TOM COBURN:

No, I don't think so. Look-- there's two answers to your question. One is a policy question. And the other's a political. How-- how do we with the divided government we have today fix our problems without agreeing that we're gonna have to give something to get what we want. And growing the economy to markedly enhance the revenues shouldn't be anathema-- anathema to--to Republicans.

So, if in fact we need to do all these spending reductions-- and I'd love for us to have time to really talk about it. Because I can-- I can give you $8 out of the $9 trillion I'm gonna propose. But if we're gonna do it, you're gonna-- for those that are locked in politically to those programs, you're gonna have to give 'em somethin'. So, we-- we're at historically low -- values, as far as the percentage of the G.D.P. that comes from revenue from American taxpayers.

That's part of our problem. We're also at a historical high, in terms of spending. That's the bigger part of our problem. What we have to do is pull those both together. If we're gonna get back to it. The-- 18.8 percent is about the max you're ever gonna collect, unless you have a boom like the-- the dotcom bubble. But we need to solve that political problem and be realistic to know that for us to get a solution to the problem, both sides are gonna have to give something.

Now, what's the policy question? The policy question is is how do you drive the economy with the government taking a larger and larger share out of the economy? And the answer to that is is eliminate things that are not legitimate roles for the federal government. Going back to the question of homes. Where do you find in the Constitution the authority for the federal government to be in the home loan business?

I mean, it's not there. And the reason we're at risk today, the reason our children are at risk, is because we've abandoned constitutional principles. We've abandoned the enumerated powers.

And we've decided to do things that our founders in the--in our best interest would never work in terms of a republic.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

ERICA HILL:

(UNINTEL) we're gonna take a quick break. But there will be more. Don't worry. Our town hall on the economy continues. With more questions from our studio audience and also from you at home. Stick with us. You're watching the Early Show on CBS.

ERICA HILL:

We are back now with our panel of Republican leaders. Senator Tom Coburn, Governor Nikki Haley, Congressman Allen West, and Congressman Paul Ryan.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

And we want to bring in our CBS News--business and economics correspondent, Rebecca Jarvis, who is following the questions we have been getting online. Rebecca?

REBECCA JARVIS:

Bob, thank you. And this first question comes from Facebook. It was submitted to us from Suzanne Thornton of Cushing, Texas. And she asks, "Under the Democrat president, Clinton, we had a surplus. Under a Republican president, Bush, it disappeared and turned into a deficit. So, why should we hand our country back over to Republicans?" Governor Haley, why don't you take this one?

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

You know-- I think what we first have to understand is both parties made a mistake. I mean, both parties did not handle the government responsibly the way they should. We have got to-- and-- and in reference to what the Senator said, we do have to cut taxes. In South Carolina, we have an economy where I have basically said, "Government was intended to secure the rights and freedoms of the people. It was never intended to be all things to all people."

So, what we did was we said, "This is gonna hurt, but we're gonna get back to the basics. And we're gonna get strong again. And we're gonna do it independently of the federal government." And a lot of that is we are cutting unemployment taxes for employers. We are cutting down the weeks for employees on what they get in terms of unemployment taxes. But we are incentivizing those that are successful to want to be more successful.

And we have to remember that when you give businesses cash flow, when you give them profit margins, what's the first thing they do? They hire people. So, your goal has to be on jobs. It has to be on job creation. And it has to be on the fact that when you know both parties have messed up, guess what that brought about? The rise of the Tea Party, which were upset with both parties. That said, "We want to take our government back. We're gonna do it. Now it's government's responsibility to control the spending and know the value of the dollar."

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Governor-- can I just ask you this question. Corporations are-- are turning in record profits right now. But they don't seem to be hiring. So, doesn't that-- beg the question here, "Why aren't they hiring? With-- with all these big profits coming--"

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

Well, you know, I'll tell you-- I'm proud to say that while the economy is taking a downward turn-- nationally, in South Carolina it's going up. And the reason it's going up is because unemployment's down for the fourth time in the row. They have a governor that's fighting for jobs every day. We just passed TORT reform. We just passed Medicaid reform. With just passed that every legislator had to start voting on the record. I mean, we're doing things that are giving companies confidence.

Confidence one to come to South Carolina. We are fighting the unions every step of the way. We are a strong right to work state. We're gonna stay that way. That's what gives a company confidence to come and say, "This is a state where we can make money. This is a state where we can invest and know that we're right to hire." And then they say in-- you know, and then they come to stay. And my job as governor is to continue to keep communication with those companies and say, "How do we help you expand?"

REBECCA JARVIS:

Representative Ryan, a lot of Governor Haley's response talks about jobs. And jobs are top of mind for Americans. The most recent CBS News poll showed that 48 percent of Americans think the most important thing is jobs and the economy. But just ten percent think it's the deficit. That's what we mostly hear from Republicans. We hear more about the deficit than we hear about jobs.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, I wouldn't suggest-- they're interrelated. These are the same issue. So, they're not exclusive of one another. Jobs comes from economic growth. Economic growth gives us more revenues, which helps us get down the deficit. The huge deficit we have is nothing more than tomorrow's interest rate increases or tax rate increases.

So, when government runs huge deficits, like it is today, what that tells businesses who are sitting on capital and not hiring, "Look out, my taxes are gonna go up tomorrow or we're gonna have an inflation interest rate problem tomorrow." And so, it is these massive deficits-- deficits that are showing businesses that there's an uncertain future, an uncertain future with which they don't want to invest in.

And that is why a lot of businesses are-- sitting on capital. I had a roundtable in Kenosha with business leaders last Thursday, (UNINTEL) two hours ago with business leaders. All of them are telling me the same thing. "We don't know what's coming from government next. So many new regulations coming down the pike."

(OVERTALK)

REBECCA JARVIS:

--coming from the consumer, though. There's no consumer demand for a lot of their products.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Say that again?

REBECCA JARVIS:

They don't know what's coming from the consumer. The demand that's coming from American consumers is very weak, at this point. Which is why they're not creating the jobs to sell the product or to manufacture it.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Consumption comes when people feel secure in their own lives. When people have jobs that they are-- that they--they feel secure in. When they're not worried about losing their job. You need to have a good economy that is producing jobs and giving security, economic security to Americans, who then will go forward and act like consumers.

And so, what we have right now is a government that is giving so much uncertainty, tax rates on successful small businesses under the President's plan, which is in law, is going as high as 44.8 percent on successful small businesses. Most of our jobs don't come from the big corporations. They come from these successful small businesses. And when we're gonna be raising their taxes as much as President Obama is proposing, that puts a chilling effect on job ncreation.

When we raise and borrow all this money, 42 cents out of every dollar coming out of Washington, it's borrowed. 47 percent is coming from other countries like China. This is not a future in which people, businesses or consumers, feel confident in the American economy. We gotta deal with these issues, so we can feel confident and get this job creation back on.

REBECCA JARVIS:

There's-- there's obviously a vicious cycle here. And it doesn't help--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's right.

REBECCA JARVIS:

--that the U.S. economy is absolutely a consumer-driven economy. You talk about the importance of confidence. You talk a lot about small businesses. But going back to large businesses who are sitting on this cash.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's right.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Isn't one of the major issues also that they have learned how to do more with less. And it is not in their interest to hire people. Is there any way you can change that?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, first of all, predictability. I think large businesses-- first of all, we're in the international economy, whether we like it or not? And we have to recognize, if we tax our employers, our producers a lot more than our foreign competitors tax theirs, they win, we lose. Right now, we have the highest corporate tax rate now that Japan is lowering theirs than any other industrialized country.

Right now, we are taxing our businesses, our manufacturers in America, a lot more than our foreign competitors tax theirs. And what is the government telling them? "You're gonna pay higher taxes." What is the government doing? Running up record deficits that mean even higher taxes. So, even though the president's proposing over $2 trillion in new tax increases on these businesses, we still aren't solving our fiscal problem and it's putting a chilling effect on hiring.

So, you're not gonna get good consumption in this country if you don't have good investment, if you don't have confidence, if you don't have businesses out there not only keeping people on the payroll, but adding to their payrolls. And so, we're in a vicious cycle and we want to get on a virtuous cycle.

ERICA HILL:

All right, we're gonna have to stop this cycle right now. Because we need to take a quick break. (LAUGH) When we come back, though, we do have several more questions to get to. So, stay with us here at the Early Show.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

And still ahead more of your questions for our panel of Republican-elected officials, as we continue a CBS News town hall on the economy.

ERICA HILL:

This is the Early Show on CBS. Your local news is next.

ERICA HILL:

Welcome back to this special hour of the Early Show. A town hall on the economy, the Republican view.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Joining us-- Senator Tom Coburn, Governor Nikki Haley, Congressman Allen West, and Congressman Paul Ryan. And next--we have a little question about taxes. Senator Colburn, I'm gonna ask this one be directed to you and it comes from Crystal Grant.

CRYSTAL GRANT:

Greetings. I'm originally from Boiling Springs, South Carolina. So, greetings to you, Governor Haley. My question is about compromise. With low and middleclass Americans making sacrifices every day and the deficit growing exponentially, it seems difficult to justify tax breaks for millionaires and billionaires. Are you open to considering-- maybe tax-- returning to previous levels for those making over $500,000 a year versus a $250,000 level?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

Well, I-- I think my-- my approach would be we've gotta find a compromise. I don't like that. Because-- when you-- when you do that, what you're doing is taking investment capital that's not gonna go into a small business or a medium-sized business. You're-- you're taking capital away and saying the government can spend the money better. The-- the fact is is if we were to lower tax rates we could actually generate increased revenue.

And that's what we had proposed, in terms of the president's deficit commission. That's what the gang of six was working on. You know, we-- we can increase taxes a trillion dollars by lowering tax rates and gettin' rid of things like the ethanol blenders credit that you all pay $6 billion a year for and then go to the pump and pay another Hun-- $1.72 a gallon in subsidies for ethanol-blended gasoline. I mean, we have a trillion dollars worth of tax earmarks in the tax code that are special favors across-- and some are not, but the vast majority are special favors.

We ought to eliminate those, lower the tax rate, so people can have the confidence and the expectation that they know what they're gonna pay. So, I'm not against increasing the revenues of the federal government. But I-- we ought to do it in a way that actually increases jobs and increases wealth and increases prosperity. But combined with that, you have to decrease the size of the federal government. The size of the federal government is double what it was ten years ago. We just simply can't afford it.

I mean, you-- you just said, in your statement, you have to live within your means. And the federal government has refused to do that. And-- and we're incompetent in Congress to address the issues. A couple examples, if I can take some time. We have 80 economic development programs-- we have 188 total. We have 80 within four agencies. Not one of those economic development programs has had-- ever had a measurement on it to see if it was actually effective in developing ec-- the economy. Not one time have we ever looked at it.

And the cost-- for that money, that's $6.6 billion that goes for that. We don't know what-- wouldn't we be better off having that $6.6 billion in the states like Governor Haley. And say, "Here, do economic development with the money the way you think you ought to do it, rather than us in Washington, where we don't actually know how to do it."

BOB SCHIEFFER:

What would be your take on that, Mr. West?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Well, I think it's very simple. And--and understand, four years ago, I was sitting in a desert and Kandahar, Afghanistan. So, I bring a very common-sense perspective. And being in the military is-- is simple. You know, we don't reinforce with additional resources where we're gonna lose those resources. And so, I think until we up here in the federal government can show that we can be fiscally responsible with the resources of the American taxpayers. Then we should not be asking to-- to get increased resources.

See, one of the problems is when you have tax cuts, but then you grow government, that's how you take a surplus, you turn it into a deficit. But it's not just the tax rates. It's all of the additional taxes that make up a marginal tax rate. So, the next thing you know, you've got the dividends tax, you've got your capital gains tax, you've got your estate tax. You've got all of the other taxes you may have at the state level, even down at the local level. And now what we're talking about is a marginal tax rate for people that can be anywhere from 60 up to 70 percent.

And even when John F. Kennedy took over as president, and he saw a marginal tax rate on those top-- income tax brackets of 91 percent, he said, "That's too high." And he cut it down to 71 percent. So, when you're talking about growing the economy, once again, investment, ingenuity, and innovation does not come from Capital Hill, does not come from Washington, D.C. It comes from the people down here.

And we have to set those fiscal and economic policies that promote that. And we have to get spending in line with revenues. 18 to 20 percent. That's where it is. We need to cap that federal government spending at about 20 percent. Right now, federal government spending, as per G.D.P. is 25 percent. And with the Obama budget, it's programmed to go above 30 percent. And you cannot continue to go on that path, if you want to have long-term, sustainable economic and job growth.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Let me-- let me ask you-- the three members of-- of Congress here, you've been here since January. The best to my knowledge, you've done absolutely nothing. There's no jobs program. You've got unemployment at 9.-- 1 percent. Why is that?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, we have divided government now. First of all, what happened the last two years--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Well, there's always been divided government.

(OVERTALK)

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Well, (UNINTEL) jobs program is a trillion dollars when you add the borrowing cost in stimulus. Remember what stimulus was supposed to do. It was supposed to keep unemployment from going above eight percent. We're at 9.1. We went as high as 9.8 percent. What else happened? Our tax increase, $800 billion in tax increases with the president's health care law. The health care law passed, which is basically the government taking over 17 percent of our economy.

We've got new energy regulations coming through, putting a chilling effect on American-made energy to lower our-- our gas prices. And so, with so much has come from the government in the last two years, I believe that that is a gre-- greatest reason why the economy's not growing. What have we done since January? In the House of Representatives, where the two of us work. We've passed a budget to reform this tax system, make people take away tax shelters from higher income individuals in exchange for lower tax rates (UNINTEL) businesses to create jobs.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Congressman, not to be argumentative, but you passed something that you knew there wasn't one chance that the Senate was gonna chance.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, it would be nice if the Senate tried to pass a budget. It's been 775 days since the Senate even bothered trying to pass a budget.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

But wouldn't it be good to try to find some way to compromise on these--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's why we've said--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

--things to kind of get the people at the same table and say, "Here's something we want to do. Here's something you want to do. Instead of passing these things that people know will never get agreed to by the other house."

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Well, I'll give you another great example. Our office came up with HR-16-63. Which is the-- Small Business Encouragement Act. And what it says is in the previous fiscal year, if you're a small business that has revenues of $20 million or less. You have $100 employees or less. We're talking about extending the work-- opportunity tax credit for 2012 and 2013 which says we'll give you $6,000 if you hire a person off the unemployment rolls.

And if you're in a county that has a double-digit unemployment rate, you get an additional $6,000. And now those are the type of things we're looking to do to help small businesses get out there, encourage them and incentivize them to hire people. It's sitting in the Ways and Means Committee. And-- hopefully, they'll get it passed and we'll get it in the House floor and then we'll get over to the Senate. And hopefully they-- they'll pass that and it'll get on the president's table--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Senator?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--before we recess.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

Well, I think-- Bob, I think what you're describing is-- is a system of the careerism that has invaded and perhaps been here a long time. The goal is the next election, not the next generation right now in Washington.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Absolutely.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

It-- we're more interested in political careers than we are fixing the very real and urgent problems in front of our country. The Senate has-- this is the lowest level of votes the Senate has had in my seven years and the lowest level of votes in 25 years.

And the reason we're not voting is people don't want to take a vote, because they might have to defend it. So, rather than come up here and do the job and have the courage and the honor to go out and defend your votes, what we do is we just don't vote.

ERICA HILL:

How do you change that? How do you change that, Senator.

(OVERTALK)

ERICA HILL:

But leadership-- leadership continues--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

We've put ideas on the table.

ERICA HILL:

--to change.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

We've passed ideas in the House. We've said, "Here's how we think we balance the budget. Here's how we save Medicare. Here's how we create jobs." We're putting these bills out there. We're passing these bills, because we think you need to do is lead with your ideas, defend your ideas. And what we're having is basically the crickets are chirping. We're not seeing any action from any of our legislative partners on the other side of the aisle.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Governor Haley ca-- looks like she'd like to comment here.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

I have to say this. Because while--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

From outside Washington.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

While D.C. is-- is totally-- in chaos. And has-- (LAUGH) is just-- not doing anything. The states can't wait. We have to lead. And so, what I would beg of both the Congress and the Senate, which I think everybody should agree on is give us flexibility. Quit mandating any expend-- any spending down. Medicaid alone is a quarter of South Carolina's budget. Give us the ability to decide what the health care needs are of our citizens. When it comes to any education mandates, let us decide how to educate our kids. When it comes to any of the health care, let us decide our health care. And (UNINTEL) and Medicaid is huge for us.

(OVERTALK)

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

--and I know that the Congressman has done that, as well. And-- and they've been helpful, these are things that can really make a difference. So, you know-- I have said D.C. is just dysfunctional right now. But all I would beg is that those things can be done right away. Those are things that y'all could pass that would make a huge difference with our states. That we could continue to function and lead for our people, while y'all figured everything else out.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Let-- let me just ask Senator Coburn to wrap this up. 'Cause I think he hit the nail on the head here. Is there any way to change this, Senator? I mean, will we still see a change in our lifetime?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

Yeah, I think American people need to change it, though. I-- I'm convinced--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's why we're here.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

--that Washington is-- its main focus is short-term political expediency. And the reason our country's at risk is because we think short term and about the next election, rather than thinking about the future of our country. You know, the reason I'll stand up as a conservative Republican, one of the biggest deficit (UNINTEL) in Congress and say, "I'll negotiate on taxes." Because our country's in trouble.

And if we don't, we're gonna lose the very limited future that's in front of us today and somebody else is gonna tell us where we're gonna spend our money. It isn't gonna be the American people. It's gonna be the bond holders throughout the world.

REBECCA JARVIS:

So, Senator Coburn, do we go the direction, then, of the United Kingdom and employ austerity measures and face, potentially, a toxic environment. That's what the Bank of England just said. A toxic environment where there's slow growth and inflation, taking place at the same time?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

No, you do both. You do both. There's no question if what-- first of all, every dollar the federal government spends doesn't give the same bang in the-- for the buck in the economy. And I can show you about $5 trillion that gives us a negative return on the dollars that we spend. So, if we're gonna spend money as a federal government, then we ought to be spending it where we get an economic multiplier of $2 or $3.

The problem with the stimulus bill, there was only $46 billion out of almost $900 billion that actually had any productive change in terms of economic multiplier in the whole stimulus bill. No wonder it failed. We said it was gonna fail. Because it did not create jobs that then created more jobs. So-- this isn't hard. What-- what is hard is to come to the realization that career politicians in this country are killing this country.

ERICA HILL:

We-- and with that, we actually have to move on to the next topic. Although we could talk about this for a long time. And this comes from Leslie who's in our audience. Leslie has a question about Medicare.

LESLIE SIDDELEY:

Hi there. I'm 48 years old. So, I'm in the age group that would be impacted to the changes to the Medicare program under the so-called Ryan Plan. I'm also the caretaker of an elderly parent. It's common in my age group. How can I be certain that Medicare will be affordable for me when it comes time for me to retire? Especially considering I've been paying in for 30 years.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

I'm the Ryan guy. (LAUGH) I guess I'll answer the question. A few facts that are not in dispute. Fact number one, we have 10,000 baby boomers retiring every day and fewer workers coming in to pay taxes to pay for the program. Fact number two, health care costs, they're skyrocketing at about four times the rate of inflation, which is threatening Medicare's current ability to provide affordable accessible care.

Fact number three, all the independent ex--experts agree, Medicare's going bankrupt. Medicare along with Social Security, I would argue, are the most important federal programs we have. And so, what we want to do is save and strengthen the program. Here's what we say. Number one, if you have retired already or if you're 55 and above and you're about to retire, government made a promise to you. We should keep that promise.

So, we say, "Don't change the program for anybody above the age of 55." But in order to be able to do that. In order to cash flow that promise, prevent that bankruptcy from hitting my mom who's on Medicare. You know, my mom and I took care of my grandmother when she was on Alzheimer's on Medicare. It's very important to me, personally, as well. You've got to fix it for the next generation, if you want to keep it for the current generation. And the way in which we propose to fix it for 54 and below are to have a system that works like the one we have in Congress.

Like the one that President Clinton's bipartisan commission to save Medicare proposed in the late 1990s. It's an idea that's had bipartisan support in the past. It's called premium support. It works just like Medicare Advantage today. Medicare prescription drugs. Medicare supplemental. You get a list of plans that Medicare preapproves that are guaranteed coverage options that you select from.

These plans compete against each other for your business. And then Medicare subsidizes that plan based on who you are. If you're a wealthy person, we don't think tax payers should subsidize their health care as much as everybody else. If you're a lower income person or if you're a person who keeps getting sicker, we think we should have increased subsidies. And so, what we say, is starting for the 54 and below crowd, when they turn 65, is take what we spend per person on Medicare, apply it to these people and adjust it like I said. Less for the wealthy, more for the poor and the sick, so that they can have plans to choose from and use choice and competition.

Here's the alternative. The president passed a law, it's in law, Obamacare, I know people don't like it being called Obamacare. The current health care law raids half a trillion dollars from Medicare to spend on this new health care law. And then it puts a board of 15 unelected, unaccountable bureaucrats in charge of cutting Medicare for current seniors through price controls, which will lead to providers dropping care, which will lead to rationing, which will hurt the actual program for current seniors.

We repeal the rationing board. We repeal the raid of Medicare. We think Medicare funds should go to Medicare, not other programs. How many times have you heard that since Social Security? And then we save it for the next generation, so that we can cash flow the promise and keep it for the current generation. So, when you turn 65, you'll have a program that will be there for you. At--at the rate-- at the age you are, 48, I'm not that much younger than you. It's not gonna be there for us if we don't do anything to save it.

It is going bankrupt. The sooner we act on this, the better off we are. And the more gradual the necessary reforms are. It will be British austerity. It will be painful benefit cuts to current seniors, tax increases on everybody like young people that slows down our economy, if we keep kickin' the can down the road. And it is a political careerism around here that has put us in the mess we are in. And you need leaders to step up and stop doing this.

We put a plan out there. I don't expect everybody to like the plan. But at least we put a plan out there. And I would love to see our partners on the other side of the aisle put their alternative plans out there, so we can get to the business of actually solving this problem.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

We need to kick this can over to Rebecca for the next-- (UNINTEL) Rebecca.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Well, we have a question from Brian Olfey, from Post Falls, Idaho. He sent it via email. He says, "Considering the fact that the U.S. Government is the nation's largest employer, how do you expect to cut $2 trillion from the budget without sending the jobless rate through the roof?

" And-- Representative West, why don't you take it?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

I think it's important for us to-- as we say, we gotta get back to understanding what are the essential functions of the federal government? One of the questions I asked when I got up here, 'cause I'm a newbie, I've been here since the 5th of January. Never held any type of public office before. But it's-- once again, it's a common-sense approach. It's a very disciplined approach that the military-- teaches you. 13 appropriations bills come out of the-- the House of Representatives. What's the priority? No one could answer that.

And that's why I wrote a letter over to the House Appropriations chairman-- Hal Rodgers. Why don't we have a tiered progress-- program so that we say, "These are the priorities." And then we can understand from the bottom up. We can start to refine. We can start to cut. And get the federal government back into its essential functions. So, I think that, you know, we can have this bureaucratic nanny state. That grows up here in Washington, D.C.

And if you continue to have that, you're gonna continue to have the separation between the revenues that are coming in and the spending that is going out. And so, what we've seen in the past three years, $1.42 trillion. $1.29 trillion. And now $1.65 trillion of deficits. So, we have to make the hard decisions up here. And I think that's one of the reasons why persons like the governor and myself, we're not career politicians. And we're bringing a perspective that is totally different and outside of the beltway.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Coming back to the question--

(OVERTALK)

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--we've got to make a change.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Coming back to the question, though, of jobs. We are facing a new reality. We are a facing a reality--

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Government does not create jobs. The private sector creates jobs. And if we continue--

REBECCA JARVIS:

And we are looking at--

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--to-- if we continue to--

REBECCA JARVIS:

--a private sector right now that's not doing it.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

You're not--

(OVERTALK)

REBECCA JARVIS:

They're shipping them overseas.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--conditions for the private sector to grow. You're not setting the conditions.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Well, let me tell you what the conditions are--

(OVERTALK)

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--business tax rate of 35 percent. The highest in the world. Who is going to be able to create a job in the United States of America, bring production and manufacturing back to this country, if you're pushing them away?

REBECCA JARVIS:

Well, Ford Motor Company, for example--

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Ford Motor Company did not take--

REBECCA JARVIS:

--is creating jobs.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--any bailout money and they created jobs.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Exactly. They are.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Great company.

REBECCA JARVIS:

They're creating 7,000 jobs here over the next two years. But they're also building a third of their cars and producing a third of their cars for the Asian market by 2020. That means the market is changing, the world is changing. People overseas are the primary customers of U.S. businesses.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Absolutely. And that's why--

REBECCA JARVIS:

If they are building cars for foreign counterparts, why aren't they building them in foreign countries? That's exactly what they are doing. How do you work against fate?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Well, I don't think we're working against fate. I think the thing is once-- I look at the Panama Canal. The Panama Canal is gonna be expanding in 2014 to bring in larger cargo ships. We happen to have a little thing in my district called Port Everglades, brought in $98 billion of revenue last year. I've already had meetings with the-- senior representative from Hong Kong and also--Consular General from Taiwan who want to have increased trade and increased revenue comin' out of South Florida with small business owners.

Those are the type of things we're looking to do. How can we increase our production, our manufacturing, our export to some of these foreign markets. But right now, we don't have the right type of economic and fiscal policies. It comes back to the one word we keep saying over and over again. Certainty.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

Well, I-- I think we've missed talking about the fact that the National Labor Relations Board, when you've got a president that allows the National Labor Relations Board to actually sue an American company for creating jobs, you are actually incentivizing companies to do business overseas. That was huge. And that is right at the heart of what we're saying. If we have to create jobs, government can't be the one stopping them.

I mean, President Obama can't say on one side, "I am for job creation." And on the other side, sue one of the companies that is trying to create thousands of jobs. They created a thousand jobs in South Carolina all while expanding 2,000 more jobs in Washington. And they still sued them. That sends a terrible message to our companies. And a terrible message-- when I was at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, we had a Canadian company that said, "I'm not doing anything until I see what happens with this lawsuit."

ERICA HILL:

We're gonna have to leave it there. (LAUGH) Stay with us, though. We'll be back again in just a moment.

(OFF-MIC CONVERSATION)

ERICA HILL:

We are back with time for one quick final question, a yes or no if you can. Do you believe the debt ceiling will be raised?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

I do believe so, if for every dollar of borrowing, we cut more than a dollar's worth of spending.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Not without spending control measures.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

Only with deep spending cuts and spending caps going forward.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

I agree with the governor.

ERICA HILL:

Okay. There's not a yes or no in any of those answers. (LAUGH)

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Yes, but. Yes, but.

ERICA HILL:

But they were all short. And we appreciate that. We appreciate all your time today.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Thanks to all of you.

VARIOUS:

You're welcome. Thank you.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

(CBS News' "The Early Show")

The following is a transcript of "TOWN HALL WITH REPUBLICAN LEADERS," which took place Monday, June 13, 2011 at the Newseum in Washington D.C.

Participating were: South Carolina's Governor Nikki Haley, Florida Congressman Alan West, Wisconsin Congressman Paul Ryan, architect of the House budget plan, and Oklahoma Senator Tom Coburn

The event was hosted by "Face the Nation" anchor Bob Schieffer and "Early Show" co-anchor Erica Hill, with CBS News business and economics correspondent Rebecca Jarvis.

ERICA HILL:

Hello and welcome to this special hour of the Early Show coming to you from the Newseum in Washington, D.C. Our focus this morning, the economy. A town hall with Republican leaders. Here to answer your questions, just as President Obama did in a similar event last month. I'm Erica Hill, along with CBS News chief Washington correspondent and host of Face the Nation, Bob Schieffer.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Hi, everybody. Well, we're here to talk with key Republican leaders this time about the economy. According to a recent CBS News poll, 79 percent of Americans believe the economy is bad. More than half of us are concerned about ourselves or someone in our household losing their job.

ERICA HILL:

And unemployment, of course, is back above nine percent. Gas prices still around $4 a gallon in many areas. And across the country, there are signs of a double dip in the housing market. Major economic issues affecting millions of Americans. So, today, we've invited a cross-section of folks to ask Republican leaders what they can do to alleviate some of that pain. Folks have submitted their questions about the issues they find most important. And we'll also be hearing from viewers who sent their questions in on line.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

So, basically, we know what the questions is, they don't. (LAUGH) But joining us are four distinguished Republican officials. Beginning with Congressman Paul Ryan of Wisconsin. He, of course, is chairman of the House Budget Committee and the author of the Republican budget plan.

ERICA HILL:

Also with us, Florida Congressman Allen West and South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley, who were both elected in the Republican wave from the 2010 Midterm Elections.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

And finally, Oklahoma Senator, Tom Colburn, who served with Congressman Ryan on the president's-- deficit commission. We want to say welcome to all four of you.

VARIOUS:

Thank you. Thank you for having us. (APPLAUSE)

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Okay. So, let's get the-- let's get right to it. Our first question is from Trey Lewis. And this is for all four of you on the panel here. So, Trey?

TRAE LEWIS:

Good morning, everyone. There are many ways that people as though President Obama isn't using to stimulate and make the economy more robust. If you were in the position to do so, what would be the one thing you would do to stimulate and grow the economy that President Obama isn't doing?

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Start Congressman?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

One thing? (LAUGH)

ERICA HILL:

Well, 30 to 45 seconds each. You can each have time to answer.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

First of all, I-- I'd go in the opposite direction on spending, on taxes, on debt and deficits. Get rid of all the uncertainty in the economy. He's promising huge tax increases on successful small businesses. I wouldn't do that. Keep taxes low and get spending under control so we don't have a debt crisis. If we have a debt crisis and we have a huge interest rate increase. We have an inflation problem. That's causing uncertainty in the economy. It's making it harder for businesses to create jobs. So, I would go in a different direction than he has gone on fiscal policy. And that's exactly what we've done in the house. Is offered a different direction on fiscal policy. Keep taxes and spending low, not high.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

I think the exact same thing we Paul is talking about is creating the economic and fiscal policies that create confidence in the American consumer and also our small business owners. What I see down in my district is the-- small businesses are the economic engine that drive this country. But yet-- when you look at some of the regulations that are coming in and that's restricting the access to capital for them to grow. And you look at some of the tax policies which are gonna preclude them from hiring more Americans. When you drive by in South

Florida on U.S. Federal Highway 1, you see all those closed storefronts. You just have to think about maybe there were six to eight Americans that once occupied those storefronts.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Governor?

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

You know what I would like to see this president do is really lead and asked for a balanced budget, which he has yet to do. And I think that's incredibly important. But from a governor's perspective, everything I've tried to do to govern in South Carolina has been stopped by President Obama. Whether it's how we're gonna deal with the health care crisis. He's mandating more on our states and we can't afford it. Whether it's creating jobs. He's actually got the National Labor Relations Board suing a great American company for creating jobs in South Carolina.

Or when it comes to illegal immigration, he's stopping my labor director from allowing her to enforce the laws that are in place. So, you know, the key is let the states have the flexibility and the freedom they need to have. In order for us to govern, which at the end of the day is really down to the states. The federal government needs to get out of the way. We need-- a president that really understands, let the state understand what the Tenth Amendment's all about. Let them have states rights and let them handle their states in the way they need to.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Senator?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

I-- I-- I think what needs to happen is we need to identify the real problem. And the real problem is America's anxious. It doesn't have confidence about where we're goin'. And that's, I think, a leadership deficit on behalf of my friend, President Obama. I think we need to talk (UNINTEL) and honestly to the American public about the depth of our problems. They're not unsolvable, but they're unsolvable until we address them and identify 'em.

And what Washington's big habit is we treat the symptoms of the problem rather than the problem. And so, being honest and saying, "We don't have any choice. We have to eliminate $9.7 trillion out of the federal government's expenditures over the next ten years to not go in the tank. Now, they can dispute that, but that's the fact. And if anything short of that will not solve the problem for your future or your children's future."

There's $2.5 trillion sittin' on the sideline in this country right now that could be invested if people had confidence and clarity about the future. And I don't believe-- President Obama has delivered that. And I think as soon as he does, you're gonna see a big turnaround in the economy. Regardless of what we do on the other things. Is we've gotta have confidence that we believe in our future. And I think that future is lacking, because we haven't had the leadership to put-- put that forward.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Well, that certainly-- gives you the Republican view of what's wrong with the economy right now. So, that gives us--a place to start here. Erica?

ERICA HILL:

A nice overview. We want to move on to our next question now. Nancy Logan's an executive assistant who's currently between jobs. And chances are Nancy may look familiar if you were with us at last month's town hall. She was here. She asked the president-- pretty much the same question. So, your chance now to ask it of Republican leaders.

NANCY LOGAN:

Thank you, Erica. Hello. I was given a three-year adjustable rate loan modification that ends in less than a year. And the rate is likely to go up significantly, where I won't be able to afford my monthly mortgage payment. I can't refinance my house or move in-- move into a fixed rate mortgage, because I owe more than the house is worth. My question is, what is your party in Congress doing to help Americans like myself who are stuck in this home mortgage process dilemma.

ERICA HILL:

And we want to toss this one to Congressman West, because I know in Florida, I believe, it's 46 percent of homes are under water.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Yeah, if-- it's an incredible situation down in Florida, where, of course, the subprime mortgage industry really--took a toll. And I think the most important thing that we have to do is from the policies we're creating up here is set the conditions by which we can reduce the size and the scope of this federal government to get money back into your pockets. So that you can stay into your home. So that you can have this job growth.

I think that one of the problems that we have seen, if you go back and you look at the Community Reinvestment Redevelopment Act, you know, when government all of a sudden got involved into the mortgage industry, I mean, soon or later, 30 years down the road, well, you see what happens. When all of a sudden we start to take those-- those mortgage-backed securities and we're selling them freely between banks and also to form banks, then we have all this bad paper out there.

So, I think the most important thing is get back to sound economic principles that work. And not come up with the band-aid-- remedies like this $8,000-- mortgage credit that we give, which we saw really did not do anything to stimulate the-- the mortgage industry.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Senator-- I mean, Congressman?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, I'm gonna say like Tom Coburn said. Why is this happening? It's happening because the economy's in the tank. There's no confidence. People don't feel confident about the future. So, they're not going out and taking a risk and buying a home and therefore bringing your home value up.

So, this is a symptom of a bad economy. So, let's fix the economy. And there's a lot of things I hope we can get into about what is necessary to get this economy growing. Because Washington's throwing a bunch of programs at you. And it's still not working. It's cost a lot of taxpayer liability. There's no substitute for economic growth and confidence in this economy to bring that market back up so you're not under water any more.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

All right. Let's go-- to-- Robert Johnson. Who has-- I think a fairly interesting question here. Mr. Johnson?

ROBERT JOHNSON:

Thank you, Bob. Good morning. There's a lot of agreement that we need to balance the budget and reduce the deficit. How realistic are we in achieving those goals if we do not reinstate or raise at least some taxes?

BOB SCHIEFFER:

I want to ask-- Senator Colburn to ask that question, because Senator Colburn voted against the continuation of the Bush tax cuts last December. Kind of got the Republican reservation there. He wanted them offset. So, should taxes be off the table, Senator Coburn?

(OVERTALK)

SEN. TOM COBURN:

No, I don't think so. Look-- there's two answers to your question. One is a policy question. And the other's a political. How-- how do we with the divided government we have today fix our problems without agreeing that we're gonna have to give something to get what we want. And growing the economy to markedly enhance the revenues shouldn't be anathema-- anathema to--to Republicans.

So, if in fact we need to do all these spending reductions-- and I'd love for us to have time to really talk about it. Because I can-- I can give you $8 out of the $9 trillion I'm gonna propose. But if we're gonna do it, you're gonna-- for those that are locked in politically to those programs, you're gonna have to give 'em somethin'. So, we-- we're at historically low -- values, as far as the percentage of the G.D.P. that comes from revenue from American taxpayers.

That's part of our problem. We're also at a historical high, in terms of spending. That's the bigger part of our problem. What we have to do is pull those both together. If we're gonna get back to it. The-- 18.8 percent is about the max you're ever gonna collect, unless you have a boom like the-- the dotcom bubble. But we need to solve that political problem and be realistic to know that for us to get a solution to the problem, both sides are gonna have to give something.

Now, what's the policy question? The policy question is is how do you drive the economy with the government taking a larger and larger share out of the economy? And the answer to that is is eliminate things that are not legitimate roles for the federal government. Going back to the question of homes. Where do you find in the Constitution the authority for the federal government to be in the home loan business?

I mean, it's not there. And the reason we're at risk today, the reason our children are at risk, is because we've abandoned constitutional principles. We've abandoned the enumerated powers. And we've decided to do things that our founders in the--in our best interest would never work in terms of a republic.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

ERICA HILL:

(UNINTEL) we're gonna take a quick break. But there will be more. Don't worry. Our town hall on the economy continues. With more questions from our studio audience and also from you at home. Stick with us. You're watching the Early Show on CBS.

ERICA HILL:

We are back now with our panel of Republican leaders. Senator Tom Coburn, Governor Nikki Haley, Congressman Allen West, and Congressman Paul Ryan.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

And we want to bring in our CBS News--business and economics correspondent, Rebecca Jarvis, who is following the questions we have been getting online. Rebecca?

REBECCA JARVIS:

Bob, thank you. And this first question comes from Facebook. It was submitted to us from Suzanne Thornton of Cushing, Texas. And she asks, "Under the Democrat president, Clinton, we had a surplus. Under a Republican president, Bush, it disappeared and turned into a deficit. So, why should we hand our country back over to Republicans?" Governor Haley, why don't you take this one?

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

You know-- I think what we first have to understand is both parties made a mistake. I mean, both parties did not handle the government responsibly the way they should. We have got to-- and-- and in reference to what the Senator said, we do have to cut taxes. In South Carolina, we have an economy where I have basically said, "Government was intended to secure the rights and freedoms of the people. It was never intended to be all things to all people."

So, what we did was we said, "This is gonna hurt, but we're gonna get back to the basics. And we're gonna get strong again. And we're gonna do it independently of the federal government." And a lot of that is we are cutting unemployment taxes for employers. We are cutting down the weeks for employees on what they get in terms of unemployment taxes. But we are incentivizing those that are successful to want to be more successful.

And we have to remember that when you give businesses cash flow, when you give them profit margins, what's the first thing they do? They hire people. So, your goal has to be on jobs. It has to be on job creation. And it has to be on the fact that when you know both parties have messed up, guess what that brought about? The rise of the Tea Party, which were upset with both parties. That said, "We want to take our government back. We're gonna do it. Now it's government's responsibility to control the spending and know the value of the dollar."

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Governor-- can I just ask you this question. Corporations are-- are turning in record profits right now. But they don't seem to be hiring. So, doesn't that-- beg the question here, "Why aren't they hiring? With-- with all these big profits coming--"

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

Well, you know, I'll tell you-- I'm proud to say that while the economy is taking a downward turn-- nationally, in South Carolina it's going up. And the reason it's going up is because unemployment's down for the fourth time in the row. They have a governor that's fighting for jobs every day. We just passed TORT reform. We just passed Medicaid reform. With just passed that every legislator had to start voting on the record. I mean, we're doing things that are giving companies confidence.

Confidence one to come to South Carolina. We are fighting the unions every step of the way. We are a strong right to work state. We're gonna stay that way. That's what gives a company confidence to come and say, "This is a state where we can make money. This is a state where we can invest and know that we're right to hire." And then they say in-- you know, and then they come to stay. And my job as governor is to continue to keep communication with those companies and say, "How do we help you expand?"

REBECCA JARVIS:

Representative Ryan, a lot of Governor Haley's response talks about jobs. And jobs are top of mind for Americans. The most recent CBS News poll showed that 48 percent of Americans think the most important thing is jobs and the economy. But just ten percent think it's the deficit. That's what we mostly hear from Republicans. We hear more about the deficit than we hear about jobs.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, I wouldn't suggest-- they're interrelated. These are the same issue. So, they're not exclusive of one another. Jobs comes from economic growth. Economic growth gives us more revenues, which helps us get down the deficit. The huge deficit we have is nothing more than tomorrow's interest rate increases or tax rate increases.

So, when government runs huge deficits, like it is today, what that tells businesses who are sitting on capital and not hiring, "Look out, my taxes are gonna go up tomorrow or we're gonna have an inflation interest rate problem tomorrow." And so, it is these massive deficits-- deficits that are showing businesses that there's an uncertain future, an uncertain future with which they don't want to invest in.

And that is why a lot of businesses are-- sitting on capital. I had a roundtable in Kenosha with business leaders last Thursday, (UNINTEL) two hours ago with business leaders. All of them are telling me the same thing. "We don't know what's coming from government next. So many new regulations coming down the pike."

(OVERTALK)

REBECCA JARVIS:

--coming from the consumer, though. There's no consumer demand for a lot of their products.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Say that again?

REBECCA JARVIS:

They don't know what's coming from the consumer. The demand that's coming from American consumers is very weak, at this point. Which is why they're not creating the jobs to sell the product or to manufacture it.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Consumption comes when people feel secure in their own lives. When people have jobs that they are-- that they--they feel secure in. When they're not worried about losing their job. You need to have a good economy that is producing jobs and giving security, economic security to Americans, who then will go forward and act like consumers.

And so, what we have right now is a government that is giving so much uncertainty, tax rates on successful small businesses under the President's plan, which is in law, is going as high as 44.8 percent on successful small businesses. Most of our jobs don't come from the big corporations. They come from these successful small businesses. And when we're gonna be raising their taxes as much as President Obama is proposing, that puts a chilling effect on job ncreation.

When we raise and borrow all this money, 42 cents out of every dollar coming out of Washington, it's borrowed. 47 percent is coming from other countries like China. This is not a future in which people, businesses or consumers, feel confident in the American economy. We gotta deal with these issues, so we can feel confident and get this job creation back on.

REBECCA JARVIS:

There's-- there's obviously a vicious cycle here. And it doesn't help--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's right.

REBECCA JARVIS:

--that the U.S. economy is absolutely a consumer-driven economy. You talk about the importance of confidence. You talk a lot about small businesses. But going back to large businesses who are sitting on this cash.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's right.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Isn't one of the major issues also that they have learned how to do more with less. And it is not in their interest to hire people. Is there any way you can change that?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, first of all, predictability. I think large businesses-- first of all, we're in the international economy, whether we like it or not? And we have to recognize, if we tax our employers, our producers a lot more than our foreign competitors tax theirs, they win, we lose. Right now, we have the highest corporate tax rate now that Japan is lowering theirs than any other industrialized country.

Right now, we are taxing our businesses, our manufacturers in America, a lot more than our foreign competitors tax theirs. And what is the government telling them? "You're gonna pay higher taxes." What is the government doing? Running up record deficits that mean even higher taxes. So, even though the president's proposing over $2 trillion in new tax increases on these businesses, we still aren't solving our fiscal problem and it's putting a chilling effect on hiring.

So, you're not gonna get good consumption in this country if you don't have good investment, if you don't have confidence, if you don't have businesses out there not only keeping people on the payroll, but adding to their payrolls. And so, we're in a vicious cycle and we want to get on a virtuous cycle.

ERICA HILL:

All right, we're gonna have to stop this cycle right now. Because we need to take a quick break. (LAUGH) When we come back, though, we do have several more questions to get to. So, stay with us here at the Early Show.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

And still ahead more of your questions for our panel of Republican-elected officials, as we continue a CBS News town hall on the economy.

ERICA HILL:

This is the Early Show on CBS. Your local news is next.

ERICA HILL:

Welcome back to this special hour of the Early Show. A town hall on the economy, the Republican view.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Joining us-- Senator Tom Coburn, Governor Nikki Haley, Congressman Allen West, and Congressman Paul Ryan. And next--we have a little question about taxes. Senator Colburn,

I'm gonna ask this one be directed to you and it comes from Crystal Grant.

CRYSTAL GRANT:

Greetings. I'm originally from Boiling Springs, South Carolina. So, greetings to you, Governor Haley. My question is about compromise. With low and middleclass Americans making sacrifices every day and the deficit growing exponentially, it seems difficult to justify tax breaks for millionaires and billionaires. Are you open to considering-- maybe tax-- returning to previous levels for those making over $500,000 a year versus a $250,000 level?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

Well, I-- I think my-- my approach would be we've gotta find a compromise. I don't like that. Because-- when you-- when you do that, what you're doing is taking investment capital that's not gonna go into a small business or a medium-sized business. You're-- you're taking capital away and saying the government can spend the money better. The-- the fact is is if we were to lower tax rates we could actually generate increased revenue.

And that's what we had proposed, in terms of the president's deficit commission. That's what the gang of six was working on. You know, we-- we can increase taxes a trillion dollars by lowering tax rates and gettin' rid of things like the ethanol blenders credit that you all pay $6 billion a year for and then go to the pump and pay another Hun-- $1.72 a gallon in subsidies for ethanol-blended gasoline. I mean, we have a trillion dollars worth of tax earmarks in the tax code that are special favors across-- and some are not, but the vast majority are special favors.

We ought to eliminate those, lower the tax rate, so people can have the confidence and the expectation that they know what they're gonna pay. So, I'm not against increasing the revenues of the federal government. But I-- we ought to do it in a way that actually increases jobs and increases wealth and increases prosperity. But combined with that, you have to decrease the size of the federal government. The size of the federal government is double what it was ten years ago. We just simply can't afford it.

I mean, you-- you just said, in your statement, you have to live within your means. And the federal government has refused to do that. And-- and we're incompetent in Congress to address the issues. A couple examples, if I can take some time. We have 80 economic development programs-- we have 188 total. We have 80 within four agencies. Not one of those economic development programs has had-- ever had a measurement on it to see if it was actually effective in developing ec-- the economy. Not one time have we ever looked at it.

And the cost-- for that money, that's $6.6 billion that goes for that. We don't know what-- wouldn't we be better off having that $6.6 billion in the states like Governor Haley. And say, "Here, do economic development with the money the way you think you ought to do it, rather than us in Washington, where we don't actually know how to do it."

BOB SCHIEFFER:

What would be your take on that, Mr. West?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Well, I think it's very simple. And--and understand, four years ago, I was sitting in a desert and Kandahar, Afghanistan. So, I bring a very common-sense perspective. And being in the military is-- is simple. You know, we don't reinforce with additional resources where we're gonna lose those resources. And so, I think until we up here in the federal government can show that we can be fiscally responsible with the resources of the American taxpayers. Then we should not be asking to-- to get increased resources.

See, one of the problems is when you have tax cuts, but then you grow government, that's how you take a surplus, you turn it into a deficit. But it's not just the tax rates. It's all of the additional taxes that make up a marginal tax rate. So, the next thing you know, you've got the dividends tax, you've got your capital gains tax, you've got your estate tax. You've got all of the other taxes you may have at the state level, even down at the local level. And now what we're talking about is a marginal tax rate for people that can be anywhere from 60 up to 70 percent.

And even when John F. Kennedy took over as president, and he saw a marginal tax rate on those top-- income tax brackets of 91 percent, he said, "That's too high." And he cut it down to 71 percent. So, when you're talking about growing the economy, once again, investment, ingenuity, and innovation does not come from Capital Hill, does not come from Washington, D.C. It comes from the people down here.

And we have to set those fiscal and economic policies that promote that. And we have to get spending in line with revenues. 18 to 20 percent. That's where it is. We need to cap that federal government spending at about 20 percent. Right now, federal government spending, as per G.D.P. is 25 percent. And with the Obama budget, it's programmed to go above 30 percent. And you cannot continue to go on that path, if you want to have long-term, sustainable economic and job growth.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Let me-- let me ask you-- the three members of-- of Congress here, you've been here since January. The best to my knowledge, you've done absolutely nothing. There's no jobs program. You've got unemployment at 9.-- 1 percent. Why is that?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, we have divided government now. First of all, what happened the last two years--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Well, there's always been divided government.

(OVERTALK)

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Well, (UNINTEL) jobs program is a trillion dollars when you add the borrowing cost in stimulus. Remember what stimulus was supposed to do. It was supposed to keep unemployment from going above eight percent. We're at 9.1. We went as high as 9.8 percent. What else happened? Our tax increase, $800 billion in tax increases with the president's health care law. The health care law passed, which is basically the government taking over 17 percent of our economy.

We've got new energy regulations coming through, putting a chilling effect on American-made energy to lower our-- our gas prices. And so, with so much has come from the government in the last two years, I believe that that is a gre-- greatest reason why the economy's not growing. What have we done since January? In the House of Representatives, where the two of us work. We've passed a budget to reform this tax system, make people take away tax shelters from higher income individuals in exchange for lower tax rates (UNINTEL) businesses to create jobs.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Congressman, not to be argumentative, but you passed something that you knew there wasn't one chance that the Senate was gonna chance.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Well, it would be nice if the Senate tried to pass a budget. It's been 775 days since the Senate even bothered trying to pass a budget.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

But wouldn't it be good to try to find some way to compromise on these--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's why we've said--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

--things to kind of get the people at the same table and say, "Here's something we want to do. Here's something you want to do. Instead of passing these things that people know will never get agreed to by the other house."

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Well, I'll give you another great example. Our office came up with HR-16-63. Which is the-- Small Business Encouragement Act. And what it says is in the previous fiscal year, if you're a small business that has revenues of $20 million or less. You have $100 employees or less. We're talking about extending the work-- opportunity tax credit for 2012 and 2013 which says we'll give you $6,000 if you hire a person off the unemployment rolls.

And if you're in a county that has a double-digit unemployment rate, you get an additional $6,000. And now those are the type of things we're looking to do to help small businesses get out there, encourage them and incentivize them to hire people. It's sitting in the Ways and Means Committee. And-- hopefully, they'll get it passed and we'll get it in the House floor and then we'll get over to the Senate. And hopefully they-- they'll pass that and it'll get on the president's table--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Senator?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--before we recess.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

Well, I think-- Bob, I think what you're describing is-- is a system of the careerism that has invaded and perhaps been here a long time. The goal is the next election, not the next generation right now in Washington.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Absolutely.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

It-- we're more interested in political careers than we are fixing the very real and urgent problems in front of our country. The Senate has-- this is the lowest level of votes the Senate has had in my seven years and the lowest level of votes in 25 years.

And the reason we're not voting is people don't want to take a vote, because they might have to defend it. So, rather than come up here and do the job and have the courage and the honor to go out and defend your votes, what we do is we just don't vote.

ERICA HILL:

How do you change that? How do you change that, Senator.

(OVERTALK)

ERICA HILL:

But leadership-- leadership continues--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

We've put ideas on the table.

ERICA HILL:

--to change.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

We've passed ideas in the House. We've said, "Here's how we think we balance the budget. Here's how we save Medicare. Here's how we create jobs." We're putting these bills out there. We're passing these bills, because we think you need to do is lead with your ideas, defend your ideas. And what we're having is basically the crickets are chirping. We're not seeing any action from any of our legislative partners on the other side of the aisle.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Governor Haley ca-- looks like she'd like to comment here.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

I have to say this. Because while--

BOB SCHIEFFER:

From outside Washington.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

While D.C. is-- is totally-- in chaos. And has-- (LAUGH) is just-- not doing anything. The states can't wait. We have to lead. And so, what I would beg of both the Congress and the Senate, which I think everybody should agree on is give us flexibility. Quit mandating any expend-- any spending down. Medicaid alone is a quarter of South Carolina's budget. Give us the ability to decide what the health care needs are of our citizens. When it comes to any education mandates, let us decide how to educate our kids. When it comes to any of the health care, let us decide our health care. And (UNINTEL) and Medicaid is huge for us.

(OVERTALK)

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

--and I know that the Congressman has done that, as well. And-- and they've been helpful, these are things that can really make a difference. So, you know-- I have said D.C. is just dysfunctional right now. But all I would beg is that those things can be done right away. Those are things that y'all could pass that would make a huge difference with our states. That we could continue to function and lead for our people, while y'all figured everything else out.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Let-- let me just ask Senator Coburn to wrap this up. 'Cause I think he hit the nail on the head here. Is there any way to change this, Senator? I mean, will we still a change in our lifetime?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

Yeah, I think American people need to change it, though. I-- I'm convinced--

REP. PAUL RYAN:

That's why we're here.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

--that Washington is-- its main focus is short-term political expediency. And the reason our country's at risk is because we think short term and about the next election, rather than thinking about the future of our country. You know, the reason I'll stand up as a conservative Republican, one of the biggest deficit (UNINTEL) in Congress and say, "I'll negotiate on taxes." Because our country's in trouble.

And if we don't, we're gonna lose the very limited future that's in front of us today and somebody else is gonna tell us where we're gonna spend our money. It isn't gonna be the American people. It's gonna be the bond holders throughout the world.

REBECCA JARVIS:

So, Senator Coburn, do we go the direction, then, of the United Kingdom and employ austerity measures and face, potentially, a toxic environment. That's what the Bank of England just said. A toxic environment where there's slow growth and inflation, taking place at the same time?

SEN. TOM COBURN:

No, you do both. You do both. There's no question if what-- first of all, every dollar the federal government spends doesn't give the same bang in the-- for the buck in the economy. And I can show you about $5 trillion that gives us a negative return on the dollars that we spend. So, if we're gonna spend money as a federal government, then we ought to be spending it where we get an economic multiplier of $2 or $3.

The problem with the stimulus bill, there was only $46 billion out of almost $900 billion that actually had any productive change in terms of economic multiplier in the whole stimulus bill. No wonder it failed. We said it was gonna fail. Because it did not create jobs that then created more jobs. So-- this isn't hard. What-- what is hard is to come to the realization that career politicians in this country are killing this country.

ERICA HILL:

We-- and with that, we actually have to move on to the next topic. Although we could talk about this for a long time. And this comes from Leslie who's in our audience. Leslie has a question about Medicare.

LESLIE SIDDELEY:

Hi there. I'm 48 years old. So, I'm in the age group that would be impacted to the changes to the Medicare program under the so-called Ryan Plan. I'm also the caretaker of an elderly parent. It's common in my age group. How can I be certain that Medicare will be affordable for me when it comes time for me to retire? Especially considering I've been paying in for 30 years.

REP. PAUL RYAN:

I'm the Ryan guy. (LAUGH) I guess I'll answer the question. A few facts that are not in dispute. Fact number one, we have 10,000 baby boomers retiring every day and fewer workers coming in to pay taxes to pay for the program. Fact number two, health care costs, they're skyrocketing at about four times the rate of inflation, which is threatening Medicare's current ability to provide affordable accessible care.

Fact number three, all the independent ex--experts agree, Medicare's going bankrupt. Medicare along with Social Security, I would argue, are the most important federal programs we have. And so, what we want to do is save and strengthen the program. Here's what we say. Number one, if you have retired already or if you're 55 and above and you're about to retire, government made a promise to you. We should keep that promise.

So, we say, "Don't change the program for anybody above the age of 55." But in order to be able to do that. In order to cash flow that promise, prevent that bankruptcy from hitting my mom who's on Medicare. You know, my mom and I took care of my grandmother when she was on Alzheimer's on Medicare. It's very important to me, personally, as well. You've got to fix it for the next generation, if you want to keep it for the current generation. And the way in which we propose to fix it for 54 and below are to have a system that works like the one we have in Congress.

Like the one that President Clinton's bipartisan commission to save Medicare proposed in the late 1990s. It's an idea that's had bipartisan support in the past. It's called premium support. It works just like Medicare Advantage today. Medicare prescription drugs. Medicare supplemental. You get a list of plans that Medicare preapproves that are guaranteed coverage options that you select from.

These plans compete against each other for your business. And then Medicare subsidizes that plan based on who you are. If you're a wealthy person, we don't think tax payers should subsidize their health care as much as everybody else. If you're a lower income person or if you're a person who keeps getting sicker, we think we should have increased subsidies. And so, what we say, is starting for the 54 and below crowd, when they turn 65, is take what we spend per person on Medicare, apply it to these people and adjust it like I said. Less for the wealthy, more for the poor and the sick, so that they can have plans to choose from and use choice and competition.

Here's the alternative. The president passed a law, it's in law, Obamacare, I know people don't like it being called Obamacare. The current health care law raids half a trillion dollars from Medicare to spend on this new health care law. And then it puts a board of 15 unelected, unaccountable bureaucrats in charge of cutting Medicare for current seniors through price controls, which will lead to providers dropping care, which will lead to rationing, which will hurt the actual program for current seniors.

We repeal the rationing board. We repeal the raid of Medicare. We think Medicare funds should go to Medicare, not other programs. How many times have you heard that since Social Security? And then we save it for the next generation, so that we can cash flow the promise and keep it for the current generation. So, when you turn 65, you'll have a program that will be there for you. At--at the rate-- at the age you are, 48, I'm not that much younger than you. It's not gonna be there for us if we don't do anything to save it.

It is going bankrupt. The sooner we act on this, the better off we are. And the more gradual the necessary reforms are. It will be British austerity. It will be painful benefit cuts to current seniors, tax increases on everybody like young people that slows down our economy, if we keep kickin' the can down the road. And it is a political careerism around here that has put us in the mess we are in. And you need leaders to step up and stop doing this.

We put a plan out there. I don't expect everybody to like the plan. But at least we put a plan out there. And I would love to see our partners on the other side of the aisle put their alternative plans out there, so we can get to the business of actually solving this problem.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

We need to kick this can over to Rebecca for the next-- (UNINTEL) Rebecca.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Well, we have a question from Brian Olfey, from Post Falls, Idaho. He sent it via email. He says, "Considering the fact that the U.S. Government is the nation's largest employer, how do you expect to cut $2 trillion from the budget without sending the jobless rate through the roof?" And-- Representative West, why don't you take it?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

I think it's important for us to-- as we say, we gotta get back to understanding what are the essential functions of the federal government? One of the questions I asked when I got up here, 'cause I'm a newbie, I've been here since the 5th of January. Never held any type of public office before. But it's-- once again, it's a common-sense approach. It's a very disciplined approach that the military-- teaches you. 13 appropriations bills come out of the-- the House of Representatives. What's the priority? No one could answer that.

And that's why I wrote a letter over to the House Appropriations chairman-- Hal Rodgers. Why don't we have a tiered progress-- program so that we say, "These are the priorities." And then we can understand from the bottom up. We can start to refine. We can start to cut. And get the federal government back into its essential functions. So, I think that, you know, we can have this bureaucratic nanny state. That grows up here in Washington, D.C.

And if you continue to have that, you're gonna continue to have the separation between the revenues that are coming in and the spending that is going out. And so, what we've seen in the past three years, $1.42 trillion. $1.29 trillion. And now $1.65 trillion of deficits. So, we have to make the hard decisions up here. And I think that's one of the reasons why persons like the governor and myself, we're not career politicians. And we're bringing a perspective that is totally different and outside of the beltway.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Coming back to the question--

(OVERTALK)

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--we've got to make a change.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Coming back to the question, though, of jobs. We are facing a new reality. We are a facing a reality--

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Government does not create jobs. The private sector creates jobs. And if we continue--

REBECCA JARVIS:

And we are looking at--

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--to-- if we continue to--

REBECCA JARVIS:

--a private sector right now that's not doing it.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

You're not--

(OVERTALK)

REBECCA JARVIS:

They're shipping them overseas.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--conditions for the private sector to grow. You're not setting the conditions.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Well, let me tell you what the conditions are--

(OVERTALK)

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--business tax rate of 35 percent. The highest in the world. Who is going to be able to create a job in the United States of America, bring production and manufacturing back to this country, if you're pushing them away?

REBECCA JARVIS:

Well, Ford Motor Company, for example--

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Ford Motor Company did not take--

REBECCA JARVIS:

--is creating jobs.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

--any bailout money and they created jobs.

REBECCA JARVIS:

Exactly. They are.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Great company.

REBECCA JARVIS:

They're creating 7,000 jobs here over the next two years. But they're also building a third of their cars and producing a third of their cars for the Asian market by 2020. That means the market is changing, the world is changing. People overseas are the primary customers of U.S. businesses.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Absolutely. And that's why--

REBECCA JARVIS:

If they are building cars for foreign counterparts, why aren't they building them in foreign countries? That's exactly what they are doing. How do you work against fate?

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Well, I don't think we're working against fate. I think the thing is once-- I look at the Panama Canal. The Panama Canal is gonna be expanding in 2014 to bring in larger cargo ships. We happen to have a little thing in my district called Port Everglades, brought in $98 billion of revenue last year. I've already had meetings with the-- senior representative from Hong Kong and also--Consular General from Taiwan who want to have increased trade and increased revenue comin' out of South Florida with small business owners.

Those are the type of things we're looking to do. How can we increase our production, our manufacturing, our export to some of these foreign markets. But right now, we don't have the right type of economic and fiscal policies. It comes back to the one word we keep saying over and over again. Certainty.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

Well, I-- I think we've missed talking about the fact that the National Labor Relations Board, when you've got a president that allows the National Labor Relations Board to actually sue an American company for creating jobs, you are actually incentivizing companies to do business overseas. That was huge. And that is right at the heart of what we're saying. If we have to create jobs, government can't be the one stopping them.

I mean, President Obama can't say on one side, "I am for job creation." And on the other side, sue one of the companies that is trying to create thousands of jobs. They created a thousand jobs in South Carolina all while expanding 2,000 more jobs in Washington. And they still sued them. That sends a terrible message to our companies. And a terrible message-- when I was at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, we had a Canadian company that said, "I'm not doing anything until I see what happens with this lawsuit."

ERICA HILL:

We're gonna have to leave it there. (LAUGH) Stay with us, though. We'll be back again in just a moment.

(OFF-MIC CONVERSATION)

ERICA HILL:

We are back with time for one quick final question, a yes or no if you can. Do you believe the debt ceiling will be raised?

REP. PAUL RYAN:

I do believe so, if for every dollar of borrowing, we cut more than a dollar's worth of spending.

REP. ALLEN WEST:

Not without spending control measures.

GOV. NIKKI HALEY:

Only with deep spending cuts and spending caps going forward.

SEN. TOM COBURN:

I agree with the governor.

ERICA HILL:

Okay. There's not a yes or no in any of those answers. (LAUGH)

REP. PAUL RYAN:

Yes, but. Yes, but.

ERICA HILL:

But they were all short. And we appreciate that. We appreciate all your time today.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Thanks to all of you.

VARIOUS:

You're welcome. Thank you.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

Very, very interesting. We all learned a lot. Thank you.

ERICA HILL:

Our panel again. Congressman Paul Ryan, Congressman Allen West, Governor Nikki Haley, and Senator Tom Coburn.

BOB SCHIEFFER:

And thanks to our studio audience out there. And our host, the-- night studio at the Newseum here in Washington.

ERICA HILL:

If you missed any bit of it or maybe you'd just like to see it all again, you can view the entire town hall at YouTube.com/CBS or on our website at EarlyShow.CBSNews.com. |----------------|-----------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Gate Review 1: | Architecture Review (AR):               | March 30 –April 1, 2011 |

| Gate Review 4: | Operational Readiness Review (ORR)      | September/October 2012  |

Summary of Requirements:

CCIIO will review requests for a draw-down of funds to support the SDLC activities at the time of the Gate Reviews. The request is prospective for the obligations needed to get the grantee through to the next gate review. Grantees may in the interim request a draw-down of funds to support the activities of the Early Innovator IT Cooperative Agreement award. Grantees will be required to submit to their requests to their project officer via email:

1. A brief description of how the draw-down request supports the goals of the approved application's scope of work and the specific SDLC cycle
2. Standard Form (SF) 424, a SF 424A, and a Budget Justification specific to the draw down request. Use the link and attach the form to your request for draw down. http://intranet.hhs.gov/forms/PHS/SF-424\_Forms\_SF-LLL\_Forms\_.pdf; and
3. A description of fiscal accountability of funds. Specifically, address:
  - a. Name of Contractor or proposed contractor.
  - b. Method of Selection: How was the contractor selected? State whether the contract is sole source or competitive bid. If an organization is the sole source for the contract, include an explanation as to why this institution is the only one able to perform contract services.
  - c. Period of Performance: How long is the contract period? Specify the beginning and ending dates of the contract.
  - d. Scope of Work: What will the contractor do? Describe the specific services/tasks to be performed by the contractor as related to the accomplishment of program objectives. Deliverables should be clearly defined.
  - e. Method of Accountability: How will the contractor be monitored? Describe how the progress and performance of the contractor will be monitored during and on close of the contract period. Identify who will be responsible for supervising the contract.

Timeline for Review and Release of Grant Funds:

CCIIO will perform an internal review of draw down requests. That review is expected to take up to two weeks, assuming documentation is sufficient to support the request for draw down of funds. The Division of Grants Management Operations will notify grantees by email of CCIIO's decision regarding the draw down request.

Alex:

Since the governor had time for Fox news, how about her own statewide public television network. I am asking for an interview for her reasons behind refusing expansion of Medicaid and not setting up a health care exchange. Would it be possible to do this interview sometime over the next three days?

I would also like to ask her about the public reaction to her decision. Opinion pages and blogs have almost all been negative to the decision. What about the calls to your office and by the way if they were recorded, I would believe them to be open records and if such I am now making a formal request for copies of those recordings.

Thank you for your time

FYI - Essential Health Benefits IOM Report (please see attached):

The report, Essential Health Benefits: Balancing Coverage and Cost, from the Institute of Medicine's Committee on Defining and Revising an Essential Health Benefits Package for Qualified Health Plans was released on October 6. The report proposes criteria for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to use in determining the essential health benefits package (EHB). Though the report is the outcome of a challenging exercise by the committee, it is only the initial step in what the committee itself described as a “politically and socially charged endeavor.” HHS will be taking the recommendations into account and will be issuing final rules in 2012.

The committee recommended that HHS achieve the following milestones:

- May 1, 2012: An initial EHB package will be developed by HHS using the “national average premium target” as a guide, as well as the benefits of what a “typical” small employer offers today. Adjustments should be made “so that the expected national average premium for a silver plan with the EHB package is actuarially equivalent to the average premium that would have been paid by small employers in 2014 for a comparable population with a typical benefit design.” A public process should be implemented to guide the adjustment process.
- January 2013: HHS should have developed a plan for monitoring the implementation of the EHB including mechanisms for sharing data.
- 2015: A public process should be implemented to guide the updating of the EHB package.

Other important recommendations outlined in the report include:

- Promoting state innovation and allowing those states that administer exchanges to modify the EHB package as long as it is consistent with the federal framework;
- Establishing a National Benefits Advisory Council to provide oversight; and
- The implementation of a strategy which will take into account the growth of the rate of health care spending and assure that it is aligned with the growth in the nation’s economy.

eCap-Oklahoma Policy Institute: State not on path to create own health exchange

Author: Justin Martino

Date: 10/26/2011

(eCap) According to David Blatt, director of the Oklahoma Policy Institute, Oklahoma is not on the path to show sufficient adequate progress in creating a state insurance exchange by January 2013.

On a list of core areas of basic minimum requirements of which the federal government requires a state to show readiness, Oklahoma is showing sufficient progress only in the area of background research. In other areas, such as legislative action, financial management and stakeholder consultation, Oklahoma is showing limited progress at the moment.

Blatt's presentation was part of an all-day meeting of the Joint Committee on Federal Health Care Law, which met Wednesday in the Senate Chamber at the state Capitol. [Editor's note: See related story on the committee's meeting.]

Oklahoma must have a plan in place for a state-run exchange by January 2013, giving the state about 14 months to make the necessary progress. If Oklahoma does not have an adequate plan, the federal government will create a health exchange in Oklahoma.

Blatt mentioned several areas in which Oklahoma has shown little progress, including legislative and regulatory action. Although the state attempted to pass two different bills that would have created a board to research creating a health insurance exchange in 2011, neither bill passed out of the Legislature.

HB 2130, by House Speaker Kris Steele, R-Shawnee, and Sen. Clark Jolley, R-Edmond, provides for members of the Health Care for the Uninsured Board and provides that the board will hold its first meeting no later than Dec. 15, 2011. It directs the secretary of health and human services to act as the Health Care for the Uninsured Board executive director. It removes reference to the Oklahoma Insurance Department and Oklahoma Health Care Authority. The bill expands the board's duties to include applying for grants or other federal Medicaid funds to implement the provisions of the Health Care for Oklahomans Act and to establish a system of counseling, including a website, for individuals without health insurance who are not covered by Medicaid. The bill also expands the duties of the insurance commissioner to include establishment of a system for the certification of low-cost health insurance programs designed to provide coverage to certain individuals and that the program will not be required to meet certain mandates. The bill provides that the board may recommend that plans certified by the commissioner be offered statewide to eligible individuals. It states that the HUB is not to receive general revenue appropriations but be funded by grants awarded to the state.

The bill was approved by the House but not heard by the Senate, which resulted in Oklahoma declining the federal early innovator grant. A second bill was filed that would require the exchange to be funded by state and private dollars.

SB 971, by Jolley, Sen. David Myers, R-Ponca City, Rep. Scott Martin, R-Norman, and Rep. Earl Sears, R-Bartlesville, establishes the Health Insurance Private Enterprise Network as a state-beneficiary public trust. It states that the network will be governed by a seven-member board of directors, comprised of one member appointed by the governor representing health insurance carriers granted a certificate of authority by the Oklahoma Insurance Department; one member appointed by the House speaker representing consumers who has purchased or is reasonably expected to purchase policies through the network; one member appointed by the governor who shall be a health care provider; one member appointed by the governor who shall be a representative of employer groups; one member by the Senate president pro tempore who shall be an insurance agent or broker; the insurance commissioner and the secretary of health and human services. It requires the insurance commissioner to serve as chair of the board. It requires the board to appoint an executive director.

The measure also grants the network the minimum authority under state law that is necessary to avoid the establishment of a federal exchange. It requires the network's funding to come from state and private sources. It establishes the purpose of the network to increase choice and competition in the health insurance market of Oklahoma. It prohibits the network from exercising regulatory authority over any entity, discriminating against any qualified health insurance carrier willing to participate in the network or supplanting any marketplace outside the network. It requires the network board to establish a system of certification for insurance programs offered in the state to be offered by the network and establish a system for credentialing licensed insurance producers who intend to market insurance programs certified by the state. It removes language relating to duties of the network board. It requires all personal information generated through the purchase of any policy purchased through the network to remain confidential between the insurer and the insured. It requires the network board to promulgate rules as necessary to implement the purposes of the act.

SB 971 never received a hearing in the Senate. Instead, legislative leaders decided to step back and study the issue over the interim through the committee that met Wednesday.

Blatt added that even if the two bills had passed, they did not include all of the necessary provisions to meet federal requirements.

Blatt also discussed the issue of stakeholder consultation, another requirement to show progress in creating a health insurance exchange. Although Oklahoma received an exchange planning grant to help facilitate the process, he said in recent months the planning process has come to a "screeching halt," with the last stakeholder meeting being held about seven months ago.

Oklahoma has also shown little progress in creating an information technology system for a health insurance exchange. Although the state received a $54 million Early Innovator Grant from the federal government that would have been used to obtain the necessary technology, the state chose to decline the grant funds.

If the federal government sets up a health insurance exchange in Oklahoma because the state has not shown adequate progress, Blatt said Oklahoma would face several disadvantages, including the loss of regulatory authority and ability to design the exchange on the state's own terms to create one uniquely suited to Oklahoma's residents.

The Oklahoma Policy Institute also released a report Wednesday stating that projections that the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act will cost billions of dollars are "way out of line" with other studies and based on mistaken assumptions and methodologies.

According to the report, the fiscal impact of the act will be between $200 and $800 million between 2014 and 2020, adding that several studies that looked at a broader range of costs, savings and revenue factors have projected the cost will be even less and could yield net savings.

"We think that anyone who looks carefully at the assumptions and calculations of the various studies will agree that the federal government is on the hook for the lion's share of the cost of health care reform," Blatt stated in a release. "Although we cannot precisely calculate the fiscal impact of the Affordable Care Act, the fact that the federal government will take over funding responsibility for functions now borne by the state, such as health care for adults with mental illness, will help the state budget and offset some of the expense of a larger Medicaid population."

SENATE DISTRICT 15 RACE

THE DEMOCRAT

The Democratic challenger for the Senate District 15 seat is Mrs. Claudia Griffith, a newcomer herself to politics but she is no stranger. Her husband sits on the Norman City Council. That raised some red flags immediately. The Norman City Council is quietly implementing the U. N.'s agenda 21 right under the noses of the public with the help of a corrupt GOP candidate for the state legislature Bobby Cleveland.

Mrs. Griffith's web site gives her work history as nursing and she claims to be an independent thinker.

However there is a complete lack of specifics in her proposals on her website. She believes that throwing more money at schools will solve our education problem, when it won't. What is needed in education is more local control and less state and federal interference in education. She fails to indicate whether or not she supports Obamacare. She also fails to indicate whether or not she supports the size of government. Sometimes what people don't say is more important than what they do say.

The Oklahoma State AFL-CIO is her largest contributor by far having contributed $5,000.00 to her campaign. We expect unions to contribute to Democrats, so this is no big deal.

In her filings with the Oklahoma State Ethics Commission three items that stuck out. The first is

- Evolve Ok
- the second is Transform Ok
- the third is Okie Force

The reason these three stuck out is that they all three share the same address. Now this would not be unusual if it was an office building, but it's not; this is a home in one of the outlying suburbs of Oklahoma City. All three entities are environmentally oriented organizations. In other words, they support Norman's Agenda 21 scheme. Why are we not surprised that they support her? I wonder if Bobby Cleveland has taken their money as well?

This is not a candidate that we can support. There is too much Agenda 21 in her platform to do Oklahoma and Oklahoma jobs any good.

The Rat, the Democrat and the Republican

By Ms PM

This story goes to show that it doesn't matter what party you belong to, the same conclusion is reached...our country is in trouble.

Vacationing in California and seeing my old boss and dear friend of 20+ years, we were able to talk about many of the issues facing the nation. This was a new experience for me as we had never gotten into politics. Armed with more knowledge following the political foolishness over the past few years, our conversations were interesting with surprisingly similar thought processes for the most part.

The only news I was able to catch was from local stations. During the two week stay the main topics were mostly about local California stupidity and I began to ask questions to see if my friend knew any of what was really going on. His most disturbing question was, "why haven't I heard about any of this stuff you're talking about in the news?"

He is a person that lives on 350 acres of one of the most beautiful secluded hill tops about five miles inland from the coast just south of Half Moon Bay. There is no cell coverage and he gets about eleven TV stations with an antenna, with six that are in English. That perturbs him, my word, not his. Politically correct isn't in his vocabulary. Being a registered Democrat and one that voted for Obama in 08, I could tell that some of what I was saying was disturbing, but, not at all surprising to him. He had no idea about all the executive orders bypassing Congress nor the acquisition of guns and ammo being stockpiled by different entities of the government just to name a couple. The information on the NDAA left him speechless.

This man has qualities that most others have discarded. His loyalty to people and friends would warm any heart. He's around 70 years old and a Vietnam Vet. He learned a long time ago that fighting in that war wasn't patriotic when he came back home. Being one of principle, he has become bitter towards our government because of all the lies told to him and others and absolutely does not trust those in charge. He has chosen not to follow what is going on because he gets too mad and doesn't believe there is anything he can do to change any of it. Both Obama and Romney scare the hell out of him. He doesn't believe either will keep their promises and follow what the Founders set up for America. The sadness I saw in his tired face broke my heart. I saw clearly what a tyrannical government does to its people. And now, his only choice as he sees it, is to live in an area he loves, eke out a living to pay his rent and enjoy the hilltop with some semblance of peace.

By now you're probably wondering how the rat fits into this. Well...he has an old truck parked that isn't running. I had parked next to it and he said, "I want to show you something." He raised the hood and this huge pack rat was sitting in the well established nest he had built for himself, just looking at us. He had been there a while. Two days later we went into town and there was no washer fluid, odd, it had been filled not long ago.

I checked it the next morning and Mr. Rat had chewed the hose to the wiper fluid and what I saw laying on the top of the motor was pretty amazing. There was one of our "Oklahoma Guardian" newspapers. Somehow he had gotten into the truck and swiped a copy to start his nest with under the hood. I took the paper into the house and had told my friend what had happened.

Curiosity got the better of him and he read the article I had written on "Fear and Unrest, What Will You Do?" But...he continued to read the entire newspaper. From all of our conversations we had had, after reading the newspaper he understood to a greater depth of what I had talked to him about. It had come clear to him that it didn't matter what party you were registered as, if what both party's are doing is wrong, it's wrong.

He understood why we were doing what we do and I understood just how worn out he had become. So...I will continue this fight for America, for him, and all of us. What an exceptional experience....and all because of a lesson from a rat. It doesn't get any better than that!

Stuart and the State Chamber Sitting in a Tree,

K-I-S-S-I-N-G.

First Comes Love, Then Comes Marriage,

Then Comes Stuart With a Baby Carriage...

Do kids still use that childhood ditty that our generation used to use on the playground to tease other kids that were smitten? Yuck, girls had cooties after all! Or so we thought at that young age, later on we wanted all the cooties we could get. If kids are still using the chant then it applies quite well to Stuart Jolley the director of Oklahoma's chapter of Americans For Prosperity (AFP). This last week found old Stuart (AKA Little Man Viagra spokesperson) slobbering all over the State Chamber and supporting their judicial evaluation report that is purported to evaluate judges based on their "pro business" positions.

Now we aren't knocking the idea of someone keeping up with these judges and letting the voters know when the law isn't followed and judges disregard Oklahoma conservative values. Appellate court judges stand for retention votes every six years and Oklahoma Supreme Court Justices stand for retention at the next statewide election following their initial appointment. As the sitting judges usually retain their seat by a two to one margin it is entirely appropriate for someone to cast a leery eye on their records, our problem is with the State Chamber being the sole judge, jury, and executioner.

So Stuart Jolly, ever the publicity hound, spooned up with the State Chamber in calling out four Justices for being activist judge: Yvonne Kauger, James Edmondson, Douglas Combs, and Noma Gurich. Stuart said in an interview that he would be publicizing the judicial rankings to "thousands of its members". Right..., I remember back when Stuart was claiming 40,000 member of Oklahoma AFP and we would have to lend him Sooner Tea Party volunteers to staff his table at events. People's email address captured by others forwarding their newsletter hardly constitutes "membership in a group. Hell Stuart, don't stop there, get a phone book and do some robo calls and claim everyone with a working phone number as a member.

Interesting enough, Stuart also claimed in a Capitol Beat story that he was considering whether or not to launch an advertising campaign against the jurists, something that AFP National might be interested in as actually advertising against a candidate violates their 501C 3 status.

The problem with AFP endorsing the State Chamber judicial rankings is that the judges are ranked using a narrow set of interests, the big business interests of the State Chamber with zero use of constitutional or civil rights votes. The only issues covered were employment, medical malpractice, product liability, insurance, other liability issues and workers' compensation, nothing was considered that covered respect for existing law, freedom, liberty, or justice.

The judges do need reined in, the AT&T v. Oklahoma State Board of Equalization case resulted in a ruling that ruled that "intangible" property could be assessed for purposes of ad valorem taxation, leading to a quick fix at the Capitol that allowed businesses to pay a token tax, but one that required more bookkeeping for businesses and was and is a pain in the Stuart Jolley. State Question 766 is to address this issue on the November ballot, but allowing the State Chamber even more control over Oklahoman's affairs is hardly a step forward for conservatives.

Poor Stuart, he reminds me of a blond joke:

Question: What is the first thing a blond will do in the morning?

Answer: She walks home.....

So once again Stuart Jolley embarrasses Oklahoma values and AFP by supporting the State Chamber instead of the common good. No doubt someone will catch him trudging North on the Broadway Extension one of these mornings, pushing his baby carriage full of illegitimate State Chamber offspring, already showing signs of his latest love child that he agreed to carry for the State Chamber.

Give This Man Some Help

Or Would You Rather See a Liberal Democrat Elected Again?

Dave Bell, one of our favorite candidates, is running against former representative Jabar Shumate of North Tulsa. Shumate is a liberal Democrat, allegedly accused of being a closeted gay man, and is someone that needs sent back to the life he is better suited for. Dave put out a request for campaign donations last week so his campaign can purchase more signage and flyers for precinct walks.

Last week the Sooner Tea Party reached out to Brian Bingman, the President Pro Tem of the Senate and the one that has access to Senate PAC money. Bingman's office did respond and they did talk to Dave Bell on the possibility of considering a PAC donation but the staffer threw up a smokescreen of requirements before the Senate PAC would donate. Basically if the candidate had the money to jump through all their hoops, he wouldn't need their donation. Not good Brian, Dave Bell is a constitutional conservative, not a process that you can size up and categorize. Last I checked the Senate PAC had over $40,000 sitting in the bank and Dave Bell is one of the handful of contested Senate races in November.

Let's remind Brian Bingman that their PAC money was given to promote Republican candidates for Senate office. You can email Brian at bingman@oksenate.gov.

Let's also dig into our pockets and donate directly to Dave Bell. I will personally match the first $250.00 in donations to Dave so that your hard earned money is stretched to do more good. Just reply to this newsletter letting me know how much you donated and I will send a matching amount to Dave Bell. Any amount will help, from $5.00 to $5,000.00, and donations under $50 won't become public record if you wish, just make sure that you don't contribute more than $50 per campaign because then the info becomes public. If your donation is over $50, include who you work for, your profession, along with your home address.

Dave is a hard core constitutional conservative and he will look out for our interests all across the state if we can get him elected. You can't push Dave around, he stands for everything that the Republican Party Platform and the Tea Party stands for, and I think you would have to kill him before he would break his word. You can contact Dave at 918-638-9977 to donate or to volunteer. Please mail checks to Dave Bell for State Senate, 1312 North Canton, Tulsa Ok, 74115

No Where to Hide Indeed

Once again State GOP Chairman Matt Pinnell cast aside decency and common sense with his weekly rant against other politicians. In his blog "Nowhere to Hide" Matt takes Obama to task for his record so far, high unemployment, skyrocketing debt, and poor foreign policy. He reminds us that Obama said in 2008 that if he didn't turn things around then he would be a one term president. Fair enough Matt...

Pinnell goes on to brag about Romney's Massachusetts record, balancing the budget, cutting taxes, reduced spending, and job growth, all with a Democrat controlled legislature.

Pinnell doesn't mention though the decline of Oklahoma's prosperity during his leadership of the GOP. Our own unemployment is still fairly high, the Governor that he helped elect and continues to support schemed to implement Obama Care on Oklahomans, while the Capitol building crumbles around her desk. Pinnell himself made huge promises in 2010 to win the Oklahoma GOP State Chairman slot yet few of those promises were delivered. Pinnell sat on his hands and watched the two largest budgets in Oklahoma history get passed at the Capital, saw the Governor that he supported join with the State Chamber of Commerce and RINO Republicans to support a bill that promised prosperity by taxing our way into economic freedom in a 2010 billion dollar state tax increase and Pinnell did this despite having a rock solid majority in the House, Senate, and all of the state agencies.

We can only hope that Republicans in Oklahoma make it to the February Republican precinct meetings, ask to be a delegate, and either remove Pinnell from office or force him to do his job of supporting the Republican Party Platform.

Questioning the State Questions?

On September 23rd the Sooner Tea Party Newsletter published a list of State Questions that would be on the November ballot and made recommendations on how to vote. However we had to take a second look at one of those State Questions after new information popped up that made us question if SQ 765 deserved a yes vote. Sometimes many minds working on a possible corruption case or an attempt to confuse and lead astray conservative voters will benefit finding the truth or will at least drive the cockroaches from the cracks where we can stomp on them. Below in blue type is the bill summary of every one of the State Questions along with the House voting record where it is warranted. Sometimes knowing who voted for and against a bill helps to define exactly what the intent of the legislature was. But skip the blue type if you wish to get to the gist of the matter.

The legislative bill number needs to be linked with the State Question number to avoid confusion:

SQ758 = HJR1002    SQ759 =SJR15    SQ762 = SJR25    SQ764 = HJR1085

SQ765 = HJR1092    SQ766 = SJR52

BILL SUMMARY

1st Session of the 53rd Legislature

Bill No.: HJR 1002

Version:            Senate Amendments

Request Number:    NA

Author:             Rep. Dank

Date:                4/19/2011

Impact: Change in the Rate of Growth

FY-14: $6,558,000

The Tax Commission indicates the rate of potential growth in the revenue to taxing jurisdictions will be restrained. Analysis undertaken by the Commission reveals that forty-two percent (42%) of residential and commercial property parcels may be subject to a full five percent (5.0%) valuation increase at some point in future years. A reduction in the maximum annual rate of assessed valuation increase to three percent (3.0%) will restrain the revenue growth rate approximately $6.56 million in FY-14. The estimate is based on current county databases – the actual effect on revenue growth will be a function of changes in valuation in coming years.

The change in growth resulting from a similar cap in agricultural land is not estimated, as the utilization of use value methodology to value property is not expected to exceed the percentage cap.

Only around $7,000,000 in savings to the tax payer? Small change, better than a sharp stick in the eye but they could do much better.

$3.3 Million Annually

Research Analysis

The CS for Engrossed SJR 25 sends to a vote of the people a proposed amendment to the State Constitution that would give the Pardon and Parole Board the power to grant parole for nonviolent offenses and would require the Board to report annually to the Legislature certain information about all paroles granted.

Fiscal Analysis

The Committee Substitute for Engrossed SJR25 authorizes the Pardon and Parole Board to grant parole to nonviolent offenders. This action will allow nonviolent parolees to be released earlier than they are currently and save the Department of Corrections (DOC) the cost of housing these offenders while awaiting approval from the Governor.

According to the Pardon & Parole Board, approximately 1,200 non-violent offenders are recommended for parole annually. The process typically takes about 90 days after the Board recommendation before the offender is released. SJR25 would shorten that process by approximately 60 days. With average daily prison costs of $46/day per offender, SJR25 would save approximately $2,760 per offender, or $3.3 million annually.

BILL SUMMARY

2nd Session of the 53rd Legislature

Bill No.: HJR 1085

Version: CS

Request Number:

Author: Richardson

Date: 3/8/2012

Impact: Impact only if bonds need to be issued

Research Analysis

The committee substitute to HJR 1085 creates a state question to amend the Oklahoma Constitution by creating the Oklahoma Water Resources Board (OWRB) Water Infrastructure Credit Enhancement Reserve Fund which is authorized to issue bonds used for a reserve fund for water resource and sewage treatment financial assistance programs for subdivisions of the state. OWRB can issue general obligation bonds up to $300,000,000 only after other monies and sources are used for repayment. The Legislature is required to provide for administration for the fund, methods for issuing the bonds and sufficient appropriations to pay for the bonds.

Fiscal Analysis

CS for HJR 1085 sends to a vote of the people a proposed constitutional amendment creating within the Oklahoma Water Resources Board the Water Infrastructure Credit Enhancement Reserve Fund. The purpose of the Fund is to secure the payment on bonds issued to provide for the Board's financial assistance programs. The bonds authorized by the amendment would only be issued in the event of a future payment default and after all pledged monies, reserved funds required of borrowers, reserved funds required of OWRB, and any surety bond payments have been used. According to officials at the OWRB, this kind of default has never happened in the history of OWRB's lending and the likelihood of these bonds needing to be issued is minimal. The purpose of the bond authority is to allow towns and rural water districts the foundation of the state's credit as they secure financing for water and wastewater infrastructure upgrades as outlined by the Comprehensive Water Plan.

Other Considerations

According to the OWRB, existing financing programs are expected to only cover 10% of the future demand for upgrades and improvements, leaving many Oklahoma communities to fend for themselves in securing financing.

Vote No on SQ 764

Below is the State Question that we... well, began to question after an email from Representative Osborn was forwarded to us. When we looked back at the bill information we found that the bill that was passed didn't even mention the Governor controlling the DHS organization, it said that the legislature would create and administrate the agency.

Below is what Osborn had sent out on SQ 765 and it is very close to other legislator's email recommendations. We aren't picking on Osborn, just pointing out that the misinformation is wide spread and that got us to comparing notes and tying together some loose ends.

SQ 765 Rep. Steele/Sen. Treat

A yes vote on this State Question would abolish the Commission for Human Services, a constitutionally mandated, 9 member group of unelected volunteers. It is a 1930's governance model that can be traced to the agency's major problems with an unaccountable commission and an insulated director. With the passage of this measure The DHS director will be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. This would place the agency's leadership closer to the people because the Governor is accountable to all the people of the state. DHS would basically now be answering directly to the public, not an unelected, unaccountable commission.

Now here is what the legislation actually said about the bill that would become SQ 765:

This measure amends the State Constitution. It provides for the repeal of Sections 2, 3 and 4 of Article 25 which relate to the Department of Public Welfare, the Oklahoma Public Welfare Commission and the Director of Public Welfare. This measure grants the Legislature the authority to create and direct by law the administration of a department or departments to provide for public welfare for the people of the State of Oklahoma.

Section 6>. For the purpose of effectively administering and carrying into execution all laws enacted pursuant to the authority granted in Section 1 of this Article, the Legislature is hereby authorized to create a department or departments charged with the duty and responsibility of faithfully administering and carrying into execution all laws enacted pursuant to the authority granted in Section 1 of this Article and shall perform such other duties as may, from time to time, be prescribed by law. <

And a monstrous red flag popped up, on the enrolled \(final version\) of the bill Democrat Wade Rousselot was one of the House co authors, along with Speaker Kris Steele, Jason Nelson, Pat Ownbey and Ron Peterson. That is a rouge's gallery if I ever saw one.

Here is the header of the enrolled version with the author's names in red type:

By: Steele, Rousselot, Nelson, Ownbey and Peterson of the House and
Treat, Brinkley and Johnson (Constance) of the Senate

So what is so ominous about Wade Rousselot's participation? We reported last week that Republican Governor Mary Fallin has allowed her image to be used by incumbent House member Democrat Wade Rousselot's campaign even though he is running against Republican David Tackett.

Tackett's campaign put out the word on Fallin's tactic support of an opposing party candidate against one of her own party's candidates along with a letter from Representative Mike Reynolds and another from Representative Mike Ritze calling for Governor Fallin to set the record straight on allowing the use of her picture. This week other legislators joined in calling Fallin to limit the use of her image in supporting opposing candidates and to publically endorse the Republican candidate for House District 12. Also the Republican Chairman for Wagoner County called for Governor Fallin to explain the use of her picture on Rousselot's campaign material.

The Tackett campaign reported that one GOP official had this to say:

"This is unprecedented. I can't remember if there was a time that a State Representative sent out campaign literature with a picture of the Governor of the opposing party. And the fact that Governor Fallin has yet to endorse the Republican candidate in this race makes it even more troubling."

We need everyone to contact the Governor about this mess and demand a response. Governor Fallin's political director is Denise Northrup, and can be contacted at denisenorthrup. Ask her just who the Governor is supporting in the HD 12 race and why the Governor's picture is on a Democrat's mailer. Tell her that Oklahomans deserve an answer on this issue.

It would appear to be obvious that the Governor may well have struck a deal with the liberal Democrat, support a power grab to seize power over the DHS department in exchange for her endorsement. I ask you how this is different from the Leftwich scandal that generated flimsy Oklahoma County criminal charges against two legislators in 2011? Are the unusually worded SQ 765 information emails circulating an effort to subvert the will of the legislature and potentially the vote of the people to maintain legislative control over the DHS agency? Is this a Quid Pro Quo between Republican Governor Fallin and Democrat Wade Rousselot?

Governor Fallin has a staff member read our newsletter every Sunday night right after it comes out. Andrew Silverstri is the current Deputy Policy Director for Governor Fallin and I must say he is conscientious about doing his task so we know that Governor Fallin also reads everything we write or at least the most interesting parts. It might be a good idea to email Andrew as well and pass along a request that Governor Fallin either endorse the Republican candidate for House District 12 and put a stop to her support of Democrat Wade Rousselot or switch party her affiliation to Democrat.

Here are those emails again:

Food Stamp Phone Shumate

They call those "free" cell phones that are given away on street corners by vendors "food stamp phones" because if you are on food stamps you qualify for a "free" phone that you and I pay for through our phone bill taxes. That sense of entitlement is mirrored in Representative Jabar Shumate's campaign donation records.

Yeah, this one is a long article but you can scroll through the table of info below quickly while paying attention to the the info highlighted in red type. This guy is paying campaign workers to walk for him; I didn't know that was even legal! No one has ever paid any Tea Party volunteers to walk precincts for candidates! Plus Representative Shumate is buying tires for his car, traveling to San Francisco (I'm going to bite my tongue on that one), donating to organizations that support gays, lesbians, and transsexuals, and good lord, look at his Starbucks bill!

The gay connection was interesting as although there was plenty of rumors and he said/he said info coming out of Tulsa alleging that Shumate was a closeted gay this was the first real documented connection between Shumate and a gay supported organization. Now we aren't bashing on the gays, we tend to leave them alone if they aren't bothering anybody, just pointing out that Shumate supports their issues. ### The Rainbow PUSH Coalition Applauds Prop 8 Ruling

"Many years ago in the late 1970s', I visited South Africa, then deep in the throes of apartheid system. I was asked by the media what I thought of the situation, and I said something very culturally challenging to them, "I believe in human rights for all human beings. We must measure human rights by one yardstick." That principle – our moral center - still applies. Everything flows from this perspective. We all matter. Today let us fix the problem, not fix the blame – let us come together and build a broad coalition.

We stand together today as equal members of the human family; as consistent principled advocates for human rights for all people. We stand together today to uphold the principles of due process, of equal protection under the law, of fighting against discrimination against any and all people based on race, religion, gender or sexual orientation.

We applaud today's court ruling that supports Marriage Equality, striking down Proposition 8 as unconstitutional. Peoples' right to self-expression, self-determination be respected and affirmed. It's time to challenge ignorance, a time to break the silence and the chains of hatred, of divisive and discriminatory bigotry. Marriage is based on love and commitment — not on sexual orientation. Rainbow PUSH supports the right for any person to marry the person of their choosing.

If Dr. King and our civil rights movement has taught us anything, it's the fundamental principle of that all people deserve Equal protection under the law. LGBT people deserve equal rights – including marriage equality – and equal protection under the law. Discrimination against one group of people is discrimination against all of us. The State – and the Courts - should not sanction discrimination.

To those that believe in and fought for civil rights, that marched to end discrimination and win equality, you must not become that which you hated. It's past time to persist in hypocrisy and ignorance, and time to come out of the shadows and darkness to support unequivocally, equality for all people. Those that support civil and human rights cannot, must not, become perpetrators of discrimination against others based upon race, religion, culture, sexual orientation.

African Americans know too well the sting of legal, state sanctioned, constitutionally driven "second class" citizenship – from centuries of legal slavery and Jim Crow segregation, to classified as 3/5 of a human being in the U.S. Constitution, to facing anti-miscegenation laws that prevented Blacks from marrying whites.

Marriage is a fundamental right of all individuals. That principle was upheld today — for Blacks and Whites, for straight and gay, for ALL Americans. No group of people should be denied their fundamental constitutional liberties, like equal protection under the law, simply because of who they are.

Interestingly enough, reportedly the black community hates it when gays compare what they went through in the civil rights struggle to the gay rights movement. Many blacks believe that the comparison cheapens their struggle, perverts it if I might be so bold to use that word. Representative Shumate is certainly struggling to keep one foot in the black community and in the gay community, risky politics at best. The Tea Party could care less what Representative Shumate does to churn his butter but we don't like hypocrisy, if he is gay he should come right out and admit it. If he isn't gay he should address the allegations and put them to rest.

And take a look at all the "constituent gifts". This report reads like it is a slush fund to funnel campaign money to pay for Representative Shumate's personal expenses. That needs looking into, they cut off the gifts from lobbyists or at least make them public then allow money from campaign war chests to be spent on travel, Starbucks, Burlington Coat Factory, Wal-Mart, and so on? Spending $20 for breakfast at Starbucks on a regular basis? That is living high on the hog

Subject: FW: Is Governor Mary Fallin Really Endorsing a Democrat Against a Republican Challenger?
Date: Monday, October 08, 2012 11:48:58 AM

I think we can really debunk this fiscal analysis, depending on what path we take for the SQ.

There is still a delay in processing cases, and this will continue whether or not the Governor is in the process. Right now we are processing cases from June or July, so it is taking 3 to 4 months for cases to reach our office.

Board staff said there are issues with DOC such as: delay in returning parole certificates to us (these have to be signed by the offender); delay in placing offenders in programs (the stipulations must be completed before we receive the file); and delay in home offers being approved.

Fiscal Analysis

The Committee Substitute for Engrossed SJR25 authorizes the Pardon and Parole Board to grant parole to nonviolent offenders. This action will allow nonviolent parolees to be released earlier than they are currently and save the Department of Corrections (DOC) the cost of housing these offenders while awaiting approval from the Governor.

According to the Pardon & Parole Board, approximately 1,200 non-violent offenders are recommended for parole annually. The process typically takes about 90 days after the Board recommendation before the offender is released. SJR25 would shorten that process by approximately 60 days. With average daily prison costs of $46/day per offender, SJR25 would save approximately $2,760 per offender, or $3.3 million annually.

The Democratic challenger for the Senate District 15 seat is Mrs. Claudia Griffith, a newcomer herself to politics but she is no stranger. Her husband sits on the Norman City Council. That raised some red flags immediately. The Norman City Council is quietly implementing the U.N.'s agenda 21 right under the noses of the public with the help of a corrupt GOP candidate for the state legislature Bobby Cleveland.

Mrs. Griffith's web site gives her work history as nursing and she claims to be an independent thinker.

However there is a complete lack of specifics in her proposals on her website. She believes that throwing more money at schools will solve our education problem, when it won't. What is needed in education is more local control and less state and federal interference in education. She fails to indicate whether or not she supports Obamacare. She also fails to indicate whether or not she supports the size of government. Sometimes what people don't say is more important than what they do say.

The Oklahoma State AFL-CIO is her largest contributor by far having contributed $5,000.00 to her campaign. We expect unions to contribute to Democrats, so this is no big deal.

In her filings with the Oklahoma State Ethics Commission three items that stuck out. The first is

- Evolve Ok
- the second is Transform Ok
- the third is Okie Force

The reason these three stuck out is that they all three share the same address. Now this would not be unusual if it was an office building, but it's not; this is a home in one of the outlying suburbs of Oklahoma City. All three entities are environmentally oriented organizations. In other words, they support Norman's Agenda 21 scheme. Why are we not surprised that they support her? I wonder if Bobby Cleveland has taken their money as well?

This is not a candidate that we can support. There is too much Agenda 21 in her platform to do Oklahoma and Oklahoma jobs any good.

The Rat, the Democrat and the Republican

By Ms PM

This story goes to show that it doesn't matter what party you belong to, the same conclusion is reached...our country is in trouble.

Vacationing in California and seeing my old boss and dear friend of 20+ years, we were able to talk about many of the issues facing the nation. This was a new experience for me as we had never gotten into politics. Armed with more knowledge following the political foolishness over the past few years, our conversations were interesting with surprisingly similar thought processes for the most part.

The only news I was able to catch was from local stations. During the two week stay the main topics were mostly about local California stupidity and I began to ask questions to see if my friend knew any of what was really going on. His most disturbing question was, "why haven't I heard about any of this stuff you're talking about in the news?"

He is a person that lives on 350 acres of one of the most beautiful secluded hill tops about five miles inland from the coast just south of Half Moon Bay. There is no cell coverage and he gets about eleven TV stations with an antenna, with six that are in English. That perturbs him, my word, not his. Politically correct isn't in his vocabulary. Being a registered Democrat and one that voted for Obama in 08, I could tell that some of what I was saying was disturbing, but, not at all surprising to him. He had no idea about all the executive orders bypassing Congress nor the acquisition of guns and ammo being stockpiled by different entities of the government just to name a couple. The information on the NDAA left him speechless.

This man has qualities that most others have discarded. His loyalty to people and friends would warm any heart. He's around 70 years old and a Vietnam Vet. He learned a long time ago that fighting in that war wasn't patriotic when he came back home. Being one of principle, he has become bitter towards our government because of all the lies told to him and others and absolutely does not trust those in charge. He has chosen not to follow what is going on because he gets too mad and doesn't believe there is anything he can do to change any of it. Both Obama and Romney scare the hell out of him. He doesn't believe either will keep their promises and follow what the Founders set up for America. The sadness I saw in his tired face broke my heart. I saw clearly what a tyrannical government does to its people. And now, his only choice as he sees it, is to live in an area he loves, eke out a living to pay his rent and enjoy the hilltop with some semblance of peace.

By now you're probably wondering how the rat fits into this. Well...he has an old truck parked that isn't running. I had parked next to it and he said, "I want to show you something." He raised the hood and this huge pack rat was sitting in the well established nest he had built for himself, just looking at us. He had been there a while. Two days later we went into town and there was no washer fluid, odd, it had been filled not long ago.

I checked it the next morning and Mr. Rat had chewed the hose to the wiper fluid and what I saw laying on the top of the motor was pretty amazing. There was one of our "Oklahoma Guardian" newspapers. Somehow he had gotten into the truck and swiped a copy to start his nest with under the hood. I took the paper into the house and had told my friend what had happened.

Curiosity got the better of him and he read the article I had written on "Fear and Unrest, What Will You Do?" But...he continued to read the entire newspaper. From all of our conversations we had had, after reading the newspaper he understood to a greater depth of what I had talked to him about. It had come clear to him that it didn't matter what party you were registered as, if what both party's are doing is wrong, it's wrong.

He understood why we were doing what we do and I understood just how worn out he had become. So...I will continue this fight for America, for him, and all of us. What an exceptional experience....and all because of a lesson from a rat. It doesn't get any better than that!

Stuart and the State Chamber Sitting in a Tree,

K-I-S-S-I-N-G.

First Comes Love, Then Comes Marriage,

Then Comes Stuart With a Baby Carriage...

Do kids still use that childhood ditty that our generation used to use on the playground to tease other kids that were smitten? Yuck, girls had cooties after all! Or so we thought at that young age, later on we wanted all the cooties we could get. If kids are still using the chant then it applies quite well to Stuart Jolley the director of Oklahoma's chapter of Americans For Prosperity (AFP). This last week found old Stuart (AKA Little Man Viagra spokesperson) slobbering all over the State Chamber and supporting their judicial evaluation report that is purported to evaluate judges based on their "pro business" positions.

Now we aren't knocking the idea of someone keeping up with these judges and letting the voters know when the law isn't followed and judges disregard Oklahoma conservative values. Appellate court judges stand for retention votes every six years and Oklahoma Supreme Court Justices stand for retention at the next statewide election following their initial appointment. As the sitting judges usually retain their seat by a two to one margin it is entirely appropriate for someone to cast a leery eye on their records, our problem is with the State Chamber being the sole judge, jury, and executioner.

So Stuart Jolly, ever the publicity hound, spooned up with the State Chamber in calling out four Justices for being activist judge: Yvonne Kauger, James Edmondson, Douglas Combs, and Noma Gurich. Stuart said in an interview that he would be publicizing the judicial rankings to "thousands of its members". Right..., I remember back when Stuart was claiming 40,000 member of Oklahoma AFP and we would have to lend him Sooner Tea Party volunteers to staff his table at events. People's email address captured by others forwarding their newsletter hardly constitutes "membership in a group. Hell Stuart, don't stop there, get a phone book and do some robo calls and claim everyone with a working phone number as a member.

Interesting enough, Stuart also claimed in a Capitol Beat story that he was considering whether or not to launch an advertising campaign against the jurists, something that AFP National might be interested in as actually advertising against a candidate violates their 501C 3 status.

The problem with AFP endorsing the State Chamber judicial rankings is that the judges are ranked using a narrow set of interests, the big business interests of the State Chamber with zero use of constitutional or civil rights votes. The only issues covered were employment, medical malpractice, product liability, insurance, other liability issues and workers' compensation, nothing was considered that covered respect for existing law, freedom, liberty, or justice.

The judges do need reined in, the AT&T v. Oklahoma State Board of Equalization case resulted in a ruling that ruled that “intangible” property could be assessed for purposes of ad valorem taxation, leading to a quick fix at the Capitol that allowed businesses to pay a token tax, but one that required more bookkeeping for businesses and was and is a pain in the Stuart Jolley. State Question 766 is to address this issue on the November ballot, but allowing the State Chamber even more control over Oklahoman’s affairs is hardly a step forward for conservatives.

Poor Stuart, he reminds me of a blond joke:

Question: What is the first thing a blond will do in the morning?

Answer: She walks home.....

So once again Stuart Jolley embarrasses Oklahoma values and AFP by supporting the State Chamber instead of the common good. No doubt someone will catch him trudging North on the Broadway Extension one of these mornings, pushing his baby carriage full of illegitimate State Chamber offspring, already showing signs of his latest love child that he agreed to carry for the State Chamber.

Give This Man Some Help

Or Would You Rather See a Liberal Democrat Elected Again?

Dave Bell, one of our favorite candidates, is running against former representative Jabar Shumate of North Tulsa. Shumate is a liberal Democrat, allegedly accused of being a closeted gay man, and is someone that needs sent back to the life he is better suited for. Dave put out a request for campaign donations last week so his campaign can purchase more signage and flyers for precinct walks.

Last week the Sooner Tea Party reached out to Brian Bingman, the President Pro Tem of the Senate and the one that has access to Senate PAC money. Bingman’s office did respond and they did talk to Dave Bell on the possibility of considering a PAC donation but the staffer threw up a smokescreen of requirements before the Senate PAC would donate. Basically if the candidate had the money to jump through all their hoops, he wouldn’t need their donation. Not good Brian, Dave Bell is a constitutional conservative, not a process that you can size up and categorize. Last I checked the Senate PAC had over $40,000 sitting in the bank and Dave Bell is one of the handful of contested Senate races in November.

Let’s remind Brian Bingman that their PAC money was given to promote Republican candidates for Senate office. You can email Brian at bingman@oksenate.gov.

Let’s also dig into our pockets and donate directly to Dave Bell. I will personally match the first $250.00 in donations to Dave so that your hard earned money is stretched to do more good. Just reply to this newsletter letting me know how much you donated and I will send a matching amount to Dave Bell. Any amount will help, from $5.00 to $5,000.00, and donations under $50 won’t become public record if you wish, just make sure that you don’t contribute more than $50 per campaign because then the info becomes public. If your donation is over $50, include who you work for, your profession, along with your home address.

Dave is a hard core constitutional conservative and he will look out for our interests all across the state if we can get him elected. You can’t push Dave around, he stands for everything that the Republican Party Platform and the Tea Party stands for, and I think you would have to kill him before he would break his word. You can contact Dave at 918-638-9977 to donate or to volunteer. Please mail checks to Dave Bell for State Senate, 1312 North Canton, Tulsa Ok, 74115

No Where to Hide Indeed

Once again State GOP Chairman Matt Pinnell cast aside decency and common sense with his weekly rant against other politicians. In his blog "Nowhere to Hide" Matt takes Obama to task for his record so far, high unemployment, skyrocketing debt, and poor foreign policy. He reminds us that Obama said in 2008 that if he didn't turn things around then he would be a one term president. Fair enough Matt...

Pinnell goes on to brag about Romney's Massachusetts record, balancing the budget, cutting taxes, reduced spending, and job growth, all with a Democrat controlled legislature.

Pinnell doesn't mention though the decline of Oklahoma's prosperity during his leadership of the GOP. Our own unemployment is still fairly high, the Governor that he helped elect and continues to support schemed to implement Obama Care on Oklahomans, while the Capitol building crumbles around her desk. Pinnell himself made huge promises in 2010 to win the Oklahoma GOP State Chairman slot yet few of those promises were delivered. Pinnell sat on his hands and watched the two largest budgets in Oklahoma history get passed at the Capital, saw the Governor that he supported join with the State Chamber of Commerce and RINO Republicans to support a bill that promised prosperity by taxing our way into economic freedom in a 2010 billion dollar state tax increase and Pinnell did this despite having a rock solid majority in the House, Senate, and all of the state agencies.

We can only hope that Republicans in Oklahoma make it to the February Republican precinct meetings, ask to be a delegate, and either remove Pinnell from office or force him to do his job of supporting the Republican Party Platform.

Questioning the State Questions?

On September 23rd the Sooner Tea Party Newsletter published a list of State Questions that would be on the November ballot and made recommendations on how to vote. However we had to take a second look at one of those State Questions after new information popped up that made us question if SQ 765 deserved a yes vote. Sometimes many minds working on a possible corruption case or an attempt to confuse and lead astray conservative voters will benefit finding the truth or will at least drive the cockroaches from the cracks where we can stomp on them. Below in blue type is the bill summary of every one of the State Questions along with the House voting record where it is warranted. Sometimes knowing who voted for and against a bill helps to define exactly what the intent of the legislature was. But skip the blue type if you wish to get to the gist of the matter.

The legislative bill number needs to be linked with the State Question number to avoid confusion:

SQ758 = HJR1002    SQ759 =SJR15    SQ762 = SJR25    SQ764 = HJR1085

SQ765 = HJR1092    SQ766 = SJR52

BILL SUMMARY

1st Session of the 53rd Legislature

Bill No.: HJR 1002

Version:            Senate Amendments

Request Number:    NA

Author:             Rep. Dank

Date:                4/19/2011

Impact: Change in the Rate of Growth

FY-14: $6,558,000

The Tax Commission indicates the rate of potential growth in the revenue to taxing jurisdictions will be restrained. Analysis undertaken by the Commission reveals that forty-two percent (42%) of residential and commercial property parcels may be subject to a full five percent (5.0%) valuation increase at some point in future years. A reduction in the maximum annual rate of assessed valuation increase to three percent (3.0%) will restrain the revenue growth rate approximately $6.56 million in FY-14. The estimate is based on current county databases – the actual effect on revenue growth will be a function of changes in valuation in coming years.

The change in growth resulting from a similar cap in agricultural land is not estimated, as the utilization of use value methodology to value property is not expected to exceed the percentage cap.

Only around $7,000,000 in savings to the tax payer? Small change, better than a sharp stick in the eye but they could do much better.

Author: Representative Faught

Impact: Estimated Cost Savings – DOC
$3.3 Million Annually

Research Analysis

The CS for Engrossed SJR 25 sends to a vote of the people a proposed amendment to the State Constitution that would give the Pardon and Parole Board the power to grant parole for nonviolent offenses and would require the Board to report annually to the Legislature certain information about all paroles granted.

Fiscal Analysis

The Committee Substitute for Engrossed SJR25 authorizes the Pardon and Parole Board to grant parole to nonviolent offenders. This action will allow nonviolent parolees to be released earlier than they are currently and save the Department of Corrections (DOC) the cost of housing these offenders while awaiting approval from the Governor.

According to the Pardon & Parole Board, approximately 1,200 non-violent offenders are recommended for parole annually. The process typically takes about 90 days after the Board recommendation before the offender is released. SJR25 would shorten that process by approximately 60 days. With average daily prison costs of $46/day per offender, SJR25 would save approximately $2,760 per offender, or $3.3 million annually.

BILL SUMMARY

2nd Session of the 53rd Legislature

Bill No.: HJR 1085

Version: CS

Request Number:

Author: Richardson

Date: 3/8/2012

Impact: Impact only if bonds need to be issued

Research Analysis

The committee substitute to HJR 1085 creates a state question to amend the Oklahoma Constitution by creating the Oklahoma Water Resources Board (OWRB) Water Infrastructure Credit Enhancement Reserve Fund which is authorized to issue bonds used for a reserve fund for water resource and sewage treatment financial assistance programs for subdivisions of the state. OWRB can issue general obligation bonds up to $300,000,000 only after other monies and sources are used for repayment. The Legislature is required to provide for administration for the fund, methods for issuing the bonds and sufficient appropriations to pay for the bonds.

Fiscal Analysis

CS for HJR 1085 sends to a vote of the people a proposed constitutional amendment creating within the Oklahoma Water Resources Board the Water Infrastructure Credit Enhancement Reserve Fund. The purpose of the Fund is to secure the payment on bonds issued to provide for the Board's financial assistance programs. The bonds authorized by the amendment would only be issued in the event of a future payment default and after all pledged monies, reserved funds required of borrowers, reserved funds required of OWRB, and any surety bond payments have been used. According to officials at the OWRB, this kind of default has never happened in the history of OWRB's lending and the likelihood of these bonds needing to be issued is minimal. The purpose of the bond authority is to allow towns and rural water districts the foundation of the state's credit as they secure financing for water and wastewater infrastructure upgrades as outlined by the Comprehensive Water Plan.

Other Considerations

According to the OWRB, existing financing programs are expected to only cover 10% of the future demand for upgrades and improvements, leaving many Oklahoma communities to fend for themselves in securing financing.

RCS# 1407

This measure amends the State Constitution. It provides for the repeal of Sections 2, 3 and 4 of Article 25 which relate to the Department of Public Welfare, the Oklahoma Public Welfare Commission and the Director of Public Welfare. This measure grants the Legislature the authority to create and direct by law the administration of a department or departments to provide for public welfare for the people of the State of Oklahoma.

Section 6>. For the purpose of effectively administering and carrying into execution all laws enacted pursuant to the authority granted in Section 1 of this Article, the Legislature is hereby authorized to create a department or departments charged with the duty and responsibility of faithfully administering and carrying into execution all laws enacted pursuant to the authority granted in Section 1 of this Article and shall perform such other duties as may, from time to time, be prescribed by law. <

And a monstrous red flag popped up, on the enrolled \(final version\) of the bill Democrat Wade Rousselot was one of the House co authors, along with Speaker Kris Steele, Jason Nelson, Pat Ownbey and Ron Peterson. That is a rouge's gallery if I ever saw one.

Here is the header of the enrolled version with the author's names in red type:

ENROLLED HOUSE
JOINT
RESOLUTION NO. 1092

By: Steele, Rousselot, Nelson, Ownbey and Peterson of the House
and
Treat, Brinkley and Johnson (Constance) of the Senate

So what is so ominous about Wade Rousselot's participation? We reported last week that Republican Governor Mary Fallin has allowed her image to be used by incumbent House member Democrat Wade Rousselot's campaign even though he is running against Republican David Tackett.

Tackett's campaign put out the word on Fallin's tactic support of an opposing party candidate against one of her own party's candidates along with a letter from Representative Mike Reynolds and another from Representative Mike Ritze calling for Governor Fallin to set the record straight on allowing the use of her picture. This week other legislators joined in calling Fallin to limit the use of her image in supporting opposing candidates and to publically endorse the Republican candidate for House District 12. Also the Republican Chairman for Wagoner County called for Governor Fallin to explain the use of her picture on Rousselot's campaign material.

The Tackett campaign reported that one GOP official had this to say:

"This is unprecedented. I can't remember if there was a time that a State Representative sent out campaign literature with a picture of the Governor of the opposing party. And the fact that Governor Fallin has yet to endorse the Republican candidate in this race makes it even more troubling."

We need everyone to contact the Governor about this mess and demand a response. Governor Fallin's political director is Denise Northrup, and can be contacted at denisenorthrup. Ask her just who the Governor is supporting in the HD 12 race and why the Governor's picture is on a Democrat's mailer. Tell her that Oklahomans deserve an answer on this issue.

It would appear to be obvious that the Governor may well have struck a deal with the liberal Democrat, support a power grab to seize power over the DHS department in exchange for her endorsement. I ask you how this is different from the Leftwich scandal that generated flimsy Oklahoma County criminal charges against two legislators in 2011? Are the unusually worded SQ 765 information emails circulating an effort to subvert the will of the legislature and potentially the vote of the people to maintain legislative control over the DHS agency? Is this a Quid Pro Quo between Republican Governor Fallin and Democrat Wade Rousselot?

Governor Fallin has a staff member read our newsletter every Sunday night right after it comes out. Andrew Silverstri is the current Deputy Policy Director for Governor Fallin and I must say he is conscientious about doing his task so we know that Governor Fallin also reads everything we write or at least the most interesting parts. It might be a good idea to email Andrew as well and pass along a request that Governor Fallin either endorse the Republican candidate for House District 12 and put a stop to her support of Democrat Wade Rousselot or switch party her affiliation to Democrat.

Here are those emails again:

Food Stamp Phone Shumate

They call those "free" cell phones that are given away on street corners by vendors "food stamp phones" because if you are on food stamps you qualify for a "free" phone that you and I pay for through our phone bill taxes. That sense of entitlement is mirrored in Representative Jabar Shumate's campaign donation records.

Yeah, this one is a long article but you can scroll through the table of info below quickly while paying attention to the the info highlighted in red type. This guy is paying campaign workers to walk for him; I didn't know that was even legal! No one has ever paid any Tea Party volunteers to walk precincts for candidates! Plus Representative Shumate is buying tires for his car, traveling to San Francisco (I'm going to bite my tongue on that one), donating to organizations that support gays, lesbians, and transsexuals, and good lord, look at his Starbucks bill!

The gay connection was interesting as although there was plenty of rumors and he said/he said info coming out of Tulsa alleging that Shumate was a closeted gay this was the first real documented connection between Shumate and a gay supported organization. Now we aren't bashing on the gays, we tend to leave them alone if they aren't bothering anybody, just pointing out that Shumate supports their issues. ### The Rainbow PUSH Coalition Applauds Prop 8 Ruling

"Many years ago in the late 1970s, I visited South Africa, then deep in the throes of apartheid system. I was asked by the media what I thought of the situation, and I said something very culturally challenging to them, "I believe in human rights for all human beings. We must measure human rights by one yardstick." That principle – our moral center - still applies. Everything flows from this perspective. We all matter. Today let us fix the problem, not fix the blame – let us come together and build a broad coalition.

We stand together today as equal members of the human family; as consistent principled advocates for human rights for all people. We stand together today to uphold the principles of due process, of equal protection under the law, of fighting against discrimination against any and all people based on race, religion, gender or sexual orientation.

We applaud today's court ruling that supports Marriage Equality, striking down Proposition 8 as unconstitutional. Peoples' right to self-expression, self-determination be respected and affirmed. It's time to challenge ignorance, a time to break the silence and the chains of hatred, of divisive and discriminatory bigotry. Marriage is based on love and commitment — not on sexual orientation. Rainbow PUSH supports the right for any person to marry the person of their choosing..

If Dr. King and our civil rights movement has taught us anything, it's the fundamental principle of that all people deserve Equal protection under the law. LGBT people deserve equal rights – including marriage equality – and equal protection under the law. Discrimination against one group of people is discrimination against all of us. The State – and the Courts - should not sanction discrimination.

To those that believe in and fought for civil rights, that marched to end discrimination and win equality, you must not become that which you hated. It's past time to persist in hypocrisy and ignorance, and time to come out of the shadows and darkness to support unequivocally, equality for all people. Those that support civil and human rights cannot, must not, become perpetrators of discrimination against others based upon race, religion, culture, sexual orientation.

African Americans know too well the sting of legal, state sanctioned, constitutionally driven "second class" citizenship – from centuries of legal slavery and Jim Crow segregation, to classified as 3/5 of a human being in the U.S. Constitution, to facing anti-miscegenation laws that prevented Blacks from marrying whites.

Marriage is a fundamental right of all individuals. That principle was upheld today — for Blacks and Whites, for straight and gay, for ALL Americans. No group of people should be denied their fundamental constitutional liberties, like equal protection under the law, simply because of who they are.

Interestingly enough, reportedly the black community hates it when gays compare what they went through in the civil rights struggle to the gay rights movement. Many blacks believe that the comparison cheapens their struggle, perverts it if I might be so bold to use that word. Representative Shumate is certainly struggling to keep one foot in the black community and in the gay community, risky politics at best. The Tea Party could care less what Representative Shumate does to churn his butter but we don't like hypocrisy, if he is gay he should come right out and admit it. If he isn't gay he should address the allegations and put them to rest.

And take a look at all the "constituent gifts". This report reads like it is a slush fund to funnel campaign money to pay for Representative Shumate's personal expenses. That needs looking into, they cut off the gifts from lobbyists or at least make them public then allow money from campaign war chests to be spent on travel, Starbucks, Burlington Coat Factory, Wal-Mart, and so on? Spending $20 for breakfast at Starbucks on a regular basis? That is living high on the hog

I think we can really debunk this fiscal analysis, depending on what path we take for the SQ.

There is still a delay in processing cases, and this will continue whether or not the Governor is in the process. Right now we are processing cases from June or July, so it is taking 3 to 4 months for cases to reach our office.

PPB Board staff said that right now there are issues with DOC such as: delay in returning parole certificates to us (these have to be signed by the offender); delay in placing offenders in programs (the stipulations must be completed before we receive the file); and delay in home offers being approved. At the beginning of the year, the Board told me it was a staffing issue and that they fired the employee they were having trouble with.

If the Governor decides to oppose the SQ, we can work with the Board and DOC to make sure the majority of cases are processed within a certain time frame from start to finish.

Fiscal Analysis

The Committee Substitute for Engrossed SJR25 authorizes the Pardon and Parole Board to grant parole to nonviolent offenders. This action will allow nonviolent parolees to be released earlier than they are currently and save the Department of Corrections (DOC) the cost of housing these offenders while awaiting approval from the Governor.

According to the Pardon & Parole Board, approximately 1,200 non-violent offenders are recommended for parole annually. The process typically takes about 90 days after the Board recommendation before the offender is released. SJR25 would shorten that process by approximately 60 days. With average daily prison costs of $46/day per offender, SJR25 would save approximately $2,760 per offender, or $3.3 million annually.

SENATE DISTRICT 15 RACE

THE DEMOCRAT

The Democratic challenger for the Senate District 15 seat is Mrs. Claudia Griffith, a newcomer herself to politics but she is no stranger. Her husband sits on the Norman City Council. That raised some red flags immediately. The Norman City Council is quietly implementing the U. N.'s agenda 21 right under the noses of the public with the help of a corrupt GOP candidate for the state legislature Bobby Cleveland.

Mrs. Griffith's web site gives her work history as nursing and she claims to be an independent thinker.

However there is a complete lack of specifics in her proposals on her website. She believes that throwing more money at schools will solve our education problem, when it won't. What is needed in education is more local control and less state and federal interference in education. She fails to indicate whether or not she supports Obamacare. She also fails to indicate whether or not she supports the size of government. Sometimes what people don't say is more important than what they do say.

The Oklahoma State AFL-CIO is her largest contributor by far having contributed $5,000.00 to her campaign. We expect unions to contribute to Democrats, so this is no big deal.

In her filings with the Oklahoma State Ethics Commission three items that stuck out. The first is

- Evolve Ok
- the second is Transform Ok
- the third is Okie Force

The reason these three stuck out is that they all three share the same address. Now this would not be unusual if it was an office building, but it's not; this is a home in one of the outlying suburbs of Oklahoma City. All three entities are environmentally oriented organizations. In other words, they support Norman's Agenda 21 scheme. Why are we not surprised that they support her? I wonder if Bobby Cleveland has taken their money as well?

This is not a candidate that we can support. There is too much Agenda 21 in her platform to do Oklahoma and Oklahoma jobs any good.

The Rat, the Democrat and the Republican

By Ms PM

This story goes to show that it doesn't matter what party you belong to, the same conclusion is reached...our country is in trouble.

Vacationing in California and seeing my old boss and dear friend of 20+ years, we were able to talk about many of the issues facing the nation. This was a new experience for me as we had never gotten into politics. Armed with more knowledge following the political foolishness over the past few years, our conversations were interesting with surprisingly similar thought processes for the most part.

The only news I was able to catch was from local stations. During the two week stay the main topics were mostly about local California stupidity and I began to ask questions to see if my friend knew any of what was really going on. His most disturbing question was, "why haven't I heard about any of this stuff you're talking about in the news?"

He is a person that lives on 350 acres of one of the most beautiful secluded hill tops about five miles inland from the coast just south of Half Moon Bay. There is no cell coverage and he gets about eleven TV stations with an antenna, with six that are in English. That perturbs him, my word, not his. Politically correct isn't in his vocabulary. Being a registered Democrat and one that voted for Obama in 08, I could tell that some of what I was saying was disturbing, but, not at all surprising to him. He had no idea about all the executive orders bypassing Congress nor the acquisition of guns and ammo being stockpiled by different entities of the government just to name a couple. The information on the NDAA left him speechless.

This man has qualities that most others have discarded. His loyalty to people and friends would warm any heart. He's around 70 years old and a Vietnam Vet. He learned a long time ago that fighting in that war wasn't patriotic when he came back home. Being one of principle, he has become bitter towards our government because of all the lies told to him and others and absolutely does not trust those in charge. He has chosen not to follow what is going on because he gets too mad and doesn't believe there is anything he can do to change any of it. Both Obama and Romney scare the hell out of him. He doesn't believe either will keep their promises and follow what the Founders set up for America. The sadness I saw in his tired face broke my heart. I saw clearly what a tyrannical government does to its people. And now, his only choice as he sees it, is to live in an area he loves, eke out a living to pay his rent and enjoy the hilltop with some semblance of peace.

By now you're probably wondering how the rat fits into this. Well...he has an old truck parked that isn't running, I had parked next to it and he said, "I want to show you something." He raised the hood and this huge pack rat was sitting in the well established nest he had built for himself, just looking at us. He had been there a while. Two days later we went into town and there was no washer fluid, odd, it had been filled not long ago.

I checked it the next morning and Mr. Rat had chewed the hose to the wiper fluid and what I saw laying on the top of the motor was pretty amazing. There was one of our "Oklahoma Guardian" newspapers. Somehow he had gotten into the truck and swiped a copy to start his nest with under the hood. I took the paper into the house and had told my friend what had happened.

Curiosity got the better of him and he read the article I had written on "Fear and Unrest, What Will You Do?" But...he continued to read the entire newspaper. From all of our conversations we had had, after reading the newspaper he understood to a greater depth of what I had talked to him about. It had come clear to him that it didn't matter what party you were registered as, if what both party's are doing is wrong, it's wrong.

He understood why we were doing what we do and I understood just how worn out he had become. So...I will continue this fight for America, for him, and all of us. What an exceptional experience....and all because of a lesson from a rat. It doesn't get any better than that!

I gots me a sugar daddy to go with all these kids!

Stuart and the State Chamber Sitting in a Tree,

K-I-S-S-I-N-G.

First Comes Love, Then Comes Marriage,

Then Comes Stuart With a Baby Carriage...

Do kids still use that childhood ditty that our generation used to use on the playground to tease other kids that were smitten? Yuck, girls had cooties after all! Or so we thought at that young age, later on we wanted all the cooties we could get. If kids are still using the chant then it applies quite well to Stuart Jolley the director of Oklahoma's chapter of Americans For Prosperity (AFP). This last week found old Stuart (AKA Little Man Viagra spokesperson) slobbering all over the State Chamber and supporting their judicial evaluation report that is purported to evaluate judges based on their "pro business" positions.

Now we aren't knocking the idea of someone keeping up with these judges and letting the voters know when the law isn't followed and judges disregard Oklahoma conservative values. Appellate court judges stand for retention votes every six years and Oklahoma Supreme Court Justices stand for retention at the next statewide election following their initial appointment. As the sitting judges usually retain their seat by a two to one margin it is entirely appropriate for someone to cast a leery eye on their records, our problem is with the State Chamber being the sole judge, jury, and executioner.

So Stuart Jolly, ever the publicity hound, spooned up with the State Chamber in calling out four Justices for being activist judge: Yvonne Kauger, James Edmondson, Douglas Combs, and Noma Gurich. Stuart said in an interview that he would be publicizing the judicial rankings to "thousands of its members". Right..., I remember back when Stuart was claiming 40,000 member of Oklahoma AFP and we would have to lend him Sooner Tea Party volunteers to staff his table at events. People's email address captured by others forwarding their newsletter hardly constitutes "membership in a group. Hell Stuart, don't stop there, get a phone book and do some robo calls and claim everyone with a working phone number as a member.

Interesting enough, Stuart also claimed in a Capitol Beat story that he was considering whether or not to launch an advertising campaign against the jurists, something that AFP National might be interested in as actually advertising against a candidate violates their 501C 3 status.

The problem with AFP endorsing the State Chamber judicial rankings is that the judges are ranked using a narrow set of interests, the big business interests of the State Chamber with zero use of constitutional or civil rights votes. The only issues covered were employment, medical malpractice, product liability, insurance, other liability issues and workers' compensation, nothing was considered that covered respect for existing law, freedom, liberty, or justice.

The judges do need reined in, the AT&T v. Oklahoma State Board of Equalization case resulted in a ruling that ruled that "intangible" property could be assessed for purposes of ad valorem taxation, leading to a quick fix at the Capitol that allowed businesses to pay a token tax, but one that required more bookkeeping for businesses and was and is a pain in the Stuart Jolley. State Question 766 is to address this issue on the November ballot, but allowing the State Chamber even more control over Oklahoman's affairs is hardly a step forward for conservatives.

Poor Stuart, he reminds me of a blond joke:

Question: What is the first thing a blond will do in the morning?

Answer: She walks home.....

So once again Stuart Jolley embarrasses Oklahoma values and AFP by supporting the State Chamber instead of the common good. No doubt someone will catch him trudging North on the Broadway Extension one of these mornings, pushing his baby carriage full of illegitimate State Chamber offspring, already showing signs of his latest love child that he agreed to carry for the State Chamber.

Give This Man Some Help

Or Would You Rather See a Liberal Democrat Elected Again?

Dave Bell, one of our favorite candidates, is running against former representative Jabar Shumate of North Tulsa. Shumate is a liberal Democrat, allegedly accused of being a closeted gay man, and is someone that needs sent back to the life he is better suited for. Dave put out a request for campaign donations last week so his campaign can purchase more signage and flyers for precinct walks.

Last week the Sooner Tea Party reached out to Brian Bingman, the President Pro Tem of the Senate and the one that has access to Senate PAC money. Bingman's office did respond and they did talk to Dave Bell on the possibility of considering a PAC donation but the staffer threw up a smokescreen of requirements before the Senate PAC would donate. Basically if the candidate had the money to jump through all their hoops, he wouldn't need their donation. Not good Brian, Dave Bell is a constitutional conservative, not a process that you can size up and categorize. Last I checked the Senate PAC had over $40,000 sitting in the bank and Dave Bell is one of the handful of contested Senate races in November.

Let's remind Brian Bingman that their PAC money was given to promote Republican candidates for Senate office. You can email Brian at bingman@oksenate.gov.

Let's also dig into our pockets and donate directly to Dave Bell. I will personally match the first $250.00 in donations to Dave so that your hard earned money is stretched to do more good. Just reply to this newsletter letting me know how much you donated and I will send a matching amount to Dave Bell. Any amount will help, from $5.00 to $5,000.00, and donations under $50 won't become public record if you wish, just make sure that you don't contribute more than $50 per campaign because then the info becomes public. If your donation is over $50, include who you work for, your profession, along with your home address.

Dave is a hard core constitutional conservative and he will look out for our interests all across the state if we can get him elected. You can't push Dave around, he stands for everything that the Republican Party Platform and the Tea Party stands for, and I think you would have to kill him before he would break his word. You can contact Dave at 918-638-9977 to donate or to volunteer. Please mail checks to Dave Bell for State Senate, 1312 North Canton, Tulsa Ok, 74115

No Where to Hide Indeed

Once again State GOP Chairman Matt Pinnell cast aside decency and common sense with his weekly rant against other politicians. In his blog "Nowhere to Hide" Matt takes Obama to task for his record so far, high unemployment, skyrocketing debt, and poor foreign policy. He reminds us that Obama said in 2008 that if he didn't turn things around then he would be a one term president. Fair enough Matt...

Pinnell goes on to brag about Romney's Massachusetts record, balancing the budget, cutting taxes, reduced spending, and job growth, all with a Democrat controlled legislature.

Pinnell doesn't mention though the decline of Oklahoma's prosperity during his leadership of the GOP. Our own unemployment is still fairly high, the Governor that he helped elect and continues to support schemed to implement Obama Care on Oklahomans, while the Capitol building crumbles around her desk. Pinnell himself made huge promises in 2010 to win the Oklahoma GOP State Chairman slot yet few of those promises were delivered. Pinnell sat on his hands and watched the two largest budgets in Oklahoma history get passed at the Capital, saw the Governor that he supported join with the State Chamber of Commerce and RINO Republicans to support a bill that promised prosperity by taxing our way into economic freedom in a 2010 billion dollar state tax increase and Pinnell did this despite having a rock solid majority in the House, Senate, and all of the state agencies.

We can only hope that Republicans in Oklahoma make it to the February Republican precinct meetings, ask to be a delegate, and either remove Pinnell from office or force him to do his job of supporting the Republican Party Platform.

Questioning the State Questions?

On September 23rd the Sooner Tea Party Newsletter published a list of State Questions that would be on the November ballot and made recommendations on how to vote. However we had to take a second look at one of those State Questions after new information popped up that made us question if SQ 765 deserved a yes vote. Sometimes many minds working on a possible corruption case or an attempt to confuse and lead astray conservative voters will benefit finding the truth or will at least drive the cockroaches from the cracks where we can stomp on them. Below in blue type is the bill summary of every one of the State Questions along with the House voting record where it is warranted. Sometimes knowing who voted for and against a bill helps to define exactly what the intent of the legislature was. But skip the blue type if you wish to get to the gist of the matter.

The legislative bill number needs to be linked with the State Question number to avoid confusion:

Bill No.: HJR 1002
Version: Senate Amendments
Request Number: NA
Author: Rep. Dank
Date: 4/19/2011
Impact: Change in the Rate of Growth
FY-14: $6,558,000

The Tax Commission indicates the rate of potential growth in the revenue to taxing jurisdictions will be restrained. Analysis undertaken by the Commission reveals that forty-two percent (42%) of residential and commercial property parcels may be subject to a full five percent (5.0%) valuation increase at some point in future years. A reduction in the maximum annual rate of assessed valuation increase to three percent (3.0%) will restrain the revenue growth rate approximately $6.56 million in FY-14. The estimate is based on current county databases – the actual effect on revenue growth will be a function of changes in valuation in coming years.

The change in growth resulting from a similar cap in agricultural land is not estimated, as the utilization of use value methodology to value property is not expected to exceed the percentage cap.

Only around $7,000,000 in savings to the tax payer? Small change, better than a sharp stick in the eye but they could do much better.

Bill No.: SJR25
Version: CS
Request Number: N/A
Author: Representative Faught
Date: 2/29/2012
Impact: Estimated Cost Savings – DOC
$3.3 Million Annually

Research Analysis

The CS for Engrossed SJR 25 sends to a vote of the people a proposed amendment to the State Constitution that would give the Pardon and Parole Board the power to grant parole for nonviolent offenses and would require the Board to report annually to the Legislature certain information about all paroles granted.

Fiscal Analysis

The Committee Substitute for Engrossed SJR25 authorizes the Pardon and Parole Board to grant parole to nonviolent offenders. This action will allow nonviolent parolees to be released earlier than they are currently and save the Department of Corrections (DOC) the cost of housing these offenders while awaiting approval from the Governor.

According to the Pardon & Parole Board, approximately 1,200 non-violent offenders are recommended for parole annually. The process typically takes about 90 days after the Board recommendation before the offender is released. SJR25 would shorten that process by approximately 60 days. With average daily prison costs of $46/day per offender, SJR25 would save approximately $2,760 per offender, or $3.3 million annually.

BILL SUMMARY

2nd Session of the 53rd Legislature

Bill No.: HJR 1085

Version: CS

Request Number:

Author: Richardson

Date: 3/8/2012

Impact: Impact only if bonds need to be issued

Research Analysis

The committee substitute to HJR 1085 creates a state question to amend the Oklahoma Constitution by creating the Oklahoma Water Resources Board (OWRB) Water Infrastructure Credit Enhancement Reserve Fund which is authorized to issue bonds used for a reserve fund for water resource and sewage treatment financial assistance programs for subdivisions of the state. OWRB can issue general obligation bonds up to $300,000,000 only after other monies and sources are used for repayment. The Legislature is required to provide for administration for the fund, methods for issuing the bonds and sufficient appropriations to pay for the bonds.

Fiscal Analysis

CS for HJR 1085 sends to a vote of the people a proposed constitutional amendment creating within the Oklahoma Water Resources Board the Water Infrastructure Credit Enhancement Reserve Fund. The purpose of the Fund is to secure the payment on bonds issued to provide for the Board's financial assistance programs. The bonds authorized by the amendment would only be issued in the event of a future payment default and after all pledged monies, reserved funds required of borrowers, reserved funds required of OWRB, and any surety bond payments have been used. According to officials at the OWRB, this kind of default has never happened in the history of OWRB's lending and the likelihood of these bonds needing to be issued is minimal. The purpose of the bond authority is to allow towns and rural water districts the foundation of the state's credit as they secure financing for water and wastewater infrastructure upgrades as outlined by the Comprehensive Water Plan.

Other Considerations

According to the OWRB, existing financing programs are expected to only cover 10% of the future demand for upgrades and improvements, leaving many Oklahoma communities to fend for themselves in securing financing.

OKLAHOMA HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Fifty-Third Legislature

First Regular Session

looked back at the bill information we found that the bill that was passed didn't even mention the Governor controlling the DHS organization, it said that the legislature would create and administrate the agency.

Below is what Osborn had sent out on SQ 765 and it is very close to other legislator's email recommendations. We aren't picking on Osborn, just pointing out that the misinformation is wide spread and that got us to comparing notes and tying together some loose ends.

SQ 765 Rep. Steele/Sen. Treat

A yes vote on this State Question would abolish the Commission for Human Services, a constitutionally mandated, 9 member group of unelected volunteers. It is a 1930's governance model that can be traced to the agency's major problems with an unaccountable commission and an insulated director. With the passage of this measure The DHS director will be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. This would place the agency's leadership closer to the people because the Governor is accountable to all the people of the state. DHS would basically now be answering directly to the public, not an unelected, unaccountable commission.

Now here is what the legislation actually said about the bill that would become SQ 765:

This measure amends the State Constitution. It provides for the repeal of Sections 2, 3 and 4 of Article 25 which relate to the Department of Public Welfare, the Oklahoma Public Welfare Commission and the Director of Public Welfare. This measure grants the Legislature the authority to create and direct by law the administration of a department or departments to provide for public welfare for the people of the State of Oklahoma.

Section 6>. For the purpose of effectively administering and carrying into execution all laws enacted pursuant to the authority granted in Section 1 of this Article, the Legislature is hereby authorized to create a department or departments charged with the duty and responsibility of faithfully administering and carrying into execution all laws enacted pursuant to the authority granted in Section 1 of this Article and shall perform such other duties as may, from time to time, be prescribed by law. <

And a monstrous red flag popped up, on the enrolled \(final version\) of the bill Democrat Wade Rousselot was one of the House co authors, along with Speaker Kris Steele, Jason Nelson, Pat Ownbey and Ron Peterson. That is a rouge's gallery if I ever saw one.

Here is the header of the enrolled version with the author's names in red type:

ENROLLED HOUSE
JOINT
RESOLUTION NO. 1092

By: Steele, Rousselot, Nelson, Ownbey and Peterson of the House
and

So what is so ominous about Wade Rousselot's participation? We reported last week that Republican Governor Mary Fallin has allowed her image to be used by incumbent House member Democrat Wade Rousselot's campaign even though he is running against Republican David Tackett.

Tackett's campaign put out the word on Fallin's tactic support of an opposing party candidate against one of her own party's candidates along with a letter from Representative Mike Reynolds and another from Representative Mike Ritze calling for Governor Fallin to set the record straight on allowing the use of her picture. This week other legislators joined in calling Fallin to limit the use of her image in supporting opposing candidates and to publically endorse the Republican candidate for House District 12. Also the Republican Chairman for Wagoner County called for Governor Fallin to explain the use of her picture on Rousselot's campaign material.

The Tackett campaign reported that one GOP official had this to say:

"This is unprecedented. I can't remember if there was a time that a State Representative sent out campaign literature with a picture of the Governor of the opposing party. And the fact that Governor Fallin has yet to endorse the Republican candidate in this race makes it even more troubling."

We need everyone to contact the Governor about this mess and demand a response. Governor Fallin's political director is Denise Northrup, and can be contacted at denisenorthrup@ok.gov. Ask her just who the Governor is supporting in the HD 12 race and why the Governor's picture is on a Democrat's mailer. Tell her that Oklahomans deserve an answer on this issue.

It would appear to be obvious that the Governor may well have struck a deal with the liberal Democrat, support a power grab to seize power over the DHS department in exchange for her endorsement. I ask you how this is different from the Leftwich scandal that generated flimsy Oklahoma County criminal charges against two legislators in 2011? Are the unusually worded SQ 765 information emails circulating an effort to subvert the will of the legislature and potentially the vote of the people to maintain legislative control over the DHS agency? Is this a Quid Pro Quo between Republican Governor Fallin and Democrat Wade Rousselot?

Governor Fallin has a staff member read our newsletter every Sunday night right after it comes out. Andrew Silverstri is the current Deputy Policy Director for Governor Fallin and I must say he is conscientious about doing his task so we know that Governor Fallin also reads everything we write or at least the most interesting parts. It might be a good idea to email Andrew as well and pass along a request that Governor Fallin either endorse the Republican candidate for House District 12 and put a stop to her support of Democrat Wade Rousselot or switch party her affiliation to Democrat.

Here are those emails again:

Food Stamp Phone Shumate

They call those "free" cell phones that are given away on street corners by vendors "food stamp phones" because if you are on food stamps you qualify for a "free" phone that you and I pay for through our phone bill taxes. That sense of entitlement is mirrored in Representative Jabar Shumate's campaign donation records.

Yeah, this one is a long article but you can scroll through the table of info below quickly while paying attention to the the info highlighted in red type. This guy is paying campaign workers to walk for him; I didn't know that was even legal! No one has ever paid any Tea Party volunteers to walk precincts for candidates! Plus Representative Shumate is buying tires for his car, traveling to San Francisco (I'm going to bite my tongue on that one), donating to organizations that support gays, lesbians, and transsexuals, and good lord, look at his Starbucks bill!

The gay connection was interesting as although there was plenty of rumors and he said/he said info coming out of Tulsa alleging that Shumate was a closeted gay this was the first real documented connection between Shumate and a gay supported organization. Now we aren't bashing on the gays, we tend to leave them alone if they aren't bothering anybody, just pointing out that Shumate supports their issues. ### The Rainbow PUSH Coalition Applauds Prop 8 Ruling

"Many years ago in the late 1970s, I visited South Africa, then deep in the throes of apartheid system. I was asked by the media what I thought of the situation, and I said something very culturally challenging to them, "I believe in human rights for all human beings. We must measure human rights by one yardstick." That principle – our moral center - still applies. Everything flows from this perspective. We all matter. Today let us fix the problem, not fix the blame – let us come together and build a broad coalition.

We stand together today as equal members of the human family; as consistent principled advocates for human rights for all people. We stand together today to uphold the principles of due process, of equal protection under the law, of fighting against discrimination against any and all people based on race, religion, gender or sexual orientation.

We applaud today's court ruling that supports Marriage Equality, striking down Proposition 8 as unconstitutional. Peoples' right to self-expression, self-determination be respected and affirmed. It's time to challenge ignorance, a time to break the silence and the chains of hatred, of divisive and discriminatory bigotry. Marriage is based on love and commitment — not on sexual orientation. Rainbow PUSH supports the right for any person to marry the person of their choosing.

If Dr. King and our civil rights movement has taught us anything, it's the fundamental principle of that all people deserve Equal protection under the law. LGBT people deserve equal rights – including marriage equality – and equal protection under the law. Discrimination against one group of people is discrimination against all of us. The State – and the Courts - should not sanction discrimination.

To those that believe in and fought for civil rights, that marched to end discrimination and win equality, you must not become that which you hated. It's past time to persist in hypocrisy and ignorance, and time to come out of the shadows and darkness to support unequivocally, equality for all people. Those that support civil and human rights cannot, must not, become perpetrators of discrimination against others based upon race, religion, culture, sexual orientation.

African Americans know too well the sting of legal, state sanctioned, constitutionally driven “second class” citizenship – from centuries of legal slavery and Jim Crow segregation, to classified as 3/5 of a human being in the U.S. Constitution, to facing anti-miscegenation laws that prevented Blacks from marrying whites.

Marriage is a fundamental right of all individuals. That principle was upheld today — for Blacks and Whites, for straight and gay, for ALL Americans. No group of people should be denied their fundamental constitutional liberties, like equal protection under the law, simply because of who they are.

Interestingly enough, reportedly the black community hates it when gays compare what they went through in the civil rights struggle to the gay rights movement. Many blacks believe that the comparison cheapens their struggle, perverts it if I might be so bold to use that word. Representative Shumate is certainly struggling to keep one foot in the black community and in the gay community, risky politics at best. The Tea Party could care less what Representative Shumate does to churn his butter but we don't like hypocrisy, if he is gay he should come right out and admit it. If he isn't gay he should address the allegations and put them to rest.

And take a look at all the “constituent gifts”. This report reads like it is a slush fund to funnel campaign money to pay for Representative Shumate's personal expenses. That needs looking into, they cut off the gifts from lobbyists or at least make them public then allow money from campaign war chests to be spent on travel, Starbucks, Burlington Coat Factory, Wal-Mart, and so on? Spending $20 for breakfast at Starbucks on a regular basis? That is living high on the hog Don't send this to McNutt... Also, this does not include every bill! But it shows a lot of what has been accomplished.

Dan Sullivan (R-Tulsa), authorizes a court to order that future damages incurred after the date of judgment that exceed One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000.00) be paid in whole or in part in periodic payments rather than by a lump-sum payment. - SB 761, Sen. Jolley (R-Edmond), establishes a physician board which will set guidelines for best practices for workers' comp cases. Passed 45 to 0. (passed march 8)

The act defines the membership, scope of the study, and provides for a final report of findings and recommendations. Today, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) announced that the deadlines for states seeking to operate either a State-based or Partnership Exchange under the Affordable Care Act have been extended. According to the new guidance, which is attached, states electing to operate a State-based Exchange must still send a Declaration Letter by November 16th, but the Blueprint is not due until December 14, 2012. States electing to operate a State Partnership Exchange can submit their Declaration Letter and Blueprint on a rolling basis up to February 15, 2013.

Importance: High

Folks –

I wanted to make sure you were the first to see the attached letter which Senator Coburn sent to Governor Fallin today highlighting several reasons not to expand Oklahoma's Medicaid program. As a result of the Supreme Court ruling the massive expansion of Medicaid under Obamacare unconstitutional in June of this year, states have the option to expand their Medicaid program under the law, but are now not required to do so.

Specifically, Senator Coburn explains the following concerns with any decision to expand Oklahoma's Medicaid program:

- Some of the cost of expanding Medicaid in Oklahoma will be borne by Oklahoma taxpayers;
- Options for expanding Medicaid under the health care law assume the federal matching rate is continued at current levels, even though the federal government has a poor track record of upholding promises to American citizens;
- Expanding Medicaid under the health care law could effectively reduce private health insurance options for Oklahomans;
- Expanding Medicaid further perpetuates federal bureaucrats' control of Oklahoma's Medicaid program;
- A general concern with Medicaid expansions under the health care law is the issue of Medicaid patients' reduced access to health care because of the program's low reimbursement rates for health providers;
- Essential medical care is not equally available to patients on the program

Thank you,
Becky

Dear Representative,

We would like to make you aware of the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location.

As mentioned in the State of the State address, our goal is to create an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs. Our vision is to protect consumers and guarantee the role of licensed agents and brokers. Therefore, we are asking for your support for HB 2130, which establishes a governance structure for an Oklahoma Exchange.

We believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work to have it overturned. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law ruled unconstitutional. This is now our opportunity to stand up for our 10th amendment rights and create an Oklahoma based free-market exchange.

An Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange would be an online marketplace where costs are reduced, where insurance products could be bought and sold to meet individual needs and where all insurers could compete to promote real choices for consumers. This is the exchange that my administration, the Insurance Commissioner, the Speaker, the Pro Tem, and others are dedicated to creating. We look forward to working with all stakeholders on the legislation to ensure everyone is represented appropriately. We hope you are as excited by this opportunity as we are.

Dana,

This is a very interesting telephone call from a neurosurgeon in Chicago discussing the 'ethics/treatment' panels to be formed to dictate care that will be resulting from PPACA (Obama Care). Please listen to the call. I thought Governor Fallin would be interested in hearing this and I am sending to you hoping you will be able to forward it to her. Thank you very much; I certainly appreciated your assistance in the scheduling process for the Governor to speak at our recent EXPLORE: OK Healthcare Summit presented by PLICO August 9, 10. She helped make it an overwhelming success for 375 registrants and 60+ exhibitors attending this first time Summit.

Sincerely,

Carl Hook, M.D.
President and CEO
PLICO

Subject: LISTEN TO THIS PHONE CALL

As Sarah Palin and others asserted, it appears under Obamacare there will indeed be "Death Panels".

While our shared abhorrence of such a practice is almost unanimous, the idea of making certain cost/benefit decisions regarding healthcare should not necessarily be completely ruled out. Of course even if we agree there are times when "withholding" care would save both money and pain and misery, we'd still have to think hard about who sits on these panels.

I've personally known dozens of people who were 100% certain to die of cancer in the near term, but they were still given very expensive chemotherapies and other interventions that, not only would not save them, but would make them horribly ill and debilitated for the short time they had left to live. Some argue that even when it's certain that a person is going to die from his illness, we should not remove all hope from him. But of course this only postpones the day when the patient must end his denial and come to acceptance of his demise. So I've always had bad feelings about cases where patients were placed on debilitating chemotherapy and given other treatments that only made them too ill to enjoy what few weeks or months they had left. This change in thinking/ethics (I think it's unethical to do this to people)...but this change with cancer patients alone would save billions of dollars. And of course the same is true with other terminal illnesses as well. Too frequently continuing painful, debilitating medical care just prolongs suffering while doctors, hospitals and especially pharmaceutical and high tech medical equipment companies make profits.

Also there's the data showing that frequently 80% of the cumulative costs for an individual's healthcare occur during the last 90 days of life. Does that make sense?

Here's a call from a neurosurgeon who had just attended a symposium on how Obamacare will work, a preview of what's coming. It's really scary to think that a panel, probably consisting of doctors with administrative mindsets and corporate bean counters, will be deciding whether a patient receives the surgery that would normally be provided or just given palliative care so he'll be comfortable while he's waiting to die.

But I suppose this will drive the costs of Medicare down, since all that can afford to go the private insurance route will leave Medicare.

Aaron,

I apologize for getting this to you late, but here are 3 questions we have that we would like the Governor to address at the end of her speech. These topics have come up in different several meetings with agents and brokers.

1. In light of concerns regarding ramifications of accepting federal grant money, was it feasible to find state revenue to develop a state-based exchange?
2. What is status of the filing for the MLR waiver for Oklahoma?
3. In Governor Fallin's prospective, as a former Congresswoman, which of the following scenarios do you perceive most likely? Repeal and Replace, Pieces of the law replaced, or defunding to delay enforcement of the law?

We were also told today that Channel 2 (NBC), KOED and PBS will all be in attendance tomorrow for the meeting. Please feel free to call me on my cell (918) 630-5652 if you have any questions. Thank you.

Mary Goes Trolling for Bond Money by Ms. D.B.

On Tuesday, January 17, 2012 Gov. Mary Fallin put out a press release about her upcoming trip to New York City for the purpose of bowing before the big money boys.

"Governor Fallin will lead an Oklahoma delegation to New York City on Thursday, Jan. 19, to discuss the possibility of improving the state's bond ratings. Joining the governor will be state Treasurer Ken Miller, Preston Doerflinger, director of the Office of State Finance and secretary of finance in the governor's cabinet, and State Bond Advisor Jim Joseph."

"The ratings influence the terms and rates of state-held bonds. "Our meeting with bond advisors gives us a great opportunity to showcase Oklahoma's strong economy and fiscally sound policies," Fallin said. "Unlike the federal government, Oklahoma has balanced its budget, has made a robust recovery from the recession and has one of the lowest unemployment rates in the nation. We are experiencing double-digit growth in state revenues and our Rainy Day Fund will probably exceed $500 million this year after being depleted during the recession. We also are in the process of a government modernization effort that will save taxpayer funds and have taken significant steps to reduce the liabilities of our retirement systems."

It is good to hear that Oklahoma Is doing well. We all want to think that things are getting better. Too bad Mary Fallin has to throw a wet blanket on it with her self-absorbed, pompous behavior. Could we possibly have a more, insincere person as our state leader? Was it really necessary to take the entire finance dept. on a trip across the country on taxpayer money? I wonder what that shin-dig cost us? Not to mention the taxpayers' pay a specific person to handle all bond advisory issues. If he's not capable then maybe that position needs to be re-evaluated. You know, "Down sized /modernized"?

Oklahoma has a lot of serious issues that the Governor could and should be focused on. It seems not to matter if it doesn't makes a cha -ching sound. The inconsistency's in information concerning finances make any report less than creditable. One day we've depleted all funds and she wants to close family parks, then suddenly we have an overflowing raining day fund of over $500 million robust dollars and Mary and her gang on leaving on a jet plane. Someone is either a manic or they just can't keep up with what was said yesterday.

Then we have Mr. Doerflinger that is attempting to side step with his obviously new found vocabulary words. Keep it real Mr. Do finger. Stop trying to candy coat the Governors' agenda. Modernization is not $100 million in debt dumped into the laps of the Dept. of Transportation. Also, it is stated that every single dime is approved to be spent. Don't you know that it will be? Robust indeed...

I always associated the word "robust" with the smell of good coffee, but when you have a Governor that can smell money I guess it will fly when referring to any large amount of money spent without our knowledge or any oversight. Finally, no one has really said how the N.Y.C. Party on the State Taxpayer's Money turned out. What I do know is that with a rainy day/pinch/grab fund of $500 million, "robust" dollars, no one should need a loan of any kind for a very long time. Modernize that Mary.

Thought for the day: If the rainy day fund of $500 million was to be counted today what amount would be there??

Fresh Start or More of the Same and Worse?

Last legislative session was begun with an attack on conservative values and those that licked the hand of the State Chamber got a taste of what was coming to them in 2012. The year ended with the defeat of the Speaker Steele/Hickman faction, a humiliating defeat for Speaker Steele personally. The year started with calls for an investigation of Speaker Steele over his part in the Comp Case scandal. Opening day might just turn out to be very interesting this year.

But rank and file Republicans mostly just want to represent their constituents and go home. Still they are on the battleground so they need to stand behind those that are trying to clean up state government or be considered as against the public good. They face a tough political year with the filing season moved into the legislative session, preventing the collection of campaign contributions by incumbents until after the session ends. They are also facing a growing number of citizen legislator candidates that are rising in response to the dirt that has been revealed over the last two years.

So the last thing a legislator wants is to have the Sooner Tea Party on their back. It should be obvious on how to avoid getting on our radar but just in case here is what we expect this year.

Follow the Republican Party Platform. Not just the socially conservative parts, all ten major pillars as laid out in the platform. Support HR 1004, the right of all bills to be heard. Defeat the Obama Care/Fallin Care Health Insurance Exchange. Stop all tax increases and all tax credits for special interests and reduce everyone's tax bill. Follow the Constitution and protect our Bill of Rights.

And basically, if the State Chamber is for it, it is a very bad idea to back the issue.

We are watching. There are far more of us than there was last year. We have a newspaper coming out in the first few weeks of February, running late because of the temporary loss of our first editor, but it will be first deployed in Glen Mulready's district in the coming days. And that temporary loss will be more than made up with the increase in our numbers from the presidential campaign volunteers.

House Bill 2229 and the Wellness Council

By Ms. D.B.

When our state official's get together and begin racking their brains on how to trim the expenditures let's give them a few pointers. HB 2229 is to consider if the Wellness Council should be continued or if it should be eliminated as a state agency. This "Wellness Council" has got to be one of the most useless organizations in state government.

I don't know who came up with it in the first place, and I myself wouldn't admit it, but at this point that is irrelevant. There is absolutely no need for the state to waste time or money appointing someone to call meetings or to tell a group of adults how to take care of themselves. This isn't the employer's responsibility, nor should the state be that deep into the employee's business. If the benefits offered through an employer have choices such as health care or fitness then that should be up to each individual to make a choice.

If they don't have enough information to make a choice I suppose they will ask or make an informative phone call. This can be achieved by providing the employees with information booklets and phone numbers.

Amendment for the Oversight Committee on State Employee Charitable Contributions

As Introduced by Representative George Faught
By Ms. P. M.

We brushed on HB 2228 last week. This bill is to determine whether or not the Oversight Committee on State Employee Charitable Contributions is to continue as a government agency. The oversight committee picks the list of approved charities for payroll deductions from state employees. The usual suspects get approved, the United Way, assorted Muslim groups associated with unindicted co-conspirators with links to terror groups..., the usual politically correct charities that can afford to lobby the Oversight Council and pay the huge administrative costs that go along with a well connected and well paid organizations.

State Employee Charitable Contributions Act:

This amendment relates to Sunset Law that is defined as a measure within a statute, regulation or other law that provides that the law shall cease to have effect after a specific date, unless further legislative action is taken to extend the law. This bill would extend the date until July 1, 2016. You can read the entire proposed bill here.

With Oklahoma taxpayers already stretched by paying for this nonsensical department creating oversight committee, one would think this is a prime target for shrinking the size of state government. If state employees can't figure out where they want to give their money on their own it makes it easy to understand why they work for the government. I can only wonder how they manage to function in everyday life outside the protective bubble where they work.

When I hear "Sunset" I picture myself sitting on the beach in Key West visiting "Margaretville" having a grand ole' time. It is ironic how government can turn a vacation into a bureaucratic nightmare. Let's let this one expire!

Hall of Fame or Hall of Shame?

HB 2232, THE MUSIC HALL OF SHAME
AUTHORED BY GEORGE FAUGHT
By R.H.

This bill re-authorizes the Muskogee Music Hall of Fame Board, extending the program until July 1, 2016. The Board members are appointed by the Governor with advice and consent of the Senate. Selection of members is determined by learning who shows "a sincere desire to recognize Oklahoma's contribution to music". Okay...

The bill goes on to say the function should be to honor those, living or dead, who, by achievement or service, have made outstanding and lasting contributions to music in Oklahoma or elsewhere.

This all sounds great but there is more to it than warm and fuzzy feelings? Muskogee crime statistics report an overall downward trend but violent crime is increasing with property crime decreasing. Overall the report shows Muskogee has crime rates higher than all of Oklahoma or the national average.

One might think the priority would be to create an atmosphere where people are safe before throwing money at a Tourist Attraction. It is time to pull the plug and we dare Representative Fart to live up to the Republican Party Platform and dissolve this useless pork project.

Proposed Ethics Rules or Stand Up Comedy? PROPOSED HOUSE CODE OF CONDUCT IS A JOKE By R.H.

Granted under Articles V Sections 30 and 42 of the Oklahoma Constitution, the Oklahoma House of Representatives has the authority to discipline their own, but their proposed rules and punishments leave a lot to be desired. They are more set up to protect House leadership's agenda than to enforce ethical behavior.

The new rules ask House members to refrain from disorderly behavior including anything that might diminish "public confidence" in the House of Representatives. Speaker Steele has accomplished that all by himself by turning on the very conservative House members that helped elect him, accompanied by the refusal of committee chairs to hear bills presented by conservative Republicans and Democrats alike. If anyone has eroded the peoples' confidence in the House of Representatives it is the Speaker himself through his atrocious leadership blunders.

Article 5, Sections 18 and 23 of the Oklahoma Constitution prohibits Representatives from engaging in self-dealing. What do you call the Speakers involvement in a committee to promote soft on crime bills that are in line with his social justice agenda? It would seem to me that the Speaker would have to recuse himself from all matters dealing with any bills dealing with the prison system. This might also be covered under Article 5 Section 24 of the Oklahoma Constitution.

Article 5 Section 30 of the Oklahoma Constitution requires a two thirds majority vote for the majority expulsion of a member. Just imagine, a convicted felon serving in the House of Representative because they could not muster a 2/3 votes. A Constitutional amendment should be brought forth that would allow for the removal from the house of a convicted felon on a simple majority vote. We are not served by felons in the House.

I'll grant you there needs to be a Code of Conduct in the House of Representatives, but the people who propose these rules need to use something they all seem to be lacking. That something is called common sense. A little common sense would tell them that these rules are meant to shut them up and prevent them from exposing the corruption and self dealing at the Capitol. They should remember, it's the people's House of Representatives, the business they are conducting shouldn't be embarrassing and the people have a right to know if it is.

This proposal would appoint eight members split between the two parties. Where is there room for the Independent? Are Independent s not allowed a seat in the jury box if the people elect an Independent?. These new Ethics Committee members are to recommend changes to House Code of Conduct which as proposed are already a joke. The rules do attempt to establish a procedure to receive and investigate complaints for violation of House Rules and to recommend disciplinary action for those violations. Now here's the kicker; this committee is suppose to provide ethics training to members of the House of Representatives on proper conduct.

The problems begin with Rule 2. A:

"The Ethics Committee shall consist of eight (8) members of the house appointed by the Speaker"

Why the Speaker? Why not allow each party caucus to pick fair and well respected members?
And what if the Speaker has an ethics complaint against him as it appears is the case this with the Kris Steele/Workers Comp scandal? The people on the Ethics Committee would immediately be in a conflict of interest on any matter involving the Speaker. Would they recuse themselves?
If so, who would investigate these serious allegations against the Speaker?

Rule 2B is a long drawn out procedure to disqualify a person from an investigation.

Rule 2C is a disqualifier of a person on the committee if he or she is being investigated. But the accused member must go through the long drawn out procedure outlined in rule 2b to be disqualified. Why not a simple recusal motion here? What are they afraid of?

Rule 2F is to be reviewed for options. Here's an option for you. Instead of replacements being picked by the Speaker, why not have the individual caucus involved select the replacement in a vote. This would surely be a better way than getting the Speakers lap dogs placed on the board.

Rule 3 Para B requires that the committee members take the following oath:

“ I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will not disclose, to any persons or entity outside the House Ethics Committee, any information received in the course of my service with the committee, except as authorized by the committee in accordance with its rules.”

But what if the investigation they're doing uncovers something that is illegal? Don't members have the obligation to report illegal activity to authorities? Are the committee members not allowed to justify their votes on this committee?

Para D States that the final report shall remain confidential until such time as the committee decides to vote and release part or all of the report. Speaker Steele and his toadies seem to forget that is the Peoples House and you are conducting the Peoples Business. The report is the property of the people and should be released immediately upon the decision being made. The People have a right to know and anyone accused of unethical behavior has the right to have their name cleared.

Rule 6 Para A allows for the committee to adopt internal procedures as necessary. What is this? A secretive committee and now secretive rules? Shades of the Gestapo here.

Para 6E states that unless determined by a majority vote, only the Chair and vice Chair of the committee can make public statements. Whatever happened to the 1st Amendment. Are they afraid the truth will get out?

Rule 7 states in part:

“The House ethics Committee shall determine whether any of the facts contained within a complaint are capable of independent verification through public record or through preliminary investigatory process and shall cause such facts that are capable of independent informal verification to be so verified.”

Now you've really got to be joking here. I'm no attorney, but I'm smart enough to know that some facts you're not going to get without a subpoena. This informal investigation is meant to whitewash any investigation in the hope that it will go away. Talk about trying to protect their members. Here's a good example.

Para 3 gives the committee the right, by majority vote, to refer the complaint to the appropriate authorities. This is an attempt to cover up what House leadership did to their fellow colleagues last year. In that regard it is disgraceful because they can simply troll for criminal acts committed by legislators, legislators that aren't following Speaker Steele's agenda. If a legislator has broken the law and evidence comes forward, let that evidence be given directly to the appropriate District Attorney or the Attorney General.

Rule 8 Para E4 gives the power to the Chair to determine whether or not a witness or documents to be subpoenaed are likely to provide competent, relevant and material evidence and if so, shall issue subpoenas as requested by the respondent. The question here is this; without seeing the documents or hearing from the witnesses, how can the chair make a decision on whether or not they provide any competent, relevant or material evidence in the case before them? This rule is more about refusing to allow conservative legislators to provide evidence that will clear their names.

Rule 9 Para F states in part:

“An official paper or record is not within the privilege established in the paragraph.” What are they afraid of.? Do they plan to twist the words to say something they didn’t? Para H gives the discretion of making a record of the proceedings to the chair. This shouldn’t be left to one person’s discretion. An audio record and a written transcript should be mandatory. You can’t have a body such as this deciding the political future of our elected officials doing so without an official record. This in itself brings discredit and shame upon the House of Representatives. Representatives should demand that those hearings be open to the public.

Para L, 1 claims that there will be strict adherence to the rules of evidence as outlined in Oklahoma law. They even allow the respondent to have an attorney present and for witnesses, however that attorney can raise no objections and cannot address the ethics committee. All they can do is advise their witness. An Attorney violating these rules can be found in contempt. I wouldn’t blame the attorney, looking at these proposed rules, I’d be contemptuous too.

I 3 goes on to say:

“That the Chair, in his or her sole discretion, shall rule upon all objections and upon the admissibility of evidence arising in the course of deposing witnesses or presenting testimony or documents to the House Ethics Committee.”

So in paragraph we say no objections can be raised, and in another we say the chair has the power to rule on them. What the _____ is going on here? Since when did we elevate a committee chair to the position of what amounts to a Criminal Courts Judge without going through the proper procedure? After all isn’t that what this panel is?

Rule 10 Para B allows the committee to step outside the scope of the complaint. Why? Granted there should be some exceptions. Those exceptions would be criminal in nature and should be referred to law enforcement. The way I see it you have a complaint you investigate it, you make your findings and you move on. Anything else, except criminal activity, is beyond the scope of your investigation.

Rule 11 The Final Report, the most idiotic rule of all. Para A:

“A Final Report shall remain confidential except as otherwise provided in this rule.”

Why? If the report clears a Representative, don’t you think we should know? If you discipline a Representative, don’t you think we should know? Remember, this was the Peoples business you were conducting. The people have a right to know.

Para B is absurd. You are really going to make House members take the same oath as Ethics Committee members just to view the final report. What are you hiding? Who are you protecting? How biased are these proceedings?

Para C, by a majority vote may release all or part of the final report. Hey remember the part about the Peoples business. We deserve to know.

Rule 12 deals with disciplinary action. This one is a little difficult to deal with as it is set out in Oklahoma’s Constitution. I agree in most of the actions to be taken, but Para 5 presents a problem for me. For now we have to let it stand.

Understand these are just draft rules. There is time to change them. We can put the pressure on them to do so. Lets make this happen. You can see the proposed draft legislation here

Failure of Tax Credits

By Ms. P.M.

With the announcement of American Airlines filing for bankruptcy one could assume the colossal tax credits they received did not do Oklahoma any favors. In 2003 Tulsa voters approved a one-cent sales tax that provided American Airlines more than $22 million in incentive to stay in the city and expand their maintenance center.

Representative Dank has been busy authoring three new tax credit bills. HB 2979 isn't a bad bill, it removes the transferability of tax credits, something that was a bad idea when it started and needs shut down.

Dank doesn't stop there; HB 2977 is another amendment bill which relates to the "Task Force for the Study of State Tax Credits." It consists of 10 members:

- Chair of the Appropriations and Budget Committee (House)
- Chair of the Appropriations Committee (Senate)
- Chair of the Revenue and Taxation Subcommittee of the Appropriations and budget Committee (House)
- Chair of the Senate Finance Committee
- Director of the Office of State Finance
- State Treasurer
- Secretary of State
- Minority Leader (House)
- Minority Leader (Senate)
- State Auditor and Inspector

Dank isn't done, HB2978 covers identification of certain persons, prohibiting measures allowing transfer of tax credits and audits. The bill states that any tax credit "shall provide for the creation of new jobs or the retention of existing jobs within the State of Oklahoma."

Ya think?

The suspicions part of this is that the majority of these positions are filled with House leadership cronies. They wouldn't be cutting these tax credits unless this somehow benefited their State Chamber masters. This issue bears close watching however the following story sheds some light on why they are trimming tax credits, so they can re sell the favors to their new campaign donors in the aerospace industry.

In the bill on the task force it states the findings must be submitted to the Governor. I wonder... with American Airlines in bankruptcy and over 2,000 jobs being lost, is she now wondering why she thought these tax credits were the grand poo-poo in her panties? Or was it just a tingling sphincter moment? She HAS been around a while. It certainly seems as if our Lady Gag-Gag is downplaying the job loss, "lose some jobs" and these employees have "unique and valuable skill sets." I can only think they probably don't feel so valuable right now. You can read her press release here:

Retroactive Tax Credits? Are They Insane?

Read this pile of steaming corporate cronyism:

AS INTRODUCED

An Act relating to income tax; amending 68 O.S. 2011, Section 2357.301, which relates to the aerospace sector income tax credit; modifying definition; authorizing amended return for specified circumstance and providing deadlines for filing; providing for codification; and providing an effective date.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF OKLAHOMA:

SECTION 1. AMENDATORY 68 O.S. 2011, Section 2357.301, is amended to read as follows:

Section 2357.301. As used in Sections 1 through 4 2357.301 through 2357.304 of this act title:

1. "Aerospace sector" means a private or public organization engaged in the manufacture of aerospace or defense hardware or software, aerospace maintenance, aerospace repair and overhaul, supply of parts to the aerospace industry, provision of services and support relating to the aerospace industry, research and development of aerospace technology and systems, and the education and training of aerospace personnel;
2. "Compensation" means payments in the form of contract labor for which the payor is required to provide a Form 1099 to the person paid, wages subject to withholding tax paid to a part-time employee or full-time employee, or salary or other remuneration. Compensation shall not include employer-provided retirement, medical or health-care benefits, reimbursement for travel, meals, lodging or any other expense;
3. "Institution" means an institution within The Oklahoma State System of Higher Education or any other public or private college or university that is accredited by a national accrediting body;
4. "Qualified employer" means a sole proprietor, general partnership, limited partnership, limited liability company, corporation, other legally recognized business entity, or public entity whose principal business activity involves the aerospace sector;

5. "Qualified employee" means any person employed by or contracting with a qualified employer on or after January 1, who has been awarded an undergraduate or graduate degree from a qualified program by an institution, and who was not employed in the aerospace sector in this state immediately preceding employment or contracting with a qualified employer. For purposes of this paragraph, prior employment in the aerospace sector shall not include employment or contracting with a qualified employer as an intern on a nonpermanent basis;

6. "Qualified program" means a program that has been accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology (ABET) and that awards an undergraduate or graduate degree; and

7. "Tuition" means the average annual amount paid by a qualified employee for enrollment and instruction in a qualified program. Tuition shall not include the cost of books, fees or room and board.

SECTION 2. NEW LAW A new section of law to be codified in the Oklahoma Statutes as Section 2357.305 of Title 68, unless there is created a duplication in numbering, reads as follows:

For the tax years 2009 through 2011, any qualified employee that was employed or contracted as an intern on a nonpermanent basis in the aerospace sector or any qualified employer who employed or contracted with a qualified employee as an intern may file an amended Oklahoma income tax return in order to claim the income tax credit provided for in Section 2357.302, 2357.303 or 2357.304 of Title 68 of the Oklahoma Statutes. Tax year 2009 amended returns may be filed on or before October 15, 2014, and be considered timely filed for purposes of claiming an income tax refund. All other tax years are subject to the statute of limitations for refund claims set forth in Section 2373 of Title 68 of the Oklahoma Statutes.

SECTION 3. This act shall become effective January 1, 2013.

David Tackett of Oklahomans for Liberty wrote a good expose of this issue. Below is a shortened version of his article, here is the full article.

Apparently, it's not good enough for Boeing to count these intern-to-full time job hires toward the tax credit starting this year. They want the tax break to be retroactive all of the way back to 2009!

So, let's put this in perspective. and the State Chamber opposed giving military veterans an immediate tax credit on their retirement benefits last year, instead making our veterans wait until 2016 to get their tax break. (Sorry, I forgot Sen. Mazzei missed several votes during last year's session including these votes.)

But now, Sen. Mazzei wants us to give Boeing a tax credit for the past 3 years.

I guess that makes sense... If you fought to put your life on the line to protect our freedoms, you have to wait 4 years for your tax break. But if you give a lot of money to Sen. Mazzei and the State Chamber then you can have your tax break passed retroactively.

Corporate welfare is bad enough, but when you make it retroactive, you are exposing the fact that you no longer represent your voters' interest, but those who can give your campaign the most money.

Reserve Cop Gets to Visit Girlfriend Behind Bars

In a startling claim, Sheriff John Whetsel said there is not a problem with security at the Oklahoma County jail after a 60 year old former Langston Reserve Police Officer illegally used his Police credentials to obtain private visits with his 33 year old incarcerated fiancé at the Oklahoma County Jail. Someone found herself a sugar daddy.

This is unbelievable. How can Sheriff Whetsel's people miss the fact that the man checked himself in wearing a police uniform and claiming to be from the Logan County Sheriff's Office. Once maybe, twice never. It goes back to the old saying fool me once shame on you, fool me twice shame on me. This guy got away with it six times before he was caught. This is unbelievable.

The man now faces six felony counts of unauthorized entry into a prison institution. His name is Dawud Ali. But that's not all. The man was let go from the Langston Police Department in January. This raises the question. Why haven't the guards who allowed this to happen been disciplined.

Sheriff Whetsel's response to this breach of security has been minimal. His tightening of security has been to require that Oklahoma County Jailers have been told to ask more questions. Surely they can come up with a better way to verify that the investigator that is there is in fact authorized by the Police Force that sent them to be there. What's wrong with a phone call to the agency that they sign in as being from? What's wrong with requesting that an agency notify the Sheriff's Department in advance of who they are sending, two simple solutions to enhance security.

Another red flag should have been raised during these visits. With no charges on file from Logan County or the Langston Police Department, one wonders what ruse was used to get these visits. A claim of an ongoing investigation is the most likely culprit. This is a simple claim to make, but one that in the future should be verified with the alleged investigating agency.

Sheriff Whetsel, you're there to Protect and to Serve. You claim to do a pretty good job of it. It would appear that your defenses at the Oklahoma County Jail are easy to breach. How many more horror stories must we hear of the Oklahoma County Jail before something is done? How many more security breaches are we to endure?

How soon will it be before the criminal element figures it out, and escapes start to happen, or have they and we just haven't heard about them?

HB 2536

"OKLAHOMA BEVERAGE CONTAINER RECYCLING ACT"

Authored by Representative McCullough

The idea is a mandatory recycling of beverage cans to attract tourists by having less litter on the ground. In our previous newsletter we did a story on "Tracking Trash In Tulsa". This new bill is eerily similar only on a smaller version at least for now. You can read the Bill here.

There are no "smart carts" in front of your house with RFDI chips but the long list of expenses include new regulations and departments just to name a couple. Let's not forget the fees and penalties for violations. Did you know that the definition of "Consumer" as defined would be "a person paying the deposit on a deposit beverage container"?

One would think the government is the "consumer" after all they will be consuming more taxpayer money. Will the price of soda go up AND a deposit added to the increased price? The retailers have to cover the added expense of government micro managing with more bureaucracy.

After reading many articles on the pros and cons of recycling one issue stood out. Unless the system is efficient it will operate at a loss. I can only conclude if the government is involved we are in trouble. It will cost taxpayers money to fill coffers at the state level. How much does the government do without wasting our money?

Arm Twisting or Reception?

Looks like the State Chamber is already trolling for tramps at 23rd & Lincoln with a reception Wednesday night. No doubt legislators can rub elbows with the captains of industry here in Oklahoma and get reminded of who paid their campaign donations.

Señor Ortega, mi casa es su casa? mi casa no su casa!

More Amnesty Bills from Representative Ortega
By R.H.

Just like last year, Rep. Ortega has authored his share of amnesty bills. This time he has hedged his bets by writing three. The first is HB 2792. This bill creates the Oklahoma Immigration Act of 2012. It's the same amnesty program that ripped George Faught a new one last session. Got too many illegal aliens, just make them legal and flout Federal Law. Who cares how many Natural Born Americans and Native Oklahomans are out of work. HB 2793 is the same kind of bill.

Then there is HB 2798. This is essentially the same bill, with a few word changes. It's a back up bill in case HB 2792 or HB 2793 fail to pass. Granted Charlie has a lot of illegal aliens in his district. Maybe he should care more for the legal residents of his district.

What is it that politicians don't understand about amnesty. We tried that when the Democrats promised to secure the border, and President Regan granted amnesty. Well the border was never secured. Instead we get a President who wants to put kiosk up at some border crossing and trust that it will be used. Plus an Attorney General who allows thousands of guns to be walked across the border unchecked, and then uses it as an excuse to tighten gun sales. The death of 2 border patrol agents with those guns didn't bring so much as an apology from the Attorney General to their families.

This state has a law in effect now that requires City, County and State law enforcement to report illegal aliens to the I. C. E. Most do not. Oklahoma City and Tulsa are known sanctuary cities. What is more appropriate is a bill to cut off state funding to law enforcement and county welfare agencies until the counties come into compliance with current state law.

In addition state law makers should take a look at what happens to unemployment numbers when tough immigration laws are in acted. Alabama is a good example. Alabama has seen their unemployment rate decrease by 1.2% since en-acting their law last year. Granted it is being challenged by the great community organizer in chief, President Obama, and the most corrupt Attorney General in history, but it is still working.

Rep. Ortega, you should reconsider your bills, and withdraw them from consideration. These bills are bad for Oklahoma and bad for Oklahomans

Aaron,

I was wondering what, if anything, has been decided about the possibility of calling a special session of the Legislature to deal with the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to uphold the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Does it look like there will be a special session to address the state-run health insurance exchange?

Is the administration willing to risk betting on the election results to avoid having to do that/

If a special session is called, what is the anticipated costs of doing that?

If a special session is not called, what are the potential costs of not addressing the issue?

What are the benefits of not calling a special session to address the need for a state-run health insurance exchange?

I am writing on deadline, so a prompt response would be appreciated.

I saw your email to Katie that had a cryptic sentence at the end - "And, then on another note, we learned today that this will be an “opt-out” eligibility group rather than an “opt-in”. This changes things a bit now; in order to “opt-out” we would probably need legislation.”

Can you give me a little information about this? Maybe point me to the section you are referencing?

Governor Mary Fallin's "Oklahoma Now" Column

Headline: Rejecting Federal Health Care Bill Right Thing for Oklahoma

By Governor Mary Fallin

This past month, I announced Oklahoma would not implement two key components of President Obama's health care law: the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid. I'm writing this month to let you know why that decision is in the best interests of Oklahoma taxpayers and families.

For several months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both a possible health insurance exchange and the potential expansion of Medicaid.

Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation's growing deficit crisis.

Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, however, the state of Oklahoma found itself legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice was forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law time and time again.

After careful consideration, I decided last month that Oklahoma would not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. As I said at the time, any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be 'state-run' in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that would ultimately be under the control of the federal government and that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans. Furthermore, the creation of such an exchange would further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

With regards to Medicaid, I also announced that Oklahoma would not be participating in the Obama Administration's proposed expansion. Such an expansion would have been unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also have furthered Oklahoma's reliance on federal money that may or may not have been available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would also have required cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Finally, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

Moving forward, it is important for the state of Oklahoma to pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt's ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt's lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma's challenge can succeed.

Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.

PENCE SAYS INDIANA SHOULD NOT ESTABLISH STATE-BASED HEALTH INSURANCE EXCHANGE

Gov.-Elect Also Reiterates Opposition to Partnership Exchange; Will Notify Federal Authorities, "Absent New Information," by February 2013 Deadline

Carmel, IN - Gov.-elect Mike Pence today reiterated his recommendation that Indiana should not develop a state-based health insurance exchange as part of the implementation of the Affordable Care Act.

In a letter to Gov. Mitch Daniels, Pence noted that he has reviewed his position in light of the recent election and his recommendation remains the same.

"I do not believe the State of Indiana should establish a state-based health insurance exchange because doing so will cost taxpayers millions of dollars and it is not clear that Hoosiers would benefit from incurring the cost of implementing this new federal healthcare bureaucracy," Pence said in his letter.

He added, "Without knowing more details on the cost and nature of state-based exchanges, it is possible that our state could be placed in the untenable position of serving as the administrator of a new federal healthcare bureaucracy over which we have little control."

Pence pointed to the uncertainty regarding cost and regulation of state-based exchanges, as well as the certainty of higher taxes and higher premiums for Hoosiers in his recommendation.

Pence also noted he remains opposed to a partnership exchange with the federal government and, "absent new information," will make that known to the proper federal authorities by the deadline of February 16, 2013.

"Hoosiers may be assured that we will continue to evaluate the best course of action for the people of our state and will make every effort to continue to develop locally-based, innovative solutions to make insurance more affordable and increase access to care for all Hoosiers," said Pence.

States must tell the federal government whether or not they intend to establish a state-based exchange by Friday.

Gov.-elect Pence's letter can be read in full here.

Dear mary,

To whoever screens Mary's email, I am an old friend of hers from OSU. She will confirm and she and the Insurance Commissioner need to read this.

I want to let Mary know that the National Association of Insurance Commissioners needs to abandon their idea to push aggregate stoploss limits higher. This is only an attempt to strengthen Obamacare by unfairly putting more risk on "smaller" self funded employers. (50-500 employees) These employers are currently doing the right thing, providing comprehensive health benefits to their employees and their families, mostly at the employer's expense.

Only three states have endorsed the change to the Stoploss Model Act; Minnesota, Hew hampshire and Vermont. The proposed change will make it harder for Oklahoma employers to provide affordable coverage by pushing them toward a national exchange. Please tell the Oklahoma Insurance Commissioner to vote NO and not change the Stoploss Model Act.

I have been in the health insurance business since graduating from OSU in 1978 and I have worked with partially self-funded employers plans nearly that entire time. If there are any questions, please call my cell any time. 417-438-7655.

I want to make sure you watch this terrific new video the Cato Institute released last week. (Our multimedia guys are something else.)

It explains why states should refuse to create Exchanges—no matter how the Supreme Court rules on ObamaCare later this month. Blocking Exchanges is THE most important thing states can do to stop ObamaCare.

Every conservative group, including the Heritage Foundation and the American Legislative Exchange Council, agrees that states should (1) refuse to create an ObamaCare Exchange and (2) send all related grants back to Washington—as states like Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Kansas, and Wisconsin have already done.

Please share this video with your favorite state officials, on your blogs, and Facebooks, and Twitters...etc.

insurance plans in one online location. We now plan to build on the already authorized exchange in an effort to expand access to quality, private health insurance for our citizens.

Governor Fallin is strongly opposed to the federally mandated Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, or ObamaCare, and will continue to work to have it overturned. However, if this effort proves to be unsuccessful, the state must be prepared to implement the provisions outlined in ObamaCare. Therefore, accepting the grant funding in advance of the 2013 deadline for implementation will allow Oklahomans to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality health insurance utilizing free-market principles without interference from the federal government.

Thank you again for taking the time to share your ideas and concerns. As we all work together to address the many challenges facing our state, we hope you will continue to share your thoughts and views with us.

Sincerely,

Keili McEwen

I respectfully ask you to keep your word and decline any money for the state of Oklahoma coming from federally funded "obamacare". Subject: Obamacare Anniversary Action Items

As you may know Wednesday March 23, 2011 marks the one year anniversary of the passage of Obamacare. States, more than any other entity stand to lose the most from this costly and constitutionally overreaching legislation.

This morning representatives from several Governors' offices joined in on a conference call to provide the RGPPC with ideas and commentary on potential action items for Wednesday. The following is a summary of the conversation.

All in attendance wholeheartedly agreed that it is of utmost importance that each Governor does something. Republican Governors currently hold center stage and there is no better time than the anniversary of Obamacare to effectively communicate the overwhelming negative impact it has and will continue to have on our states. The following are some specific action items that some Governors are planning for Wednesday:

1) States to message individually:

Press Conferences

- With congressional delegation
- With respected health care officials

- With impacted businesses
- With Lt. Governors and other elected officials

Opinion Editorial

- Getting published locally and nationally- RGA can help if needed
- Editorials written in conjunction with congressional delegation
- Encouraging health care professionals to submit op-eds

Please feel free to email me or Marie with any other suggestions or comments regarding action items for Wednesday.

2) Coordinated RGPPC Effort

The RGPPC in conjunction with the RGA would like to put out a press release of our own on Wednesday. We envision the document to have a quote from every Republican Governor about the effects that Obamacare has had on each individual state. You can lift or prepare such quotes from the actions you are already considering for next week. Please email to Mike Schrimpf (3/22) by Tuesday of next week. Mike's email is mschrimpf@rga.org.

Obamacare Is Still Vulnerable

President Obama has won reelection, and his administration has asked state officials to decide by Friday, November 16, whether their state will create one of Obamacare's health-insurance "exchanges." States also have to decide whether to implement the law's massive expansion of Medicaid. The correct answer to both questions remains a resounding no.

State-created exchanges mean higher taxes, fewer jobs, and less protection of religious freedom. States are better off defaulting to a federal exchange. The Medicaid expansion is likewise too costly and risky a proposition. Republican Governors Association chairman Bob McDonnell (R., Va.) agrees, and has announced that Virginia will implement neither provision.

There are many arguments against creating exchanges.

First, states are under no obligation to create one.

Second, operating an Obamacare exchange would be illegal in 14 states. Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Utah, and Virginia have enacted either statutes or constitutional amendments (or both) forbidding state employees to participate in an essential exchange function: implementing Obamacare's individual and employer mandates.

Third, each exchange would cost its state an estimated $10 million to $100 million per year, necessitating tax increases.

Fourth, the November 16 deadline is no more real than the "deadlines" for implementing REAL ID, which have been pushed back repeatedly since 2008.

Fifth, states can always create an exchange later if they choose.

Sixth, a state-created exchange is not a state-controlled exchange. All exchanges will be controlled by Washington.

Seventh, Congress authorized no funds for federal "fallback" exchanges. So Washington may not be able to impose Exchanges on states at all.

Eighth, the Obama administration has yet to provide crucial information that states need before they can make an informed decision.

Ninth, creating an exchange sets state officials up to take the blame when Obamacare increases insurance premiums and denies care to the sick. State officials won't want their names on this disastrous mess.

Tenth, creating an exchange would be assisting in the creation of a "public option" that would drive domestic health-insurance carriers out of business through unfair competition.

Eleventh, Obamacare remains unpopular. The latest Kaiser Family Foundation poll found that only 38 percent of the public supports it.

Twelfth, defaulting to a federal exchange exempts a state's employers from the employer mandate — a tax of $2,000 per worker per year (the tax applies to companies with more than 59 employees, but for such companies that tax applies after the 30th employee, not the 59th). If all states did so, that would exempt 18 million Americans from the individual mandate's tax of $2,085 per family of four. Avoiding those taxes improves a state's prospects for job creation, and protects the conscience rights of employers and individuals whom the Obama administration is forcing to purchase contraceptives coverage.

Finally, rejecting an exchange reduces the federal deficit. Obamacare offers its deficit-financed subsidies to private health insurers only through state-created exchanges. If all states declined, federal deficits would fall by roughly $700 billion over ten years.

For similar reasons, states should decline to implement Obamacare's Medicaid expansion. The Supreme Court gave states that option. All states should exercise it.

Medicaid is rife with waste and fraud. It increases the cost of private health care and insurance, crowds out private health insurance and long-term-care insurance, and discourages enrollees from climbing the economic ladder. There is scant reliable evidence that Medicaid improves health outcomes, and no evidence that it is a cost-effective way of doing so.

My colleague Jagadeesh Gokhale estimates that expanding Medicaid will cost individual states up to $53 billion over the first ten years. That's before an emboldened President Obama follows through on his threats to shift more Medicaid costs to states.

Neither the states nor the federal government have the money to expand Medicaid. If all states politely decline, federal deficits will shrink by another $900 billion.

Now is not the time to go wobbly. Obamacare is still harmful and still unpopular. The presidential election was hardly a referendum, as it pitted the first person to enact Obamacare against the second person to enact it. Since the election, many state officials are reaffirming their opposition to both implementing exchanges and expanding Medicaid.

If enough states do so, Congress will have no choice but to reopen Obamacare. With a GOP-controlled House, opponents will be in a much stronger position than they were when this harmful law was enacted.

Hi, Andrew -- Great talking to you on the phone today. As I mentioned, I'm not quite sure which analogy would fit your request, as I'm not convinced that a state exchange will be any different than a federal one. As such, I've copied our friends at the Cato Institute to see if they can provide some research -- Michael Cannon is Cato's director of health policy studies, and Brandon Arnold and Caitlyn Korb handle Cato's government affairs.

Michael, Brandon, and Caitlyn: Andrew is Gov. Fallin's policy director. Oklahoma has done some great work recently in sending back the "Early Innovator" grant money for an exchange. But, the state is still considering setting up its own exchange, and is looking for research on what happens when the feds take over state government programs (not just in health care). Any insight you could provide Andrew (andrew.silvestri@gov.ok.gov; [REDACTED]) would be super helpful.

Any questions, please let me know -- [REDACTED] or christie [REDACTED].

Christie-

Here is the follow up from my VM.

Oklahoma is considering creating its own insurance exchange program. The Governor's office is looking for examples of what happens when the fed gov't takes over states programs. Any additional information on the subject would be great.

Thanks again Ed.

It has certainly been an honor to represent Indiana Governor Mitch Daniels but also a learning experience well beyond my expectations. The "Hall of States" group is a lobbying powerhouse all to themselves and I've gained an important understanding of the issues specific to state governments, the individuals who represent them here in Washington and policymakers on the Hill and in the Administration. Building coalitions within state governments in addition to representing issues with a narrow focus on one state are the cornerstones of my eight years of service. I believe I am a leader within the NGA network and have mentored many new state directors who have come on board during the Daniels Administration.

My role for the state of Indiana has included work for all Indiana Cabinet agencies, representing the State's position with Congress, the Administration and federal agencies as well as with the National Governors Association and Midwest Governors Association. As an independent contractor, I am also able to represent Governor Daniels with the Republican Governors Association. Major issues we have worked on include advocacy against ObamaCare while researching the issues surrounding implementation based on cost of the Medicaid expansion and state-run exchanges; submission and approval of an 1115 Medicaid waiver establishing the Healthy Indiana Plan; executive branch approval and Congressional oversight of the state's modernized welfare eligibility system; secured legislative language to streamline the statewide workforce organization and an additional carve out for Indiana's

Unemployment Insurance program; passage of the latest highway bill with a fair and balanced funding formula and no language penalizing Indiana's unique public-private partnership, Major moves. We have fought the EPA and other federal agencies on unnecessary regulations and strongly supported the Keystone Pipeline. We staff every visit of the Governor and Cabinet officials from planning to on-the-ground execution of the schedule. Working with the Indiana business community, we support issues of importance to their job-creation efforts.

Based on decades of Washington experience, I am able to efficiently and effectively communicate and advocate the state's priorities across the full spectrum of national constituencies including policymakers, opinion leaders and media. We build key internal relationships with state government officials in the Governors office and within agencies to ensure focus on issues of importance with measurable results. My contacts are extensive in terms of partnering, where necessary, with bi-partisan subject and policy experts as well as coordinating their efforts.

The State of Indiana has always maintained a DC presence through contracting with an outside lobbyist. Many other states follow this model (such as PA, NV, MN, ND, KS) as it is cost effective and far more flexible. My contract with the State of Indiana is for $22,000/month plus out of pocket expenses (primarily cabs and pre-approved trips to Indianapolis). My retainer has been consistent throughout the Daniels' tenure with no fee increases. The cost is spread across all Cabinet agencies. Unlike a state-based office, with long-term real estate leases, creation of new FTEs and the accrued benefits, Indiana and a growing number of states find contracting an effective way to stay engaged in Washington, DC on policy and politics. In addition to myself, a young attorney on my team, assists with the state account and we are both registered lobbyists for the State of Indiana. I have attached a document, The Perfect Storm, which outlines the many issues facing the 2012 Lame Duck session and new Congress in 2013. With sequestration having a direct impact on states, especially those with significant defense investments, engagement in federal relations is even more important than ever. Containing health care costs will continue to dominate state budgets and federal policymakers for years ahead, regardless of decisions related to ObamaCare. Tax reform and its impact on state financial instruments will likely be on the table in 2013. Budget pressure will continue to be pushed to state governments and the work of Governors to pursue program flexibility in exchange for decreased funding is critical.

Although in her first term, Governor Fallin has the reputation as a national party leader and I would welcome the opportunity to assist the state of Oklahoma and the Governor. As a member of the NGA Executive Committee, having an active DC representative is crucial. Republican Governors staff look to Executive Committee staff for issue coordination, message points and early warnings. I would be pleased to put together a formal proposal that would meet the specific needs of the State of Oklahoma.

Again, many thanks for your interest.

Oklahoma Attorney General-elect Will File Lawsuit Against Federal Health Care Bill
Governor-elect shows support for lawsuit

OKLAHOMA CITY – (Jan. 7) Attorney General-elect Scott Pruitt today announced the state of Oklahoma will file an independent lawsuit against the federal government to challenge the unconstitutionality of the Obama administration's federal health care law in the coming weeks.

Speaking about the need to file independently, Pruitt said, "There is great clarity for me on the necessary and urgent need to exercise my responsibility to defend Oklahoma's Constitution against a federal government and president that have gone too far in their overreach of power and authority."

Governor-elect Mary Fallin, who had a representative from her office in attendance to the press announcement, provided the following statement, "President Obama's health care plan is bad for our economy, bad for our health and bad for our states, which must shoulder the burden of hundreds of millions of dollars in unfunded mandates. It's also an unconstitutional Washington power-grab that seeks to force our citizens to buy certain products. The people of Oklahoma voted overwhelmingly to oppose that power-grab and to reject policies that replace individual choice with the choices of Washington bureaucrats. I am happy to join our new attorney general in announcing that Oklahoma is challenging the federal health care law in court, standing up to Washington and defending our Constitution and the rights of our citizens."

Pruitt continued that because Oklahomans passed State Question 756, the Oklahoma Health Care Freedom Amendment, which amended the state Constitution to say that Oklahomans cannot be forced to purchase insurance, those two laws cannot coexist. Preemption does not apply when a federal law is deemed unconstitutional.

As such, he commented on his obligation to defend the Oklahoma law, "The most logical way to defend our state Constitution is in an Oklahoma federal court not in another state," said Pruitt.

Pruitt expressed his sole desire in filing the lawsuit was to successfully defeat the requirement of the federal health care act that will force Oklahomans to purchase a product or face fines and penalties by the federal government. In legal terms, this is known as the individual mandate, which Pruitt believes to be unconstitutional.

The Attorney General-elect also explained that Oklahoma has the advantage of learning from the arguments the federal government put forth in the legal proceedings with Virginia and Florida, which will allow Oklahoma to introduce new and strengthened arguments to counter those.

Additionally, by filing in Oklahoma, the state will add another circuit of the federal court system considering arguments on the constitutionality of the act. This enhances the reasons for the Supreme Court to expedite a hearing of the issue.

Pruitt stated the lawsuit will be handled by staff internal to the Attorney General's office, and no outside counsel will be retained.

Pruitt closed by saying, "I deeply respect the efforts of General Bondi, and the other Attorneys General involved in the Florida litigation, as well as the efforts of General Cuccinelli in Virginia. I am confident with our collective efforts we will prevail."

Last May we reported on the appearance of Representative Glen Mulready at the Frontier Country Republican Women's club in South Oklahoma City. Mulready was speaking about Obama Care shortly after the GOP convention and he ran into a buzz saw of opposition.

The Sooner Tea Party taped the meeting in case Mulready got cocky and sure enough he inserted his foot in his mouth when he admitted that he would vote against the wishes of his constituents if he believed that it was best for them. A Tulsa activist made a very short video of the exchange and posted it on YouTube last week, drawing an immediate reaction from Representative Mulready's supporters.

At only one minute and 14 seconds the video is brief and powerful and focuses on yours truly asking Glen Mulready if he was going to honor the vote on State Question 756 and the Oklahoma State GOP Convention vote rejecting Obama Care/Fallin Care Health Insurance Exchanges. Mulready replies that he is going to vote for what he thinks is best for the people, prompting Sooner Tea Party member Karen Pray to comment "And not what the people want?"

Almost immediately after the release of the video, Representative Mulready's supporters started attacking the veracity of the audio, claiming that it was "edited" and "out of context". Here is the entire audio file taken at that meeting. In attendance were Jake Dake, four or five state representatives, and around twenty or so Republicans.

Here is another well done video on Representative Glen Mulready's voting record. This video focuses on HB 2130, the infamous Obama Care/Fallin Care Health Insurance Exchange bill. Almost five minutes long but the video is from House of Representative Video System so it is absolutely beyond doubt to its veracity.

In the video, Representative Mulready flat out lies about the health insurance exchange by stating that the system doesn't limit what insurance companies can participate. The truth is that all the state insurance exchanges must conform to Obama Care. Here is what we reported a few weeks ago complete with the link to the entire Obama Care statutes and the relevant section quoted:

This guy is a Noble Oklahoma based company that has great prices on electronics of all types and inexpensive toner and ink for your printer.

Comtec Security

Comtec provides residential and commercial security systems in Oklahoma.

There is only one thing you really need to know about Comtec's quality and pricing, they do not require a contract for their services.

Customers are free to walk away if their service isn't top quality.

Rodent Resistant Chicken Feeders!

$50 + Shipping

“We learned that there is absolutely no difference between state exchanges and Obama Care federal exchanges. Here is the relevant section of Obama Care that allows for the state run exchanges, emphasis is mine:

Each State electing to establish an Exchange must adopt the Federal standards contained in this law and in this proposed rule, or have in effect a State law or regulation that implements these Federal standards. Section 1311(k) further specifies that Exchanges may not establish rules that conflict with or prevent the application of regulations promulgated by the Secretary.”

Representative Dr. Mike Ritze sets the record straight by waving a copy of the HB 2130 and stating that the bill limits competition for health insurance companies, which is exactly what Representative Mulready is attempting to pass into law. His former employer is Blue Cross/Blue Shield. Mulready was a lobbyist for them and focused on national issues for them, no doubt being part of the original push to pass Obama Care at the Federal level.

Representative Mulready then proclaims that “No one opposes Obama Care more than I”, repeating the same bald faced lie that he used during his election campaign. Next the video exposes the fact that Mulready is actually from Massachusetts, the home state of Mitt Romney’s implemented forced health insurance plan, the precursor to Obama Care! Which makes one wonder if Mulready is a carpet bagger that was moved in for one purpose, to force Obama Care on Oklahomans?

Next up is Representative Charles Key speaking to the Orwellian campaign promises to oppose Obama Care morphing into singing the praises of the program being implemented. Mulready responds using the analogy of a runner stiff arming a tackler during a football game, attempting to claim that the HB 2130 actually saves Oklahoma from Obama Care! The ability to stand there and continue to lie in front of hundreds of his peers, staff, lobbyists, and visitors is simply breathtaking!

Democrat Representative Ben Sherrer is the next speaker and calls Mulready’s statements “hypocritical double talk” and asks how accepting 53 million dollars from the Federal government to implement the key component of Obama Care could be construed as keeping the Federal government at bay?

Representative Mike Reynolds is up next and minces no words when he says that HB 2130 is “a clever message to deceive the voters and to disguise what you stand for”.

I’ll leave it to the readers to decide the truth on HB 2130 but my humble opinion is that this is the most flagrant example of Orwellian double talk; the absolutely most amazing example of outright, bald faced lying in a political debate that I have ever witnessed.

So why do a picture of Mulready dressed as a supicide bomber? Because Representative Mulready makes it painfully obvious that he was sent to the legislature do a job and he will accomplish the job at whatever price to his reputation that the task requires. This is an excellent example of why the progressives and liberals succeed in trampling our liberties and stealing our tax dollars, they will simply do what it takes to accomplish their goals. Remember this fact when we use ridicule and go after their weak spots, these aren’t your neighbors that are quietly going about their life and deserve to be left in peace, these are sociopaths willing to enslave you and future generations by passing laws that strip away your constitutional rights.

So what can you do to help defeat the Glen Mulready’s of this world? Contact Darren Gantz and help him send Mulready back to his lobbyist job at Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

Santorum’s Gun Control Votes

Rick Santorum pulled off a surprise victory last week in Iowa causing many political observers to begin paying attention. Along with the first place ranking also brings increased scrutiny on his voting record. The National Association for Gun Rights, NAGR, put out some pretty ugly information on Santorum. First was his refusal to answer gun rights surveys or answer questions on the Second Amendment.

Service Here!

$25.00 per week, tens

According to NAGR, he voted for the Lautenberg Gun Ban that stripped gun owners of their gun rights for life if they had faced charges for spanking their children or grabbed their spouse's wrists. I'm not saying that a man that abuses women should be protected, indeed a man that abuses a woman isn't a real man and there is simply no excuse for hitting a woman but everyone has known couples where the wife is as violent as or more violent than the husband but the law almost always will take the side of the woman. That might be the proper way to err if there is any question, but is losing your 2nd Amendment rights a reasonable punishment for a mild domestic violence case? If so, where do we draw the line?

NAGR also reports that Santorum voted for a 1999 bill that increased penalties on drug traffickers with guns which in itself is a good thing but the bill also required federal background checks at gun shows. In 2005 he joined Dianne Feinstein and Frank Lautenberg to mandate handgun locks.

Even worse was Santorum coming to the aid of anti Second Amendment Arlen Specter in 2004 when Specter was facing pro gun Republican Pat Toomey, allowing Specter to continue in office and to continue to push for gun control. Anti gun Governor Christine Todd Whitman of New Jersey received campaign support from Santorum.

It was good to see an outsider win the Iowa caucus but we shouldn't blindly follow them without looking at their voting record.

Update on Fusion Center/Gun Groups Controversy

Last week we caused quite a stir when we reported rumors of two local gun rights groups being mentioned at the Oklahoma Fusion Center where law enforcement officers were told of two "new" organizations that had been placed on the Oklahoma Fusion Center Terror Watch List. The story came from a firsthand report from one of the attendees of an OK2A meeting (Oklahoma Second Amendment Association), where an Oklahoma law enforcement officer told a small group of attendees about the report that was given directly to him from a subordinate.

We spoke directly to the OK2A member and were offered contact information for the law enforcement officer that knew the facts. We declined, there are some stories where in order to protect our sources, we don't want to know who they are, just are they trustworthy and that the information credible. Just about every story we publish includes the blue links that take you to source documents or government websites with corroborating documents but sometimes we prefer not to know too much.

After the story came out, a flurry of activity occurred, listed in no particular order. First, legislators expressed concern about the Fusion Center bringing up either group to other police officers without proof and since many of the legislators attend the High Noon Club and know of the OK2A group, they understood that the possibility of concern was slim. Second, reports say that Miles Hall, the owner of H & H Gun Range immediately contacted the Oklahoma Fusion Center. Thirdly, the original law enforcement source came forward and gave us more details including correcting part of what our source had given us. Lastly, the OSBI was contacted by conservative legislators and questioned at length on the allegations.

The Fusion Center admitted that there was a meeting at Oklahoma City Police Department facilities where a variety of groups were present and gave presentations. OSBI, the Fusion Center, the FBI, the Joint Terrorism Task Force, and state and local police departments attended. Under questioning by legislators, OSBI adamantly denied that they had placed either gun group on a watch list. By this time, late in the week, we had received further information that claimed that the comments came from an FBI source, so the legislators asked the OSBI to ask the FBI.

The OSBI checked with the OSBI and reported back that neither they nor the FBI had anything to do with the information and claimed the OSBI didn't know of the existence of either group and the FBI admitted knowing of only one of the groups. The legislators said that the OSBI spokesperson was obviously ill at ease and nervous over the allegations bringing legislators to their door with questions but that they were "forthright" in their answers. One of the parts of the joint OSBI/FBI response rang true, that while they didn't make the comments, there were numerous other agencies presenting information and participating so they couldn't vouch for the other groups. They also suggested that it was possible that something might have been mentioned during a break or after the meeting between individuals that were chatting.

Here what we were told was the OSBI statement:

"Neither the FBI nor the OSBI are making representations on anything said in other presentations, during breaks, or during individual conversations after the event officially ended. "

Fair enough, we will take their word on the matter.

Shortly after we received the report from legislators the original source had an email sent to us where he explained the difference between what he said and our source repeated. Basically there was a meeting at the Oklahoma Fusion Center at OSBI headquarters in a classroom setting where they were told that there were "militia types meeting monthly at H&H". The presenter was said to have said it in an offhand manner as if he didn't quite know that to think of the information. No organization names were mentioned, nor was the word terrorist used. The statement was further categorized as from an individual but not an official part of the presentation. Another statement left the door open for the presenter making the statement but that it was not part of the official presentation.

The original law enforcement officer then spoke to the supervisor who in turn spoke to our original source at an OK2A meeting and elaborated a bit but in a perfectly understandable manner. This person mentioned that both the OK2A group and the High Noon Club met regularly at the H & H Gun Club and it didn't seem that groups meeting with legislators qualified as "militias". Our source apparently added the word terror list and identified the groups as being specifically named. Here is the exact wording that we received:

"Information came through their fusion center identifying OK2a and high noon as "militia groups" and has them pegged as "terrorist"."

We also received a report that little written material was being handed out after MIAC report so that there wouldn't likely be any documented list, that in their experience everything was given verbally. We cannot speak as to the veracity of this statement but it makes sense.

Obviously the Oklahoma Fusion Center was caught in the middle of a controversy but what do we make of all of this? The original source asked us to retract the story but there are several things about this story that made an update a necessity but not an outright retraction.

First, the information did come from a Fusion Center meeting of law enforcement officers.

Second, the report either offended or concerned three separate law enforcement officers, enough so that the information was reported to where someone could get members of the legislature to look into the issue.

Third, the information turned out to be mostly true, gun rights groups meeting at H & H Gun Range were thought to be of concern according to some report in the Fusion Center system regardless of the origination of the information.

Fourth, this didn't happen in a vacuum, the Fusion Center system had previously been involved in placing the Oklahoma Bombing Commission in an extremist category. If it quacks, it is a duck most of the time.

Fifth, the Oklahoma Information Fusion Center specifically states that they gather and retain information based upon mere suspicion. If that is a good enough standard for a professional law enforcement organization then it is good enough for a grassroots group.

"The OIFC may retain information that is based on mere suspicion, such as tips and leads."

After thinking about the controversy for several days here are the conclusions that we believe fit the facts. None of the three law enforcement officers did anything wrong other than perhaps the repeating of the “militia meeting at H & H Gun Range” statement at the Oklahoma Fusion Center meeting. The two officers were concerned and did the right thing in blowing the whistle. If the Oklahoma Information Fusion Center got caught up in a scandal, it was because they are basically spying on people and their entire system is so corrupt that they accept mere suspicion as good enough to place in a person’s dossier. I’m told that the guys down there are decent and have Oklahoma values so I would ask them two questions if I had the chance

1. How does it feel to have mere suspicions develop into an informal investigation? How do you think a taxpayer would feel if the same standard of information was used to pry into their life?
2. Have you tracked down the person who made the “militias meeting at H & H Gun Range” and verified exactly where the information came from? Your own rules require the investigation of erroneous information back to the source it came from. Have you done this yet?

Here is a good interview with an expert on the subject of domestic spying on citizens and the pitfalls.

I believe that the most obvious result of the Oklahoma Information Fusion Center will be the chilling effect on activists.

I attended the High Noon Club on Friday and on my way out of the meeting I was approached by an off duty OKC police officer. He was concerned about the story, mentioning that he had invited a supervisor to the High Noon Club a few weeks ago and had to go back to the guy and inform him of this “militia” report that was circulating among law enforcement officers. His concern was his security clearance and his career. A report that he was a member of a militia group would cost him his job. I updated him on the info we had at that time, which was that both the FBI and the OSBI were denying their part in the controversy. The officer also believed that things like this must be outed immediately and corrected. He agreed with our assessment that the two officers did the right thing in coming forward.

But, I have a favorite quote from Marcus Aurelius the stoic Roman Emperor who lived in the second century A.D. where he speaks of seeing the true nature of things and using them in the best manner, basically make lemonade out of lemons. With that in mind we need to use this controversy to effect change.

We should start by calling on Governor Mary Fallin to rescind her executive order that funded the Oklahoma Information Fusion Center through the OSBI and properly allow the legislature to appropriate the funds to continue participating in the Fusion Center system if the law enforcement profession believes it to be of any value, if the legislators agree, and if we can properly prioritize our spending to allow for the Fusion Center. I wonder how it is even possible for the Governor to bypass the legislature on spending money on this boondoggle. The Brad Henry/Wayne Pettigrew spy camera system died because the legislature wouldn’t let it through, how is this different?

E-mail: info@gov.ok.gov Local: (405) 521-2342 Or (918) 581-2801

Second, if the legislature wanted to defund the Fusion Center project, it could be completed in less than a month. Or at least the process could be well on the way in a month. Therefore on March the 6th at 1:30 pm, the Sooner Tea Party will begin using the same criteria for information sources for our articles as the Oklahoma Information Fusion Centers use for deciding to gather and retain information on Oklahomans. If we receive a report or rumor on any legislator, governor, or staff member then it will be treated as suitable subject for public airing of the issue, regardless of the lack of documentation or the need for multiple sources. Like the Fusion Center rules state, we will identify the issue’s source as rumor if we don’t have multiple sources or documentation but we will publish the story. And lastly, on March 6th at 1:30 pm will start our own SAR program, Suspicious Activity Report, where any sort of suspicious activity or behavior by a legislator, the governor, or staff member will be sufficient reason for airing a potential issue or concern.

Of course this enables us to use past reports were we couldn’t develop multiple source confirmation. There are some doozies out there on Mary Fallin that are just going to be a blast to expose! I can see why Governor Fallin decided to fund the fusion centers, this spying on people and the potential mayhem you can create is amazing!

Controversies like this come in handy for smoking out the group leaders that are timid or not completely on board. The leader of OK2A became quite upset over the Sooner Tea Party airing the report of the militia comments. Multiple sources reported back, as did some of OK2A’s members, all of which wondered why in the heck the leader was complaining! Most said this is a gift to show that the groups are under attack and that only happens if you are doing something productive. But the most telling thing was the physical reaction of the leaders of the two groups, the owner of the H & H Gun Range took this very seriously and obviously rattled the folks at OSBI with his questioning. That is what we need, men that are courageous enough to fight back and stand their ground! The other group, OK2A actually sent me a text message on Friday, two actually, asking "So do you realize how wrong that email was. (from the original OK2A source) Are you going to issue a correction? (sic)

Alliance for Vigilance Seminar Set for Jan 12th & 13th

Michael Hoehn, the Washington D.C. leader that is coming to Edmond next Thursday and Friday offered a preview of his two day seminar on "Understanding the Threat to America" that deals with the Muslim Brotherhood threat to our country. Here is a good video of one of the speakers, General Jerry Boykin. Here is a preview of the kind of information that will be covered.

In 2004, Ishmael El Barasse and his wife were arrested and the FBI raided their home located in Falls Church, Virginia. In the basement, FBI Counter Terrorism Agents found a secret sub-basement that contained the archives of the Muslim Brotherhood in America. The seized documents were classified until federal prosecutors introduced them into evidence in the case of United States v. The Holy Land Foundation, the largest terrorist-financing trial in the history of the U.S. When the documents were offered into evidence, the defense attorney stipulated as to their admission, which is to say that the defendants admitted that the documents were true and accurate and what they purported to be. In November of 2008, a jury returned unanimous guilty verdicts on 108 separate counts.

The stated goal of the Muslim Brotherhood is to overthrow the government and replace the Constitution with Shariah Law. One of the documents admitted into evidence contained the following quote: "The (Muslim Brotherhood) must understand that their work in America is a kind of grand Jihad in eliminating and destroying the Western civilization from within and "sabotaging" its miserable house by their (our)hands ..." CAIR, along with numerous other individuals and MB front organizations, was included in the case as an unindicted co-conspirator.

Now, CAIR has invited Oklahoma legislators to their conference in March to indoctrinate them and get them to do CAIR's dirty work "by their hands." It will be interesting to see how many RINOs attend. Stay tuned here for a list of attendees. Shariah Law, coming soon to a neighborhood near you, courtesy of CAIR.

McCarville Report Blunders Again

Blunder: to make a mistake through stupidity, ignorance, or carelessness

Ah, our boy Mike McCarville has been busy again. Not that he is a young man by any means but some are beginning to believe that Mike is entering dodder, or as more commonly known, the senile state. Poor Mike, like my grandfather told me once, getting old isn't for sissies.

We've tried to just ignore Mike after we exposed his connections to the State Chamber of Commerce advertising budget and his connection to Neva Hill, Speaker Kris Steele's campaign consultant.

In a previous issue we responded to the McCarville Report's erroneous statements and laid out the facts for all to see. A follow up article named "The Motivations of Mike McCarville" laid out the proof of State Chamber of Commerce advertising dollars spent at the McCarville Report website, his close connection to CMA Strategies, and his decades long connection to former partner Neva Hill who is the personal campaign consultant for Speaker Kris Steele

After the two newsletters outed McCarville, there was complete silence from Mike for a few weeks. Thinking that his care taker had increased his meds or took away his internet access, we laid off Mike after that hoping that he had learned his lesson. Nope... it wasn't long till Mike popped this doozy out of his... hat... and posted it on his blog.

The organizer of the event, Lukus Collins, set the record straight on McCarville's face book wall by posting this comment:

Campaign for Liberty is a 501C3 organization and due to its close association with Ron Paul at the beginning of the organization, C4L leaders are prohibited from working closely with the Ron Paul campaign. We did loan the Ron Paul group our podium and other supplies from the Tea Party but the 501C3 requirement and a pre existing commitment to speak in McCloud that afternoon kept me from attending.

Now we initially ignored the slur that McCarville manufactured out of whole cloth but after he attacked again after Jan 1st we decided it was time to respond and set the record straight. But it does offer an opportunity for some fun with Mike, and being that we like to use ridicule to get our point across, here are some tongue in cheek suggestions for Mike's next blog posting:

(Warning! Do not open the link below if you are at an office computer! It goes to a gay site where we found Representative Jason Nelson signed up as a member!)

Mike McCarville Turned Down for Membership in NAMBLA

Sources inside the North American Man/Boy Love Association report that allege Oklahoma blogger Mike McCarville has been rejected for membership in the NAMBLA organization. A NAMBLA spokes person refused comment but inside sources provided a transcript of the board meeting where McCarville was allegedly rejected. The board member's names were redacted to protect their privacy.

XXX, Board Member 1: "Okay, next up on the agenda is the application of one Mike McCarville for membership as a premium NAMBLA member."

XXXX, Board Member 2: "Oh, Mike is one of us? Well, he writes an excellent political blog and is influential in Oklahoma, but we do require a boy sponsor along with the man applicant. Does he have a boy sponsor?"

Staff member: "Yes, we have listed Kris Steele as the boy sponsor."

XXX, Board Member 3: "Objection! Kris Steele is no longer a boy! And even if he was once a boy, how many men is the little tart going to be allowed to sponsor?"

Board Member 2: "Now wait a minute Guy, not only does Kris have the perfect last name for a boy sponsor, he is influential in Oklahoma and might help us get Oklahoma's antiquated consent laws that are criminalizing adult sexual involvement with minors. He helped the transvestites and the Muslims so who is to say he won't help out? His soft on crime bill last year will let our people out of jail after only 90 days so we should consider being nice to Kris."

Board Member 1: "Now Earl, Guy, calm down! Let's see if we can find a compromise on this! Guy, you know that our real purpose is to corrupt innocents and the most vulnerable, right? You'd agree with that?"

Board Member3: "Well Glen, I'm not sure anyone would call that little hussy "innocent"!"

Board Member 2: "Guy, you have to admit that Kris has those innocent eyes, right? And he does meet the vulnerable part with that whole leg thing, right? Don't you think that this is really about that billion dollar bond issue that Kris convinced you to lead on?"

Board Member3: "That is the problem, Glen; the little twink led me on!"

Board Member 1: “Now, Guy! Compose yourself and dry those eyes. It isn’t manly to cry. Do we need to bust you back to boy status again this month? Daddy spank, Guy! Daddy spank!”

The transcript ends there according to our source, claiming that “the boyish Jason Nelson” arrived for his “meeting” with the board. Allegedly Representative Nelson had been rejected in his bid for membership due to his membership at a gay website (see comment #9 at this link). The revelation outraged several board members, one of which stated: “We are not gay! We are pedophiles! This is as bad as the State Chamber leaders trying to join!” Allegedly Representative Nelson caused quite a stir with his Michael Jackson costume, worn in a bid to increase his chances on his re application.

If that one wasn’t funny, try out this one for your next blog posting Mike:

Mike McCarville Loses Pulitzer Prize Race

Oklahoma blogger Mike McCarville of the McCarville Report was allegedly kicked out of the running for the 2012 Pulitzer Prize after committee staff reported on McCarville’s new web site design. Staff researchers called the new website design “amateurish” and one made the comment “it looks like a pederasty designed cat house”. Another asked “What happened to the Gold Standard of Political Blogs saying in the header?”

Okay, I’ll be serious for a while... Sorry guys, all in good fun. For us anyway...

Mike McCarville’s next attack came in the form of a story on the top headlines of 2010. Amazingly, within five seconds of the start of the story according to one activist that commented on the article, was an attack on the Sooner Tea Party involvement in the 2010 Oklahoma City Council race:

Pollster Pat McFerron: “Might not be the biggest – but one that is overlooked...I would cast a vote for the repudiation of the Al Gerhart Tea Party extremists in the OKC City Council races. The unholy alliance of firefighters and Tea Party extremists not only were soundly defeated by Meg Salyer, but their one anti-MAPS III voice was unseated by a first time candidate, David Greenwell.”

Ouch! Or maybe not if you are aware of the facts in that race and McFerron’s place of employment!

Pat McFerron is the “M” in CMA Strategies. CMA, the RINO consulting firm responsible for the Oklahoma MAPS III campaign, the same firm that grew out of the old CHS consulting firm which RINO Congressman Tom Cole founded. After Cole was elected to Congress, CHS turned into CMA. And who presented the latest “polling” results at the Shawnee Republican caucus meeting? CMA Strategies of course, because they are the State Chamber of Commerce’s political consulting firm.

McFerron is the CMA partner that actually holds the State Chamber of Commerce contract for public relations and lobbying. Am I alone in thinking that a journalist should disclose the associations of a quoted source? Poor Reid Mullins was given just two sentences in McCarville’s rush to start earning his State Chamber pay!

But at the bottom of the article was the longest quote of all, from an “Anonymous Capitol Insider”. The quote was three to four times longer than the next two longest posts so it was an important quote for Mike McCarville’s article. And who was this “Anonymous Capitol Insider”? None other than the current political consultant for Speaker Kris Steele and the decades long friend and former partner of Mike McCarville, Neva Hill. How do we know this? Because Neva Hill gave the same word for word info at a yearend wrap up for political insiders at a restaurant on North Lincoln Blvd. Among those attending were Fount Holland, Pat McFerron, and Ben Odom. Don’t bother guys, you’ll never guess who our source was that attended your meeting.

Okay, Mike McCarville outright hid the connection between Neva Hill, McFerron, and himself but what about the facts of what McFerron was paid to say?

First off he left off the police union in his description of the “unholy alliance” between firefighters and the Tea Party. Second he neglected to mention that a sleepy, $10,000 campaign budget city council race was turned into a multimillion dollar battle after the Sooner Tea Party endorsed three candidates. Also unmentioned was the Oklahoman attack on Windsor Hills Baptist Church, the church of two of the candidates. The Oklahoman pulled out all the stops and actually claimed in a sub headline that Windsor Hills Church was training children to use automatic weapons! If you bothered to read the story, you found out on page five or six that a Department of Wildlife Game Warden conducted a firearms safety class for kids that included the Game Warden demonstrating a M-16. Also unmentioned was the first time use in Oklahoma City history of TV ads for the city council race, a massive turnout many times the norm, and a robo call by former Governor Brad Henry in support of the RINO candidates!

And does this sound incredible, that a statewide newspaper would print an outright lie on their front page? Here is the first few sentences of the article from their own website:

Activities of council candidates' church draw criticism

By Michael Baker and John Estus
Published: February 27, 2011

Two Oklahoma City Council candidates attend a church observers have criticized for flying the Confederate flag, making political commentary from the pulpit and training children to use automatic weapons at a church camp. Windsor Hills Baptist Church's activities have been described as radical by critics who fear it could influence city council decisions if its members are elected Tuesday.

Uh, did you read that fine print on who was one of the authors? John Estus, as in the current PR flack for Speaker Kris Steele? Get used to the idea that a good portion of the people that join politics, journalism, and even grass roots organizations will sell out at some point. They call this the "exit strategy".

But wait a minute. Stupid me, I had assumed that John Estus went from working for the Oklahoman to working for the House of Representatives as Speaker Steele's Press Secretary. That was announced on our favorite doddering blogger, Mike McCarville on April 29th of 2011th of 2011. But if you look at some of the stories that Estus was writing, they supported Speaker Steele's agenda even when Estus was still employed by the Oklahoman.

Let's look at more connections. John Estus has a close personal friend, Paul Monies, also a former reporter for the Oklahoman. Monies left in September 2011 and went to work in Washington D.C. His wife, Jennifer Monies, also a former Oklahoman reporter, is a senior vice president of Communications at the State Chamber of Commerce, basically their P.R flack. John Estus and Paul Monies were assigned by Oklahoman editors to do a few of the hit pieces on conservative Republicans.

Oklahoma Senate scraps part of corrections policy bill

BY JOHN ESTUS jestus@opubco.com
Published: April 21, 2011

The Senate on Wednesday sent House Speaker Kris Steele 's corrections policy measure back to the House after scrapping one of its key components. House Bill 2131 passed 44-3 after senators removed its proposal to change the state's default criminal sentencing structure from consecutive to concurrent terms. Sen. Patrick Anderson, R-Enid , the bill's Senate author, said he reluctantly removed the concurrent s...

There are many more examples of where Estus wrote stories on Steele's prison reform plan and other House leadership issues. As a reporter that worked the Capitol beat this is unavoidable but how do we know when Estus's loyalties switched from the reader of his employer's newspaper to Speaker Steele? Did he slant stories to land a well paying state job? Is it ethical for a professional to switch sides without calling into question where his loyalties lie?

Repudiation of the Sooner Tea Party?

How about the RINOs buying the election outright and perhaps some members of the media along with it? The police and firefighter unions are allies in some of our goals, valuable allies. They know that having the resources to pay their members requires the city to prioritize spending on true governmental responsibilities and we agree with them on that. Political experts did notice that while two sides spent millions in the battle, the Sooner Tea Party spent around $100 along with a few hundred volunteer hours.

Now, we all know that the citizens didn't win in that election, but if there was a winner it was the Sooner Tea Party by forcing a confrontation that cost them very little and drained the war chests of the RINOs. One of our heroes and role models is George Washington who won very few battles but eventually drained the resources of the British Army and won the final battle. So I would have just one thing to say to Pat McFerron, a phrase that I must borrow from one of my favorite Sooner Tea Party supporters:

“Idiot!”

Mike McCarville struck yet again today with his post on the Sunday Oklahoman edition on Speaker Steele's last legislative session. Mike got his licks in, but it was a different kind of lick that he gives the posteriors of the State Chamber paymasters, writing that:

“...the self-appointed leader of the Sooner Tea Party claims there will be an effort to remove Steele as speaker. To do so would require Democrats joining with dissident Republicans, and few observers see that happening.”

First off Mike, “self appointed”? The story “The Motivations of Mike McCarville” explains just how I came to lead the Sooner Tea Party. And if I was going to infer that someone was a not a legitimate leader, I would hesitate to do so given that the state’s largest newspaper basically credited the Sooner Tea Party as being behind the effort to oust Speaker Steele. We will cover the Oklahoman article in a bit.

So enough of Mike’s ethical and journalistic failings, let’s see how Mike is reacting to our responses. We would agree that what someone says versus what they actually do speaks volumes to their true opinion, right?

First off is the sudden change in McCarville’s website after we made the comment about his blog being the gold standard of blogs cause that is what it takes to buy his services. McCarville has shifted off the gold standard of journalistic ethics for the purpose of inflating certain stories and devaluing others. How long before it takes a wheelbarrow full of McCarville blogs postings to buy a loaf of bread?

Almost immediately after our comment on the gold standard, as fast as Representative Ron Peters slurping up a spilled drink, McCarville’s blog heading changed:

Suddenly the “The Gold Standard of Political Blogs” heading was gone and replaced with “Named Oklahomas Top Political Blog by Stateside Associates”

Stateside Associates? A large national lobbyist firm with a large list of business clients.

Is anyone thinking that this lobbyist firm is going to be objective or will they throw scraps to the dogs that lick their hand?

Finally, the top news story article where McCarville hid the identity of Neva Hill despite her comments being the largest contribution to the article shows that McCarville understands that he has been busted. I feel some sympathy for the old fart, he is sick and maybe dying according to articles from his online blathering and there is no doubt that some extra money is needed. That said, selling out is a piss poor way to end a respectable career in journalism; were I he I would prefer to go out clean without trashing my legacy and ruining my good name. But we advocate freedom so I suppose Mike will chose his own path.

NAGR

I always start off talking about NAGR, the National Association for Gun Rights, as one of those groups that constantly asks for money with their email system and gets some heat for their fund raising requests but they are the hard core political fighters that are willing to take the gloves off and fight like we do in the Sooner Tea Party. Not only does that but their fundraising system works on a national scale and they do some good work, it just rubs some people the wrong way. I do support them 100%.

We do not have a state chapter of NAGR because of the lack of a suitable leader willing to spend the time needed to organize the state but there are thousands of NAGR members in Oklahoma. If you know anyone that is pro Second Amendment and has leadership skills and the time, please get them in touch with us. No need to be the perfect candidate, even an interim leader would help. If you can talk to people about the 2nd Amendment they will do fine. If someone more suited shows up, the interim leader can help out.

We need a decent gun rights group in Oklahoma. One that will actually fight instead of trying to make friends at the Capitol in some vain hope that they can educate our constitutional rights back. We need to start vetting candidates and get them endorsed by NAGR for the 2012 elections.

Pressure Building on Ousting Speaker Steele

Last week Oklahoman reporter Michael McNutt called and we talked a bit. Some of the info wound up in an article on Speaker Kris Steele's last legislative session. Here is the relevant part for our purposes:

Al Gerhart, chairman of the Sooner Tea Party, has sent emails to legislators indicating that some House Republicans would team with Democrats to oust Steele as speaker.

"The (designated) speaker's race really was the breaking point," Gerhart said. "Rank-and-file Republicans are looking at this."

Asked if he thought his tenure as speaker would end prematurely, Steele said, "I don't anticipate that it will."

The 31 House Democrats likely would have to join Republicans to oust Steele. House Minority Leader Scott Inman, D-Del City, said he was unaware of any effort among his members to remove Steele.

"I would hope that we could avoid that kind of acrimony," Inman said. "We care about good government and we want leadership that will move the state forward, not lead us down a path we don't believe will be best for the state. So as long as Speaker Steele chooses the path that we believe is best for the state of Oklahoma, we'll be there to support him."

"As an individual and as a leader, we believe in him and hope that he'll do what's right for the state."

Now pay attention to exactly what Scott Inman said. He says he "hopes" the acrimony can be avoided, but they won't be led down a path they don't like. Then "as long as" Steele chooses the right path they will support him. Inman ends by "hoping" Steele will do the right thing. Inman is positioning his party, basically telling Speaker Steele that he is bent over a barrel by his own caucus and if he wants to save his position, it is squeal like a pig in deliverance time!

Now understand what Speaker Steele's abysmal leadership skills have caused, he has split the Republican Party in the House and basically has to give control to the Democrats to keep his position. Why has this come about? Not because of conservative Republicans or the Sooner Tea party, but because Speaker Kris Steele and the rest of House leadership will not follow the Oklahoma Republican Party Platform.

Michael McNutt did a good job on getting my quotes right in the story but he might have attributed the "I don't anticipate that it will." Comment to Kris Steele rather than to me because I had made a similar comment that stated that Steele was more likely to be emasculated by changing the House rules, a position I've made clear in several newsletter articles. Of course the story painted Speaker Steele as a saint, this is the Oklahoman editors in charge no doubt.

Representative Bennett Fundraiser Set for Jan 12th

I'll be there, might be late because I am also attending the Edmond event but it is important to support Representative John Bennett. This guy stood up like a lion and fought all year. An outstanding freshman legislator that refused to back down or betray his constituents and he fought for all of Oklahoma. No matter where you live in the state you should contribute to his campaign for 2012.

I'll be leaving for Sallisaw Thursday afternoon around 3:00 pm, call me if you want to send a donation to him. Remember the rules, over $50 requires John to furnish your name, address, occupation, and who you work for. Checks are best, no corporate checks please, they aren't allowed. Or contact John's office and get his mailing address and mail him your donation.

David Prater Investigation, What Is Going On?

Christmas came late for Oklahoma County citizens on January 3rd when we received our first bit of new intelligence on the David Prater investigation. The investigation started in mid October with a set of documents provided to the Sooner Tea Party that included an affidavit claiming that Oklahoma County District Attorney David Prater had violated Oklahoma campaign finance and reporting laws during his 2006 election.

Accompanying the affidavit were documents suggesting that numerous David Prater campaign donors, a former director of the CLEET organization, and a former Governor's grandson had all escaped justice due to Prater's refusal to file charges or his attempts to drag the legal process out past the statute of limitations.

We first reported on the story on October 23rd, published a follow up story on October 27th and sent out dozens of information packets to the media around the state containing redacted copies of the affidavit, the supporting documentation, and a short description of our investigation. We began receiving calls from reporters asking about the OSBI investigation that was initiated by Attorney General Scott Pruitt three days after we broke the story. The media had been aware of the story for about a year but they claim they didn't have sufficient proof to publish the story. The business owner that was a witness wasn't talking to the media and the Attorney General's office didn't have enough facts to move forward, so the story was a risky one being that the media depended on the good graces of the D.A. for information.

Read the October 27th Special Edition newsletter for more details on the massive trail of corruption and influence peddling.

We figured something serious was afoot because had the state wanted to whitewash the issue, they would have cleared Prater quickly and reported it in a matter of days if not weeks. It has been over two months since the investigation began, more than enough time to present the matter to a multi county Grand Jury, and let the Grand Jury do its work. .

The silence was broken though when we received information from a public defender on January 3rd then on January 4th a separate confirmation from a highly placed Oklahoma County Courthouse official. It seems that during the investigation into Prater's campaign donations that the Sooner Tea Party sparked also brought up that there were possible irregularities with tens of thousands of dollars in campaign donations that might have been converted for personal use. Given the lack of information, no one knows what is really going on but the OSBI, Prater, and Pruitt.

A total of five separate sources provided the Sooner Tea Party information on the OSBI investigation, ranging from a story about a sealed indictment and a court date set for January 30th to a report that the OSBI wasn't done with their investigation. Four of the reports stated that a multi county grand jury had been given the information but we are not alleging that at this time. We aren't alleging anything about the investigation other than the rumor mill is working overtime.

Bad government and corruption can only flourish in secrecy. It takes a disengaged citizenry and a corrupt or intimidated media for the corruption to be self sustaining. The Sooner Tea Party is certain that if we ever expect to hold Washington D.C. accountable then we must first cleanup our state and local governments. Oklahoma County District Attorney David Prater appears to have possibly put himself above the law, prosecuted conservative legislators using questionable charges, and pandered to the NAACP by charging a man who was protecting his place of employment. Jerome Ersland certainly was not blameless in his actions but he was held to an extremely high standard for a man placed in a situation where many of us might not have had the presence of mind to act correctly. Including Ersland, there were a total of four murder convictions from that pharmacy shooting. I ask you how it is possible for four people to be responsible for murder especially if one of them was being robbed.

If there is justice and David Prater is indicted and convicted for crimes, his cell ought to be right next door to Jerome Ersland, or better yet, Prater should share a cell with Emanuel Mitchell. Mitchell was one of the men convicted of sending the two teenage robbers into Jerome Ersland's work place.

Now over two months ago Attorney General Scott Pruitt promised to act if there was a hint of wrongdoing and promised to investigate quickly and release the report. District Attorney David Prater also made promises to release any investigative report and comment on it himself. It is time for one of the three parties to come forward and let the public know that justice is being served. There are serious allegations of campaign finance fraud as well as serious signs of a pay to play scheme or justice for sale in Oklahoma County. Justice demands that the citizens be kept up to date and informed if the OSBI has finished their investigation or if the matter has indeed been turned over to a Multi County Grand Jury.

The bigger story here though is the growing power of the Sooner Tea Party. Our organization has become known for being incorruptible, fearless, and persistent in our efforts to clean up politics. We have a dedicated team of researchers and allies, have developed outstanding sources deep within state and local government offices, and have attracted a growing number of financial supporters and grassroots activists. A tipping point is near that when reached will unleash renewed cooperation between the Oklahoma grassroots organizations and when that day arrives, it will be the beginning of the end of special interest dominated politics in Oklahoma.

And a final note on the County situation. Reports have been circulating since late spring on a possible Oklahoma County elected official being involved with a pay for play scheme with County contractors. There is also a separate charge involving embezzlement from a nonprofit foundation created for the benefit of an injured officer. We are watching things closely and investigating where possible and will update you if the information gets solidly confirmed.

Oh My God, the Tea Party is Building a Newspaper!

Not intending to be blasphemous but that is going to be the reaction from the politicians when they hear that the Tea Party is organizing a series of local newspapers around the state. As we hold our elected officials accountable, as we hold our grassroots organizations accountable, so should we hold the media accountable for their refusal or inability to publish the stories of corruption and outright special interest control of our state and local governments. If there is not a responsible newspaper in the area, we will start one.

The newspaper will have humble beginnings and will be rolled out in the five largest counties starting with Tulsa County at the end of January. This will not be the usual local newspaper; it will be more of a water cannon that can be used to hose down the worst of the RINOs, exposing their voting record, allowing the public to finish the job in the primaries and general election. The newspapers will be organized by county, saturating the majority of homes in the House districts that have RINO legislators.

The content will be directed toward the vast majority of citizens that are not aware of the massive corruption in state and local government, with information suited to those important baby steps toward becoming a constitutional conservative voter. The job of further educating those new conservatives will be up to the local grassroots organizations in the area and we intend to partner with those organizations that are willing to fight for our state and the future of our children.

The newspaper will be self sustaining through local advertising specific to that district and regional advertisers. Advertising costs will range from $300 for a full page ad down to $40 for a business card size ad and will reach a minimum of 20,000 citizens per House district whether they are voters are not. First and foremost the advertising will be a good value for the businesses that support the newspaper.

We are looking for local activists in Oklahoma, Tulsa, Payne, Cleveland, and Comanche County that are willing to help with local interest stories and research. There will be no pay for volunteer reporters and writers as every dime will be used to increase the reach of the newspaper, but the volunteers will have the satisfaction of having the local elected officials held accountable.

Delivery volunteers will be paid though. If the newspaper succeeds perhaps someday we can convert to a paid staff.

PUSHING FALLIN'S AGENDA DO THEY KNOW WHAT THEY ARE DOING?

By R.H.

Editors note: This story was originally seven pages long and about as well written as one could ask but the length demanded trimming down. However, if you want a really in depth look at the consequences of this bill please read the entire unabridged story here. House Bill 3061 is one of the most confusing pieces of legislation I have ever seen. The history of this bill is enough to leave one's head spinning. This is the bill that Speaker Steele is pushing for the Governor on Tax reform. It was originally referred to the Rules Committee on February 7, 2012. It was withdrawn from the Rules Committee, for reasons unknown, on February 20, 2012, and given to the Appropriations and Budget Committee. The Appropriations and Budget Committee amended it and passed it out of committee on February 28, 2012 recommending a do pass. On March 1, 2012, the Bill picked up a Co-Author, Senator Jolley, as a principal author in the Senate. That same day the bill was "Emergency Remove" from consideration. I was unable to find out why it was removed.

Not listed in the history of the bill is on the very next day, March 2, 2012, a floor version of the bill was introduced on the floor. No explanation as to where this "floor version" came from or who wrote it. It was amended from the version approved by the Appropriations and Budget Committee. It's a full page longer. You can read the bill here .

This bill is similar in nature to HB 3038, which has also advanced to the house floor. There are major differences though. This bill is slanted towards the upper class and has no set dates whereas HB 3038 is un-biased as to class and has set dates. We will go through them in detail in this article. You can read HB 3038 here:

As stated earlier, this bill was "Emergency Remove" on March 1, 2012. Without a vote of the committee, the floor version of the bill was submitted on March 2, 2012. How can Speaker Steele get away with this violation of rules?

Section 1. "A new section of law not to be codified in the Oklahoma Statutes reads as follows:" This is very suspicious. How can you create new law and not have it codified in the statutes of the States laws? It can't be done. Should this law be passed with this wording, it would have no standing.

Section 4.B. In part "and ending not later than December 31, 2012, a tax is hereby imposed".

1. Single individuals and married individuals filing separately:

(g) 5.25% tax on the remainder for the 2009 and subsequent tax years ending not later than December 31, 2012.

These same rates apply for married couples filing jointly, only you must double the dollar figure. This is a significant tax cut. As it goes back to the tax year of 2009, you should also be able to file an amended return and receive an additional return from the state.

Section 4.C. In part "Nonresident Aliens. There shall be a tax imposed on nonresident aliens --- a tax of eight percent (8%) instead of thirty percent (30%)".

Section 4.D. Corporations In part " beginning after December 31, 1989, a tax is hereby imposed --- in amount equal to six percent (6%) thereof." This is a disgrace. This code hasn't changed in twenty-three years.

Section 4.E. Certain Foreign Corporations. In part " In lieu of the tax imposed in subsection C-- there shall be imposed on foreign corporations, as defined in the Internal Revenue Code, a tax of six percent (6%) instead of thirty (30%)". Now if foreign corporations can get a tax break, why can't American owned companies get a tax break?

Section 4.G. Tax rate tables. In part "For all taxable years beginning after December 31, 2012, in lieu of the tax imposed by Section 2 of this Act there is hereby imposed for each taxable year on the taxable income of every individual, whose taxable income for such taxable year does not exceed the ceiling amount ---- tables which shall be determined by the tax commission." In other words, it's a crap shoot.

Section 6 AMENDATORY O.S. 2011, Section 2357.22, is amended to read as follows:

Section 2357.22.A. In part "beginning after January 1, 2013, and ending not later than December 31, 2014, there shall be allowed a onetime credit against the income tax"

1. for investments in qualified clean-burning motor vehicle fuel property placed in service after December 31, 201
4. In part "Property which is directly related to the compression and delivery of natural gas from a private home"

In other words, they have eliminated all tax credits but one for electric cars. They are encouraging the use of natural gas conversion. That's understandable. ONG will install a fueling station in your home at no cost, provided you already have gas service. Natural gas is one thing we have an abundant supply of.

Section 2358 A.1. In part " There shall be added interest income on obligations of any state or political subdivision thereto which is not otherwise exempted pursuant to other laws". They certainly want to cover all bases. Tax whatever they can.

If you are like a lot of the rural farm workers, young teen agers, college students and people just setting out on their own this bill is a disaster. This bill will truly give the Democratic Party an issue to run on in the fall. It benefits the wealthy and middleclass first, while placing the burden on the poor and those just setting out on the road of life. By cutting taxes on those who are single and making over thirty five thousand dollars ($35,000.00) and those who are married and making over seventy thousand dollars ($70,000.00) you place the tax burden on the poor. That burden is lengthened by not placing any sure dates on implementing these tax cuts, but by arbitrarily placing a five percent (5%) growth minimum on state revenue before a cut can be given. This will ensure the upper classes will see some if not all cuts, while the lower wage earners will be lucky to see any.

One thing is glaringly missing from this package going before the House. That is a Fiscal Report. Where is the fiscal report that should have been completed after all these changes made by the Speaker where submitted to the floor. After all they were submitted without a vote.

Speaker Steele this is another blatant attempt by you to gain favor with the Governor by pushing her pet project. Senator Jolley, you're just trying to gain favor with the State Chamber of Commerce. After all you need some campaign money. Governor Fallin, how dare you propose such an audacious, despicable plan. You were elected to represent the people of Oklahoma. Not just the middle class and the rich. Look after the people who really need it for a change. Let the Speaker and Senator Jolley know that unless there are major changes to this bill, you will veto it. By major changes I mean the first to receive the tax cuts are those making less than thirty five thousand ($35,000.00) dollars a year. They are the ones that need it.

Those of you in both chambers of the legislature should demand accountability of Speaker Steele and Senator Jolley. Demand a new Fiscal Impact Statement be prepared by the Tax Commission. Demand the little guy get the tax breaks first. Demand these changes, or vote no on this bill. We will be watching.

GOP Convention Battles Continue

Cheryl Williams, the State Committee Woman for Oklahoma County made a great post on her face book page that covered the battle at the Oklahoma County Convention on March 3rd. Having an insider be so bold as to set the record straight is amazing, and it speaks volumes for Cheryl's courage and integrity. The comments posted in response to her article were illuminating as well and the information stung some of the RINOs that have worked so hard to keep the Republican Party from integrating newcomers or following the wonderful 2011 State GOP Party Platform.

Here is another link to read the article if the facebook page isn't up.

That wasn't the end of the fallout over the Oklahoma County Convention battle as several counties circled the wagons and excluded Ron Paul supporters in fear of having their corruption exposed.

First up to bat was Steven Taylor, the County Chair of Bryan County. Stephen took the equally bold approach of telling Ron Paul supporters that they simply wouldn't be allowed to be a delegate to the District or State conventions based upon the fight at the Oklahoma County Convention. Taylor specifically mentioned the name of the Ron Paul State Director, stating that the Ron Paul organization was just too "pushy".

Once word got back to the campaign, State Chairman Matt Pinnell was given the information along with the phone number of one of those Republicans that were excluded based upon their support of Ron Paul.

Rule 3 a of the 2011 State GOP Rules calls the right to participate is sacred and inviolate. The rule explicitly states that the abridgement or willful disregard of this right is sufficient grounds for the removal of any officer or committee member. The rule is quite specific and explicit on this matter and the rule is front and center, not buried in the back of the rules. Obviously those who formulated the rules understood that without this protection the Republican party would become corrupt and wither. One could say that those that wrote the rule understood human nature better than most.

So it was with much surprise that after the Ron Paul Campaign called for the dismissal of Steven Taylor that nothing was done right away. Indeed all that occurred was one of the women that complained got a nasty and intimidating phone call from Steven Taylor:

Al thank you for standing up for my sister and I, we are both so new and still learning so it's nice that we have you, not letting them pull the wool over our eyes!

Stephen Taylor called my sister this afternoon and chewed on her butt pretty good, as though it was our fault. Said he would be calling me next! I am a little scared am not gonna lie, I am not for confrontation but I guess I better hurry up and get over that! It's just so sad that we have to fight them too; we just wanted to have our voice heard, to be involved. Well anyway thank you again Al. Your one courageous man! I guess I will wait now for Stephen to call and chew on my butt! ; )

State Chair Matt Pinnell did offer to seat both ladies as delegates on the Bryan County, an offer that was initially refused due to the intimidating tactics of Bryan County Chair Stephen Taylor. After some reflection and assurances that the Ron Paul Campaign would stand behind them, the two ladies accepted State Chair Matt Pinnell's offer.

To: "matt@okgop.com" matt@okgop.com
Subject: Delegates for Bryan county

Matt I just spoke with my sister and she was FURIOUS at me for saying no to delegates so YES please have Stephen Taylor add us delegates. I was kinda on the spot this morning wasn't sure what she wanted me to do but. We are both confirmed we want to be delegates and maybe Spencer since Stephen Taylor left him out in the cold too.

Thank you so much
Bryan county
Cxxxx Axxxx

But allowing two people to reclaim their right to participate doesn't erase the early stain of excluding Republicans based on their support for a particular candidate nor does it erase the basic fact that Bryan County Chair Steven Taylor refused to include other Ron Paul supporters after they contacted him at the precinct meetings to be included as a delegate. All that Bryan County can offer as an excuse is that their Chair selected 19 delegates and called for a vote to accept the slate of delegates. But once again the State GOP Rules are violated. Rule 16 h declares that all delegates are to be elected at the precinct level and specified as either "Open" delegations or "Delegate/Alternates". Here is another Bryan County Republican that didn't get to be a delegate thanks to Chairman Stephen Taylor:

Hi Cxxxx,
I haven't heard anything from him. The evening of the party meeting he took down names and said something about they normally had to call people to be delegates for the county. Sounded ignorant then but I really didn't want to point that out to him since he didn't seem to understand the process himself to make sense. Anyway, as I remember I gave him my name and number and haven't heard anything.
~spencer

And another email expressing the dismay of being disrespected:

Al,

I will call Matt this morning, and i will email a few other people from first meeting that wanted to be delegates, but I'm certain to no avail. They kinda say one thing and do another. So I'm sure even if they put us on delegate list at this point we would not have enough people to vote us as a delegate, but guess that doesn't mean we should be EXCLUDED! There were five at first\* meeting including my sister and I that were asking about delegate process. And obviously got no answers from Stephen . I did call my sister this morning so she could send you a letter of what was said between her and Stephen Taylor yesterday Both her and I are leaving town tomorrow so I may not have contact with you until Monday in case you call or send email and I don't respond. Thank you so much!

*State Chairman Matt Pinnell did respond to these emails and noted in surprise that according to the email complaint that there were now five Republicans excluded from the process in Bryan County rather than the two that I first brought to his attention. Only three have been in contact so far.

Furthermore, Rule 5 b specifically states that the precinct committee (Chair, Vice Chair, and Secretary-Treasurer) is the supreme Republican authority for the precinct and no one other than the precinct committee may remove a qualified delegate from the county convention. Bryan County bypassed all of this by selecting individuals to represent their county rather than holding precinct meetings to elect the delegates.

Bryan County GOP Chair Stephen Taylor claims that they called for anyone to ask to be a delegate before voting on the list of 19 that he had picked and no one spoke up. Few would speak up after being told that they wouldn't be allowed to participate nor would they speak up after asking several times to be a delegate and not making the list of 19. I would say that they had been humiliated enough by Chairman Taylor to have the nerve to stand up in front of a crowd and beg for their rights.

Bryan County has been on our radar before after a straw poll rules were changed after the poll had been closed and allegations were made by other attendees of various irregularities during one of their meetings.

Below is an email and some notes taken by one of the Bryan County ladies:

Dear Al,

Cxxxx asked me to put together a letter referencing the interaction of the phone conversations and the two meetings I attended at the Bryan County GOP meetings. Please see my statements and previous notes below and let me know if you have further questions or if I can be of additional assistance. I appreciate your looking into the matter.

First Meeting:

I attended the Bryan Count GOP meeting on Feb 6th at the Nazarene Church located in Durant, OK. In attendance was the chairman Stephen Taylor, myself and at least 25 other attendees with the meeting lasting about 90 minutes and included a speaker from the Oklahoma Watch dog organization. In addition to the Oklahoma Watch Dog speaker the other discussions covered included state and local business issues related to Oklahoma.

At the end of the meeting I spoke with Mr. Taylor the GOP Chairman asking about information on how to become a Ron Paul delegate. In response, Mr. Taylor told me that he would have to check into that and that there were 6 delegates done taken and that there was 19 total delegates for our county. I am new to the process of becoming a GOP delegate and was unaware that the delegate packets were to be issued at this meeting.

It has been 6 days since the meeting and I have not heard back from the GOP chairman in regards to the information or packet in becoming a GOP delegate. I am inquiring on what steps I should take in regards to the meeting held on Feb 6th and any other further action I can take to become a GOP delegate?

Phone Interaction:

I asked Stephen Taylor on our first meeting that I attended (Feb 6th) on how to become a GOP delegate and he stated he would have to get back to me. I never heard back from Stephen on the issue and while researching and trying to understand the process I began trying to research the GOP rules and found that I should be coordinating with my precinct chair.

I called the Bryan County election clerk who referred me back to Stephen Taylor. Stephen Taylor never followed up with me on the questions concerning the GOP delegate information so on March 1st or 2nd I phoned Stephen to see if the Bryan County GOP party had a precinct chairman for my precinct and I gave him the number of my precinct and he asked if that was Bryan Co, I said yes he said he would have to get back to me and Stephen never got back with me on information on the GOP delegate or information concerning the precinct chairman.

Second Meeting:

On March 5th me and my sister Cxxxx Axxxxx attended the GOP county convention meeting, we walked in and Stephen asked if i was Cxxxxxx Gxxxxx and I said yes, he then handed both Cxxxxl and I a red colored paper with delegate wrote on it. We were not told instructed of the process or exactly what we were to do. The group proceeded on with the meeting and then the meeting went right on to nominating delegates in which they starting calling off names of 19 people in which they did not identify themselves and I did not know if they were actually in attendance at this meeting.

Stephen Taylor nominated them and Hollie Gerrod seconded that motion and the people held up the red colored paper and nomination was over. Then Richard Engle spoke and then there was another speaker, and the meeting was over in about 90 minutes total. Then Stephen Taylor came over and talked to us about voting for the delegates and that he did it that way because he was afraid of the Ron Paul people showing up.

Phone Interaction:

March 6th Stephen Taylor called me to see if I had a problem with the way he conducted the meeting and that he had been called by the state republican committee man. I told him that I had not complained and that my sister Carol Ashley had called a county coordinator that she had met at a rally and that it had went from there.

Stephen continued to explain to me what had happened at the meeting and the reason he did what he did concerning delegates. I had to explain to him that I have been trying for a month to get information from him on delegate information and precinct chairman and that he had not responded to my request and ignored my reaching out for help. I expressed to him that I was interested in trying to stay informed about Local and State and Federal levels of our government so that I could help in engaging my neighbors on what is going on and helping the GOP in their efforts.

Then he proceeded to tell me that he didn't know me and that I would have to nominate myself for a delegate and that the other people they nominated had been involved in their meetings for about 2 years and I told him that I have been attending for about a year now and based on my limited knowledgeable that he had not followed the rules and nor did he help me when I was trying to be informed, involved and be of help to the GOP party.

Thanks
CXXXX GXXXX

Bryan County wasn't the only county GOP organization that retaliated against the Ron Paul campaign for standing up for Republican's rights on Saturday. Cleveland County continued their amazing ability to stymie transparency and the rule of law.

Bobby Cleveland and Lisa Shrieves

Several weeks ago after some grassroots Ron Paul supporters were planning to go after Cleveland County Chair Bobby Cleveland, the state campaign stepped in to negotiate to avoid any acrimony between the two groups. At contention was the list of delegates that were moved forward from the February precinct meetings to the county convention on March 10th. As the stories of corruption and dirty tricks were still resonating from 2008, along with the problems in 2011 when County Chairman Bobby Cleveland decided to require an "application" before divulging the location and time of the precinct meetings, the local Ron Paul community was in no mood to trust the Cleveland County GOP.

Al called Bobby and in return for a copy of the delegate list at least ten days in advance of the county convention, as called for in State GOP rules, the grassroots Ron Paul supporters would back off attacking Bobby politically. All was well till the day arrived when the list was to be provided and the Vice Chair Lisa Shrieves emailed refusing to send the promised list.

Some claim that Al's return email was harsh but knowing that an agreement had been breached, the checkered past of the Cleveland County GOP organization, and the likelihood that Ron Paul supporters were once again set to be hosed down the email was both restrained and good tactics. Of course the proof of the pudding would be revealed once the delegate list was scrutinized for problems and refusing to provide an electronic copy was a big old red flag that Cleveland County didn't want that list scrutinized without first causing some delay and a lot of trouble.

But Cleveland County Ron Paul supporters went down to the County GOP Headquarters and took pictures of the list that was taped to the inside of the window and started entering the data into a spreadsheet. What came out after a few days was a list of 42 problems ranging from Ron Paul supporters that had attended the precinct meetings being thrown out as delegates, to having people that didn't attend the precinct meeting added as delegates. Some delegates were demoted to alternates, and both open and closed precincts had more people added as delegates, in violation of State GOP Party rules.

Local Ron Paul supporters started sending lists in to the County GOP organization pointing out problems and many of the Ron Paul supporters that had been expelled went down Friday night to try to clear up their case. Despite all of that, there was another three hour long credential meeting that delayed the county convention on Saturday morning and not all problems were addressed at the convention.

Local grassroots leaders did manage to do a fairly good job of getting the rules changed to allow those left behind Ron Paul delegates added at a later date but what is the likelihood of Cleveland County GOP adding people once the convention was closed? At the convention you could vote to force them to do the right thing, you could embarrass them in public but once the convention is over the same old corrupt party officials are still in charge and any fight has to occur at the district and state conventions.

More indicative of the complete corruption and disrespect for the State Party rules was Cleveland County Chair Bobby Cleveland kicking out Al, the Ron Paul State Director, and another delegate. Bobby brought a couple of sheriff deputies over to Al before the meeting was started, stating that "a few people didn't want Al present at the convention". When asked to name the people, Bobby declined to answer. When asked to show what rule allowed someone to be thrown out of a county convention Bobby again refused to answer.

And the delegate that was thrown out? What was the “crime”? Cleveland County Chair Bobby Cleveland stated that the delegate had “argued” with him. Apparently standing up for a State Director of a National Campaign that was getting kicked out for no reason isn’t allowed, or is it that you have to agree with Bobby on all things to be allowed to participate?

Now this happened after both men had paid their $10 admission fee and received their badges. As for allowing others to decide who gets to stay and who gets kicked out, I can tell you that 40% of the attendees would have loved to kick out the 60% of the Ron Paul supporters. At what point did we start allowing people to decide who gets to participate?

After being ejected by two sheriff deputies and while waiting for a sheriff supervisor to arrive so that the ejection was documented, Bobby Cleveland came outside and “allowed” the delegate to go back inside. After being told that violating rule 3 a was sufficient cause to remove him from office, Bobby Cleveland retorted that “You would be doing me a favor!” and stomped back inside. Bobby must have had second thoughts because after the supervisor had arrived, Bobby came back out and said that AI could re enter as long as he didn’t cause “trouble”. When asked if AI had caused trouble to get kicked out the first time, Bobby snorted a rude answer and stalked back inside. And yeah, that wasn’t a typo; they illegally threw AI out twice!

Cleveland County had done a masterful job of confusing the Ron Paul supporters at both the precinct meetings and at the county convention. One of their more masterful tricks was to not put the number of votes allocated on the precinct packets. If you didn’t know how many votes were in a precinct, you couldn’t decide whether or not to leave the precinct open or closed (delegate/alternate). What would happen was two people would be present at the precinct meeting, both were elected as delegates and then they “closed” their precinct so that the corrupt Cleveland County GOP wouldn’t add more delegates to water down their votes. So then the corrupt GOP officials would remove one delegate, leaving “their” person as the only delegate. The proper method is to send both delegates with half a vote each.

Is this possible to kick off an elected delegate? No, not without breaking the GOP rules but if it were possible a decent and honest person would be calling both delegates and asking what they prefer be done.

Even more egregious was the fact that Cleveland County had gone to the trouble and expense of renting two halls for the convention! They put what they thought were the “safe” delegates in one room and put other delegates in the room across the hall. Their excuse was that “the fire marshal wouldn’t allow more than 208 people in the main hall so they set up an “overflow” room. B.S.! Everyone remembers the town halls in 2009 with packed, standing room only crowds squeezed into rooms. Even worse was the Cleveland County GOP stationed “guards” at each door and kept the doors shut! Why? Because they had dozens and dozens of empty chairs in the room!

The “overflow” room (reminds me of someone describing a basement flooded with sewage) had a big screen TV so that the second class delegates would be “allowed” to watch the proceedings in the main room. Which leads us to why Al was kicked out the second time.

A lady Ron Paul supporter had asked Al for help resolving her case because after nearly three hours this woman still didn’t know if she was a delegate or not. After asking that someone come out of the “guarded” room to address the lady’s concerns, a Cleveland County official named Melinda Daughtery who is also the State Committee woman for Cleveland County arrived. Melinda gave the same old non answers and said that the lady Ron Paul supporter would have to sit in the “overflow” room until her case was resolved. Al asked if the overflow room was wired with a microphone so that the delegates sitting in the room could participate or object to motions using Roberts Rules of Order and Melinda snapped “No!” Al then asked why they were being treated as second class citizens without the ability to participate. Melinda stormed off in anger.

So it was no surprise when a few minutes later a building manager showed up with another deputy in tow to tell Al he had been accused of “harassing” a woman and was going to have to leave. Al asked the building manager what would happen if someone accused the building manager of molesting a three year old in the bathroom, would he be asked to leave as well? The point, drenched in sarcasm, was that an accusation was just that, and it wasn’t enough that someone claimed something without some sort of proof. When asked to identify the accuser the building manager hesitated, then said he wouldn’t identify the accuser.

So once again the State Director of a national campaign was thrown out of the convention, this time ordered to leave the property immediately or be arrested. Al asked for the supervisor to show up again to document the ejection but the deputy said that if the deputy showed up that Al would be arrested for trespass. The deputy did understand what was going on though, even made the comment that “ I am caught in the middle. This is just politics and I am being used as a tool to commit a crime.” With that, the deputy agreed to take a minute to call in the incident to the dispatch room so that it would be entered on the dispatch log.

Eventually we are told that all the delegates and alternates were allowed to sit in the main room. Must have been a miracle that there suddenly was plenty of room, and the meeting went on. Ron Paul supporters reportedly did a credible if somewhat torturous job of getting some of the problem cases solved. The problem was that those grassroots leaders were more concerned about avoiding any scandal for the Cleveland County GOP than representing Ron Paul supporters. In Oklahoma City we didn't leave a soul behind, in Cleveland County that can't be said.

So it is little wonder that Cleveland County GOP officials went to so much trouble and strife to avoid giving over a list of delegates and chose to break State GOP rules by throwing out anyone that was a threat to this getting exposed. They also went to a lot of trouble to get AI thrown out so that the leadership wasn't there to protect all of the Ron Paul delegates. It turned out that there were enough to win the day, around 60% Ron Paul supporters according to several estimates and indeed Bobby Cleveland found himself losing several key votes.

The issue though is that one shouldn't have to go through hours and hours of political mischief to protect one's political rights, the State GOP ought to be proactive in these cases and read the riot act to these corrupt county organizations. I can tell you one thing, if the GOP wants to split the vote in November, they could do no better than disrespecting Ron Paul supporters with all this corruption. If the GOP wants to be the cause of a third party being born, they could do no better than to behave as they have the past few years.

This entire mess has been laid at the feet of State GOP Chair Matt Pinnell. In his defense, when we talked late last week I told him that I didn't expect trouble at the Cleveland County GOP Convention because Bobby Cleveland had been acting nice. But after a week the Bryan County ladies still haven't received a call from Bryan County GOP stating that they were delegates and no doubt both are too intimidated to call Bryan County Chair Stephen Taylor. But there is more than enough proof in the emails that the ladies sent and from the phone call where Matt talked to one of them.

The Cleveland County fiasco is newly laid in his lap so Matt needs some time to investigate but the proof is there, Bobby Cleveland and Melinda Daughtery are both guilty of breaking rule 3a, refusing to allow a Republican to attend a Republican function. One of the witnesses sent this reply after being sent a picture of State Committee woman Melinda Daughtery:

"That is 150% her. She was sitting up front during the delegate meeting. She was conversing with the shorter officer after you were thrown out right beside the overflow room. They were whispering. I walked past them to try and catch some of the conversation and they immediately stopped talking."

We did receive a call from State Chairman Matt Pinnell late Sunday night before this story was published. Matt assures us that these are serious issues, that the Bryan County delegate list will be corrected before it is sent to the State GOP for use in the District and State Conventions. Matt also assured us that the issue of Bryan County Chair Stephen Taylor, Cleveland County Chair Bobby Cleveland, and Cleveland County State Committee Woman Melinda Daughtery will be addressed either before the conventions using an executive session, at the Credentials Committees before the conventions begin, or that we will be able to address the issues from the floor of the convention using Roberts Rules of Order. We also discussed the possibility of drafting new State GOP rules to prevent these corruptions from occurring in the first place and the possibility of presenting these rules at the State Convention.

All we want is to clean up the party, Matt. Make the Oklahoma GOP an organization of rules and law, not one that one uses brute tactics and lies to accomplish political goals. We can choose to hire plenty of goons and deputies to keep people in line at the conventions or we can choose to respect the rules and respect the people and not need to turn the conventions into a police state format. But what we are calling on Matt to do immediately is to return a sliver of integrity to the State GOP by removing Stephen Taylor, Bobby Cleveland, and Melinda Daughtery for willful disregard of a fellow Republican's rights.

But make no bones about this, if we need to challenge an entire county or even entire counties delegate list to punish bad behavior we will be ready to do just that from the floor of the convention. By cleaning up the State GOP, by forcing GOP officials to follow the rule of law, we begin the process of forcing politicians to follow the GOP party platform and to keep their campaign promises.

Budget Shortfalls and our Big Spending Government Can We Afford Their Big Government Ways? By R.H.

Recent reports from the Oklahoma Tax Commission have indicated continued growth in the amount of tax collected from all sources. This is a good thing for Oklahoma. It indicates a rebound in our economy from the devastation of a deep recession and an increase in employment despite all the obstacles placed in front of it by the bureaucracy in Washington, D.C. But before you start to stand up and cheer, a closer examination of the numbers is required.

To begin with, Oklahoma has a Balanced Budget Amendment. This means that the Legislator cannot spend more than the state takes in each year. Any shortfalls must be made up by cuts, or borrowing. With liberals in power in the House and Senate, and I include RINO Republicans in this group, they chose to borrow to close the gap. This left the state in debt, which added a budget item to the next budget year. We also have a "Rainy Day Fund" for emergencies. Now a budget shortfall is an emergency wouldn't you agree?

State Treasurers saw this recession coming a full year before the general public did. Beginning in 2007, revenues to state coffers from all sources began to decline. No one sounded an alarm. I guess they didn't think we had a right to know this information. This information can be found in a Center on Budget and Policy Priorities report here: States Continue to Feel Recession's Impact — Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. The representatives providing information for this report from Oklahoma are State Tax Commission and the OK. Policy Institute. All of the information they provided were estimates.

Now they don't show any actual figures until FY09. In that year they indicated a shortfall of $114 million dollars projected and closed when the budget was adopted. It does not indicate how it was closed. If I remember correctly, they were called back into special session to address a budget shortfall in the Corrections Department later that spring.

The FY10 budget indicated an initial gap that was closed by the time the budget was adopted of $777 million dollars. That was a huge number, and quite an accomplishment by the legislature. Unfortunately it appears to have been all accounting tricks. An additional $864 million was a projected shortfall a mere six months later. How was this made up? Where did the money come from? Did they drink from the cool-aid? No explanation was given. I do not recall a special session being called to address this shortfall either.

The FY11 budget comes along not looking much better. It starts out with a $725 million dollar projected shortfall that was closed by the time the budget was adopted. As I recall, this was accomplished with a combination of budget cuts and "fee increases". Except some of the fee increases were challenged in court, and thrown out as illegally passed. So was the budget shortfall really closed?

My guess is yes and with a slight surplus. It was about this same time that Oklahoma's economy started to improve. Our un-employment rate started to decline. Our tax revenues started to increase. That along with a raid of the Rainy Day Fund made up for the rest of the short fall. They also failed to return the fees they already collected that had been ruled unconstitutional by the Oklahoma State Supreme Court. So yes they did eventually balance the budget.

For FY12, they closed a $500 million dollar gap in the budget. Again budget cuts and fee increases were how they accomplished this. With Oklahoma's economy looking better, the shortfall was less. They even found money to place into the "Rainy Day Fund". It's funny how this fund works. It's always there, but when we need it, it never seems to have money in it.

Now FY13 is a complete mystery. No figures have been released yet. It will be interesting to see how this plays out. From the bills I've seen under consideration, the big spending RINO Republicans and liberals are having a spending spree that even President Obama would be proud of. Speaker Steele and his cronies are pushing a "Social Justice" agenda that includes several soft on crime bills, cutting spending to the Department of Corrections and letting repeat habitual sex offenders out of jail with ankle monitoring devices instead of jail time. The Senate is doing their best to implement Obama/Fallin care despite the fact that Oklahoma voters overwhelmingly rejected both and they're doing it without recording and publishing for the record committee votes.

The Great State of Oklahoma is in a financial mess. For too long we have let the liberal Democrats and liberal Republicans run this state. Now they are taking their cue from the D.C. Politicians and trying to borrow our way to oblivion. WE THE PEOPLE must now be heard. It's time the political class in this state be reminded that they work for us, not the Corporations and not the Oklahoma State Chamber of Commerce. Demand no more borrowing to close shortfalls. Use the "Rainy Day Fund". That's what it's there for. No more legislative pay raises until our financial house is in order. For those that don't want to live within the means of the state, resign. For those that refuse to live within the means of the state, we know how to vote you out.

It isn't Thanksgiving Yet, Why mess With a Turkey?

HR1044

Last year Representative Doug Cox presented the same type of bill to honor the nation of Turkey in a resolution. One of the conservative Republican Representatives asked former Israeli ambassador Yoram for his take on the resolution:

Shalom xxxxxxxx,

This is not an Israeli issue. It is an American issue.

The proposed resolution is oblivious of Turkey's policy toward the US and its most vital interests.

Since 2002, when the Islamic party became the ruling party, Turkey has switched over from a US-driven policy to an Islam-driven policy.

For example, Turkey has become an ally of Iran and Syria, getting much closer to Putin (who attempts to resurrect the USSR hegemony in his region and beyond). Ankara has been supportive of Hezbollah and Hamas – two major terrorist organizations in Lebanon and in Gaza respectively – and has embraced the IHH, a notorious Turkish terrorist organization, which supports Islamic terrorism in Europe and beyond.

The current regime in Turkey attempts to restore Turkey's grand era as a ruler of the Muslim World, at the expense of the USA, while advancing the fortunes of Russia, China, North Korea, Iran and Syria.

Hang in there and hang tough,

Yoram

Rep. Bennett objected to this & they changed it to a Citation instead of an HR. Rep. Reynolds added the amendment that if anyone receives any free trips from Turkey they should not introduce this legislation. Here is that amendment:

Oklahoma Insurance Act of 2012 - SB1629 –

We were all set to run this story this week on the Obama care/Fallin Care Health Insurance Exchanges but several things happened to cause us to question if the bill had been killed in the House and in the Senate.

First off during the GOP presidential watch party at the Marriott last Tuesday night, Senator Bingman approached Al, introduced himself and shook hands. It was one of those handshakes that older men still do, sizing each other up in the process. The conversation quickly turned to the Obama Care/Fallin Care bill that had passed the Senate the week before and how the public didn't want Obama Care implemented in any form or fashion. Bingman made an odd comment about the Senate not passing Obama Care and not wanting Obama Care, then said thank you for the email, and walked off. The email that Bingman was referring to was sent a few weeks ago when the Senate bill was still in committee, pointing out that the Sooner Tea Party had generally left the Senate alone and concentrated on the House of Representatives, also pointing out that the Senate had been much more responsive to the will of the people, thus allowing the Sooner Tea Party to leave them alone to do their work.

However, the conversation with Bingman was a bit puzzling at the time but when a phone call came in late Wednesday night giving the credit to the Sooner Tea Party and two others for killing Obama Care this year, things started to make sense.

The story starts with one dedicated activist, Ronda Vuillemont-Smith of the Tulsa 912 Group who was working the Capitol on Wednesday pushing as discharge petition on HR 1004 when she saw a white board, basically one of those erasable marker boards, with a note that Glen Mulready's favorite issue, the Obama Care/Fallin Care bill was being dropped. Ronda knew that Mulready was the author of last year's Obama Care/Fallin Care bill, the leader of the public hearings on the program this summer and fall, and was the leading supporter of Obama Care/Fallin Care in the House of Representatives. Seeing the bill being killed tweaked her interest.

That led to a phone call between Ronda and Mulready where Mulready allegedly said :

“it was that crazy Dave Bell and that crazy Al Gerhart” and Darren Gantz that killed the Obamacare bill”.

The story first came in from Northwest Tulsa, then was verified with Ronda Vuillemont-Smith via a phone call. Ronda knows as do we all that the credit is much more widely spread, it took attacks from all sides and all angles to kill Obama Care/Fallin Care in Oklahoma, but it was nice to hear from the bill author's own mouth that our brand of activism is effective. We don't hold rallies, we don't go down to the Capitol and talk to the legislators very often but we do a lot of talking with the politician's own constituents.

On reflection though, perhaps it isn't quite yet time to hang up the gloves on Obama Care/Fallin Care this year. This might be an elaborate trick to divert our attention. It would be a good idea to make some more calls to thank the Senators and Representatives for finally killing off the bill and to remind them that you don't want it brought up in any form or fashion. Here is their press release on the killing of the bill:

And here is the story that we were going to run, then decided not to run, but decided to run it just incase. And yes, that is as confusing as it sounds.

SB1629 has all the markings of introducing Obamacare to Oklahoma. Federal tax dollars will be used as stated, “Title XIX of the Social Security Act” as well as other sources “otherwise specified or authorized by law”. One reason for all these sources is to create a “premium assistance program”. In short, socialism. Our State Republican Senators who are promoting this legislation are essentially saying that the way to stop federal socialism is with state socialism and then tag it with buzz words such as “conservative” and “free market”. This bill has already passed a committee vote and appears backed by the governor. This means it is on a fast track for a Senate vote.

Action - Send a single BCC email to EVERY Republican State Senator at once and ask them to oppose SB1629 when it comes up for a vote on the Senate floor.

Preventing Enforcement of Federal Health Care Acts

– HB1276 – authored by Rep. Ritze

By staff writer

This helps to stop Obamacare ...

This key text in HB1276 is self-explanatory. “The Legislature of the State of Oklahoma declares that the federal laws known as the “Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act” (Public Law 111-148) and the “Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010” (Public Law 111-152), signed by President Barack Obama on March 23 and 30, 2010, are not authorized by the Constitution of the United States and violate its true meaning and intent as given by the founders and ratifiers, and are hereby declared to be invalid in the State of Oklahoma, shall not be recognized by this state, are specifically rejected by this state, and shall be considered null and void and of no effect in this state.” This bill passed out of committee.

Action – Call Rep. DeWitt ((405) 557-7332 [dalede Witt@okhouse.gov](mailto:dalede Witt@okhouse.gov)) and ask him to bring HB1276 to the House floor for a vote.

Defense in place of worship – HB2988 – Rep. Ritze

By Staff writer

Today, if someone forcibly enters your home they are “presumed to be doing so with the intent to commit an unlawful act involving force or violence.” As a result, you can defend yourself accordingly. HB2988 would extend this to “place of worship”. It has passed out of committee and is ready for a House Floor vote. Find this bill here.

Action – Call Rep. DeWitt ((405) 557-7332 [dalede Witt@okhouse.gov](mailto:dalede Witt@okhouse.gov)) and ask him to bring HB2988 to the House floor for a vote.

Oklahoma Riot Control and Prevention Act

– SB1760 – Sen. Sykes

This key text in SB1760 is self-explanatory. “Nothing in this section shall be construed to allow any official of a municipal or state entity to prohibit or suspend the sale, ownership, possession, transportation, carrying, registration, transfer and storage of firearms, ammunition and ammunition accessories during a declared state of emergency, that are otherwise legal under state law.” This bill just passed out of committee.

Action – Call Sen. Schulz ((405) 521-5612 schulz@oksenate.gov) and ask him to put SB1760 on the Senate agenda for a vote

PUSHING FALLIN'S AGENDA DO THEY KNOW WHAT THEY ARE DOING?

By R.H.

Editors note: This story was originally seven pages long and about as well written as one could ask but the length demanded trimming down. However, if you want a really in depth look at the consequences of this bill please read the entire unabridged story here.

House Bill 3061 is one of the most confusing pieces of legislation I have ever seen. The history of this bill is enough to leave one's head spinning. This is the bill that Speaker Steele is pushing for the Governor on Tax reform. It was originally referred to the Rules Committee on February 7, 2012. It was withdrawn from the Rules Committee, for reasons unknown, on February 20, 2012, and given to the Appropriations and Budget Committee. The Appropriations and Budget Committee amended it and passed it out of committee on February 28, 2012 recommending a do pass. On March 1, 2012, the Bill picked up a Co-Author, Senator Jolley, as a principal author in the Senate. That same day the bill was "Emergency Remove" from consideration. I was unable to find out why it was removed.

Not listed in the history of the bill is on the very next day, March 2, 2012, a floor version of the bill was introduced on the floor. No explanation as to where this "floor version" came from or who wrote it. It was amended from the version approved by the Appropriations and Budget Committee. It's a full page longer. You can read the bill here.

This bill is similar in nature to HB 3038, which has also advanced to the house floor. There are major differences though. This bill is slanted towards the upper class and has no set dates whereas HB 3038 is un-biased as to class and has set dates. We will go through them in detail in this article. You can read HB 3038 here:

As stated earlier, this bill was "Emergency Remove" on March 1, 2012. Without a vote of the committee, the floor version of the bill was submitted on March 2, 2012. How can Speaker Steele get away with this violation of rules?

Section 1. "A new section of law not to be codified in the Oklahoma Statutes reads as follows:" This is very suspicious. How can you create new law and not have it codified in the statutes of the States laws? It can't be done. Should this law be passed with this wording, it would have no standing.

Section 4.B. In part "and ending not later than December 31, 2012, a tax is hereby imposed".

1. Single individuals and married individuals filing separately:
(g) 5.25% tax on the remainder for the 2009 and subsequent tax years ending not later than December 31, 2012. These same rates apply for married couples filing jointly, only you must double the dollar figure. This is a significant tax cut. As it goes back to the tax year of 2009, you should also be able to file an amended return and receive an additional return from the state.

Section 4.C. In part "Nonresident Aliens. There shall be a tax imposed on nonresident aliens --- a tax of eight percent (8%) instead of thirty percent (30%)".

Section 4.D. Corporations In part "beginning after December 31, 1989, a tax is hereby imposed --- in amount equal to six percent (6%) thereof." This is a disgrace. This code hasn't changed in twenty-three years.

Section 4.E. Certain Foreign Corporations. In part "In lieu of the tax imposed in subsection C-- there shall be imposed on foreign corporations, as defined in the Internal Revenue Code, a tax of six percent (6%) instead of thirty (30%)". Now if foreign corporations can get a tax break, why can't American owned companies get a tax break?

Section 4.G. Tax rate tables. In part "For all taxable years beginning after December 31, 2012, in lieu of the tax imposed by Section 2 of this Act there is hereby imposed for each taxable year on the taxable income of every individual, whose taxable income for such taxable year does not exceed the ceiling amount ----- tables which shall be determined by the tax commission." In other words, it's a crap shoot.

Section 6 AMENDATORY O.S. 2011, Section 2357.22, is amended to read as follows:

Section 2357.22.A. In part "beginning after January 1, 2013, and ending not later than December 31, 2014, there shall be allowed a onetime credit against the income tax"

1. for investments in qualified clean-burning motor vehicle fuel property placed in service after December 31, 201
4. In part "Property which is directly related to the compression and delivery of natural gas from a private home"

In other words, they have eliminated all tax credits but one for electric cars. They are encouraging the use of natural gas conversion. That's understandable. ONG will install a fueling station in your home at no cost, provided you already have gas service. Natural gas is one thing we have an abundant supply of.

Section 2358 A.1. In part " There shall be added interest income on obligations of any state or political subdivision thereto which is not otherwise exempted pursuant to other laws". They certainly want to cover all bases. Tax whatever they can.

If you are like a lot of the rural farm workers, young teen agers, college students and people just setting out on their own this bill is a disaster. This bill will truly give the Democratic Party an issue to run on in the fall. It benefits the wealthy and middleclass first, while placing the burden on the poor and those just setting out on the road of life. By cutting taxes on those who are single and making over thirty five thousand dollars ($35,000.00) and those who are married and making over seventy thousand dollars ($70,000.00) you place the tax burden on the poor. That burden is lengthened by not placing any sure dates on implementing these tax cuts, but by arbitrarily placing a five percent (5%) growth minimum on state revenue before a cut can be given. This will ensure the upper classes will see some if not all cuts, while the lower wage earners will be lucky to see any.

One thing is glaringly missing from this package going before the House. That is a Fiscal Report. Where is the fiscal report that should have been completed after all these changes made by the Speaker where submitted to the floor. After all they were submitted without a vote.

Speaker Steele this is another blatant attempt by you to gain favor with the Governor by pushing her pet project. Senator Jolley, you're just trying to gain favor with the State Chamber of Commerce. After all you need some campaign money. Governor Fallin, how dare you propose such an audacious, despicable plan. You were elected to represent the people of Oklahoma. Not just the middle class and the rich. Look after the people who really need it for a change. Let the Speaker and Senator Jolley know that unless there are major changes to this bill, you will veto it. By major changes I mean the first to receive the tax cuts are those making less than thirty five thousand ($35,000.00) dollars a year. They are the ones that need it.

Those of you in both chambers of the legislature should demand accountability of Speaker Steele and Senator Jolley. Demand a new Fiscal Impact Statement be prepared by the Tax Commission. Demand the little guy get the tax breaks first. Demand these changes, or vote no on this bill. We will be watching.

DHS 101 Modifying drug-endangered children provisions

House Bill 2251, by Peterson
By Ms. D.B.

This bill presented by Rep. Peterson allows the DHS to investigate as well as assess if there is drug abuse suspected before placing the child in a home. After reading the long list of violations the court found the state guilty of this is not much of a reform step. Not at this point anyway. I don't think that the state could possibly move any slower at reforming a dept. unless they had no legs and were blind.

There is absolutely nothing as urgent or as important as this. Not because there is an ongoing court interest, but because there are children that are still suffering each day that the legislators and Governor drag their feet. Why they choose to give this the back seat is unexplainable. First it makes no sense that the Governor has not backed this with a magnitude of funding and ongoing support. There can't be a more urgent or deserving cause. The money is there for whatever else that the Governor wants to indulge in.

The state was put under the watchful eye of the court to insure that the "clean it up" was taking place with the insertion of co-neutrals (babysitters).The state did attempt to have the case thrown out of court before complete defeat. They lost due to the mounds of nasty evidence. Nothing says "no integrity" like trying to dodge responsibility when you have been busted red handed.

So now months down the road this shallow bill is thrown out here as a token of attempting to be "doing something". This bill and its contents should be listed in the DHS 101 manual. It should be on the no thinker/given list of terms. When a state employee is responsible for placing a child it shouldn't matter whether there is a possible drug issue or not, an investigation as well as an assessment should be done every time. To place a child sight unseen is sloppy, lazy, and unprofessional. They might as well forget any type of regulation at that point and just spin the wheel of fortune. At this point in the game why insert something this lame and sterile?

Experience proves that their judgment leaned toward failure. Every case and child is going to be unique and skills like looking outside the box are in order. You can't simply hand them a piece of paper with instructions. The children placed in the care of DHS are not there because they have a healthy home. Nor are they there trying to check into the Days Inn Motel. To handle the need properly requires that some thought, skill, and common sense be put into play. The children are there to obtain safety. To handle any given case without checking it out thoroughly is unacceptable.

In reading a report by an expert witness for the court he stated this exact concern. "That being that the employees lacked the ability to assess or judge and therefore the children were often placed in harmful situations". If the state insists on keeping the same employees then they can't expect those same people to have an ability that wasn't there before. I have felt from the beginning that the main problem was that the staff was not qualified for the positions and lacked the proper skills to make such decisions. Now what I am seeing with these one or two lame bills is the possibility that the problem may not be just a personnel problem. The initial sin may indeed be from much higher ranks that are just as lacking, just as unskilled, and wearing the deer in the headlight face with the rest of the DHS staff. Dragging their feet not just because they aren't concerned, but also because they are clueless to the proper fix themselves. They are also at the DHS 101 level in search for reform. It is a very sad situation for the kids and a very sad state indeed.

Marcia Robinson Lowry, direction of the Rights for Children was involved with the court Process concerning this case. Here are several comments that she had to say along with some headlines about our State .These headlines and comments can be viewed on the Children's Rights website Watchdog:

"The system has long operated without standards or accountability, resulting in serious harm to Oklahoma's children," said Marcia Robinson Lowry, executive director for Children's Rights. The state's 10,000+ kids in foster care suffer abuse and neglect in their foster homes at one of the highest rates in the nation. I don't see how the situation didn't get out long ago. I don't understand" Marcia Robinson Lowry, director of Children's Rights, Children's Rights.org.

John Goad A.M. expert witness /Childs Rights.Org:

"DHS's pathetically deficient practices ensure that every abused or neglected child who comes into its custody faces an inordinately high risk of suffering further maltreatment on its watch."

"When attempting to describe the children's harm and suffering, the words that come to mind are incomprehensible, unimaginable, outrageous, and immoral. Children in OKDHS's care are more likely to be abused and neglected than are children in the care of almost any other state," the author writes. "It is probable that all children who are placed in the custody of the agency are in danger of being placed with abusive, neglectful, and dangerous caregivers who OKDHS has failed to identify because of its deficient response to child abuse and neglect referrals."

Kudos to Key HR 1004

The Sooner Tea Party fought for this bill all last year using robo calls and precinct work but we ended the session with around 50 or so of the 68 signatures needed. The discharge petition is back again this year and drawing more supporters thanks to the election year and the beating we gave a few of the House members last year. George Faught was one of those legislators that refused to sign HR 1004 last year but during the Watch Party at the Marriott on Tuesday night Faught agreed to talk to Representative Charles Key about the discharge petition. Rumor has it that Faught actually signed the discharge petition on Wednesday but we have yet to confirm that.

HR 1004 would put a stop to chairmen continuing their dictatorial control over whether a bill gets a fair hearing. As it is now, chairmen can kill any legislation they choose. This resolution relates to the rules of the House of Representatives.

The reason for the fowl odor at the round house has been because those in power have killed our government the Founders set up and now the stench is quite obvious. The process has always been one of ideas and Charles Key has taken a huge step to protect our free society. The end result would be to hold our representatives accountable. What a glorious concept!

More Picking Winners by the Government Will They Ever Learn? By R.H.

Where did we get all of these RINO's from? Here we have a bill, HB 2978, written by Representatives Dank and Pittman in the House and Senator Mazzei directing what at the state level amounts to earmarks for pet projects in the form of tax credits. Haven't they figured it out that there is a better way to do business than to award tax credits? What do we have to do? Stand beside them and beat it into their heads? You can read the bill here:

They have declared this an emergency. What emergency? Has the world's axis shifted turning us upside down? Have we been inundated with massive floods? Have tornadoes destroyed Oklahoma City, Tulsa, and every town in the State? I see no emergency here. The only emergency here is how fast they can line their benefactor's pocketbooks.

Section 1. In part "NEW LAW A new section of law to be codified in the Oklahoma Statutes as Section 2357.501 of title 68".

Section 1.B. In part "Any measure providing for a tax credit shall contain provisions pursuant to which any member of the public can determine the identity of any person or entity that benefits from the tax credit". They put this in there as if they are doing us a favor. What are they doing giving these things out to begin with? This is the people's money they are giving away. Why do they think they are any better at it then the federal government? Hasn't the recent debacle at American Airlines taught them anything?

Section 1.C. "Any tax credit shall provide for the creation of new jobs or the retention of existing jobs within the State of Oklahoma." They've got this only half right. If they insist on picking winners and losers, then they should insist on new job creation only. That would not mean they couldn't give a tax credit to an existing company in the state. What it would mean is that existing company would have to expand its operation and add employees in order to qualify.

Section 1.D. In part "With respect to each fiscal year of the state, any tax credit shall be limited based on the total amount of credits that may be claimed by one entity". This is good. A company is given 100 tax credits for employees but hires 120; it can still only claim 100. It limits the liability to the state.

Section 1.E. "Any tax credit passed by the legislature shall contain a date certain for the termination of the provisions authorizing the credit." This is also a good thing, but it doesn't go far enough. This clause was added to placate the fiscal conservatives in the legislature. What needs to be added to this clause is wording to the effect stipulating that the entity will not be eligible for any additional tax credits for five years or so.

Section 1.F. In part "No economic activity that qualifies for a tax credit may occur without the project cost receiving prior approval by a state governmental entity". Okay this is questionable. I don't have a lot a faith in "governmental entities" to do a proper evaluation of cost of a project. It is with deep sadness that I must say this states agencies are full of corrupt, political hacks that will do whatever it takes to get a project going no matter what the cost.

Section 1.G. "Transactions for which a tax credit has been authorized and which results in a reduction or potential reduction of state revenue shall be audited by the State Auditor and Inspector." Having oversight is a good thing. I see the hand of fiscal conservatives in this clause. I hope they plan on hiring more auditors.

Section 1.H. In part "No measure containing a tax credit shall receive final passage by either chamber of the legislature unless a detailed fiscal impact analyzing the effect of the tax credit on the state revenue and upon the economy of the state is prepared". I'm in wholehearted agreement with this. A fiscal impact statement should be accomplished on everything effecting state revenue done by the legislature, unlike some of the tax bills we see sponsored by Speaker Steele.

Section 1.I. "No measure containing a tax credit shall be considered during the last five (5) days of a regular or extraordinary session of the legislature." This too is a good thing. We wouldn't these things coming up when all these legislators have on their minds is going home. I will add though, the length of the legislative session needs to be longer. The business of running the government is more time consuming and the legislators need more time to accomplish the job right.

Section 2. "This act shall become effective July 1, 2012." Why? Are you in a hurry to line the pockets of your benefactors?

Section 3. The emergency clause. "It being immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety, an emergency is hereby declared to exist, by reason whereof this act shall take effect and be in full force from and after its passage and approval." I dare any single legislator, from the Governor on down, to give me a valid reason as to how a tax credit effect the 'preservation of the public peace, health and safety'. It cannot be done. This section of the bill should be stricken, and if the bill is passed, this bill should be allowed to become law on November 1, 2012. This IS NOT an emergency.

Although this bill is well intentioned, it lacks sufficient grounds for passage. It once again fails to recognize that there is a better way to attract business to the great State of Oklahoma, by lowering corporate taxes to begin with. Let me explain it to you. Lower corporate taxes mean more corporations are attracted to Oklahoma. More corporations attracted to Oklahoma means more jobs in Oklahoma. More jobs in Oklahoma mean more sales tax revenue in Oklahoma. Can it be any simpler?

This bill authorizes the continued use of tax credits. This is something this state needs to get away from. There are more loopholes in here than there are in the I.R.S. Tax code. Vote No on this bill. We are watching.

Noodle Nelson; Rep. Jason Nelson

By Ms. D.B.

I have to wonder just what the incentive might have been that persuaded noodle Rep. Nelson to associate himself with such a full blown, wide open, fiasco of a dept. Like DHS. This wishy-washy, Capital wall-weed, is a man who has been lying low, spinelessly, doing his time, refusing to speak out on any topic, and only standing for something during restroom breaks.

This is a Rep. that came to the capital on the shirt tail of the Chamber of Commerce, and with the unveiling of resent findings it appears that his loyalty still remains with them. What does this say about Rep. Nelson? It says that he is not for the citizens of Oklahoma, but for his own personal gain. Why would Rep. Steele give such a person the job of "leadership" to a department that is in serious need of strong direction when he could care less and has nothing to offer?

Where might he be leading them to? Off a cliff? His appointment as leader certainly isn't due to his outstanding leadership and success with the areas he has headed so far. The only obvious answer would be, once again, for personal reasons. His political courage rating given was a big fat zero because of his refusal to speak on any given topic.

He was given this new "leader" position by his partner in crime Rep. Steele who was also listed on the same "Shameless" list. Rep. Nelson had already been given the task of "studying" the DHS problem. He has been studying it for over 2 years now. So, how much longer did he plan to "Study" the situation before he busted a move and did something productive? When asked this question Rep. Nelson's answer was about as deep as his study. His answer being, huh?

It is an understatement to say that he isn't the man for the job. Most likely this is a back scratching situation. Rep. Steele, who has also been "studying" the DHS dilemma for years, assigns his commerce comrade as bogus leader knowing he will only be a stool pigeon by doing nothing. It would, however, give him cover up control as needed.

Rep. Steele also handpicked the other 4 people that are to be working on the DHS reform. Needless to say, nothing has been accomplished. You can see the drudgery in Rep. Nelson's face these days. He appears to be miserable. You should have just said "no" Rep. Nelson. He now sits with the mother lode dropped in his lap. Whether his intentions are for the love of money or for favors owed no one is sure. Regardless, the outcome will probably be the same. The DHS project will suffer and he'll get burned unless Rep. Steele throws him under the bus first. Oh what a tangled web.

Send Jason an email and offer a spine transplant. While you are talking to him or his legislative assistant, ask him to sign the HR 1004 Discharge Petition.

Representative Lisa J. Billy

Her Legislative Career

R.H.

Representative Billy first got into politics, apparently, when she was elected to the Chickasaw Nation Legislature in 1996. She served there; I'm sure, proudly until 2001. This undoubtedly whetted her appetite for politics. She was elected to represent the 42nd District in Oklahoma in 2004. Since being elected, she has been appointed an Assistant Majority Floor Leader and she sits as the Chair of the A&B Public Safety Committee. She also sits on the Agriculture, Wildlife & Environmental Committee, Appropriations & Budget Committee, General Government Committee, Long-term Care & Senior Services Committee and the Redistricting Southern Oklahoma Subcommittee. In other words, she is one powerful lady.

Checking her legislative accomplishments has been rather difficult. I was only able to go back through the last two legislative sessions, and from what I saw, it appears the Representative Billy was an average to slightly above average politician. In the 2011 legislative year, she sponsored four bills and a House Resolution. Of those bills, four died in committee, one died on the floor and three passed into law. The House Resolution also passed.

On taking a closer look at the bills she had passed into law, one was an almost sure fire thing. It dealt with the levels of radiation a person can be exposed to. New data had determined that the levels of radiation exposure needed to be changed and Representative Billy saw to it. Plain and simple. One was a soft on crime bill. That one got through because it fit with the Speakers' social justice agenda, and the last was a funding bill for Attorneys Generals.

She had one bill that died on the House floor without coming up for a vote. It was a bill for a bridge near Maysville. She also had four additional bills that died in committee.

Legislative year 2012 has been very good to her. She has presented only five bills and one resolution this year. The resolution passed. All five of her bills passed and are awaiting action in the Senate. I guess nice things happen when you become part of the leadership.

Let's take a look at her campaign finances. They read more like those of a Democrat than those of a Republican, but you would expect that from a RINO. This last election cycle looked like this:

Chickasaw Nation $5,000.00
Choctaw Nation $5,000.00
Osage Nation $ 500.00
Ok. Assoc. Of Realtors $2,500.00
Ok. Assoc. Of Electric Cooperatives $1,000.00
Ok. Indep. Pet. Assoc. $1,000.00
Ok. Quarter Horse Racing Association $ 300.00

Associated General Contractors of Oklahoma $ 200.00
Citizen 1 $1,000.00
Citizen 2 $ 155.00
Citizen 3 $ 100.00
Citizen 4 $ 100.00
Citizen 5 $ 100.00

It should be noted that the names of the individual citizens are not revealed for this article. They can be found on Project Vote Smart.

Unions

Oklahoma Education Assoc. $1,000.00
Ok. Public Employees Assoc. $1,000.00
Ok. Society of Anesthesiologists $1,000.00
Ok. Assoc. of Nurse Anesthetists $1,000.00
Ok. Ed. Assoc. Fund for Children & Public Ed. $1,000.00
Ok. Assoc. of Optometric Physicians $ 600.00
Oklahoma City Firefighters $ 250.00
OKC Retired Firefighters Assoc. $ 200.00
Unified Chiropractic Assoc. $ 200.00
Ok. Assoc. of Career & Technology Education $ 150.00
OneOk. Inc. $ 500.00
Union Pacific Railroad $ 500.00
Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroad (BNSF) $ 500.00
Chesapeake Energy $ 250.00
HCRW Candidate Fund Account $ 100.00

That's quite a lot for one campaign cycle in such a rural district. Since she first started raising funds, in 2002, for her elections she has raised $99,313.00. A majority of these funds have come from government agencies, and education. Labor organizations are running third. It makes one wonder where her loyalties lie. Do they lie with the people she was elected to represent, or to the government and education organizations that seem to fund her?

Her sudden elevation to a leadership position raises questions. The state is currently embroiled in a battle with the Chickasaw and Choctaw Nations over water rights. The two Native American tribes own them by treaty with the U. S. Government. The State wants them. Did the Speaker hope to gain a bargaining position by appointing her to a leadership position? I hope that Representative Billy is true to her commercials, and isn't shallow enough to be used that way.

Knowing all this is it any wonder that Representative Billy is beholden to Speaker Steele? Is that why she hasn't signed the discharge petition known as HR 1004? Representative Billy, is power so important to you that you would silence the voices of your fellow Representatives by allowing the dictatorial rules of Speaker Steele to stand? Sign the discharge petition or we will work against you in your next election.

CAIR and the Muslim Brotherhood: The "Five Phases" Plan – Part III

CAIR is at it again.

You may recall that in the last several articles we've been looking at some of the evidence from the U.S. vs. The Holy Land Foundation trial, the largest terrorism financing trial in America's history. These shocking documents were seized by FBI Counter Terrorism Agents when they raided the Elbarasse home and seized the "Archives of the Muslim Brotherhood in America" hidden in a secret sub-basement. Let's review a few of the main points we've discussed in previous articles:

1. CAIR is an unindicted co-conspirator in the largest terrorism-financing trial in U.S. history.
2. CAIR is a front group for Hamas, an organization designated as a “terrorist organization” by the U.S. government.
3. CAIR is part of the Muslim Brotherhood (more coming soon on the Muslim Brotherhood).
4. The goal of the Muslim Brotherhood here in America was described as follows: “The (Muslim Brotherhood) must understand that their work in America is a kind of grand Jihad in eliminating and destroying the Western civilization from within and “sabotaging” its miserable house by their (our)hands ...” (The Explanatory Memorandum, p. 7)
5. Congress passed a law preventing the FBI from doing business with CAIR.
6. The Muslim Brotherhood (i.e. CAIR) has a 5-Phase plan known as “Phases of the World Underground Movement Plan,” to overthrow the U.S. government and replace the Constitution with Shariah Law.

Two weeks ago we looked at the first three phases of the MB’s “Five Phase Plan.” From the feedback we’ve received, people apparently think that this some pretty shocking material, especially the video clip of DHS Secretary Napolitano testifying before Congress about the MB’s infiltration of DHS. This week we want to look at the last two phases.

Before I get started on the next point, however, I need to make a disclaimer. Since the last article, almost as if on cue, CAIR has written a letter to illustrate the next phase in the “5-Phase Plan.” Honest to goodness, folks, before I wrote this article I really had no idea that CAIR was going to write this letter and be so cooperative as to highlight the message of this week’s article.

Let’s get started. Following are the exact quotes from the “Phases of the World Underground Movement Plan,” along with my commentary.

Phase Four: Open public confrontation with the Government through exercising the political pressure approach. It is aggressively implementing the above-mentioned approach. Training on the use of weapons domestically and overseas in anticipation of zero-hour. It has noticeable activities in this regard.

Commentary: There are two points upon which I want to focus:

A. The “Political Pressure Approach”

In previous articles, we’ve repeatedly referred to the “Understanding the Threat to America” seminar, held recently in Edmond, during which we received the documents which we’ve been studying in our series of articles. Oklahoma’s office of Continuing Law Enforcement Education Training (“CLEET”) certified this program for annual credit hours and a number of law enforcement officers from around the state attended. Once CAIR learned, however, that CLEET had certified the course for credit (ESPECIALLY by the presenters from the Strategic Engagement Group, Inc.), CAIR launched a withering campaign against the Director of CLEET to get the credit hour approval for the seminar rescinded and someone joked, at one point, they thought CLEET was going to have to “erect a guard tower” outside CLEET headquarters to repel CAIR’s attack. As CLEET’s Curriculum Director and the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation’s Legal Counsel found when they attended the seminar, however, the presenters focused primarily on the evidence from the HLF trial as well as the Muslim Brotherhood’s own documents. To their credit, CLEET officials withstood the barrage from CAIR and allowed the seminar to go forward as planned. THIS, MY FRIENDS, IS AN EXAMPLE OF THE “POLITICAL PRESSURE APPROACH” IN PHASE FOUR OF THE MUSLIM BROTHERHOOD’S “FIVE-PHASE” PLAN TO TAKE OVER THE GOVERNMENT AND REPLACE THE CONSTITUTION WITH SHARIAH LAW!

But CAIR wasn’t finished. When they failed to get CLEET to back down, CAIR turned its guns on local police departments. In a letter to the Dell City Police department dated February 27, 2012, CAIR sought to intimidate Chief Taylor by making an “Open Records Act Request” which contained the following language,

“We are concerned with DCPD’s exercise of oversight to ensure that the trainings it funds, hosts, sanctions or participates in contain credible information by credible experts about Islam, American Muslims and counterterrorism. It is our objective that this request will provide the documents needed to comprehensively assess DCPD’s performance in this area...” (See link to CAIR letter.)

The request then goes on to ask for information from, among others, the two presenters of the seminar. Let me remind you that the seminar to which CAIR so vehemently objected was presented by a former FBI Counter Terrorism Agent who was designated as a “Subject Matter Expert” in the area by the FBI, an Army Major who formerly briefed the Joint Chiefs at the Pentagon and the former Commanding General of Delta Force who was also a former Deputy Undersecretary of Defense for Intelligence. In addition, the presenters offered a letter signed by, among others, former CIA Director James Woolsey which said this about the seminar the presenters offered: “While all four of us [signers] were in senior positions in the U.S. Intelligence Community and should have been aware of this information-~~we were not~~. We first heard this critical information from the two primary presenters.” Tell me, do you really think CAIR is concerned about “credible information by credible experts”? Once again, this is a timely example of the POLITICAL PRESSURE APPROACH.

B. Weapons Training

Are you aware of the fact that there are currently over 30 terrorist training camps, complete with weapons training, currently operating here in America? As documented in the film “Homegrwon Jihad,” these are Muslim Brotherhood groups sponsored by a group out of Pakistan and our federal government is aware of these training camps but has not yet shut them down. Furthermore, I’ve been told that there is a report to be issued soon with evidence that there some mosques in America that have stockpiles of high-powered weapons stored there.

There is another piece of evidence from the HLF trial I’ve recently come across, however, that brings the issue of weapons training closer to home to the citizens of Oklahoma. In 1981 the FBI secretly recorded a conversation that took place in Missouri between a Muslim Brother named Zeid al-Naman and some other Muslim Brothers. In it, the following exchange takes place:

Q: "You mentioned to us that there is weapons training at the (Muslim Brotherhood's) training camps but I did not see that at all in the mid-southern region camps. So, would you explain to us the reasons?"

al-Naman: "(I)n Oklahoma they started to be strict about letting Muslims use the camps. They would ask them, for instance, to submit their names and they would ask you to bring an ID or something to prove your name... These harassments exist then in the state of Oklahoma, for instance. And these are among the reasons which made our brothers in the (region) to have their camps here in Missouri...." (See attached "History of the Muslim Brotherhood" transcript, p. 16)

Tell me, in view of CAIR's "political pressure approach," do you think that law enforcement officials here in Oklahoma today would dare to ask a Muslim for his ID "just" because he's engaged in weapons training? Why don't you ask Chief Taylor of the Dell City Police Department what he thinks the answer might be. I suspect that "these harassments" no longer exist in Oklahoma.

Phase Five: Seizing power to establish their Islamic Nation under which all parties and Islamic groups are united.

As stated in the seminar, the goal of the Muslim Brotherhood is twofold: 1) Establish worldwide Muslim rule (a "Caliphate") and 2) impose Shariah Law. While not all Muslims ascribe to the goals of the Muslim Brotherhood, we should not deceive ourselves. Phase Five is clear and needs no further explanation.

Remember, friends, CAIR has been identified as a Muslim Brotherhood front organization. Keep that fact in mind the next time you see a CAIR spokesman in the media. Forget the question of why ANY government would do business with a Muslim Brotherhood organization, why do we even allow an organization that advocates "Seizing power to establish their Islamic Nation" by use of force to operate here in America?

Remember also, CAIR has invited your state legislators to their Annual Conference on March 31st. Rumor is that there is going to be a little surprise for CAIR but if you don't think your elected officials should be doing business with CAIR, why don't you let them know how you feel? Stay tuned here to find out which legislators attend. Shariah Law, coming soon to a neighborhood near you, compliments of CAIR.

The Emasculation of Speaker Kris Steele

As a young boy I had a knack for breaking and training horses so people would bring me young horses, even older horses to break and gentle. Occasionally they would be young stud horses, males that had reached maturity and were becoming too difficult to handle around mares. So I'd take them down to one of the older horsemen's place outside of town, back them up to a forked tree, wrap their tail around the trunk while someone else used a twitch on the horse's nose. The old man would step in, castrate the horse, and the horse wouldn't make a wimper or move an inch. Twitches are nothing more than a short stick or club with a small loop of nylon rope that is twisted around a horse's nose, twisted tight, and you can do about anything you want to do to a horse and he won't even "twitch" or move a muscle.

The emasculation of Speaker Kris Steele was predicted late last year but few thought that the event would attract as little notice as it has. Indeed we were caught unaware ourselves until a legislator pointed out that a lot of Democrat bills were passing through the House of Representatives, far more than normal with a Republican dominated House and Senate.

Looking into the story, we found that Floor Leader Dale DeWitt had received standing orders to not piss off anyone! Watching some of the videos of the House action showed several conservative legislators amending bills just because they could and no one would object. Speaker Steele is so afraid of any sort of showdown with conservatives or Democrats that the session has been described as a "lovefest".

One legislator warned that too many are not watching too closely and that bad bills are likely to be slipped through at the last moments. Legislators are literally not paying attention knowing that most of the bills will be killed in the Senate, the only ones that seem to be unaware of this are the Democrats.

So what many expected to arrive in a flurry of action turned out to be done with nary a whimper from House leadership. What we thought would be a very, very, contentious session has turned out to be as tame as a gelding. This won't last though, something is afoot.

Two things are possible:

1. JW Hickman's clique might have become disenchanted with Speaker Steele and might be discussing throwing in with the Democrats in overthrowing Speaker Steele. If so, then they will move before too late in the session in order to have time to pass bills to pay their political debts.
2. The JW Hickman clique has cut a deal with the Democrats and is planning another run at the Speaker designate slot for 2013. The Democrats are savy enough to get their payment up front, thus the large amount of Democratic bills being rammed through the House.

Regardless of the reason, the House is unusually calm this session, so much so that legislators are relaxing their guard. Expect something to break before sessions end, something that would either knock out three to four Conservative legislators to tip the balance into the JW Hickman clique's favor or watch for a sudden shift once the Democrats wise up to the fact that no matter how many of their bills get passed, passing through the House and making it through the Senate are two different things.

Yippee Kia Yeah Speaker Steele. Couldn't happen to a nicer guy.

Nate and Bobby,

Thanks for taking the time to meet with us this morning. Any support you can give us on the exchange right now would be most helpful. I've attached a letter Governor Fallin sent to all legislators earlier in the week outlining her support for the exchange as well as some FAQs we've put together. I'm also attaching the Heritage Foundation's latest report "A Lawmakers Guide to Health Insurance Exchanges." Below is also a list of target Senators who we may need help with.

Office of Governor Mary Fallin

Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange: 5 Frequently Asked Questions

- What is a health insurance exchange?

Health insurance exchanges are online portals where consumers can get information about various health insurance plans, compare prices and ultimately purchase health insurance. The Oklahoma-based exchange that Governor Mary Fallin supports will be a patient-centered, pro-market exchange consistent with her conservative values. The purpose of the exchange will be to empower consumers with information and to use free market principles to contain health insurance costs.

The premiere conservative think tank in the nation, the Heritage Foundation, supports the creation of these exchanges. In a March 21, 2011 document entitled "A State Lawmaker's Guide to Health Insurance Exchanges," the Heritage Foundation outlines the necessity of developing a state exchange in the immediate future.

- What happens if Oklahoma does not establish its own exchange?

If a state does not establish its own health insurance exchange, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA, also known as "ObamaCare") mandates that President Obama's HHS Secretary is required to establish a federally run exchange in that state. As the Heritage Foundation writes, "...the sooner a state declares 'non-compliance' with the PPACA, the sooner HHS will build an exchange in that state to act as a federal insurance regulator." In other words, a state that does not build its own insurance exchange is resigning itself to the presence of a federally designed, federally run exchange.

The best way to ward off a federal takeover of that kind is to pursue what the Heritage Foundation calls "defensive" reform efforts to block federal interference. One of those defensive efforts is the creation of a market-based exchange that Governor Fallin and other conservative lawmakers are seeking to create.

- President Obama says he supports exchanges and one element of ObamaCare is the creation of a federal exchange. How can exchanges be a conservative idea?

The Heritage Foundation writes:

Consumer-Centered Exchanges vs. ObamaCare Exchanges

"The first point to understand is that the entire design for health insurance exchanges in the PPACA is a perversion of the core concept of what is an otherwise sound approach to improving health insurance markets. ... It is important to recognize that it is ObamaCare's perversion of the exchanges, not the original concept itself, that is the problem. ... Consequently, the PPACA's misappropriation of the term 'health insurance exchange' should not deter state lawmakers from pursuing their own defined-contribution, market-based reforms that employ state exchanges to perform purely administrative functions.”

- How much will it cost to build a health insurance exchange in Oklahoma? How will we pay for it?

Cost estimates vary based on the composition and governance of the exchange. Currently, the plans for an Oklahoma exchange are in their infancy. HB 2130, which the governor is asking lawmakers to support, creates a governing board for the Oklahoma exchange which will, over the course of the next months and years, answer that question. The governor’s office and the state department of health are also holding regular “stakeholder meetings” to allow consumers, industry professionals and concerned citizens to weigh in on what they would like to see in an exchange.

Currently, it will be a challenge for the state of Oklahoma to afford the cost of implementing and maintaining a health insurance exchange on its own. The state is facing a $500 million budget shortfall and cuts to the department of health are expected to be at least 3% in the next fiscal year.

Fortunately, Oklahoma has received a $54 million Early Innovator Grant from the federal government. That does not mean, however, it will cost $54 million to establish and run an exchange. Governor Fallin plans on returning any money the state does not use.

- Does accepting federal money mean that Oklahoma is agreeing to implement ObamaCare?

No. The Early Innovator Grant was awarded to Oklahoma to be used to build a state-based exchange. The Oklahoma legislature had already passed a bill authorizing the creation of such an exchange; the grant simply provides the money needed to fund it. Governor Fallin will not support any legislation that forces ObamaCare on the state of Oklahoma.

Thanks for taking the time to meet with us this morning. Any support you can give us on the exchange right now would be most helpful. I've attached a letter Governor Fallin sent to all legislators earlier in the week outlining her support for the exchange as well as some FAQs we've put together. I'm also attaching the Heritage Foundation's latest report "A Lawmakers Guide to Health Insurance Exchanges." Below is also a list of target Senators who we may need help with.

Office of Governor Mary Fallin

Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange: 5 Frequently Asked Questions

- What is a health insurance exchange?

Health insurance exchanges are online portals where consumers can get information about various health insurance plans, compare prices and ultimately purchase health insurance. The Oklahoma-based exchange that Governor Mary Fallin supports will be a patient-centered, pro-market exchange consistent with her conservative values. The purpose of the exchange will be to empower consumers with information and to use free market principles to contain health insurance costs.

The premiere conservative think tank in the nation, the Heritage Foundation, supports the creation of these exchanges. In a March 21, 2011 document entitled "A State Lawmaker's Guide to Health Insurance Exchanges," the Heritage Foundation outlines the necessity of developing a state exchange in the immediate future.

- What happens if Oklahoma does not establish its own exchange?

If a state does not establish its own health insurance exchange, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA, also known as "ObamaCare") mandates that President Obama's HHS Secretary is required to establish a federally run exchange in that state. As the Heritage Foundation writes, "...the sooner a state declares 'non-compliance' with the PPACA, the sooner HHS will build an exchange in that state to act as a federal insurance regulator." In other words, a state that does not build its own insurance exchange is resigning itself to the presence of a federally designed, federally run exchange.

The best way to ward off a federal takeover of that kind is to pursue what the Heritage Foundation calls "defensive" reform efforts to block federal interference. One of those defensive efforts is the creation of a market-based exchange that Governor Fallin and other conservative lawmakers are seeking to create.

RE: Oklahoma Healthcare Exchange – ADVISORY WORK GROUP Signup Information

Greetings Oklahoma Healthcare Exchange Stakeholders & Interested Parties:

In follow up to the previous email you were sent advising you of the public meeting to be held on January 26th, 10:30 a.m.-12:00 p.m. at the ODMHSAS Training Center in the Shepherd Mall, this email contains information regarding Advisory Work Groups to be formed.

Developing a common understanding of what an Oklahoma State Healthcare Exchange must do is a critical first step in the creation of a strategic road map for the Exchange. To accomplish this step, Key Advisory Work Groups and sub-groups will be formed to develop recommendations on Exchange related issues. Each Work Group and sub-group will be responsible to meet, discuss and perform research to develop recommendations and advise on language to be used for the development of a strategic plan for the Exchange. Advisory Work Group participation will require an estimated 3 month commitment.

Following are Key Issues, around which Advisory Work Groups and sub-groups will be created:

1. Governance & Administrative Structure
2. Eligibility Process & Infrastructure
3. Enrollment
4. Information Technology

5. Carrier & Plan Selection
6. Financial Management
7. Education & Marketing

Attached to this email is a spreadsheet listing questions and considerations for each of the seven Key Issues. The spreadsheet also identifies the Project Manager who will act as liaison for each Advisory Work Group. Please keep in mind that the list of questions and considerations is not intended to be exhaustive and is provided as a tool which can be used by the Advisory Work Groups to initiate and focus group discussions. Each Advisory Work Group will be provided additional resources by the Project Managers as well as be responsible to perform independent research on its assigned Key Issue.

In preparation of our meeting next Wednesday, please review the attached list and take careful consideration as to which Advisory Work Group(s) you would like to participate. Advisory Work Group and sub-group participation will be assigned based upon the knowledge, demonstrated leadership experience and areas of expertise of each participant as well as each participant's ability to commit the time, effort and resources needed to adequately address the assigned Key Issue. In most cases participants will be assigned to the Advisory Work Group(s) of their choice.

Your active participation will be a deciding factor in determining Oklahoma's success in the development of an Exchange. Additional information about the formation and requirements of the Work Groups will be provided at the January 26th, 10:30am -12:00pm, General Stakeholder meeting. We look forward to seeing you then to further discuss your participation in an Advisory Work Group.

Thank you!

Glen, Lewis,
Ya'll two definitely need to be on one of these sub-groups. I probably should too. We all hate Obamacare, but the train has left the station and our job now is to INFLUENCE the process and INFORM elected officials until Congress can shut this thing down. In the process, we may be able to set up a framework for a "Utah" market based exchange (which is evidently working quite well) to slide in place of the Federal monstrosity. Look...the AGENCIES are out in front on this....just like the guys at that Heritage conference told us would happen. We HAVE to stay informed and relevant to the process OR WE WILL GET ROLLED - its in my notes! I attached them again - just for giggles.

Has the Insurance department seen all of the insurance/reinsurance related sections? They look fine to me, but they are over my head. Just want to make sure that they will not have any positions that contradict what we are saying.

If you think they will be fine with them that is probably enough...

Nicole, Excellent job. I have also sent this to Katie but I highlighted one area I wondered if it was even necessary to say. Do we need to propose an option on that section?

"Governor Fallin has decided to postpone an announcement on the future of health insurance exchanges in Oklahoma. She will take advantage of the extension by continuing to study the issue and evaluate the state's options." - AW

We do not have a timeline for when the announcement will take place but we do expect one sooner rather than later.

Liberty Forge is a social network devoted to connecting voters and groups who support a constitutionally limited government. Since elections are the only part of our Republic that is democratic, and the representative to citizen ratio is so low, it only makes sense to have a discussion forum to enable voters to vet candidates and issues. The power of Liberty Forge is in assigning a discussion forum to each individual voting district. As a member you enroll in your voting district discussion groups and focus your time and energy on the aspects of government which you have the most power and responsibility to effect.

1) A Media Advisory issued July 8th by the Governor's office has confirmed that Governor Mary Fallin will be attending the NGA Conference in Salt Lake City, Utah July 13-17, 2011.

Up to now, calls and emails to OK Governor Mary Fallin questioning her participation at the upcoming NGA U.S.-China Governors Forum
<<http://et.ratepoint.com/275e8ee73ebac3280abecc3e6dfb0a57/59d47266a5a7855a8710b7df9cf8aa8a>> in Salt Lake City, Utah have gone unanswered.

Additional emails and calls are needed now that her attendance has been confirmed – just exactly what are her intentions at this conference?

U.S. - China - Selling US Out

OK-SAFE, Inc. 7/8/11 - The following itemizes some, only some, of the activities the federal and state governments, and universities, are actively engaged in that demonstrate the deepening involvement with the Communist Chinese (and with Russia), particularly through a mechanism called "foreign direct investment."

Foreign direct investment is defined as "investment in the United States by foreign citizens; often involves majority stock ownership of an enterprise;" and "joint ventures between foreign and U.S. companies." Read more.

This is only a partial list of activities in which our "leaders" are engaged. They pooh-poo and ridicule alarmed citizens' concerns about where this is ultimately headed: the dramatic decline of the U.S., elevation of "Technology" to a god-like position, and "foreign" interests treated as superior to our own.

Our children are being taught that this change is right, inevitable, and a natural progression of world affairs.

This change has been orchestrated and the end-game is clear - the end of America as we've known it. Are we willing to turn back to the one true God yet?

ROPE Article Appears in American Thinker

Based on Jenni's (ROPE's) excellent research document entitled Common Core State Standards and Race to the Top - An Introduction to Marxism 101 <<http://et.ratepoint.com/3c9c51a679b8869c24a3cac4cc85b82a/59d47266a5a7855a8710b7df9cf8aa8a>> this article is a must read for those serious about understanding the direction education in Oklahoma and the U.S. has headed.

Understanding the truth about public education is critical not only to making wise decisions about the education of your own children, but to understanding the political doublespeak issuing from state officials. Those officials are not telling you the truth.

Health Exchange Update - Public Meetings

OK-SAFE, 7/8/11 - The substitute language for the failed HB 2130 (HUB board bill, establishing governance of the health insurance exchange) finally appeared in SB 971 <<http://et.ratepoint.com/8b5d4c5505d9c1c5900784693b16752a/59d47266a5a7855a8710b7df9cf8aa8a>>, introduced on 4/27/11.

Due to all the calls, emails and legislative visits by the Oklahoma grassroots, OK leadership decided not to hear SB 971, choosing instead to form a special joint legislative committee to study the issue this fall.

This joint committee is to begin meeting in early September.

Sen. Gary Stanislawski, R-Tulsa, and Rep. Glen Mulready, R-Tulsa, are the leaders of this special joint legislative committee. This committee is supposed to be conducted with an open mind, giving legislators an opportunity to study how the state should respond to the federal mandate to create a state health insurance exchange.

Based on comments made at a July 5th meeting, it is evident that Rep. Glen Mulready has already made up his mind on how the state should proceed - the state should create a state-based insurance exchange, despite the objections and warnings against such an exchange. Apparently he has already been in discussion with tech companies about its' development.

If one of the leaders of the joint committee has already made up his mind on how the state will proceed, just what is the purpose of the joint committee meetings and public input? To give political coverage?

These public meetings should be attended by anyone with concerns about the controversial health care reform act.

Trans-Texas Corridor Finally Dead? Well, mostly dead.

by Terri Hall, July 7, 2011

The people of Texas scored a big victory with the recent repeal of the Trans Texas Corridor (TTC) from state statute. Governor Rick Perry even signed it. That ought to give us pause. The TTC is Perry's legacy building project, one he still defends despite the massive grassroots uprising against it. So why would he sign it?

Because it's not truly dead. Like the famous line in the film Princess Bride, it's mostly dead. During the 82nd Texas Legislative Session that ended May 30, the final repeal of the Trans Texas Corridor made it to the Governor's desk, but with the passage of several key bills, it essentially revives a Trans Texas Corridor-style sale of Texas infrastructure through controversial public private partnerships (PPPs). Several segments of TTC-69 (most are connections to the Port of Houston) are authorized in SB 1420 and will move forward piece by piece as PPPs.

Hi Alex,

Thanks for the note. Reached out to see if you'd be interested in being a part of a series called Resisting Obamacare. So far we've featured Gov. Rick Scott and Gov. Rick Perry. We'd love to share Gov. Fallin's perspective with our readers on what resisting Obamacare looks like in Oklahoma. Is it refusing to implement? Waiting for the election? You get the point.

They're typically 500-850 words. We'd run it shortly after receiving it. We'd want it to be exclusive to The Washington Times for 24 hours and for any outlets running it after that to give us credit.

Please let me know if we may feature the Governor as part of this series.

Thanks much,

Zeke mentioned that he is working on a story on the Governor's practice of invoking privilege in some instances. He asked stuff like "isn't the Governor committed to the spirit of Open Records?" I responded that she has the most open administration in history. All her decisions are public and filed of record (unlike previous gov's), she has more documents available for public view via internet, has greater accountability of assets and greater access to public spending information. He asked, "isn't not responding to our requests (as some did in the past) the same as telling us that we can't have documents?" I said no, that this reflects a greater degree of transparency since we tell you what we do and allow you to both report on our actions or take other appropriate action. We are committed to being transparent in all our actions.

Alex, I assume he will reach out to you on this issue. Feel free to call if you have any questions.

Dear Mr. Mullins,

While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

Thanks!
Zeke

Subject: RE: Open Records discussion

I really appreciate you taking time to come in to discuss this issue. In my view, the Open Records Act recognizes the three traditional sources of privilege. Privileges may originate through Constitutional provisions, statutory grant, or judicial common law principles. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privileged waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information who's disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "'purely factual' material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is "actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated." Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include "whether the document '(i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency."

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency's investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied "whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation" and "if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue." Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

Mr. Mullins-

In our meeting Nov. 14, you denied a substantive portion of a Nov. 8 open records request submitted to the Oklahoma governor's office by The Oklahoman. State law requires the government to favor public access to records over exemption. Please cite which part of the law exempts you from allowing public access to those records.

He is baffled that we cannot store thousands of voicemails and give them to him. I wrote:

Does your voicemail system allow you to store thousands of voicemails? Ours does not. We must listen to them and then delete them, otherwise no one else can leave voicemails.

Thank you for the statistics. I have to also say I know of no voice mail system that allows you to listen to a message and determine what the caller had to say that then cannot save that message to be listened to again. Even the most primitive answering machine could do that. I have to ask then what kind of system are you using because otherwise it sounds like you listened to the messages and then made the decision to erase them. That would be contrary to the Open Records Law. I realize you have had recent issues with the law and do not want to add to those problems but I have to tell you, your explanation so far falls short of explaining why citizen messages to the chief executive of the state of Oklahoma cannot be maintained as required by the Open Records Law.

How about emails, I would consider those to be an Open Record also so are those available instead?

Since the governor had time for Fox news, how about her own statewide public television network. I am asking for an interview for her reasons behind refusing expansion of Medicaid and not setting up a health care exchange. Would it be possible to do this interview sometime over the next three days?

I would also like to ask her about the public reaction to her decision. Opinion pages and blogs have almost all been negative to the decision. I have to also say I know of no voice mail system that allows you to listen to a message and determine what the caller had to say that then cannot save that message to be listened to again. Even the most primitive answering machine could do that. I have to ask then what kind of system are you using because otherwise it sounds like you listened to the messages and then made the decision to erase them. That would be contrary to the Open Records Law. I realize you have had recent issues with the law and do not want to add to those problems but I have to tell you, your explanation so far falls short of explaining why citizen messages to the chief executive of the state of Oklahoma cannot be maintained as required by the Open Records Law.

How about emails, I would consider those to be an Open Record also so are those available instead?

Thank you for your assistance so far

As predicted, OETA asking for constituent correspondence on Medicaid expansion and insurance exchange. I would like to be able to get these documents to him as quickly as possible, given all our other Open Records woes. If its possible to get them to him today, lets do that.

He is baffled that we cannot store thousands of voicemails and give them to him. I wrote:

We have had hundreds, if not thousands, of voice messages on the issue of health insurance exchanges and Medicaid expansion (as the chart I sent you shows). Does your voicemail system allow you to store thousands of voicemails? Ours does not. We must listen to them and then delete them, otherwise no one else can leave voicemails.

Dear Mr. Mullins,

While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

Thanks!

I responded that she has the most open administration in history. All her decisions are public and filed of record (unlike previous gov's), she has more documents available for public view via internet, has greater accountability of assets and greater access to public spending information. He asked, "isn't not responding to our requests (as some did in the past) the same as telling us that we can't have documents?" I said no, that this reflects a greater degree of transparency since we tell you what we do and allow you to both report on our actions or take other appropriate action. Subject: RE: Open Records discussion

I really appreciate you taking time to come in to discuss this issue. In my view, the Open Records Act recognizes the three traditional sources of privilege. Privileges may originate through Constitutional provisions, statutory grant, or judicial common law principles. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privilege waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information whose disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "'purely factual' material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is "'actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated.'" Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include "whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency."

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency's investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied "whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation" and "if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue." Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

In our meeting Nov. 14, you denied a substantive portion of a Nov. 8 open records request submitted to the Oklahoma governor's office by The Oklahoman. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privilege waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information whose disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "'purely factual' material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is "'actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated.'" Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include "whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency."

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency's investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied "whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation" and "if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue." Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

Neither of these citations come from Oklahoma law or Oklahoma court decisions. So is she violating that pledge?"

Lets think about how to answer this. Hows this for a start:

Governor Fallin believes the Open Records Act exists to provide the public access to documents that include xyz (please help with this!). She does not believe it is intended to allow access to conversations between executive branch staff members working on draft documents, brainstorming on public policy ideas, offering advice and counsel to the governor, or otherwise acting in an advisory role. Eliminating the privacy of those communications is outside of the scope of the Open Records Act and would prevent the governor and her staff members from having open, candid conversations about public policy using email."

Dear Mr. Mullins,
While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privileged waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information whose disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "purely factual" material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is "actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated." Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include "whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency."

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency’s investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied “whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation” and “if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue.” Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

Mr. Mullins-

In our meeting Nov. 14, you denied a substantive portion of a Nov. 8 open records request submitted to the Oklahoma governor's office by The Oklahoman. Zeke mentioned that he is working on a story on the Governor's practice of invoking privilege in some instances. He asked stuff like "isn't the Governor committed to the spirit of Open Records?" I responded that she has the most open administration in history. All her decisions are public and filed of record (unlike previous gov's), she has more documents available for public view via internet, has greater accountability of assets and greater access to public spending information. He asked, "isn't not responding to our requests (as some did in the past) the same as telling us that we can't have documents?" I said no, that this reflects a greater degree of transparency since we tell you what we do and allow you to both report on our actions or take other appropriate action. We are committed to being transparent in all our actions.

Alex, I assume he will reach out to you on this issue. Feel free to call if you have any questions.

Dear Mr. Mullins,

While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

Thanks!

Subject: RE: Open Records discussion

I really appreciate you taking time to come in to discuss this issue. In my view, the Open Records Act recognizes the three traditional sources of privilege. Privileges may originate through Constitutional provisions, statutory grant, or judicial common law principles. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privileged waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information who's disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and “deliberative.” A document is predecisional if it was “prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision.” The agency claiming privilege “must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency.” But, the privilege does not extend to “‘purely factual’ material” or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing “the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision.” This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency’s deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is “actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated.” Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include “whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency.”

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency’s investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client’s attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party’s representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party’s representatives. The “anticipation of litigation” test is satisfied “whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation” and “if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue.” Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client’s attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party’s representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party’s representatives. The “anticipation of litigation” test is satisfied “whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation” and “if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue.” Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

Zeke mentioned that he is working on a story on the Governor's practice of invoking privilege in some instances. He asked stuff like "isn't the Governor committed to the spirit of Open Records?" I responded that she has the most open administration in history. All her decisions are public and filed of record (unlike previous gov's), she has more documents available for public view via internet, has greater accountability of assets and greater access to public spending information. He asked, "isn't not responding to our requests (as some did in the past) the same as telling us that we can't have documents?" I said no, that this reflects a greater degree of transparency since we tell you what we do and allow you to both report on our actions or take other appropriate action. We are committed to being transparent in all our actions.

Alex, I assume he will reach out to you on this issue. Feel free to call if you have any questions.

Dear Mr. Mullins,

While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

Thanks!

Subject: RE: Open Records discussion

I really appreciate you taking time to come in to discuss this issue. In my view, the Open Records Act recognizes the three traditional sources of privilege. Privileges may originate through Constitutional provisions, statutory grant, or judicial common law principles. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privileged waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information who's disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "'purely factual' material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is "actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated." Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include "whether the document '(i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency."

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency's investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied "whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation" and "if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue." Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information who's disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "purely factual" material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is "actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated." Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include "whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency."

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency's investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied "whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation" and "if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue." Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

Hi Alex. This is Clifton Adcock at the Oklahoma Gazette. You will find three Open Records requests attached. The first is for e-mails, memos, or other documents related to both Gov. Fallin's rejection of the $54 million in federal "early innovator" funding regarding health care exchanges. The second is regarding Gov. Fallin's decision on the state not setting up a health care exchange and the Governor's decision not to expand medicare. The third request is seeking memos, e-mails or other written communication regarding the decision to deny earlier open records requests for the previous two items. If possible, let me know about how long you anticipate it will take to fill these requests. Thank you.

Dear Mr. Mullins,

While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

Thanks!
Zeke

Subject: RE: Open Records discussion

I really appreciate you taking time to come in to discuss this issue. In my view, the Open Records Act recognizes the three traditional sources of privilege. Privileges may originate through Constitutional provisions, statutory grant, or judicial common law principles. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privileged waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information who's disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "purely factual" material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is "actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated." Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include "whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency."

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency's investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied "whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation" and "if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue." Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. 6. Any and all planning documents and correspondence in regards to the development of, or the preparing of a blueprint for the presentation of, a state, federal, or state-federal health care exchange.

I acknowledge that not all government-held information is open to the public. However, the Oklahoma Supreme Court in 2003 said the party claiming non-disclosure carries the burden to prove that an exemption applies.[1] If you claim such an exemption to my request under the Oklahoma Open Records Act, please cite in writing the specific statutory exemption.

I note that Oklahomans "are vested with the inherent right to know and be fully informed about their government" and that the purpose of the Oklahoma Open Records Act is "to ensure and facilitate the public's right of access to and review of government records so they may efficiently and intelligently exercise their inherent political power." [2] Given the intent of the Open Records Act, the Oklahoma Supreme Court said in 1986, government officials must consider in ruling on records requests that "disclosure is to be favored over a finding of exemption." [3]

Please note that I am asking to inspect these records. I reserve, however, the right to request copies when the records are examined.

The Oklahoma Open Records Act prohibits the charging of a search fee when the release of the "documents is in the public interest, including, but not limited to, release to the news media, scholars, authors and taxpayers seeking to determine whether those entrusted with the affairs of the government are honestly, faithfully, and competently performing their duties as public servants.”[4] I am a reporter for The Oklahoman, and I represent the citizens of Oklahoma who are vested in ensuring their government is responsive to their wishes and needs, particularly when the issue pertains to the spending of, or planned spending of, taxpayer dollars. My request clearly falls within this provision of the Open Records Act and no search fee should be charged for this request.

The Oklahoma Open Records Act requires that public bodies provide “prompt, reasonable access to its records,”[5] which Attorney General Drew Edmondson in 1999 defined as meaning “only the time required to locate and compile the public records.”[6] Please respond to this request by no later than Nov. 12, 2012.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

Zeke Campfield

The reality is that there will be more people like this, including e paper. And if in fact we are safe in re-elect, what are we worried about?(except the legislature screaming, but if they have a better idea...)

Dear Ms. Northrup and Ms. Altshuler,

The national election is over and like or not (Not!), we are going to have to deal with prospect of Obamacare being implemented in Oklahoma. We can take the high road and do it ourselves in a way that makes sense in Oklahoma or we can face the prospect of a punitive installation of a Federal Exchange.

Governor Fallin needs to take a leadership position in this effort to do something positive to protect the interests of Oklahomans. We can no longer have our state government held hostage by a minority of over zealous, ultra-right wing fanatics. Governor Fallin risks losing the support of many of us conservative realists who have supported her for many years.

There is plenty of assistance in the wings waiting to be called into action to get a state exchange in place and we have been given additional time by HHS to make it a reality. We are not supporting Obamacare in principle, but making certain Oklahoma's principles are preserved in the exchange process to the greatest extent possible.

Many of us have been working within the insurance industry for years to design a working system. We believe that there will never be a better opportunity to have flexibility in design than there is right now.

Please share this with Governor Fallin and urge her to do the "right" thing.

Thank you for your time and support.

The Oklahoman Editorial | Published: July 31, 2012 <image002.gif>16

SUPPORTERS of President Barack Obama's health care law claim conservatives offer no alternative other than a return to an untenable status quo.

In reality, Republicans have produced bold reform proposals that would allow officials to both repeal and replace Obamacare.

Oklahoma's own U.S. Sen. Tom Coburn, R-Muskogee, introduced the Patients' Choice Act in 2009 (along with U.S. Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., and others.)

Coburn's plan would grant individuals the same tax advantages employers get for purchasing health insurance. That would greatly benefit Oklahoma's countless self-employed farmers, ranchers and other entrepreneurs, as well as uninsured workers.

Coburn's bill also gives every American a $2,290 tax credit (or $5,710 per family) to buy health insurance. The tax credit would cover the employee's share of a policy while the employer continues to cover the rest, as occurs currently. Any remaining tax credit money could be used for a health savings account covering routine medical expenses.

The legislation reforms Medicaid by giving low-income families an additional $5,000 on top of their tax credit. That would provide a family $10,710 to buy insurance coverage outside of Medicaid. Coburn notes that 40 percent of doctors and hospitals nationally refuse to accept Medicaid patients due to low payments. His plan would therefore improve low-income families' access to health care.

On the other hand, Obamacare doesn't address Medicaid's problems; it merely supersedes the program.

Coburn's bill calls for state insurance exchanges giving citizens access to a wide range of insurance products with guaranteed coverage regardless of age or pre-existing conditions. Unlike Obamacare, Coburn's plan isn't financed by cutting Medicare funding, and it doesn't require new spending or new taxes. One independent estimate predicted Coburn's bill could save $70 billion and provide coverage to a majority of uninsured Americans.

Ryan, budget guru of the U.S. House, has called for transforming Medicare to a premium-support payment for currently younger workers and increasing competitive bidding in the system. He also wants to convert the federal share of Medicaid spending into a block grant for states, indexed for inflation and population growth, allowing state-level reforms.

Liberals who decry repeal efforts act as though Obamacare has resolved health care problems. It hasn't. Surveys indicate many experienced doctors are considering retirement due to the law and fewer people may enter the medical profession.

Steve Jacob, adjunct faculty with the University of North Texas Health Science Center, estimates the United States will need to produce an additional 24,000 doctors annually for 20 years to meet demand under Obamacare. He notes one in four Oklahoma physicians is 60 or older, and Oklahoma has only 69 primary-care physicians for every 100,000 residents.

Health care costs are predicted to skyrocket under Obamacare. Jacob estimates the average family premium in Oklahoma will be $22,128 by 2020 under Obamacare, compared with $13,006 in 2010. Oklahoma employees' share will nearly double while deductibles will surge to $5,200 from $1,977. The average Oklahoma employee share of the premium and deductible combined would comprise about 12.5 percent of median household income.

Obamacare is clearly unsustainable. It lacks buy-in from patients and doctors; its financial impact on government finance and private incomes will be devastating.

Obamacare won't improve our health care woes. Coburn and Ryan show there are sustainable alternatives to improve patient coverage without breaking the bank.

Dear Governors:

Thank you for joining what I believe to have been a very productive healthcare conference call today. While we acknowledge that as governors we must do what is best for our unique states, we agreed that we must work together to have the ability to have reasoned and substantive discussions with the Administration. As requested, unless you are under pressure from your constituencies to move forward before November 16th, we request that you “keep your powder dry” until that date. We look forward to additional conversations in Las Vegas.

Today, HHS sent a letter indicating that while they were: 1) pushing back the deadline for a state to decide on a partnership exchange, and 2) pushing back the deadline to submit your state-based exchange blueprint, the deadline to announce if you will build a state based exchange is still November 16th. This morning, we learned that very few governors were at the point where they had enough information to make such a decision before November 16th due to the lack of information HHS has provided governors. Thus, as discussed on the conference call, Governor Jindal and I will send a letter to President Obama on Monday or Tuesday reiterating our unanswered questions and requesting a meeting with the President. Please act and then forward to your friends in Oklahoma and around the country!!

We can still stop Obamacare! Just make one phone call today!!

Summary:

The Affordable Care Act (Obamacare) can be largely nullified by strong states taking a stand. If Oklahoma refuses to establish a "state health care exchange", then even if the Federal government forcibly establishes their own within our state, they do not have the power to impose fines for non-participation. Without the ability to impose fines for non-participation, a substantial part of this terrible bill will be neutered. Our Oklahoma Attorney General has filed suit against the Federal Government already on this very issue.

If many states stand strong and refuse to establish their own state health care exchanges and the U.S. House of Representatives refuses to fund other parts of Obamacare, then we can still defeat this federal encroachment that will destroy American healthcare and further bankrupt our nation.

Call Governor Fallin and let her know that you oppose the establishment of ANY Health Care Exchange; 405-521-2342 Office, 405-521-3353 Fax, or e-mail at www.ok.gov/governor.

The Details on Obamacare:

- The ultimate goal is socialized medicine (a single payer system controlled by the federal government). Imagine one giant VA Hospital to care for all of America.
- The government controls the fees paid to doctors and hospitals, therefore doctors will be leaving the profession in droves as their practices cannot afford to survive on these drastically reduced fees.
- The increased number of citizens on the "Medicare/Obamacare" roles will overwhelm the health care system as simultaneously doctors leave the practice of medicine because of price controls and added bureaucratic costs causing long lines and the rationing of medical services.
- Competition will be crushed as initially the Federal government will provide subsidies to individuals who participate in the "exchange". This will cause prices of certain insurance products to be artificially lower than others because of the temporary government subsidy. Once the competition (non-subsidized health care plans) goes out of business for a lack of business, then the single payer government system will be all that is left.
- The government will attempt to penalize (tax) businesses if their employees choose to participate in the heavily government subsidized exchanges (Won't this help create jobs). However, the Affordable Care Act doesn't provide the means of collecting this penalty UNLESS A STATE ESTABLISHES AN EXCHANGE!
- Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt is suing the government over this issue.
- Socialized medicine NEVER works!!
- Your body is your most personal "private property". Once the central government assumes the care of your body, then they also assume control over your body and you become an asset of the "state" rather than the state serving you as a citizen. "Hello, Comrade!"
- This is a BIG attack on liberty. It's time to act.

Subject: Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange

Dear Ms. Northrup and Ms. Altshuler,

The national election is over and like or not (Not!), we are going to have to deal with prospect of Obamacare being implemented in Oklahoma. We can take the high road and do it ourselves in a way that makes sense in Oklahoma or we can face the prospect of a punitive installation of a Federal Exchange.

Governor Fallin needs to take a leadership position in this effort to do something positive to protect the interests of Oklahomans. We can no longer have our state government held hostage by a minority of over zealous, ultra-right wing fanatics. Governor Fallin risks losing the support of many of us conservative realists who have supported her for many years.

There is plenty of assistance in the wings waiting to be called into action to get a state exchange in place and we have been given additional time by HHS to make it a reality. We are not supporting Obamacare in principle, but making certain Oklahoma's principles are preserved in the exchange process to the greatest extent possible.

Many of us have been working within the insurance industry for years to design a working system. We believe that there will never be a better opportunity to have flexibility in design than there is right now.

Please share this with Governor Fallin and urge her to do the "right" thing.

Thank you for your time and support.

Dana,

We are excited that Governor Romney will now be joining us in Aspen next week. Due to his attendance, there are going to be a few changes to the RGA schedule that I wanted to make you aware of as well as an additional ask that we'd like your Governor to attend. I've pasted below our schedule, and highlighted where we would now like your Governor to join Governor Romney. His attendance is not public, but we wanted the Governors to know. Can you please review this and let me know if your Governor will participate in these new events?

Please let me know if you have any questions!

*On June 28, the Supreme Court ruled on the Patient limiting the power of the federal government to coerce state Medicaid expansions. Regarding the Medicaid expansion, the court ruled that the government could not compel states to expand Medicaid by threatening to withhold federal money to existing Medicaid programs. This presents an opportunity for governors to opt out of the expansion without losing their existing share of federal Medicaid funding. Within hours of the decision, Republican governors in several states said they were likely to oppose expanding the program. In addition to the Medicaid piece, governors must also decide whether to establish a state-administered health insurance exchange. This panel examines the decisions confronting governors, along with the remaining political, regulatory and legal uncertainties surrounding the law and its impact on businesses.

Panel Discussion II: State Solutions: Economic Growth in the Obama Era

Republican governors are providing a clear contrast to the failed economic policies of the Obama administration. Under President Obama, the nation has endured 41 consecutive months with the unemployment rate over 8 percent and the most recent quarter was the worst quarter of job creation in 2 years. Despite the national headwinds, GOP-led states are experiencing economic success. States with Republican governors are adding jobs at a faster pace than their Democratic counterparts and states that elected new Republican governors in 2010 have seen their unemployment rates drop nearly 50 percent more than states with new Democratic governors. In July, CNBC released its annual list of best states for business, and Republican governors led the way. CNBC found that 12 of the 15 top states for business have GOP governors. Instead of emulating the policies of Republican governors which encourage entrepreneurship and job creators, the Obama administration continues to impede upon the states with overregulation and the threat of higher taxes. This panel explores how governors can work with business leaders to ensure the private sector adds jobs

The slow-motion collapse of the government status quo across the Western world is obvious, but the reality is the opposite of what Twain said about Wagner's music—it's worse than it sounds. That's the message of a recent report from Richard Ravitch and Paul Volcker that deserves far more attention than it has received.

Since 2010 the former New York Lieutenant Governor and Federal Reserve Chairman have been scrutinizing the balance sheets of six of the largest states—California, Illinois, New Jersey, New York, Texas and Virginia. Their conclusions make clear that Washington is not the only part of the government headed for the fiscal cliff.

Some of the problems the State Budget Crisis Task Force identifies are familiar: growing health-care spending and unfunded pension liabilities, for example. Others are not. Taking in "the totality of the problems," Messrs. Ravitch and Volcker write, "the storm warnings are very serious" and the "existing trajectory of state spending, taxation and administrative practices cannot be sustained."

- Medicaid. This state-federal program that increasingly pays for middle-class health care is the major albatross. Spending has grown faster than the economy every year since the 1960s, 7.2% annually over the last decade. It is now the largest part of state budgets—24% on average—and "the imbalance (or structural budget gap) can no longer be absorbed without significant cuts to other essential state programs like education or unpopular tax increases or both."

The panel also found that these costs are driven by states choosing to increase enrollment and create new benefits, rather than by rising underlying medical costs. One of four New Yorkers is on Medicaid, and 70% of the coverage is not required by federal law.

Some 29% of California's population is in Medicaid, though it only accounts for 11.8% of the Golden State budget, well below the national average of 15.8%. But that share is so low only because California spends so much on other things too. New York spends more on Medicaid than Florida, Texas and Pennsylvania —combined.

Medicaid costs over the decade are due to jump 8.1% annually, as required by the Affordable Care Act's expansion. Without ObamaCare, the yearly rise would still be 6.6%.

- Pensions. The burgeoning retirement benefits that states owe their public employees are well-known. But the Ravitch-Volcker task force emphasizes that, unlike federal entitlements, state pension obligations are almost always constitutionally protected. In other words, they are non-modifiable contracts, not merely political promises.

California has 62 state and local pension systems, Texas 75, Illinois 457. The 1990s and 2000s saw a reckless benefit build-out—California even increased pensions for people who had already retired. The states are supposed to prefund these liabilities so they are able to pay out once vested, but by and large they don't. States then assume an 8% return on their investments, which means they can stint on their taxpayer contributions and make their pensions look healthier than they really are.

The bad news is that today they already look like they belong on a gurney at Antietam, despite such gaming. Using more conservative assumptions, the task force calculates that the unfunded liabilities in the six states comes to $386.2 billion, or about a quarter of every dollar they will eventually be required to spend.

The task force also does the service of noticing retiree health insurance benefits, which states (unlike corporations) are not required to disclose. At a minimum, the panel figures the six states owe $539 billion, with no plan to defuse this time bomb.

Combining pensions and other special public employee privileges, Illinois's total unfunded liability works out to $15,800 per citizen—the only all-in data the task force could acquire. The true number may be far higher in the other five states.

- Budget gimmicks. The other novel Ravitch-Volcker observation is that no one knows for sure how deep these problems run, because the states are running bookkeeping cons that disguise the fiscal realities. The task force uncovered "chronic dependence" on gambits like assets sales, "temporary" raids on rainy-day funds, and shifting current spending to future years "as an ongoing budget strategy."

New York created an Albany-guaranteed "local government assistance corporation" to hide spending that would have run through the general fund.

Illinois is borrowing short term for cash flow to make unpaid bills.

California, Illinois, New Jersey and New York are even securitizing their future tax revenue—that is, not merely borrowing with bonds that must be serviced but selling their projected tax collections to investors. So to "balance" their budgets today, they're making it far harder to correct them in the future and locking in higher tax rates. Even Greece doesn't do that.

The message of the Ravitch-Volcker report is that some large portion of the states are replicating the dysfunctions of Washington—adding to entitlements that crowd out priorities like schools and bridges, and then concealing the real danger when they're not ignoring it. State and local governments now spend $2.5 trillion, and rising. Without 49 more Scott Walkers, the fiscal mayhem has only begun.

Obamacare Is Still Vulnerable

by Michael F. Cannon

This article appeared in National Review (Online) on November 9, 2012.

President Obama has won reelection, and his administration has asked state officials to decide by Friday, November 16, whether their state will create one of Obamacare's health-insurance "exchanges." States also have to decide whether to implement the law's massive expansion of Medicaid. The correct answer to both questions remains a resounding no.

State-created exchanges mean higher taxes, fewer jobs, and less protection of religious freedom. States are better off defaulting to a federal exchange. The Medicaid expansion is likewise too costly and risky a proposition. Republican Governors Association chairman Bob McDonnell (R., Va.) agrees, and has announced that Virginia will implement neither provision.

There are many arguments against creating exchanges.

First, states are under no obligation to create one.

Second, operating an Obamacare exchange would be illegal in 14 states. Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Utah, and Virginia have enacted either statutes or constitutional amendments (or both) forbidding state employees to participate in an essential exchange function: implementing Obamacare's individual and employer mandates.

Third, each exchange would cost its state an estimated $10 million to $100 million per year, necessitating tax increases.

Fourth, the November 16 deadline is no more real than the "deadlines" for implementing REAL ID, which have been pushed back repeatedly since 2008.

Fifth, states can always create an exchange later if they choose.

Sixth, a state-created exchange is not a state-controlled exchange. All exchanges will be controlled by Washington.

Seventh, Congress authorized no funds for federal "fallback" exchanges. So Washington may not be able to impose Exchanges on states at all.

Eighth, the Obama administration has yet to provide crucial information that states need before they can make an informed decision.

Ninth, creating an exchange sets state officials up to take the blame when Obamacare increases insurance premiums and denies care to the sick. State officials won't want their names on this disastrous mess.

Tenth, creating an exchange would be assisting in the creation of a "public option" that would drive domestic health-insurance carriers out of business through unfair competition.

Eleventh, Obamacare remains unpopular. The latest Kaiser Family Foundation poll found that only 38 percent of the public supports it.

Twelfth, defaulting to a federal exchange exempts a state's employers from the employer mandate — a tax of $2,000 per worker per year (the tax applies to companies with more than 59 employees, but for such companies that tax applies after the 30th employee, not the 59th). If all states did so, that would exempt 18 million Americans from the individual mandate's tax of $2,085 per family of four. Avoiding those taxes improves a state's prospects for job creation, and protects the conscience rights of employers and individuals whom the Obama administration is forcing to purchase contraceptives coverage.

Finally, rejecting an exchange reduces the federal deficit. Obamacare offers its deficit-financed subsidies to private health insurers only through state-created exchanges. If all states declined, federal deficits would fall by roughly $700 billion over ten years.

For similar reasons, states should decline to implement Obamacare's Medicaid expansion. The Supreme Court gave states that option. All states should exercise it.

Medicaid is rife with waste and fraud. It increases the cost of private health care and insurance, crowds out private health insurance and long-term-care insurance, and discourages enrollees from climbing the economic ladder. There is scant reliable evidence that Medicaid improves health outcomes, and no evidence that it is a cost-effective way of doing so.

My colleague Jagadeesh Gokhale estimates that expanding Medicaid will cost individual states up to $53 billion over the first ten years. That's before an emboldened President Obama follows through on his threats to shift more Medicaid costs to states.

Neither the states nor the federal government have the money to expand Medicaid. If all states politely decline, federal deficits will shrink by another $900 billion.

Now is not the time to go wobbly. Obamacare is still harmful and still unpopular. The presidential election was hardly a referendum, as it pitted the first person to enact Obamacare against the second person to enact it. Since the election, many state officials are reaffirming their opposition to both implementing exchanges and expanding Medicaid.

If enough states do so, Congress will have no choice but to reopen Obamacare. With a GOP-controlled House, opponents will be in a much stronger position than they were when this harmful law was enacted.

Dear mary,

To whoever screens Mary's email, I am an old friend of hers from OSU. She will confirm and she and the Insurance Commissioner need to read this.

I want to let Mary know that the National Association of Insurance Commissioners needs to abandon their idea to push aggregate stoploss limits higher. This is only an attempt to strengthen Obamacare by unfairly putting more risk on "smaller" self funded employers. (50-500 employees) These employers are currently doing the right thing, providing comprehensive health benefits to their employees and their families, mostly at the employer's expense.

Only three states have endorsed the change to the Stoploss Model Act; Minnesota, Hew hampshire and Vermont. The proposed change will make it harder for Oklahoma employers to provide affordable coverage by pushing them toward a national exchange. Please tell the Oklahoma Insurance Commissioner to vote NO and not change the Stoploss Model Act.

I have been in the health insurance business since graduating from OSU in 1978 and I have worked with partially self-funded employers plans nearly that entire time. If there are any questions, please call my cell any time. [REDACTED]

Glenn, please let me know if you would like to discuss...feel the current position is a very slippery slope and some huge Fallin supporters are teetering over this issue. I am not in that number, but the dialog over this is very strong and has raised the hackles of large OCPA donors to a level I have not see in the last 8 years as a Board member there. Denise, thanks for calling:

1. Gov will be in Lawton on the 15th at 10 for Army Reserve Center opening. Appears she then has a break til the lunch I am hosting at 12. Can I arrange to talk to her after the ceremony and before the luncheon ? Could even do it sitting in the car.
2. Did some checking last night after we spoke. According to Michael Carnuccio, both Bob Sullivan and Dan Zalodeck have placed calls in the last couple of weeks to Mary but Katie is the one returning the calls...not a great practice I don't think
3. Just so you know, on two or three occasions, last one yesterday, I have left voicemail for Katie and she does not return my calls. That is frustrating
4. Despite all intentions and all efforts , the Governor is facing being labeled as "bringing Obamacare to Oklahoma" if we stay with the federal money. She will be perceived, even tho it is NOT TRUE of abandoning the anti Obamacare position.
5. I have NEVER seen pushback like OCPA is getting from it's members and large donors like they are getting on this issue and they are insistent in their positions. House and Senate repubs are pushing daily for the OCPA position.....

Despite the financial pressures, I believe the Governor must withdraw from the $54m and do so soon in favor of other ways to fund the exchange initiative, which I fully and completely support .

I think you are right and I would like to talk to Mary on it. If I can do so before the 15th, please let me know .

Governor Fallin and Denise Northrup do not have stronger supporters than me. But the potential damage her and house and senate members is both severe and long lasting I think.

OCPA fully supports that the governor is trying to do....fully...but can't support using federal money to do it. We (you and I) should be working hard to ensure OCPA And gov work hand in hand.

Look forward to hearing from you. Lee

Brown urges Governor to halt implementation of Obamacare

OKLAHOMA CITY- Sen. Bill Brown, Chair of the Senate Committee on Retirement and Insurance, on Monday called upon Gov. Fallin to stand with other governors who have announced their refusal to implement the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) following the Supreme Court's recent ruling.

Calling the decision a blow to individual liberty and free markets, Brown said the state must refuse the expansion of Medicaid and federally-run market exchanges. Brown referenced Medicare as an example of the government's tendency to underestimate the cost of its far-reaching programs.

“It is a moral imperative that state leaders do everything in their power to halt the implementation of a program that strikes at the heart of our founding principles,” said Brown, R-Broken Arrow. “Medicare began in 1965 with a cost of $3 billion a year – that doubled every four years until 1980. In 2010, its cost was $523 billion, and now the Congressional Budget Office estimates that by 2020 the cost will be $932 billion.”

“The government has projected the cost of Obamacare will start at $1 trillion each year, which is obviously not a realistic assessment, and it will only get more expensive.”

At its inception, Brown added, the House Ways and Means Committee estimated Medicare would cost $12 billion yearly by 1990. Medicare expenditures totaled $107 billion in 1990.

Brown noted that prior to the Court’s ruling, the so-called penalty was to be justified under the Commerce Clause. Sixty votes would have been needed to repeal the law in the U.S. Senate, a virtual impossibility. Now that the Court has ruled the penalty a tax, Brown added, the law could be overturned with just 51 votes.

“Repeal of this law is a real possibility, and it needs to be the rallying cry for those who value our constitutional freedoms,” Brown said. “Oklahoma must join those states which have refused to implement any part of the Act, including Medicaid provisions and the Exchange program while repeal efforts are alive. I call on Gov. Fallin to stand with governors in other states and join the vital effort to resist and repeal this extraordinary federal power grab.”

The following is an important point for tonight's interview and moving forward that I was not 100 percent clear on until now:

Additional Medicaid expenses to the state of Oklahoma with a full Medicaid expansion as outlined under ObamaCare will be $475 million between now and 2020.

However, additional Medicaid costs to the state will STILL be $254 million even WITHOUT the Medicaid expansion. This is because people who are currently eligible for Medicaid but not enrolled are going to be pushed towards enrollment by the individual mandate aka tax under ObamaCare.

This is important for two reasons.

From a messaging standpoint, it means that we are NOT saving the state $475million by not expanding Medicaid. We are saving the state about $200 million dollars; we will still be on the hook for about $275 million.

From a practical standpoint, it means we are going to have to find more money to fund Medicaid under ObamaCare.

This may be repeating the obvious to everyone else, but it was not readily apparent to me.

Governor, I have met with katie and talked to the health care authority about this. I am happy to discuss it with you further on the way to Greta tonight, or you can call me at 405-535-7317

I was also glad to learn Oklahoma is not number one in per capita spending of the fifty states.

Thank you for your reply. If I can help, please let me know.

Dear Lew,

Thanks for your email last week. I appreciate your time and concerns but wanted to follow up with you regarding the claim you made in your email, as it simply does not match up with the facts of Oklahoma's current economic posture. According to data aggregated from the Office of Management and Budget, the U.S. Department of Commerce and the U.S. Census Bureau, Oklahoma ranked 42nd in per capita spending during FY 11, 40th in FY 12, and is projected to be ranked 38th in FY 13. While I agree there is room for improvement in these rankings, Oklahoma is far from the number one state in per capita spending in the United States. If you have data to contradict this information, I would greatly appreciate you sharing it, so that I may send it to my staff for further analysis and understanding.

I am proud that, since taking office, I have made government modernization and reduction of wasteful spending a cornerstone of my administration. This is clear by the numerous successful initiatives we have passed and signed into law over the last two years. My IT Modernization and Consolidation efforts have already saved the state approximately $130 million and are expected to save millions more. My energy efficiency initiative, which is in the process of being implemented as we speak, is projected to save the state $500 million. These are just a couple of examples of what I am doing to reduce spending and waste in state government and my appointment to leadership in the National Governors Association will only help me elevate these issues to the national level so that other states may continue to follow Oklahoma's example and I may also learn from other states' best practices.

Thank you again for your email and continued support.

Sincerely,

Mary

I really hate to see you serve as an officer of the NGA. I would rather see you stay at home and work with the state to cut this spending as you promised when elected. I must take my hat off to you – Oklahoma is number one in per capita spending in the USA.

I must pass up your request at this time. Perhaps I can help on other issues. We must cut this spending!

I was very proud we had a Republican Governor and Republican House and Senate but greatly disappointed after learning we led the nation in per capita spending.

Subject: Response to OCPA's Comments Regarding the National Governors Association

Hi Lew,

As a board member and a long-time, trusted friend and supporter of mine, I wanted you to be aware of OCPA's latest hit piece (attached) on the National Governors Association (NGA) and other state membership organizations. As you may know, I serve as the current vice-chair and chair-elect of the NGA. Unfortunately, OCPA staff seems intent on continuing to demagogue the NGA and my leadership within the organization as a "big-government lobbying organization" without presenting the real facts that it serves as an effective advocacy group on behalf of our nation's governors and state primacy. This is the first time in history a governor from Oklahoma has been elected to lead this organization and I am proud to join such an impressive list of leaders such as Mike Huckabee, Tim Pawlenty and John Ashcroft. This is an opportunity to bring national exposure to the best practices Oklahoma has to provide and it is embarrassing when an organization like OCPA continues to denigrate such an opportunity for the state.

While I fully support OCPA's notion that jealously safeguarding taxpayer dollars and ensuring that government spending is done effectively and wisely should be one of our number one priorities, I also recognize that organizations such as the NGA provide essential resources and services to states and their top leaders that would not otherwise be available to them. In Oklahoma alone, the NGA has provided significant staff and research support and expertise on a number of initiatives important to the state of Oklahoma and my Administration.

For example and most recently, the NGA provided my office, and the offices of other governors, essential support on my 22 multi-state natural gas vehicle development and procurement initiative by facilitating seminars, multi-state coordination, and staff research that was essential in making this unprecedented initiative the success it has been. I am confident when I say that their support was a key element of our success and that this initiative alone will save the state of Oklahoma hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars that far exceed Oklahoma's membership dues to the NGA.

In addition, the NGA has been instrumental in Oklahoma's fight against the Affordable Care Act by providing me with comprehensive and detailed research as it pertains to the impacts of the legislation. This is particularly important given the fact that the state agencies with jurisdiction over PPACA related issues operate independently from the governor's office.

NGA has proven to be an extremely valuable resource with regard to education reform policy as well. Just last month a representative from the NGA came to speak to the annual conference of the Oklahoma State School Board Association, her comments focused on encouraging schools to be more efficient with the tax dollars they receive, the importance of choice and she even addressed the positive effects of consolidation. Furthermore, the NGA has also made government modernization and redesign a top priority of their education and advocacy agenda and will be hosting a national summit in December which will allow state teams to learn about best practices and share their efforts to reform and streamline state government – an effort my office fully supports and will be taking advantage of.

The NGA has also provided my staff with extensive training sessions, from policy seminars to appointment and constituent services workshops and networking opportunities that have allowed my staff to learn from our nation's leading experts, which has in turn helped me make well and fully informed decisions as they relate to Oklahoma's wellbeing. The NGA employs actual experts in the policy areas they cover and more organizations would benefit from further interaction with them.

Finally, the NGA has and continues to provide an effective voice for Oklahoma at the federal level, and has consistently advocated on our behalf on a wide variety of issues such as preserving my authority and responsibilities as the Commander-in-Chief of Oklahoma's National Guard, the devastating impact of sequestration, improving quality of education and providing states with the essential flexibility it needs to meet its people's needs and goals.

This is just a brief note on some of the many services the NGA provides to Oklahoma and its 40 plus member states. I would think that OCPA would be proud of and promote Oklahoma's leadership in such an important and influential organization and would expect the OCPA to provide your readers with a more honest and robust perspective and dialog surrounding the NGAs true value.

Sincerely,

Mary

As a reminder, yesterday Zeke Canfield with the Oklahoman asked in relatively combative terms if we were ok with Oklahoma state government taking money from funds allocated as part of ACA. I told him he needed to find specific instances and that I wasn't going to respond to this press release (<http://www.healthcare.gov/news/factsheets/2011/02/prevention/ok.html>), which is too vague to even tell which agency or entity the funds are going to.

Both Zeke and I then contacted the state department of health to ask what funds they might have taken.

The short answer is $20M of ACA money (see attached spread sheet). Some of the programs sound very federal, such as: "Racial & Ethnic Approaches to Community Health." Their staff has confirmed they do not need the gov's approval to get this money, so it is out of our jurisdiction.

Nevertheless, Zeke is definitely going to write a story with the question being: If Oklahomans and governor fallin are so against ACA, how come we are spending so much Obamacare money?

I'm calling Leslea at Health now to discuss. Suggestions welcome.

Alex:

Apologies for the delay in response. This was a complicated question that required "peeling back the onion" a bit to try to answer.

- 1- As you know, not all federal public health dollars awarded to the State of Oklahoma are awarded to the OK State Department of Health. These federal funds also go to tribal nations, the autonomous city-county health departments in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, or other entities that provide training and public health education, and that's certainly been true for the Prevention Fund monies.
- 2- It is also important to note that the OSDH is primarily federally funded – we have been for decades – currently more than 56 percent of our budget is made up of federal funding. Thus it is critical that we do actively review federal grant opportunities to implement evidence-based programs that align with our priorities in reducing the spread of infectious disease, improving children's health, preventing cardiovascular disease deaths and other chronic conditions, reducing tobacco use and obesity, enhancing all hazard preparedness, and protecting state residents through regulatory programs and safety inspections. It is quite possible that all core public health priorities may be funded in the future from Prevention Fund monies.

- 3- Also noteworthy is that the Prevention Fund monies have been used in some instances to offset reduced historical grant funding for existing public health programs, or to continue efforts that began under a different revenue stream, thus it can be difficult to segregate Prevention Fund revenue from other federal public health funds, and it is extremely difficult to match up with the description of the framework of ACA funds distribution in the state that you forwarded in your email.
- 4- Finally, staff have confirmed that grant guidance for these funds does not require the OSDH to seek governor's approval.

I've attached an Excel file indicating current ACA funding to OSDH. I'll call you shortly to follow up. -- Leslea

Yep, guess we just send that...but I would try to make sure with her...its going to start a shitstorm... and basically make her decision for us...without even having met with the speaker and the ppt yet, which I'm not comfortable with. we don't get to write our own dialogue on this, which would be unfortunate.

Can we beg off and say the gov is in the air and wait until tomorrow?

Governor Fallin was disappointed and frustrated with the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the bulk of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). She believes the law is unaffordable and unworkable, and that many aspects of the bill — including the individual mandate — grant Congress power that was not intended by the authors of the Constitution. She voted against the bill as a congresswoman and supported the lawsuit filed by Oklahoma's attorney general as governor. She continues her adamant opposition to the law, and will actively campaign for conservative candidates, including the Republican presidential nominee, who pledge to overturn and replace the ACA.

However, in light of the Supreme Court's decision to uphold most of the ACA, Governor Fallin believes it is her responsibility to thoroughly and thoughtfully review the state of Oklahoma's options regarding the future of both Medicaid and the creation of a health insurance exchange. Her priority is not to make a decision soon; it is to make the right decision. The governor will continue to review how the state of Oklahoma can best meet the health care needs of its citizens. Our office will proactively relay these decisions to Governor Fallin's constituents and to the media as they are made.

I haven't gotten any response from the gov on this. According to USA Today our position on ObamaCare is we are going to wait until November before we do anything on some combination of an exchange and Medicaid expansion. Fox25 saw it and wants confirmation. I'm just going to send them our original statement and say that the gov's position has not changed.

This article from USA today (<http://www.usatoday.com/news/nation/story/2012-07-12/states-health-care-status/56181438/1>) reports the following ... it's written clumsily and its not clear whether you are waiting until after the election to pursue an exchange or Medicaid expansion or both:

Oklahoma(18%). Gov. Mary Fallin, a Republican, plans to wait until after the November election to decide how to proceed, according to local news accounts. The Legislature has declined to establish health care exchanges. Fallin hasn't decided whether to expand Medicaid coverage to more uninsured adults, mostly at federal expense.

Please let me know how to proceed. If I confirm that you are going to wait until after the election for either Medicaid/exchange action, that is a change in our position and the media here will immediately begin reporting that. if that's not our position I need to call USA today and tell them that so they can change their article. We are being asked by local press so ignoring is not an option.

Katie...

I've heard from a couple of GOP Hill staffers who were at a recent closed door briefing with CBO about the budget, fiscal cliff, health care costs, etc... Dan Crippen was invited to participate in his role as NGA Director. According to several sources, he made it plain that he/NGA believed all Governors would fully implement ObamaCare and I suppose extrapolating that the budget should reflect that. This made the D staffers in the room gleeful. Several important R staffers approached him afterwards and were surprised he would make such a matter of fact statement when so many of us have been holding the line that this will be a fiscal disaster for our states and country. Just saying' he should be more politically sensitive and second, the fact is he does not know if all states will or will not eventually (if Obama wins) capitulate. He is using the Dems message point that like Medicaid there was resistance at first but eventually every state participates. These are different times with different financial realities. I just thought you should be aware. It could be problematic for many if he is quoted somewhere at some future public event. As this was a closed door meeting, it is sensitive as staff are not supposed to discuss specifics. But, knowing many Govs strong feelings on this issue, I rec'd a heads up. Call if you'd like to discuss.

Katie,

I mentioned this at one of our HHS Committee SAC meetings in the context of the "essential health benefit" component of the ACA, but generally, with regard to establishing an exchange, Maryland has made good progress that might serve others quite well. Governor O'Malley has repeatedly asked his staff to make themselves available to states that seek advice in setting up their exchanges.

We're also glad to join you in reaching out to Secretary Sebelius for additional guidance, but since every state is different, your boss and other Governors might find it most helpful to call the Secretary individually. I understand that she's happy to help walk Governors through the process to achieve success.

I am copying Josh Sharfstein, our Secretary of Health & Mental Hygiene, Chuck Milligan, our Medicaid Director, and Carolyn Quattrocki, Executive Director of our Office of Health Care Reform. The experts who are working on the exchanges in your state and any other state can feel free to reach out to them to get insight on how we set up our exchange, and they'll be more than happy to walk through it.

Moreover, please check out this recent press release to get an overview of Maryland's exchange, called "Maryland Health Connection": <http://www.governor.maryland.gov/ltgovernor/pressreleases/120823.asp>

Hopefully, this helps.

Katie

A full year has passed since I began this dialogue below with Harry Birdwell and we are making some progress. As you know from our past meetings, my efforts to broker the relocation of OHCA began 2 years prior to this 2011 email to Harry. Harry has since made progress by getting broader authority for CLO to exchange some of its land for income-producing real estate, and he continues to push for more authority to monetize and invest CLO assets on a more productive basis. He and I are working together on a couple of potential CLO "test case" investments that are compelling in both policy and economic terms.

I applaud the recent decisions announced this week by my friend Governor Mary Fallin, which are consistent with the premise of my presentations this past year to CLO, and to DCS/OSF (regarding OHCA's RFP for office space, which now has OHCA leaning toward a move to Lincoln Boulevard, albeit not to my client's building, but next door at the former LP Hotel site owned by Dick Tanenbaum). The State of Oklahoma and Governor Fallin can and should continue take the lead to show both the Federal government and other states how to be better stewards of their resources for the benefit of their citizens. As a part of this model, the State's real estate assets and their efficient use and monetization can make up a large portion of the multi-billion dollar funding gap that results from the wise (in my opinion) but controversial decision by Governor Fallin to forego the Federal Obamacare Band-Aid. In the states that take this "sucker bet", it will indeed hurt much worse when it gets ripped off.....

In my humble opinion, Harry Birdwell's creativity, vision and private sector experience can expedite and help fund some of the Governor's initiatives, as the CLO, the largest single property owner in the State, can and should be a key player in the solutions to problems facing the Governor and the State. Over the past 3+ years, I have represented both OHCA (and its would-be landlords) and the City-County Health Department (as outside counsel for Phase I of its new 63rd Street Wellness campus), and I have learned first hand of the key role these agencies play in helping Oklahomans get healthier and try to turn the tide on Oklahoma's abysmal health statistics. I also serve on the board of TEEM (The Education and Employment Ministry, which recently hired former Speaker Kris Steele as our CEO) and I have attempted to work with Oklahoma County officials, as both of these entities struggle with the burgeoning issues corrections and rehabilitation reforms for adult and juvenile inmates. I have also learned that many State and local agencies fail to efficiently collaborate on finding and executing solutions. As an example, I understand that the State Health Department currently rents over 100,000 sf of expensive warehouse space in far West OKC, and has been considering building a new building, while empty buildings abound within 2 miles of the Capitol.

I believe that the health issues of many Oklahomans overlap with many of the same symptoms that overtax our corrections systems, and I further believe that the State's real estate assets and their smarter use, financing and stewardship can help create funding and/or defray costs to help solve and address these problems. We can create real dollars and value for Oklahomans through collaboration among agencies and with the private sector.

I write this email as a tumultuous 2012 winds down, but I hope that we can focus together on and discuss this with you, Harry and Mr. Doerflinger in 2013.

Please give my regards to Governor Fallin and Best Wishes for the Thanksgiving Holiday.

Regards

Bert

Harry

Sorry we are playing phone tag.

Still want to follow up on the notion of CLO making investments in real estate surrounding the Capitol, enlisting private development expertise, execution and capital. Both the Sears Property on 16th and the former AWG Property on NE 36th are in the midst of a large geographic area that is automatically eligible for Federal New Market Tax Credits. While these buildings cannot be NMTC eligible if renovated as a "special purpose" building like a prison, they can be renovated (or newly built) as office, warehouses and multipurpose building with private dollars, leased to government users, and, ultimately, purchased by the State, County, City, etc. after a 7 year private investment holding period, with the amount of NMTC equity paid-in requiring no ultimate repayment. Thus, NMTCs are becoming a common way nationally of augmenting this type of development - private developers creating space for government users in a true lease-purchase structure.

Attached is the NMTC Eligibility map for Ok County, which is compelling.

<<New_Market_Tax_Credit_Map_Inset_Oklahoma_County_0911041258 BOTH SITES.pdf>> The role of CLO could be to assist as a financier through acquisition and landbanking for the private developer the building shell and land, stay in as a lender throughout the redevelopment (or not, at its election) and then ultimately help (if warranted) the State step back into ownership after Year 7 by financing the purchase option exercise.

The OHCA deal timing has probably slipped to the point where it presents an opportunity for CLO. The OHCA Lease is signed and approved, but delivery will now likely be in the 2nd Quarter of 2013. Similarly, other users like Ok Co Juvenile Justice (200sf facility), the State Health Dept (100ksf warehouse), DMHSAS (100k sf office), Langston (50k sf) could be relocated on fallow real estate in the NMTC target area surrounding the Capitol under this structure. This would seem to dovetail with the Governor's vision of cooperation with the private sector and maximizing the State's assets and minimizing its costs of holding real estate. With Downtown's and OUHSC's resurgence, the Capitol surroundings comprise good real estate and could be much more impressive, functional and productive than they are.

I look forward to catching up after OSU's Bedlam win...

Gov. Mary Fallin's office is taking comments regarding the setting up of Obamacare health care exchanges in Oklahoma. When you call they will ask you if you are for or against setting up this next step of Obamacare. It just takes a couple of minutes. A majority of Oklahomans including myself are extremely opposed to setting up these Obamacare exchanges in Oklahoma.

Governor,

SCOTUS/OBAMACARE DECISION

STATEMENTS FOR APPROVAL

Law is upheld

“I’m extremely disappointed and frustrated by the Supreme Court’s decision to uphold the federal health care law. Oklahomans believe the law is unconstitutional, unconstructive and unaffordable for taxpayers and states. It will limit patients’ health care choices, reduce the quality of health care in the United States, and will cost the state of Oklahoma more than a half billion dollars in the process.

“Oklahomans have voiced their opposition to the federal health care bill from the very beginning, having approved a constitutional amendment to block the implementation of this bill. We believe that, rather than Big Government bureaucracy and one-size-fits-all solutions, the free market principles of choice and competition are the best tools at our disposal to increase access to health care and reduce costs.

“Moving forward, it is my hope the American people will elect leaders who will work to repeal the federal health care law and replace it with meaningful reform focused on commonsense, market based changes.”

If entire law is struck down:

“Today’s decision by the Supreme Court to strike down the federal health care law is a victory for the American people, for Constitutional Liberty, and for those who care about choice and competition in the health care market. President Obama’s health care legislation was nothing short of disastrous, threatening to weaken our economy, reduce the quality of health care across the U.S. and potentially cost the state of Oklahoma more than a half billion dollars in the process. The bill failed to make health care more affordable; meanwhile, it represented an unconstitutional power grab by President Obama and the forces of Big Government in Washington.

“The people of Oklahoma already have spoken out against the federal health care law by passing a constitutional amendment blocking its implementation. I am thrilled the U.S. Supreme Court has agreed with our line of thinking and struck down a law that is unpopular and destructive as well as unconstitutional.

“Moving forward, we must focus on the free-market principles of choice and competition to help lower the costs of medical treatment and increase access to health care.”

If only individual mandate is struck down:

“Today’s decision by the Supreme Court to strike down the individual mandate within President Obama’s health care law is an important step in the right direction. With the central part of the president’s law stricken from the books, we can now set about repealing and reforming a plan that is unconstitutional and unaffordable to its core.

“Oklahomans have voiced their opposition to the federal health care bill from the very beginning, having approved a constitutional amendment to block the implementation of this bill. We believe that, rather than Big Government bureaucracy and one-size-fits-all solutions, the free market principles of choice and competition are the best tools at our disposal to increase access to health care and reduce costs.

“With the individual mandate now gone, it is up to policymakers to repeal what is left of President Obama’s disastrous health care law and deliver meaningful, effective health care reform focusing on commonsense, market based changes.”

I'm going to get killed if I tell him that.

We do have time to build a state based exchange, but we might have to wait until February, but it depends on what we decide to do, and we don't really know the answer ...

Surely we can "submit a plan" by November 16 without legislative authorization? If we cant do that then we have no way of making that deadline and we should just say so

We do have time to build a state based exchange, but we might have to wait until February, but it depends on what we decide to do, and we don't really know the answer ...

Surely we can "submit a plan" by November 16 without legislative authorization? If we cant do that then we have no way of making that deadline and we should just say so

Katie,

I just got off the phone with Paul Dioguardi at HHS. They will announce later today that they are pushing back the deadline for the exchange blueprint until 12/15 and all that is due on the 11/16 is a letter of intent from the Governor stating whether the state intends to certify its own exchange or bring in the feds.

All,

I spoke w/ Brian yesterday to approach Dana re/ NGA playing a role in delaying Nov. 16 deadline.

After the RGA call today I put a call into Missy to make the same request. The request is that we would like a mtg w/ the President to get answers so we can make informed decisions.

I have let Marie know that we would like to opportunity to have NGA make the request and it is under discussion but I think they are willing to work with us, however they planned to send their letter today.

So I am trying to get an answer re/ NGA asap.

Specific NGA request would be to delay Nov. 16 until such a time that we can get a mtg w/ President set up and I think it should be for any and all Govs that wish to attend.

Missy is open to the idea but has to check with her caucus. We discussed framing this in the spirit of bipartisanship and starting to really work together over the next four years.

Let me know if you have questions. I will keep you posted! Katie

Thanks. Zeke Campfield asks: "the governor pledged to support both the law and intent of the Oklahoma Open Records Act, but her general counsel has made clear, citing the U.S. Supreme Court and federal law, that your office will likely not release "deliberative process" material or "executive privilege" material. Neither of these citations come from Oklahoma law or Oklahoma court decisions. So is she violating that pledge?"

Lets think about how to answer this. Hows this for a start:

Governor Fallin believes the Open Records Act exists to provide the public access to documents that include xyz (please help with this!). She does not believe it is intended to allow access to conversations between executive branch staff members working on draft documents, brainstorming on public policy ideas, offering advice and counsel to the governor, or otherwise acting in an advisory role. Eliminating the privacy of those communications is outside of the scope of the Open Records Act and would prevent the governor and her staff members from having open, candid conversations about public policy using email."

Dear Mr. Mullins,

While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

Thanks!
Zeke

Subject: RE: Open Records discussion

I really appreciate you taking time to come in to discuss this issue. In my view, the Open Records Act recognizes the three traditional sources of privilege. Privileges may originate through Constitutional provisions, statutory grant, or judicial common law principles. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privileged waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information who's disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege.

The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure “documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated.” Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be “predecisional” and “deliberative.” A document is predecisional if it was “prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision.” The agency claiming privilege “must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency.” But, the privilege does not extend to “‘purely factual’ material” or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing “the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision.” This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is “actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated.” Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include “whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency.”

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency’s investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance.

The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied "whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation" and "if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue." Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

Mr. Mullins-

In our meeting Nov. 14, you denied a substantive portion of a Nov. 8 open records request submitted to the Oklahoma governor's office by The Oklahoman. State law requires the government to favor public access to records over exemption. Please cite which part of the law exempts you from allowing public access to those records.

How about this, per steve:

"Governor Fallin believes the Open Records Act exists to provide public access to the vast majority of information and documents produced by Oklahoma's state government. She supports both the letter and spirit of that law, and has made internet access to more state information available than at any time in Oklahoma history. However, Governor Fallin does not believe the law is intended to allow access to conversations between executive branch staff members working on draft documents, brainstorming on public policy ideas, offering advice and counsel to the governor, or otherwise acting in an advisory role. Reducing the privacy of those communications is outside of the scope of the Open Records Act and would prevent the governor and her staff members from having open, candid conversations about public policy. Eliminating the possibility of that private dialogue inside the executive branch would damage the ability of the governor to design and implement good policy and would harm the public interest."

Thanks. Zeke Campfield asks: "the governor pledged to support both the law and intent of the Oklahoma Open Records Act, but her general counsel has made clear, citing the U.S. Supreme Court and federal law, that your office will likely not release "deliberative process" material or "executive privilege" material. Neither of these citations come from Oklahoma law or Oklahoma court decisions. So is she violating that pledge?"

Lets think about how to answer this. Hows this for a start:

Governor Fallin believes the Open Records Act exists to provide the public access to documents that include xyz (please help with this!). She does not believe it is intended to allow access to conversations between executive branch staff members working on draft documents, brainstorming on public policy ideas, offering advice and counsel to the governor, or otherwise acting in an advisory role. Eliminating the privacy of those communications is outside of the scope of the Open Records Act and would prevent the governor and her staff members from having open, candid conversations about public policy using email."

Dear Mr. Mullins,

While I respectfully disagree with a number of your interpretations of the state Open Records law, I have revised my public records request to expedite the process by limiting its scope. Please respond to this request in a timely fashion and indicate any records you have not included and the specific reason you feel they are exempt.

I would like copies of all correspondence since June, 2012, regarding the national "Affordable Healthcare Act," "Obamacare" and the "health exchange" between Gov. Fallin and her staff, her cabinet, all state employees, and elected officials. Obviously we realize that correspondence between the governor and her legal counsel are exempt from public scrutiny, however, we feel the remainder of those emails fall well within the purview of the Oklahoma Open Records Act.

Thanks!
Zeke

Subject: RE: Open Records discussion

I really appreciate you taking time to come in to discuss this issue. In my view, the Open Records Act recognizes the three traditional sources of privilege. Privileges may originate through Constitutional provisions, statutory grant, or judicial common law principles. In the Open Records Act, for example, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.2, refers to both specific statutory sections in the Oklahoma Open Records Act and specific state or federal statutes. Similarly, 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.5 (1) provides that the Open Records Act does not apply to records specifically required by law to be kept confidential including records protected by a broadly defined category called "state evidentiary privilege" which included immunity privileges such as the attorney-client and work product. These evidentiary privileges are both Constitutional and Judicial in origin. Again, in 51 Okl.St. Ann. § 24A.9 the Act codifies a portion of a broad Constitutional privilege called the deliberative process privilege when it states: "Prior to taking action, including making a recommendation or issuing a report, a public official may keep confidential his or her personal notes and personally created materials other than departmental budget requests of a public body prepared as an aid to memory or research leading to the adoption of a public policy or the implementation of a public project." The Act includes many other specific privileges with Constitutional and judicial origin when it recognizes certain investigatory, prosecutorial, proprietary, privacy and similar privileges.

Here is a non-legal summary of the most common privileges we may assert that we believe are consistent with the Open Records Act:

Executive Privilege

What is executive privilege? A claim by a high official of the executive branch that he/she need not answer a request for information (including a subpoena issued by a court or request by the legislature) on the ground that such revelations would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making. In order to do their job, high officials of the executive branch need candid advice and discussion. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the privilege due to "the valid need for protection of communications between high government officials and those who advise and assist them in the performance of their manifold duties."

What is the legal basis for the privilege? The privilege exists within all areas of the executive branch. If information is shared within the executive branch, the information retains its privileged character. Only if the information is disclosed to public or disinterested private party is the privileged waived. For example, when US Vice President Cheney released information to a Special Counsel, a "third part[y] outside the White House," no waiver was held to have occurred. There is no requirement that the relevant communication or document be designated as "confidential" to receive executive privilege protection. Such an agreement-or lack thereof-is not dispositive. The privilege is applied to any communication that has the character of information who's disclosure would hamper effective governmental operations, procedures and/or decision-making.

Communications that directly or indirectly have the effect of impacting recommendations or advice to Senior Executive officials who are empowered to act on behalf of the executive branch are not considered ordinary governmental communications and are potentially protected by the privilege. The privilege is properly invoked where release of the information or communication threatens substantial intrusions on the process by which those closest to Senior Executive give advice. The US Supreme Court held that Senior Executive communications and activities encompass a vastly wider range of sensitive material than would be true of any ordinary individual. While Senior Officials are not above the law, the judiciary and legislature must afford senior executives the greatest possible deference in areas of confidential decision making.

Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege protects from disclosure "documents reflecting advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations comprising part of a process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated." Three policy purposes consistently have been held to constitute the bases for this privilege: (1) to encourage open, frank discussions on matters of policy between subordinates and superiors; (2) to protect against premature disclosure of proposed policies before they are finally adopted; and (3) to protect against public confusion that might result from disclosure of reasons and rationales that were not in fact ultimately the grounds for an agency's action. In order to qualify for the privilege, a document must be "predecisional" and "deliberative." A document is predecisional if it was "prepared in order to assist an agency decision maker in arriving at his decision." The agency claiming privilege "must be able to demonstrate that . . . the document for which . . . privilege is claimed related to a specific decision, facing the agency." But, the privilege does not extend to "'purely factual' material" or subjective discussions insofar as they were later adopted or incorporated in a final agency opinion. The mere status of an agency decision within an agency decisionmaking process may be protectible if the release of that information would have the effect of prematurely disclosing "the recommended outcome of the consultative process . . . as well as the source of any decision." This is particularly important to agencies involved in a regulatory process that specifically mandates public involvement in the decision process once the agency's deliberations are complete. Moreover, the predecisional character of a document is not altered by the fact that an agency has subsequently made a final decision or even has decided to not make a final decision. Nor is it altered by the passage of time in general. A document is deliberative if it is “actually . . . related to the process by which policies are formulated.” Factors used to determine whether a document is deliberative include “whether the document (i) formed an essential link in a specified consultative process, (ii) reflects the personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency, and (iii) if released, would inaccurately reflect or prematurely disclose the views of the agency.”

Law Enforcement Investigatory Privilege

The law enforcement investigatory privilege is a judge-fashioned evidentiary privilege the purpose of which is to protect law enforcement efforts from possible harm arising from public disclosure of investigatory files. The scope of the privilege extends to ongoing criminal and civil law enforcement investigations. Information of concern may include logs, preliminary reports, or even notes that could potentially compromise ongoing operations, lead to discovery of particular investigative techniques, or jeopardize the safety or effectiveness of confidential informants. This privilege prohibits the release of governmental information – whether through documentary evidence or oral testimony – that would harm an agency’s investigative or enforcement efforts.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE

The attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between an attorney and his or her client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice and assistance. The privilege applies in both directions: to communications from the client to the attorney, and to communications from the attorney to the client. It applies with equal force to conversations and correspondence among a client's attorneys, whether or not the client is present during the conversation or receives a copy of the correspondence. It broadly applies including conversations between in-house and outside counsel and confidential communications between two lawyers representing the same client.

WORK PRODUCT DOCTRINE

The work product doctrine is broader than the attorney-client privilege; it protects materials prepared by the attorney, whether or not disclosed to the client, and it protects material prepared by agents for the attorney. However, unlike the attorney-client privilege, work product requires contemplation of litigation. Work product privilege protects from disclosure: 1) material prepared or mental impressions developed in anticipation of litigation or trial by or for a party or a party's representatives; and 2) communications made in anticipation of litigation or for trial between a party and a party's representatives. The "anticipation of litigation" test is satisfied “whenever the circumstances surrounding the investigation would have indicated to a reasonable person that there was a substantial chance of litigation” and “if the party invoking the privilege believes in good faith that there is a substantial chance that litigation will ensue.” Litigation need only be contemplated at the time the work is performed for the doctrine to apply, and the term "litigation" is defined broadly to encompass the defense of administrative and other federal investigations.

COMMON INTEREST PRIVILEGE

The "common interest" privilege enables counsel for clients with a common interest to exchange attorney-client privileged communications and attorney work product in order to adequately receive legal advice and prepare for litigation without waiving either privilege. The scope of the privilege also applies to communications by a client to his own lawyer that are subsequently shared them with co- defendants for purposes of a common defense. The privilege encompasses notes and memoranda of statements made at meetings among counsel and their clients with a common interest, as well as the statements themselves. Whether simple legal advice is sought, an action is ongoing or contemplated, whether the jointly interested persons are defendants or plaintiffs, and whether the litigation or potential litigation is civil or criminal, the rationale for the joint defense rule remains unchanged: persons who share a common interest in legal advice or litigation should be able to communicate with their respective attorneys and with each other to more effectively prosecute or defend their claims. It is necessary for clients to pool information in order to obtain effective representation. So, to encourage information-pooling, the common interest rule treats all involved attorneys and clients as a single attorney-client unit, at least insofar as a common interest is pursued.

I hope this helps with your decision making on your Open Record requests.

Mr. Mullins-

In our meeting Nov. 14, you denied a substantive portion of a Nov. 8 open records request submitted to the Oklahoma governor's office by The Oklahoman. State law requires the government to favor public access to records over exemption. Please cite which part of the law exempts you from allowing public access to those records.

I have one suggestion (good with everything else). In the first section under "law is upheld", I would change the statement that "oklahomans believe the law is unconstitutional". If the US Supreme Court has just found that it is constitutional, my old civics classes would tell me that a statement like that in fact could be saying that Oklahomans are flat-out wrong because the Supreme Court has spoken, like it or not, and as the highest court in the land, then we must just be wrong in our own interpretation. I think the comments that we are extremely disappointed, etc are right on the money, and that saying we believe this interpretation, much like the law, is misplaced and takes away the rights of states to..... would resonate better than saying flat out that Oklahomans know constitutional law better than the Supreme Court. Something about that specific comment is sending up a red flag and I think it could backfire, both within the state and externally. I think the other comments do a nice job of blending where we are, with the constitutional vote here in OK, and putting our position out there, plus a path forward. Happy to have a conversation if my comments are too rambling..... terry

Subject: Press Statements in preparation for SCOTUS/ObamaCare decision
Importance: High

FYI, the following are the statements we are planning to put out depending on what happens with SCOTUS and ObamaCare.

The answer to any question involving health care exchanges now will be, "we will wait until SCOTUS makes its ruling." The answer afterwards will be, "we are reviewing our options."

Law is upheld

"I'm extremely disappointed and frustrated by the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the federal health care law. Oklahomans believe the law is unconstitutional, unconstructive and unaffordable for taxpayers and states. It will limit patients' health care choices, reduce the quality of health care in the United States, and will cost the state of Oklahoma more than a half billion dollars in the process.

"Oklahomans have voiced their opposition to the federal health care bill from the very beginning, having approved a constitutional amendment to block the implementation of this bill. We believe that, rather than Big Government bureaucracy and one-size-fits-all solutions, the free market principles of choice and competition are the best tools at our disposal to increase access to health care and reduce costs.

“Moving forward, it is my hope the American people will elect leaders who will work to repeal the federal health care law and replace it with meaningful reform focused on commonsense, market based changes.”

If entire law is struck down:

“Today’s decision by the Supreme Court to strike down the federal health care law is a victory for the American people, for Constitutional Liberty, and for those who care about choice and competition in the health care market. President Obama’s health care legislation was nothing short of disastrous, threatening to weaken our economy, reduce the quality of health care across the U.S. and potentially cost the state of Oklahoma more than a half billion dollars in the process. The bill failed to make health care more affordable; meanwhile, it represented an unconstitutional power grab by President Obama and the forces of Big Government in Washington.

“The people of Oklahoma already have spoken out against the federal health care law by passing a constitutional amendment blocking its implementation. I am thrilled the U.S. Supreme Court has agreed with our line of thinking and struck down a law that is unpopular and destructive as well as unconstitutional.

“Moving forward, we must focus on the free-market principles of choice and competition to help lower the costs of medical treatment and increase access to health care.”

If only individual mandate is struck down:

“Today’s decision by the Supreme Court to strike down the individual mandate within President Obama’s health care law is an important step in the right direction. With the central part of the president’s law stricken from the books, we can now set about repealing and reforming a plan that is unconstitutional and unaffordable to its core.

“Oklahomans have voiced their opposition to the federal health care bill from the very beginning, having approved a constitutional amendment to block the implementation of this bill. We believe that, rather than Big Government bureaucracy and one-size-fits-all solutions, the free market principles of choice and competition are the best tools at our disposal to increase access to health care and reduce costs.

“With the individual mandate now gone, it is up to policymakers to repeal what is left of President Obama’s disastrous health care law and deliver meaningful, effective health care reform focusing on commonsense, market based changes.”

Fallin, Doak, Shannon discuss current, future health issues

8/10/2012 by Erin Boeckman -- eCapitol News ----

Gov. Mary Fallin, Speaker-designate T.W. Shannon and Insurance Commissioner John Doak spoke to attendees of the inaugural Oklahoma Health Care Summit Thursday about current health policies and the changes they may undergo in the coming legislative session.

The summit was organized by Physicians Liability Insurance Company and featured speakers and exhibits. The three state leaders were asked to address the state of Oklahoma health care.

All three speakers addressed the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and its potential implications on Oklahoma.

"We are proceeding very cautiously," Fallin said.

As the newly elected vice chair of the National Governors Association, Fallin said that many governors have questions about how states will implement the law, which is why the association sent a list of questions to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The department does not seem to have any answers yet, she said.

Specifically, states are concerned about the effect the law will have on Medicare and Medicaid, the reimbursement rates and the effect on state budgets, Fallin said.

"We're all very concerned about the cost factor," she said, adding that the estimated cost for Oklahoma's implementation is $100 million a year.

While the U.S. Supreme Court did rule in favor of the constitutionality of the law, Fallin said that things may change with the November elections. She said she is in favor of "repealing and replacing" the Affordable Care Act.

Doak said he was interested to see how states approached the development of health insurance exchanges, one of the requirements of the act.

"If we don't put one in place, the federal government will," he said.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is the law, and as an insurance regulator he is required to follow the law. However, Doak said he is waiting on some actions to be taken at the state Capitol. Legislation has not yet been passed to establish a state-based exchange.

Shannon, R-Lawton, said the state cannot afford to wait for the federal government to take the lead. He said the federal government's "takeover of the health care system" is an opportunity for Oklahoma to lead. That lead includes market-based solutions, he said. "Market-based solutions work," Shannon said, and they will work in health care but they have not been implemented. Many continue to say that government is the answer, but subsidizing the problem does not seem to drive down costs. In fact, it has the opposite effect, he said.

Shannon expressed concern about the number of physicians in the state, including those with graying hair who may be considering leaving the field. The number of people on Medicaid also needs to be reduced, which means more jobs, he said.

The state of Oklahoma's health also needs to be discussed, he said. While he has concerns about how much government should be involved in some areas, Shannon said he had to acknowledge that government is often left with the cost of an unhealthy society.

As solutions are crafted in the next legislative session, Shannon said people from the industry would be asked for their involvement.

Gov. Mary Fallin, Speaker-designate T.W. Shannon and Insurance Commissioner John Doak spoke to attendees of the inaugural Oklahoma Health Care Summit Thursday about current health policies and the changes they may undergo in the coming legislative session. The summit was organized by Physicians Liability Insurance Company and featured speakers and exhibits. The three state leaders were asked to address the state of Oklahoma health care. All three speakers addressed the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and its potential implications on Oklahoma. "We are proceeding very cautiously," Fallin said. As the newly elected vice chair of the National Governors Association, Fallin said that many governors have questions about how states will implement the law, which is why the association sent a list of questions to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The department does not seem to have any answers yet, she said.

Specifically, states are concerned about the effect the law will have on Medicare and Medicaid, the reimbursement rates and the effect on state budgets, Fallin said.

"We're all very concerned about the cost factor," she said, adding that the estimated cost for Oklahoma's implementation is $100 million a year.

While the U.S. Supreme Court did rule in favor of the constitutionality of the law, Fallin said that things may change with the November elections. She said she is in favor of "repealing and replacing" the Affordable Care Act.

Doak said he was interested to see how states approached the development of health insurance exchanges, one of the requirements of the act.

"If we don't put one in place, the federal government will," he said.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is the law, and as an insurance regulator he is required to follow the law. However, Doak said he is waiting on some actions to be taken at the state Capitol. Legislation has not yet been passed to establish a state-based exchange.

Shannon, R-Lawton, said the state cannot afford to wait for the federal government to take the lead. He said the federal government's "takeover of the health care system" is an opportunity for Oklahoma to lead. That lead includes market-based solutions, he said.

"Market-based solutions work," Shannon said, and they will work in health care but they have not been implemented. Many continue to say that government is the answer, but subsidizing the problem does not seem to drive down costs. In fact, it has the opposite effect, he said.

Shannon expressed concern about the number of physicians in the state, including those with graying hair who may be considering leaving the field. The number of people on Medicaid also needs to be reduced, which means more jobs, he said.

The state of Oklahoma's health also needs to be discussed, he said. While he has concerns about how much government should be involved in some areas, Shannon said he had to acknowledge that government is often left with the cost of an unhealthy society.

As solutions are crafted in the next legislative session, Shannon said people from the industry would be asked for their involvement.

My guess is that we could structure an argument that would persuade a judge to halt this until the administration does it part. This would be different than trying to overturn the PPACA but would not preclude both approaches.

Is the premium tax credit still calculated based on the second lowest cost silver plan that covers all EHB categories (potentially a combination of a health plan and a stand alone dental plan) or will the PTC be calculated based on the individuals selection of benefits? I.e. if they opt out of selecting a pediatric dental package will they still receive PTC for purchasing that coverage?

·Additionally, on this same call it was mentioned that if an individual has PTC remaining, they can use this PTC towards the purchase of a stand-alone dental plan. It was our understanding that PTC could only be used to purchase coverage for essential health benefits, and that if coverage was offered outside of the essential health benefits that this coverage would be required to be paid for by the individual. As adult dental is not an EHB we were confused as to how the PTC would apply to the purchase of this plan. Is adult dental coverage an exception? Can the PTC go towards the entire dental plan or only towards the pediatric portion of the dental plan?

Good afternoon,

The National Governors Association (\NGA) is scheduling an in- person meeting with HHS regarding Essential Health Benefits. The RGPPC is going to assist with providing series of questions for the meeting or a follow up letter. Below is a list of questions already put together by NGA and Nevada. Please take a look and Provide us with any additions or edits. We apologize for the quick turnaround but it would be beneficial to have any feedback by Monday at 12:00. We truly appreciate your time and expertise!

Please send all responses to me directly at [REDACTED]

- 1) Will any submissions be accepted after September 30?[Carol Steckel] again, the Secretary has not issued any rules or form processes to accept or not accept any submission from the states.
- 2) What are the consequences for not filing?[Carol Steckel] we need to keep making the point, no rulemaking no right for HHS to force a state either to decide or accept the Feds decision.
- 3) How will the submissions be used in the Secretary's determination of EHB?
- 4) When will the Secretary make her determination?
- 5) Will there be a comment period after her decision so that states might be able to further contribute to the ultimate definition of EHB?[Carol Steckel] again, no rulemaking, we feed into their "bulletins" by treating them as binding. The only thing we should keep repeating and that is binding is the formal rulemaking process.
- 6) How do you determine if a plan is discriminatory?
- 7) Many states have a mandate to cover autism services. Aside from state mandates, most typical employer plans do not cover any other habilitative services. If a plan covers a habilitative service such as autism, does the coverage of that single diagnosis satisfy the requirement that plans cover rehabilitative and habilitative services? If not, how does adding the requirement to cover additional habilitative services align with the requirement that the EHB package be aligned with the typical employer plan?[Carol Steckel] by asking this question, we again feed into the bulletin process as rulemaking. We should reword the question – if a state chooses a plan that state's definition of Habilitation is THE definition for the next two years, not HHS's definition.
- 8) What are considered pediatric services? Are they services based on an age limit? What age limit?[Carol Steckel] ditto #7
- 9) The first paragraph of page 13 of the Essential Health Benefits Bulletin issued December 16, 2011 indicates, "If a benchmark plan offers a drug in a certain category or class, all plans must offer at least one drug in that same category or class, even though the specific drugs on the formulary may vary." Is this based on the formulary? If so, what about drugs that are covered by a plan as tier IV drugs (100% participant paid at the network discounted rate)? Are non-formulary drugs included in the EHB package? If so, how does one determine the number of drugs covered in a category or class? Verbal guidance has indicated that QHPs must offer an essentially equivalent number of drugs in each category and class of drug. This conflicts with the bulletin. What is the correct guidance?[Carol Steckel] Again, the state's plan is THE benefit plan, we aren't and shouldn't ask for guidance but FORMAL rule making.

RGPPC will reach out to the RAGA. We are compiling the responses received this AM and last night for the team meeting with HHS w/NGA. We can decide after that meeting how we move forward in a Republican only strategy. A joint RGPPC/RAGA strategy seems appropriate. We'll be back in touch with everyone later today or tomorrow re a strategy moving forward.

For example, some plans set dollar limits on home health aide and private duty nursing services.
- How are prior authorization requirements treated in defining the EHB benchmark? If a benefit in the selected benchmark requires prior authorization will the PA requirement become part of the essential health benefits?
- On the August 10th monthly call it was indicated that a requirement will be that consumers are offered benefits in all 10 EHB categories, but that they will not be required to purchase all 10, especially as relates to pediatric dental coverage offered on a stand-alone plan. How will this requirement affect the calculation of the premium tax credit? Is the premium tax credit still calculated based on the second lowest cost silver plan that covers all EHB categories (potentially a combination of a health plan and a stand alone dental plan) or will the PTC be calculated based on the individuals selection of benefits? I.e. if they opt out of selecting a pediatric dental package will they still receive PTC for purchasing that coverage?
- Additionally, on this same call it was mentioned that if an individual has PTC remaining, they can use this PTC towards the purchase of a stand-alone dental plan. It was our understanding that PTC could only be used to purchase coverage for essential health benefits, and that if coverage was offered outside of the essential health benefits that this coverage would be required to be paid for by the individual. As adult dental is not an EHB we were confused as to how the PTC would apply to the purchase of this plan. Is adult dental coverage an exception? Can the PTC go towards the entire dental plan or only towards the pediatric portion of the dental plan?

I think these questions miss the mark. The question is – what gives HHS the right to “demand” a state pick a benchmark without proper rulemaking and comment period. The bulletin does not have the weight of law and the information required to make the proper decision for our residents is not available because rulemaking has not been conducted. In addition, what gives HHS the right to “pick” a benchmark if a state does not pick one by September 30, a date that HHS has said is not a deadline.

- 1) Will any submissions be accepted after September 30? [Carol Steckel] again, the Secretary has not issued any rules or form processes to accept or not accept any submission from the states.
- 2) What are the consequences for not filing? [Carol Steckel] we need to keep making the point, no rulemaking no right for HHS to force a state either to decide or accept the Feds decision.

- 3) How will the submissions be used in the Secretary's determination of EHB?
- 4) When will the Secretary make her determination?
- 5) Will there be a comment period after her decision so that states might be able to further contribute to the ultimate definition of EHB?[Carol Steckel] again, no rulemaking, we feed into their "bulletins" by treating them as binding. The only thing we should keep repeating and that is binding is the formal rulemaking process.
- 6) How do you determine if a plan is discriminatory?
- 7) Many states have a mandate to cover autism services. Aside from state mandates, most typical employer plans do not cover any other habilitative services. If a plan covers a habilitative service such as autism, does the coverage of that single diagnosis satisfy the requirement that plans cover rehabilitative and habilitative services? If not, how does adding the requirement to cover additional habilitative services align with the requirement that the EHB package be aligned with the typical employer plan?[Carol Steckel] by asking this question, we again feed into the bulletin process as rulemaking. We should reword the question – if a state chooses a plan that state's definition of Habilitation is THE definition for the next two years, not HHS's definition.
- 8) What are considered pediatric services? Are they services based on an age limit? What age limit?[Carol Steckel] ditto #7
- 9) The first paragraph of page 13 of the Essential Health Benefits Bulletin issued December 16, 2011 indicates, "If a benchmark plan offers a drug in a certain category or class, all plans must offer at least one drug in that same category or class, even though the specific drugs on the formulary may vary." Is this based on the formulary? If so, what about drugs that are covered by a plan as tier IV drugs (100% participant paid at the network discounted rate)? Are non-formulary drugs included in the EHB package? If so, how does one determine the number of drugs covered in a category or class? Verbal guidance has indicated that QHPs must offer an essentially equivalent number of drugs in each category and class of drug. This conflicts with the bulletin. What is the correct guidance?[Carol Steckel] Again, the state's plan is THE benefit plan, we aren't and shouldn't ask for guidance but FORMAL rule making.

Medicare is a state issue with an a decision not to expand for our hospitals. We get the reduction on the federal side and then no help to offset with Medicaid expansion.

Hospitals agreed to $155B in cuts over 10 years in exchange for an insurance take up rate to 94% of the population. DSH cuts were part of this. DSH cuts are in two distinct parts: Medicare and Medicaid.

OHCA probably is only reporting projections under the Medicaid DSH program, which is modest in comparison to other states. The $539M is for Medicare DSH, not Medicaid DSH. I haven't seen a $475M projection done by the OHCA.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
November 19, 2012

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor Mary Fallin Announcement re/ PPACA Talking Points

- While Governor Mary Fallin has opted not to build a state-based insurance exchange or expand the Medicaid program as proposed in PPACA, she and the Oklahoma legislature remain deeply committed to the health of all Oklahoman’s. One demonstration of this commitment is that they protected the Health and Human Services agencies during the recent economic downturn from significant reductions that would jeopardize the health and safety of our citizens. The end result is that the Health and Human Services area took the smallest reduction of any of the cabinet areas.
- The Governor and her staff have been exploring the impact of PPACA and working with healthcare experts and lawmakers across the country in order to make sound decisions on implementing a state based exchange or expand Medicaid in Oklahoma. The final determination is that this law will not improve the quality of healthcare or address the escalating healthcare costs that are bankrupting our nation, nor does it provide the flexibility needed to improve health outcomes in a financially sound or sustainable manner.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovations in healthcare and the Governor is committed to building upon those innovations to create Oklahoma solutions to our healthcare problems. She welcomes the opportunity to work with the Oklahoma legislature and other stakeholders to develop an Oklahoma plan to reduce the number of uninsured families, provide quality healthcare and address rising healthcare costs.

Insurance Exchange

- There is an absence of critical guidance and regulations that would allow states to understand the full ramifications of building and implementing a state based insurance exchange. Without HHS regulation and guidance it is unclear how much flexibility and freedom of control will be provided to states operating an exchange. State based exchanges will be so in name only and it does not benefit us to fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government.
- The cost of building a PPACA compliant exchange in Oklahoma is estimated at $30 million to $50 million dollars. The cost of implementing PPACA in Oklahoma, and nationwide, is staggering and unsustainable. Governor Mary Fallin will continue to work with the Oklahoma legislature to develop financially sound healthcare solutions.

- While the pricing structure has not yet been released, HHS will likely pass the cost of the federal exchange to the insurers selling products on the exchange. This fee, in turn, will likely be passed on to the purchaser of the healthcare plan.

Medicaid Expansion

- Medicaid is an outdated program that was expanded without true reform in PPACA. The Medicaid expansion does not adequately address needed improvements in the availability or quality of healthcare services and it does not begin to address the ever increasing costs of healthcare. Further, the federal law does not provide flexibility for states to meet the unique needs of their citizens.
- Expanding Medicaid as written in PPACA would cost the State of Oklahoma as much as $475 million between fiscal years 2014 and 2020. Paying for these increases would necessitate significant cuts to other critical parts of the state's budget like education and public safety. The cost of Medicaid expansion is unsustainable and creates an additional burden on taxpayers and the federal deficit.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovative programs and fiscally responsible enhancements to the Medicaid program. In fact, Oklahoma has reduced the rate of uninsured among children to just 7%. Oklahoma has also created an outstanding on-line enrollment system that allows families in need of healthcare real time access to Medicaid coverage. These are the very successes that Oklahoma wants to build upon to create a viable healthcare system that actually begins to reduce the costs of healthcare in our state while improving health outcomes.
- Oklahoma has a history of creating innovative solutions to reducing the number of uninsured, for example the Insure Oklahoma program (created in 2006) offers premium assistance to small businesses to support the purchase of private insurance for their employees. Under PPACA the Insure Oklahoma program would be discontinued and qualifying workers (those under 138%) would be required to enroll in traditional Medicaid. Oklahoma small businesses and their employees should have the same option to purchase private insurance coverage as other large employers and their employees.
- Oklahoma does not anticipate that opting not to expand Medicaid as written in PPACA will jeopardize Oklahoma hospitals when CMS implements the mandated reduction in Disproportionate Share Hospital (DSH) funds. Oklahoma's current DSH payments do not meet the threshold for significant reduction.

Oklahoma Plan

- Governor Fallin recognizes the importance of having healthy citizens. Healthy people create a more productive workforce and children that are able to learn. The governmental system of providing healthcare (Medicaid) is important, but it should not be the primary source of healthcare for so many of our citizens. We need to transform the healthcare system into one that supports individuals and families who need a hand-up while also supporting a robust private insurance market that is focused on making people healthier.
- Oklahoma will be developing an Oklahoma Plan to reduce the number of uninsured and the costs of healthcare. The Oklahoma plan will include some of the following elements:
  - Establish goals that include improved health for our citizens
  - Empower individuals to be engaged in making good healthcare (and health) choices
  - Ensure payment incentives focus on preventive care and improving health
  - Support the purchase of private insurance products
  - Focus on reducing the cost of managing chronic disease, a major cost driver in Oklahoma, including:
    - High-risk case management
    - Chronic disease self management
    - Improving care coordination within communities of care
  - Specifically target the reduction of unnecessary hospitalizations and emergency department visits
  - Realign the public health system to support these goals
- The Oklahoma Plan will address the concerns of healthcare providers about the strain of uncompensated care by reducing the number of uninsured.
- The Oklahoma Plan will be developed with consultation from tribal nations and other stakeholders to ensure the unique needs of our citizens are met.

Katie,

Patti may have already responded... The $539 million is our projection of Medicare DSH cuts to Oklahoma hospitals for 2015-2022. Nationally, and especially in states like Oklahoma with relatively small Medicaid DSH programs, the Medicare DSH cuts in the PPACA are much larger than the Medicaid DSH cuts.

Insurance Exchange

- There is an absence of critical guidance and regulations that would allow states to understand the full ramifications of building and implementing a state based insurance exchange. Without HHS regulation and guidance it is unclear how much flexibility and freedom of control will be provided to states operating an exchange. State based exchanges will be so in name only and it does not benefit us to fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government.
- The cost of building a PPACA compliant exchange in Oklahoma is estimated at $30 million to $50 million dollars. The cost of implementing PPACA in Oklahoma, and nationwide, is staggering and unsustainable. Governor Mary Fallin will continue to work with the Oklahoma legislature to develop financially sound healthcare solutions.
- While the pricing structure has not yet been released, HHS will likely pass the cost of the federal exchange to the insurers selling products on the exchange. This fee, in turn, will likely be passed on to the purchaser of the healthcare plan.

Medicaid Expansion

- Medicaid is an outdated program that was expanded without true reform in PPACA. The Medicaid expansion does not adequately address needed improvements in the availability or quality of healthcare services and it does not begin to address the ever increasing costs of healthcare. Further, the federal law does not provide flexibility for states to meet the unique needs of their citizens.
- Expanding Medicaid as written in PPACA would cost the State of Oklahoma as much as $475 million between fiscal years 2014 and 2020. Paying for these increases would necessitate significant cuts to other critical parts of the state's budget like education and public safety. The cost of Medicaid expansion is unsustainable and creates an additional burden on taxpayers and the federal deficit.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovative programs and fiscally responsible enhancements to the Medicaid program. In fact, Oklahoma has reduced the rate of uninsured among children to just 7%. Oklahoma has also created an outstanding on-line enrollment system that allows families in need of healthcare real time access to Medicaid coverage. These are the very successes that Oklahoma wants to build upon to create a viable healthcare system that actually begins to reduce the costs of healthcare in our state while improving health outcomes.
- Oklahoma has a history of creating innovative solutions to reducing the number of uninsured, for example the Insure Oklahoma program (created in 2006) offers premium assistance to small businesses to support the purchase of private insurance for their employees. Under PPACA the Insure Oklahoma program would be discontinued and qualifying workers (those under 138%) would be required to enroll in traditional Medicaid. Oklahoma small businesses and their employees should have the same option to purchase private insurance coverage as other large employers and their employees.
- Oklahoma does not anticipate that opting not to expand Medicaid as written in PPACA will jeopardize Oklahoma hospitals when CMS implements the mandated reduction in Disproportionate Share Hospital (DSH) funds. Oklahoma's current DSH payments do not meet the threshold for significant reduction.

Oklahoma Plan

- Governor Fallin recognizes the importance of having healthy citizens. Healthy people create a more productive workforce and children that are able to learn. The governmental system of providing healthcare (Medicaid) is important, but it should not be the primary source of healthcare for so many of our citizens. We need to transform the healthcare system into one that supports individuals and families who need a hand-up while also supporting a robust private insurance market that is focused on making people healthier.

- Oklahoma will be developing an Oklahoma Plan to reduce the number of uninsured and the costs of healthcare. The Oklahoma plan will include some of the following elements:
  - Establish goals that include improved health for our citizens
  - Empower individuals to be engaged in making good healthcare (and health) choices
  - Ensure payment incentives focus on preventive care and improving health
  - Support the purchase of private insurance products
  - Focus on reducing the cost of managing chronic disease, a major cost driver in Oklahoma, including:
    - High-risk case management
    - Chronic disease self management
    - Improving care coordination within communities of care
  - Specifically target the reduction of unnecessary hospitalizations and emergency department visits
  - Realign the public health system to support these goals

- The Oklahoma Plan will address the concerns of healthcare providers about the strain of uncompensated care by reducing the number of uninsured.

- The Oklahoma Plan will be developed with consultation from tribal nations and other stakeholders to ensure the unique needs of our citizens are met.

Hospitals agreed to $155B in cuts over 10 years in exchange for an insurance take up rate to 94% of the population. DSH cuts were part of this. DSH cuts are in two distinct parts: Medicare and Medicaid.

OHCA probably is only reporting projections under the Medicaid DSH program, which is modest in comparison to other states. The $539M is for Medicare DSH, not Medicaid DSH. I haven't seen a $475M projection done by the OHCA.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
November 19, 2012

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor Mary Fallin Announcement re/ PPACA Talking Points

- While Governor Mary Fallin has opted not to build a state-based insurance exchange or expand the Medicaid program as proposed in PPACA, she and the Oklahoma legislature remain deeply committed to the health of all Oklahoman’s. One demonstration of this commitment is that they protected the Health and Human Services agencies during the recent economic downturn from significant reductions that would jeopardize the health and safety of our citizens. The end result is that the Health and Human Services area took the smallest reduction of any of the cabinet areas.
- The Governor and her staff have been exploring the impact of PPACA and working with healthcare experts and lawmakers across the country in order to make sound decisions on implementing a state based exchange or expand Medicaid in Oklahoma. The final determination is that this law will not improve the quality of healthcare or address the escalating healthcare costs that are bankrupting our nation, nor does it provide the flexibility needed to improve health outcomes in a financially sound or sustainable manner.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovations in healthcare and the Governor is committed to building upon those innovations to create Oklahoma solutions to our healthcare problems. She welcomes the opportunity to work with the Oklahoma legislature and other stakeholders to develop an Oklahoma plan to reduce the number of uninsured families, provide quality healthcare and address rising healthcare costs.

No it is not still accurate, it means that there will be no state exchange because by the time the election rolls around we will officially be out of time.

Do we have a statement we can send around to people, especially since we told them we did not have any announcements planned and no decisions have been made?

I just talked to the gov. This article says that she isn't going to make a decision until after the election. She says that is accurate.

That is obviously slightly different from what we've been saying, which is no timeline. But in terms of saying we are reviewing our options and haven't decided yet, it is still accurate.

Sorry this took u guys by surprise I was hoping to verify with her before it hit the web.

I said the governor has done what she needed to do in order to keep all our options open, including the creation of an exchange.

Last question on this! I assume the statement below is equally true of both Medicaid expansion and health insurance exchanges, correct?

The governor did say she would make a decision sometime after the election, when it was more clear what the future of the ACA would be. The election ended a very short time ago, as you know. Her priority is not to make this decision as quickly as possible; it is to make the right decision. So Denise, here is what I currently plan to send for today. At some point in the future we can bust out the RGA letter and talk about specific questions and concerns we have

“As the governor has said, she is continuing to explore the state’s options as they relate to health insurance exchanges. Her priority is to ensure the people of Oklahoma are best served by a system that increases access to health care, controls health care costs and does so in a way that is fiscally responsible. Oklahoma is not in a unique position; many other states are continuing to weigh what options best serves their citizens, as is responsible.”

Q: What is your timetable for making this decision? You said you would announce a decision after the election

A: The governor did say she would make a decision sometime after the election, when it was more clear what the future of the ACA would be. The election ended a very short time ago, as you know. Our priority is not to make this decision as quickly as possible, it is to make the right decision. The governor is still conferring with her partners in the Legislature, her cabinet, other governors and health care experts in Oklahoma and around the country as to what outcome best serves the people of Oklahoma.

Obviously I’m going to decline this interview.

Can we say: “As the governor has said, she is continuing to explore the state’s options as they relate to health insurance exchanges. Her priority is to ensure the people of Oklahoma are best served by a system that increases access to health care, controls health care costs and does so in a way that is fiscally responsible. The governor is still conferring with her partners in the Legislature, other governors and health care experts as to what outcome best serves the people of Oklahoma.

I would also like to say the federal government has not answered our questions ... what questions are those? Have we documented them in a letter and if so can I get a copy?

I am getting a lot of requests for interviews on this subject so getting an acceptable answer is a priority. Thanks

So Denise, here is what I currently plan to send for today. At some point in the future we can bust out the RGA letter and talk about specific questions and concerns we have

"As the governor has said, she is continuing to explore the state's options as they relate to health insurance exchanges. Her priority is to ensure the people of Oklahoma are best served by a system that increases access to health care, controls health care costs and does so in a way that is fiscally responsible. Oklahoma is not in a unique position; many other states are continuing to weigh what options best serves their citizens, as is responsible."

Q: What is your timetable for making this decision? You said you would announce a decision after the election

A: The governor did say she would make a decision sometime after the election, when it was more clear what the future of the ACA would be. The election ended a very short time ago, as you know. Our priority is not to make this decision as quickly as possible, it is to make the right decision. The governor is still conferring with her partners in the Legislature, her cabinet, other governors and health care experts in Oklahoma and around the country as to what outcome best serves the people of Oklahoma.

Louisiana:

The Honorable Kathleen Sebelius
Secretary

Department of Health and Human Services
200 Independence Ave, SW
Washington, DC 20201

November 16, 2012

Dear Secretary Sebelius:

As you know, on March 23, 2011, the State of Louisiana announced that it would not assume the risk of building a health insurance Exchange as outlined by the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA). Given the fact that deadlines established in the guidance issued in the August 13, 2012 request of the United States Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) are not legally binding, the State of Louisiana will not be submitting a Declaration Letter; however, this letter serves as the state of Louisiana's position regarding critical components of the PPACA.

Since the PPACA was signed into law, the State of Louisiana has repeatedly stated that the law has severe legal problems, is bad policy, and is unworkable. Those beliefs remain unchanged. With the Supreme Court's decision in National Federation of Independent Business v. Sebelius, the Court agreed with the State of Louisiana that at least one of the over 450 provisions of the PPACA is unconstitutional and the provision requiring all individuals to have insurance coverage can only be upheld as a tax. Even after the Supreme Court's decision, there remain many questions about the legality of the PPACA involving issues fundamental to all Americans, including religious freedom and unjust taxation.

While the Supreme Court ruled on the Constitutionality of some parts of the PPACA, it was not an endorsement of its policy merits. In fact, Chief Justice Roberts underscored this fact when he wrote, "Members of this Court are vested with the authority to interpret the law; we possess neither the expertise nor the prerogative to make policy judgments." The PPACA remains a flawed piece of legislation that fails to fix the fundamental existing problems in the United States health care system, particularly the unsustainable rising costs faced by American families and small businesses. Instead, we are faced with a more tightly controlled federal-run health insurance market that will increase costs, undermine the private health care marketplace, and weaken private sector job creation.

The Supreme Court's decision also fails to resolve the fact that the PPACA is simply an unworkable piece of legislation. With incomplete regulations and unrealistic deadlines, States and the Federal government will struggle to have a health insurance Exchange ready for open enrollment on October 1, 2013 that is not beset with major complications for the insurance market and the respective residents of the States. The full extent of damage the PPACA causes to small businesses, the nation's economy, and the American health care system will only be revealed with time. The State of Louisiana has no interest in being a party to this failure by implementing a state based exchange.

The PPACA's Legality

Louisiana was one of 26 States that filed suit against the federal government concerning the legality of the PPACA, specifically focusing on two parts: § 1501 (the individual mandate) and Title II (the mandatory expansion of the Medicaid eligible population to 133 percent of the federal poverty level). In June of this year, the Supreme Court agreed that the mandatory Medicaid expansion was unconstitutional. They also ruled that the individual mandate was unconstitutional under Congress's Commerce power, but upheld this provision as an example of Congress's taxing power, admitting that the purported penalty is actually a tax.

While the Supreme Court effectively rewrote the PPACA to uphold the individual mandate, they did not rule on the legality of the remainder of the law. In fact, the Supreme Court is aware that future challenges are likely to occur by its recent actions. With continuing questions about the PPACA's legality, we believe it is prudent to wait until these challenges are completely resolved. Provisions that the Court did not rule on that are still being challenged include:

The Employer Mandate

- The PPACA requires that all employers with fifty or more full-time employees provide adequate health care coverage to their employees. (§ 1513, §1514, and §10106). If they do not, these employers could face a tax of $2,000 or $3,000.

Federally-Facilitated Exchange Subsidy

- In the PPACA, State-based health Exchanges are authorized to provide premium assistance subsidies to individuals from 100% to 400% of the Federal Poverty Level. However, the PPACA does not expressly authorize Federally-facilitated Exchanges to do the same. Subsequent regulations from the Internal Revenue Service have interpreted the law so that all Exchanges are able to provide premium assistance. The legality of these regulations is currently being challenged.

Preventative Care Mandate

- Section 2713 of the PPACA allows for the Secretary to define preventive care services to be provided cost-free by all non-grandfathered insurance plans. In August 2011, the Secretary released a regulation that included contraceptive and some abortifacient services as preventative care. The regulation has been challenged by numerous groups and individuals (in over 35 lawsuits) who have religious objections to paying for health insurance that includes coverage for contraception and some abortifacient services.

Maintenance of Effort

- The Supreme Court's decision invalidated the provision of the PPACA which coerced States to expand their Medicaid program by threatening existing Medicaid funding. Questions remain whether this applies to the maintenance of effort (MOE) requirement, requiring States to maintain their existing Medicaid eligibility until 2014.

Origination Clause

- The Supreme Court decision made it clear that the individual mandate is a tax, not a penalty as claimed by the administration. The PPACA originated in the Senate. The Constitution (Article I, Section 7, Clause 1) is clear that all taxes are to originate in the House, and thus the individual mandate has been contested as an unconstitutional tax.

Independent Payment Advisory Board (IPAB)

- Sections 3403 and 10320 of the PPACA created this 15-member federal board that is granted the authority to make payment changes for the Medicare program without approval from Congress. There are also no administrative or judicial reviews of these decisions.

Legality of Rulemaking/Guidance

- With many of the provisions of the PPACA, formal rules and regulations have been delayed or even non-existent. There are serious questions about the legality of this procedure in light of the Administrative Procedures Act.

Bad Policy

While HHS has repeatedly said that the States serve as incubators of innovation, the PPACA robs States of this ability by limiting their opportunities to enact meaningful state-led health care reform. For example, the concept for an Exchange originated as a free market idea meant to lower the cost of health insurance for those who decide to purchase such insurance. In theory, an increased pool for those deciding to purchase health insurance is a good idea. It provides individuals the ability to select the insurance coverage that they want at a lower cost. If this were truly the framework for the Exchange model outlined in PPACA, the State of Louisiana would be glad to evaluate it as an option, adopting it to our State's needs. However, the PPACA Exchange is only masquerading as free market idea, and instead creates a vehicle for the Federal government to tightly control the coverage options available to consumers, raising costs and limiting choice. Many employers will drop the health insurance coverage they currently provide to employees, leaving individual health care needs to the federal government. Specifically, the consequences of the PPACA Exchange and associated insurance changes include:

Lack of Consumer Choice

- When the PPACA was proposed, the President promised that if individuals liked their current health care insurance, they could keep it. However, the PPACA model will actually force individuals into the broken, government-run Medicaid system and into heavily-regulated, government-run health care plans (deemed "minimal essential coverage" by the Federal government).

Individuals should have the right to select what health care plan is best for them, and not be limited to a one-size-fits-all product that a political process deems is "essential". By mandating that certain benefits be provided in all insurance plans, the price of premiums will increase, leaving individuals unable to continue the coverage they like and a price they can afford

Increased Taxes

- The PPACA requires that all Exchanges be financially self-sufficient by 2015. This will require the Exchange to generate revenue, either by instituting user fees in the Exchange market or in the entire insurance market- essentially a tax on all insurance plans purchased. This will only further drive up the costs of premiums in the Exchange market for consumers and for individuals who will have to pay the premium assistance through their taxes.

- The PPACA also includes a tax on insurance premiums which are proposed to be paid for by "the industry." It is troubling that these same taxes will affect managed care organizations, proven mechanisms for more effectively controlling cost for Medicaid and Medicare, especially needed for States with limited financial resources.

Impact on Employers and Employees

- The employer mandate, a tax on employers with fifty or more employees who decide not to provide "adequate" health insurance coverage to their employees, is a disincentive to provide coverage. Already, businesses are attempting to modify their business structure to avoid the law's mandates (either by laying off employees or reducing the number of hours these employees work). Even those employers who provide coverage can be taxed an additional $3,000 if that employee is eligible and enrolls in coverage on the health insurance Exchange. So instead of building upon the existing insurance market, the PPACA is undermining it.

Unworkable

The deadline for all Exchanges (both State and federally-facilitated) to be ready for open enrollment is October 1, 2013. However, it is likely many exchanges will not be ready by that point, even in those States that are supportive of the PPACA. The guidance received from the Federal government is often delayed or non-existent. For a project as large and complicated as health care reform, this is an insurmountable hurdle for the States to overcome. There are numerous unanswered questions and major problems remaining about Exchanges and the provisions of the PPACA entangled with them. Continuing issues include:

Exchanges in General

- In order for an Exchange to be ready for open enrollment on October 1, 2013, it must be approved or conditionally approved by January 1, 2013. However, there have been no formal regulations regarding what guidelines HHS will use to determine if an Exchange is conditionally approved or not.
- It has been continuously promised by officials at HHS that there will be cost comparisons between the Federally-facilitated Exchange, the State-based Exchange, and the partnership Exchanges. These cost estimates have not yet been made public.

Federally-facilitated Exchanges

- To date, in addition to the incomplete final rule for health insurance Exchanges, there has been no rulemaking regarding the Federally-facilitated Exchanges and their interactions with the respective States' eligibility systems. Promised in the March 2012 final Exchange regulation was further guidance regarding the Federally-facilitated Exchange. Since that point, only a questions and answers document has been released.
- Numerous contracts have been signed for the development of the Federally-facilitated Exchange, but these documents have not been made public. The State of Louisiana filed a Freedom of Information Act request within the last month for these contracts and has still not received these documents. Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah requested similar documents in his role as Ranking Member on the U.S. Senate Committee on Finance and has not received a response. It is necessary for these documents to be made public so that States can make informed decisions concerning Exchanges.

Partnership Exchange

- A partnership Exchange will be a Federally-facilitated Exchange with certain functions run by the State. It is an option first introduced by a power point presentation and further expanded by a document entitled "General Guidance on Federally-facilitated Exchanges," but has yet to be defined in federal regulations. The final Exchange rule proposed no regulations regarding this option.

- There has been no answer from the Federal government concerning whether the Federal government or the States will be responsible to pay for the state-run functions of a partnership Exchange.

The Workings of an Exchange

- The Exchange is required to provide premium tax credits to those between 100% and 400% of the federal poverty line. Originally projected to cost the federal government $462 billion between 2012 and 2019, these subsidies are now projected to be $574 billion during the same period by the Congressional Budget Office. Already, Medicare funding will be cut by $700 billion to pay for these premium tax credits. There is discussion that because these levels of subsidies are unsustainable, the number of Americans eligible for premium assistance subsidies will be reduced in number.

Essential Health Benefits and Actuarial Values

- All plans in the individual and small group markets (including plans sold on the respective State Exchanges) must meet "essential health benefits," benefits not yet defined by the Secretary of HHS in formal rulemaking. Initial informal guidance suggests that these benefits will be based off of the most popular small group plans in each State in addition to benefits specified by the PPACA. The States, insurance companies, and other stakeholders are awaiting formal regulations about essential health benefits.

- The States are awaiting a promised "actuarial value calculator" to accurately determine actuarial values for plans sold on the Exchange. This still has not been delivered and numerous questions remain about how actuarial value of health insurance plans will be determined.

Reforms Needed

It is most disappointing that the PPACA failed to offer sustainable reform of the nation's health care system. Instead of strengthening the market to lower costs and increase consumer choice, the PPACA created a big government "solution"- the type of solution history tells us will only create debt and worry for future generations of Americans. Health care reform should focus on improving the value of health care in America by bringing down costs and improving quality.

There are several ways to do this. Transparency in health care is essential for individuals to be better consumers of care. The cost and success rates of different procedures can be made publically available to help individuals make decisions about their care. Increased competition through individuals being allowed to purchase insurance across State lines can create greater competition and lower costs.

Similarly, just as individuals should have more investment in their health care choices, States should have greater ability to design programs that meet the needs of their people. States know how to take care of their residents more than the bureaucrats in Washington, distant both in geography and in experience. Louisiana, for example, has been able to make remarkable progress in its care of the Medicaid population through an innovative model of managed care, saving money and improving the quality of care. However, constrained by the federal requirements for Medicaid, Louisiana can only do so much. It is time to give the States the option to administer this program through block grants to save both the Federal and State taxpayers money and eliminate the perverse incentives created by federal rules and funding streams.

States need to be given the tools to solve these problems. The PPACA should either be repealed or replaced with a system giving States the ability to truly innovate. At the very least, we ask that you give the States flexibility through waivers exempting States from the burdensome requirements of the PPACA while providing the care their populations need and want in the way the States know best how to deliver.

In addition to these needed reforms, the State of Louisiana fully expects HHS to coordinate its efforts regarding implementation of a Federally-facilitated Exchange in an effort to mitigate the negative impact on either our private insurance market or the Medicaid program. The State expects that the Federal government will adhere to the four guiding principles included in the "General Guidance on Federally-facilitated Exchanges" and intends to hold the Federal government accountable to these principles. Additionally, the impact on our State's budget is a significant concern. In this light we expect that HHS will:

- Provide a full and complete briefing to the State officials regarding on-going implementation efforts;
- Schedule routine meetings to update State officials on the implementation status;
- Notify the State when all stakeholder, consumer, or any other public meetings or public outreach activities are scheduled;
- Work with the State on memorandums of understanding and/or contracts if the Federal-facilitated Exchange expects any support or assistance of the State so that the State is fairly and equitably compensated, including for the use of any State data used by the Federally-facilitated Exchange to verify income;
- Provide the names of all contractors who will be working in the State on the Federally-facilitated Exchange and the details about what activities these contractors will be involved in, including copies of all contracts;

- After the establishment of the Exchange, provide regular (at least semi-annual) updates on its utilization, cost (including long-term financial health), and its impact on the State's insurance market, including, but not limited to the information that must be provided pursuant to §1311(d)(7) of the PPACA;
- If any changes to the Federally-facilitated Exchange model are anticipated, the State is notified immediately; and
- Inform the State of any navigator grant recipients and provide copies of memorandums of understanding between navigators and the Federally-facilitated Exchange.

All further correspondence regarding the PPACA and health insurance Exchange issues is to be directed to the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals (Bruce Greenstein, Secretary), the official agency authorized to collaborate with HHS on issues concerning the PPACA in Louisiana. The State of Louisiana hopes that HHS will listen to its concerns and give the States actual flexibility to improve health care for all Americans.

Sincerely,

Bruce D. Greenstein

Louisiana:

The Honorable Kathleen Sebelius
Secretary
Department of Health and Human Services
200 Independence Ave, SW
Washington, DC 20201

November 16, 2012

Dear Secretary Sebelius:

As you know, on March 23, 2011, the State of Louisiana announced that it would not assume the risk of building a health insurance Exchange as outlined by the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA). Given the fact that deadlines established in the guidance issued in the August 13, 2012 request of the United States Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) are not legally binding, the State of Louisiana will not be submitting a Declaration Letter; however, this letter serves as the state of Louisiana's position regarding critical components of the PPACA.

Since the PPACA was signed into law, the State of Louisiana has repeatedly stated that the law has severe legal problems, is bad policy, and is unworkable. Those beliefs remain unchanged. With the Supreme Court's decision in National Federation of Independent Business v. Sebelius, the Court agreed with the State of Louisiana that at least one of the over 450 provisions of the PPACA is unconstitutional and the provision requiring all individuals to have insurance coverage can only be upheld as a tax. Even after the Supreme Court's decision, there remain many questions about the legality of the PPACA involving issues fundamental to all Americans, including religious freedom and unjust taxation.

While the Supreme Court ruled on the Constitutionality of some parts of the PPACA, it was not an endorsement of its policy merits. In fact, Chief Justice Roberts underscored this fact when he wrote, "Members of this Court are vested with the authority to interpret the law; we possess neither the expertise nor the prerogative to make policy judgments." The PPACA remains a flawed piece of legislation that fails to fix the fundamental existing problems in the United States health care system, particularly the unsustainable rising costs faced by American families and small businesses. Instead, we are faced with a more tightly controlled federal-run health insurance market that will increase costs, undermine the private health care marketplace, and weaken private sector job creation.

The Supreme Court's decision also fails to resolve the fact that the PPACA is simply an unworkable piece of legislation. With incomplete regulations and unrealistic deadlines, States and the Federal government will struggle to have a health insurance Exchange ready for open enrollment on October 1, 2013 that is not beset with major complications for the insurance market and the respective residents of the States. The full extent of damage the PPACA causes to small businesses, the nation's economy, and the American health care system will only be revealed with time. The State of Louisiana has no interest in being a party to this failure by implementing a state based exchange.

The PPACA's Legality

Louisiana was one of 26 States that filed suit against the federal government concerning the legality of the PPACA, specifically focusing on two parts: § 1501 (the individual mandate) and Title II (the mandatory expansion of the Medicaid eligible population to 133 percent of the federal poverty level). In June of this year, the Supreme Court agreed that the mandatory Medicaid expansion was unconstitutional. They also ruled that the individual mandate was unconstitutional under Congress's Commerce power, but upheld this provision as an example of Congress's taxing power, admitting that the purported penalty is actually a tax.

While the Supreme Court effectively rewrote the PPACA to uphold the individual mandate, they did not rule on the legality of the remainder of the law. In fact, the Supreme Court is aware that future challenges are likely to occur by its recent actions. With continuing questions about the PPACA's legality, we believe it is prudent to wait until these challenges are completely resolved. Provisions that the Court did not rule on that are still being challenged include:

The Employer Mandate

- The PPACA requires that all employers with fifty or more full-time employees provide adequate health care coverage to their employees. (§ 1513, §1514, and §10106). If they do not, these employers could face a tax of $2,000 or $3,000.

Federally-Facilitated Exchange Subsidy

- In the PPACA, State-based health Exchanges are authorized to provide premium assistance subsidies to individuals from 100% to 400% of the Federal Poverty Level. However, the PPACA does not expressly authorize Federally-facilitated Exchanges to do the same. Subsequent regulations from the Internal Revenue Service have interpreted the law so that all Exchanges are able to provide premium assistance. The legality of these regulations is currently being challenged.

Preventative Care Mandate

- Section 2713 of the PPACA allows for the Secretary to define preventive care services to be provided cost-free by all non-grandfathered insurance plans. In August 2011, the Secretary released a regulation that included contraceptive and some abortifacient services as preventative care. The regulation has been challenged by numerous groups and individuals (in over 35 lawsuits) who have religious objections to paying for health insurance that includes coverage for contraception and some abortifacient services.

Maintenance of Effort

- The Supreme Court's decision invalidated the provision of the PPACA which coerced States to expand their Medicaid program by threatening existing Medicaid funding. Questions remain whether this applies to the maintenance of effort (MOE) requirement, requiring States to maintain their existing Medicaid eligibility until 2014.

Origination Clause

- The Supreme Court decision made it clear that the individual mandate is a tax, not a penalty as claimed by the administration. The PPACA originated in the Senate. The Constitution (Article I, Section 7, Clause 1) is clear that all taxes are to originate in the House, and thus the individual mandate has been contested as an unconstitutional tax.

Independent Payment Advisory Board (IPAB)

- Sections 3403 and 10320 of the PPACA created this 15-member federal board that is granted the authority to make payment changes for the Medicare program without approval from Congress. There are also no administrative or judicial reviews of these decisions.

Legality of Rulemaking/Guidance

- With many of the provisions of the PPACA, formal rules and regulations have been delayed or even non-existent. There are serious questions about the legality of this procedure in light of the Administrative Procedures Act.

Bad Policy

While HHS has repeatedly said that the States serve as incubators of innovation, the PPACA robs States of this ability by limiting their opportunities to enact meaningful state-led health care reform. For example, the concept for an Exchange originated as a free market idea meant to lower the cost of health insurance for those who decide to purchase such insurance. In theory, an increased pool for those deciding to purchase health insurance is a good idea. It provides individuals the ability to select the insurance coverage that they want at a lower cost. If this were truly the framework for the Exchange model outlined in PPACA, the State of Louisiana would be glad to evaluate it as an option, adopting it to our State's needs. However, the PPACA Exchange is only masquerading as free market idea, and instead creates a vehicle for the Federal government to tightly control the coverage options available to consumers, raising costs and limiting choice. Many employers will drop the health insurance coverage they currently provide to employees, leaving individual health care needs to the federal government. Specifically, the consequences of the PPACA Exchange and associated insurance changes include:

Lack of Consumer Choice

- When the PPACA was proposed, the President promised that if individuals liked their current health care insurance, they could keep it. However, the PPACA model will actually force individuals into the broken, government-run Medicaid system and into heavily-regulated, government-run health care plans (deemed "minimal essential coverage" by the Federal government).

Individuals should have the right to select what health care plan is best for them, and not be limited to a one-size-fits-all product that a political process deems is "essential". By mandating that certain benefits be provided in all insurance plans, the price of premiums will increase, leaving individuals unable to continue the coverage they like and a price they can afford

Increased Taxes

- The PPACA requires that all Exchanges be financially self-sufficient by 2015. This will require the Exchange to generate revenue, either by instituting user fees in the Exchange market or in the entire insurance market- essentially a tax on all insurance plans purchased. This will only further drive up the costs of premiums in the Exchange market for consumers and for individuals who will have to pay the premium assistance through their taxes.

- The PPACA also includes a tax on insurance premiums which are proposed to be paid for by "the industry." It is troubling that these same taxes will affect managed care organizations, proven mechanisms for more effectively controlling cost for Medicaid and Medicare, especially needed for States with limited financial resources.

Impact on Employers and Employees

- The employer mandate, a tax on employers with fifty or more employees who decide not to provide "adequate" health insurance coverage to their employees, is a disincentive to provide coverage. Already, businesses are attempting to modify their business structure to avoid the law's mandates (either by laying off employees or reducing the number of hours these employees work). Even those employers who provide coverage can be taxed an additional $3,000 if that employee is eligible and enrolls in coverage on the health insurance Exchange. So instead of building upon the existing insurance market, the PPACA is undermining it.

Unworkable

The deadline for all Exchanges (both State and federally-facilitated) to be ready for open enrollment is October 1, 2013. However, it is likely many exchanges will not be ready by that point, even in those States that are supportive of the PPACA. The guidance received from the Federal government is often delayed or non-existent. For a project as large and complicated as health care reform, this is an insurmountable hurdle for the States to overcome. There are numerous unanswered questions and major problems remaining about Exchanges and the provisions of the PPACA entangled with them. Continuing issues include:

Exchanges in General

- In order for an Exchange to be ready for open enrollment on October 1, 2013, it must be approved or conditionally approved by January 1, 2013. However, there have been no formal regulations regarding what guidelines HHS will use to determine if an Exchange is conditionally approved or not.

- It has been continuously promised by officials at HHS that there will be cost comparisons between the Federally-facilitated Exchange, the State-based Exchange, and the partnership Exchanges. These cost estimates have not yet been made public.

Federally-facilitated Exchanges

- To date, in addition to the incomplete final rule for health insurance Exchanges, there has been no rulemaking regarding the Federally-facilitated Exchanges and their interactions with the respective States' eligibility systems. Promised in the March 2012 final Exchange regulation was further guidance regarding the Federally-facilitated Exchange. Since that point, only a questions and answers document has been released.

- Numerous contracts have been signed for the development of the Federally-facilitated Exchange, but these documents have not been made public. The State of Louisiana filed a Freedom of Information Act request within the last month for these contracts and has still not received these documents. Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah requested similar documents in his role as Ranking Member on the U.S. Senate Committee on Finance and has not received a response. It is necessary for these documents to be made public so that States can make informed decisions concerning Exchanges.

Partnership Exchange

- A partnership Exchange will be a Federally-facilitated Exchange with certain functions run by the State. It is an option first introduced by a power point presentation and further expanded by a document entitled "General Guidance on Federally-facilitated Exchanges," but has yet to be defined in federal regulations. The final Exchange rule proposed no regulations regarding this option.

- There has been no answer from the Federal government concerning whether the Federal government or the States will be responsible to pay for the state-run functions of a partnership Exchange.

The Workings of an Exchange

- The Exchange is required to provide premium tax credits to those between 100% and 400% of the federal poverty line. Originally projected to cost the federal government $462 billion between 2012 and 2019, these subsidies are now projected to be $574 billion during the same period by the Congressional Budget Office. Already, Medicare funding will be cut by $700 billion to pay for these premium tax credits. There is discussion that because these levels of subsidies are unsustainable, the number of Americans eligible for premium assistance subsidies will be reduced in number.

Essential Health Benefits and Actuarial Values

- All plans in the individual and small group markets (including plans sold on the respective State Exchanges) must meet "essential health benefits," benefits not yet defined by the Secretary of HHS in formal rulemaking. Initial informal guidance suggests that these benefits will be based off of the most popular small group plans in each State in addition to benefits specified by the PPACA. The States, insurance companies, and other stakeholders are awaiting formal regulations about essential health benefits.

- The States are awaiting a promised "actuarial value calculator" to accurately determine actuarial values for plans sold on the Exchange. This still has not been delivered and numerous questions remain about how actuarial value of health insurance plans will be determined.

Reforms Needed

It is most disappointing that the PPACA failed to offer sustainable reform of the nation's health care system. Instead of strengthening the market to lower costs and increase consumer choice, the PPACA created a big government "solution"- the type of solution history tells us will only create debt and worry for future generations of Americans. Health care reform should focus on improving the value of health care in America by bringing down costs and improving quality.

There are several ways to do this. Transparency in health care is essential for individuals to be better consumers of care. The cost and success rates of different procedures can be made publically available to help individuals make decisions about their care. Increased competition through individuals being allowed to purchase insurance across State lines can create greater competition and lower costs.

Similarly, just as individuals should have more investment in their health care choices, States should have greater ability to design programs that meet the needs of their people. States know how to take care of their residents more than the bureaucrats in Washington, distant both in geography and in experience. Louisiana, for example, has been able to make remarkable progress in its care of the Medicaid population through an innovative model of managed care, saving money and improving the quality of care. However, constrained by the federal requirements for Medicaid, Louisiana can only do so much. It is time to give the States the option to administer this program through block grants to save both the Federal and State taxpayers money and eliminate the perverse incentives created by federal rules and funding streams.

States need to be given the tools to solve these problems. The PPACA should either be repealed or replaced with a system giving States the ability to truly innovate. At the very least, we ask that you give the States flexibility through waivers exempting States from the burdensome requirements of the PPACA while providing the care their populations need and want in the way the States know best how to deliver.

In addition to these needed reforms, the State of Louisiana fully expects HHS to coordinate its efforts regarding implementation of a Federally-facilitated Exchange in an effort to mitigate the negative impact on either our private insurance market or the Medicaid program. The State expects that the Federal government will adhere to the four guiding principles included in the "General Guidance on Federally-facilitated Exchanges" and intends to hold the Federal government accountable to these principles. Additionally, the impact on our State's budget is a significant concern. In this light we expect that HHS will:

- Provide a full and complete briefing to the State officials regarding on-going implementation efforts;
- Schedule routine meetings to update State officials on the implementation status;

- Notify the State when all stakeholder, consumer, or any other public meetings or public outreach activities are scheduled;
- Work with the State on memorandums of understanding and/or contracts if the Federally-facilitated Exchange expects any support or assistance of the State so that the State is fairly and equitably compensated, including for the use of any State data used by the Federally-facilitated Exchange to verify income;
- Provide the names of all contractors who will be working in the State on the Federally-facilitated Exchange and the details about what activities these contractors will be involved in, including copies of all contracts;
- After the establishment of the Exchange, provide regular (at least semi-annual) updates on its utilization, cost (including long-term financial health), and its impact on the State's insurance market, including, but not limited to the information that must be provided pursuant to §1311(d)(7) of the PPACA;
- If any changes to the Federally-facilitated Exchange model are anticipated, the State is notified immediately; and
- Inform the State of any navigator grant recipients and provide copies of memorandums of understanding between navigators and the Federally-facilitated Exchange.

All further correspondence regarding the PPACA and health insurance Exchange issues is to be directed to the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals (Bruce Greenstein, Secretary), the official agency authorized to collaborate with HHS on issues concerning the PPACA in Louisiana. The State of Louisiana hopes that HHS will listen to its concerns and give the States actual flexibility to improve health care for all Americans.

Sincerely,

Bruce D. Greenstein

Governor, the "Joint Committee on the Federal Health Care Law" chaired by Stanislawski and Mulready is releasing a report in a few minutes. One of their recommendations will be to create a free market health insurance exchange that is integrated with Insure Oklahoma and similar to the Utah Model.

Our planned response will be something along the lines of:

As Governor Fallin has said in the past, she supports developing an Oklahoma-based free market exchange, not only to prevent the creation of a federal exchange run by Washington bureaucrats, but also to increase access to affordable health insurance for Oklahomans.

If no action is taken by lawmakers in Oklahoma, federal law under "ObamaCare" clearly states that a federally designed and run health insurance exchange will be forced on the state and its citizens. The governor is absolutely opposed to such a federal incursion and believes a state based solution is the best way to prevent that outcome.

Governor Fallin is reviewing the recommendations of the legislature. She appreciates their work on this issue and the positive steps they have taken towards an Oklahoma-based, free market solution that will help to prevent the implementation of ObamaCare.

I think there are too distinct issues though. Regardless of whether it is or not, I do not believe Governor Fallin has made the claim that Medicaid is currently growing faster than the rest of the state's budget. What she has said is that when fully implemented ObamaCare will add to the Medicaid rolls and thus to both state and federal spending.

The Oklahoma Health Care Authority estimates that the Obamacare Medicaid expansion will cost an additional $4.6 billion in state and federal funding and will add 250,000 new Oklahoman's to the Medicaid rolls from 2014-2020.

Jon, Mike:

Bloomberg Government's coming out with a study later today finding that contrary to claims by some governors and other elected officials -- mostly but not all Republicans -- Medicaid is NOT growing faster than the rest of states' budgets.

Adjusting for inflation, Medicaid spending by states has grown only 12 percent in the last decade. It's remained flat as a share of state budgets, at about 10 percent. The numbers were compiled from data from the National Association of State Budget Officers.

Governors that the study quotes as claiming excessive Medicaid growth include Bob McDonnell (growing at "unsustainable levels"), Scott Walker ("by far the fastest-growing portion of our budget") and Mary Fallin ("going up and up and up.")

Wanted to see if RGA would like to comment.

Regardless of whether it is or not, I do not believe Governor Fallin has made the claim that Medicaid is currently growing faster than the rest of the state's budget. What she has said is that when fully implemented ObamaCare will add to the Medicaid rolls and thus to both state and federal spending.

The Oklahoma Health Care Authority estimates that the Obamacare Medicaid expansion will cost an additional $4.6 billion in state and federal funding and will add 250,000 new Oklahoman's to the Medicaid rolls from 2014-2020.

Hi Alex - Please see below. Do you have any data points available that help backup Gov. Fallin's rhetoric about the growth of Medicaid in the state budget?

Jon, Mike:

Bloomberg Government's coming out with a study later today finding that contrary to claims by some governors and other elected officials -- mostly but not all Republicans -- Medicaid is NOT growing faster than the rest of states' budgets.

Adjusting for inflation, Medicaid spending by states has grown only 12 percent in the last decade. It's remained flat as a share of state budgets, at about 10 percent. The numbers were compiled from data from the National Association of State Budget Officers.

Governors that the study quotes as claiming excessive Medicaid growth include Bob McDonnell (growing at "unsustainable levels"), Scott Walker ("by far the fastest-growing portion of our budget") and Mary Fallin ("going up and up and up.")

Wanted to see if RGA would like to comment.

Gov. Mary Fallin, Speaker-designate T.W. Shannon and Insurance Commissioner John Doak spoke to attendees of the inaugural Oklahoma Health Care Summit Thursday about current health policies and the changes they may undergo in the coming legislative session. The summit was organized by Physicians Liability Insurance Company and featured speakers and exhibits. The three state leaders were asked to address the state of Oklahoma health care. All three speakers addressed the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and its potential implications on Oklahoma. "We are proceeding very cautiously," Fallin said. As the newly elected vice chair of the National Governors Association, Fallin said that many governors have questions about how states will implement the law, which is why the association sent a list of questions to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The department does not seem to have any answers yet, she said.

Specifically, states are concerned about the effect the law will have on Medicare and Medicaid, the reimbursement rates and the effect on state budgets, Fallin said.

"We're all very concerned about the cost factor," she said, adding that the estimated cost for Oklahoma's implementation is $100 million a year.

While the U.S. Supreme Court did rule in favor of the constitutionality of the law, Fallin said that things may change with the November elections. She said she is in favor of "repealing and replacing" the Affordable Care Act.

Doak said he was interested to see how states approached the development of health insurance exchanges, one of the requirements of the act.

"If we don't put one in place, the federal government will," he said.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is the law, and as an insurance regulator he is required to follow the law. However, Doak said he is waiting on some actions to be taken at the state Capitol. Legislation has not yet been passed to establish a state-based exchange.

Shannon, R-Lawton, said the state cannot afford to wait for the federal government to take the lead. He said the federal government's "takeover of the health care system" is an opportunity for Oklahoma to lead. That lead includes market-based solutions, he said.

"Market-based solutions work," Shannon said, and they will work in health care but they have not been implemented. Many continue to say that government is the answer, but subsidizing the problem does not seem to drive down costs. In fact, it has the opposite effect, he said.

Shannon expressed concern about the number of physicians in the state, including those with graying hair who may be considering leaving the field. The number of people on Medicaid also needs to be reduced, which means more jobs, he said.

The state of Oklahoma's health also needs to be discussed, he said. While he has concerns about how much government should be involved in some areas, Shannon said he had to acknowledge that government is often left with the cost of an unhealthy society.

As solutions are crafted in the next legislative session, Shannon said people from the industry would be asked for their involvement.

Subject: Patients over Bureaucrats

Dear Governors:

Once the United States Supreme Court reminds our constitutional lawyer professor-turned-President of the existence of the Tenth Amendment and the limits of the Commerce Clause, thereby repealing Obamacare, the natural question becomes, what's next? All of the problems that existed before President Obama, then-Speaker Pelosi, and Senate Majority Leader Reid forced through a bill to raise hundreds of billions of dollars in taxes, cut Medicare spending, and create yet another entitlement program we cannot afford will still exist.

The American health care system has many well documented flaws, but reminds me of Churchill's description of democracy as the "worst form of government, except for all those other forms that have been tried." Surely, our health care system is too expensive, leaves too many families without coverage, and is plagued by redundant paperwork and procedures. Yet, at its best, there is no better. When your child or parent is sick, you don't wish they could be treated elsewhere. But, you might be worried about how you are going to pay for the medical bills after they get better.

The President often promised that he would bend the health care cost curve down, and I just wish he had succeeded, or even really tried, and had done so in a way that maximizes our freedom. Health care reform is filled with confusing acronyms and large numbers, but really comes down to one simple question: Who do we want making our health care decisions? Do we want doctors and their patients in charge or do we want government bureaucrats in charge? Since health care is such a personal matter – impacting us when we are the most vulnerable - and also expensive – consuming an increasingly larger share of our economy, how we answer this question may be one of the most important domestic policy decisions we make.

President Obama has made it clear his answer involves a top down government run approach that, as President Reagan famously said, “would have the efficiency of the Postal Service and the compassion of the I.R.S.” I was no great fan of the late Senator Ted Kennedy’s policies or politics, but did admire his philosophical consistency and dogged determination to get to a single payer system. I only wish more of our Republican members of Congress displayed those same traits in defense of a consumer based system. Senator Kennedy would pursue incremental steps or huge leaps towards government run health care, depending on the political circumstances, but he always worked to move the system in his direction. We need Republicans in Washington to stop viewing health care as simply a Democratic issue and to stop thinking they have achieved victory when they merely adopt a cheaper version of the Democratic plan. Over the years, Republican members of Congress have slowed down the other side, but have not prevented government from taking over more and more of our health care system. Indeed, the government is soon expected to pay for half of all health care spending, with that portion continuing to increase.

So, what next? How do we strengthen and improve a consumer based health care system? Let’s consider three main purchasers of health care – Medicare, Medicaid, and private insurance.

Medicare

The recent trustees report confirms what everyone already knows, but most in Washington want to ignore. Medicare is going broke, based on solvency of the hospital trust fund, percentage of GDP spent, growth in spending versus revenues, etc. The program today wastes billions of taxpayer dollars each year in fraud and waste, while trapping seniors in a system drowning in what the Mayo Clinic once counted as 130,000 pages of rules and regulations. Len Nichols described the program as the federal government trying to set 10,000 prices in 3,000 counties, making the Pentagon’s $400 hammers and $600 toilet seats look quaint by comparison. The Left wants to raise payroll taxes, while Congress and the bureaucrats continue to make political decisions on how much services should cost, which treatments are covered, and how often patients can visit their providers. The consumer based alternative is to adopt a premium support model, similar to the one used for federal employees, Members of Congress, and many in the private sector, to subsidize the majority of the premiums paid by seniors free to choose their own health care plan which best meets their needs.

Medicaid

The Medicaid program, jointly financed and overseen by the states and the federal government, continues to overwhelm state budgets, consuming more scarce tax dollars and threatening funding for schools and roads, while failing to deliver health care efficiently. While welfare reform continues to stand as one of the most impressive recent domestic policy accomplishments to come from Washington, not exactly a high bar, liberal advocacy groups pressured Congress to inexplicably exclude Medicaid. States need to be freed from the D.C. bureaucracy. The same local flexibility, accountability based on outcomes not process, and an emphasis on helping the poor to thrive in the mainstream that succeeded in transforming welfare will work with Medicaid. There is no excuse for a continued “separate but equal” health care system in this day and age. Democrats have blocked various Republican attempts to block grant the Medicaid program for years, while ignoring the pleas of governors from both parties for regulatory relief and an end to the unfunded mandates.

At the very least, Congress should allow states to opt-in to a more flexible long-term funding arrangement; the Obama Administration could accomplish this through waivers, but won't. States would receive guaranteed federal funding, adjusted on a per capita basis to account for economic cycles, and would agree to predictable federal funding caps set lower than current predicted growth rates in exchange for relief from federal regulations. States would have the freedom to design programs that best meet their people's needs, combined with an incentive to lower costs rather than game the system. Instead of the federal government designing one size fits all eligibility requirements and micromanaging benefit designs and copayment rules, states would be required to focus on improving health outcomes for their vulnerable populations. At the very least, Washington should allow states to start such a program for the able bodied populations, i.e., those who qualify for Medicaid primarily due to income and not health status, which comprise the majority of Medicaid beneficiaries, while considering special protections for the elderly and disabled.

Here is a radical thought – why not free the states to focus their efforts and spending on helping beneficiaries get better paying jobs so they can afford their own health care and break the cycle of dependence? Why not use more Medicaid spending to subsidize private coverage, rather than building public bureaucracies, as a transition to the independence envisioned in welfare reform?

Private Coverage

The American health insurance marketplace simply does not work as it should today. It actually does not resemble any reasonably functioning insurance system. The idea of insurance should be to pool risk over large populations and time to protect individuals against unpredictable and potentially overwhelming risk. Obviously, different people with different income, assets, and medical conditions will have different levels of overwhelming risk. Yet, health insurance, especially individual coverage, today often effectively screens out the sick, offering coverage when we least need it, and too often simply offers prepaid health care coverage.

A good way to understand the failings of the marketplace is to compare health care insurance with other insurance. For example, most of us don't file claims with our auto insurers for every ding our car doors get in the parking lot, knowing the resulting increase in premiums and hassle in paperwork aren't worth the payout. We either pay to fix the car door ourselves or live with the scratches. Yet, we have been trained to expect first dollar coverage for minor procedures, while more and more employers and plans are capping coverage with episodic, annual, or lifetime limits. Also, most of us aren't frustrated at the end of the year that our homes haven't flooded or burned down, expecting refunds for our property insurance premiums. We don't set fire to a bedroom at the end of the year to ensure we get our money's worth! Yet, many patients flood their doctors' offices or refill prescriptions early towards the end of the year once they have exceeded their deductibles, determined to get their money's worth.

Part of the problem is that our health insurance system has evolved over time almost by accident in response to wage controls, tax policies, and other pressures so that most Americans get their coverage through their employers. The resulting subsidy and economies of scale are important benefits, but it is time to modernize our health care system since neither the status quo nor the President's prescribed fix is acceptable.

Just as technology is transforming our society and empowering the individual, our health care system must also evolve from a top down approach, run by either insurance or government bureaucrats, to a bottom up system where patients make decisions. We need more transparency, where individuals have access to pricing and easily understandable and comparable outcomes and quality data via the internet and also have portable electronic health care records, so that patients can easily navigate what could otherwise be a confusing, potentially scary, and highly technical array of options. Consumers should share in the savings of best practices and have more, not less, access to health savings accounts and other tax advantaged financing mechanisms that reward them for seeking care in cost-effective settings, reducing the likelihood of chronic disease, complying with medical regimens, and applying savings towards future health care costs. Insurance must be made portable across state lines and jobs, and accompanied by policies that reduce the dangers of adverse risk selection with the least amount of intrusion into the markets and our lives (e.g., reinsurance, high-risk pools, fixed open enrollment periods). Consumers, including those working for or owning a small business, must have the opportunity to purchase coverage through voluntary pools, whether through trade associations or churches or unions or whatever, to enjoy the same benefits of scale currently offered to those receiving care through large employers or the government. Payment should be for performance, not activity, rewarding integrated networks offering coordinated care, disease management, and preventative care. Frivolous lawsuit reform is a critical component of a reformed health marketplace that will save billions of dollars while also reducing overutilization. Finally, those needing help to afford their care should get that help via refundable tax credits to subsidize the cost of private coverage rather than building another government-run health plan.

Churchill also said about the American people, "We can always count on the Americans to do the right thing, after they have exhausted all the other possibilities." With Obamacare, we have certainly exhausted all the other possibilities; now is the time to do the right thing and reform our health care system to empower the patient instead of the bureaucrats.

Thanks,

Bobby

When you guys get a chance and settled in to your new position, let's think about what makes sense

Oops, forgot about this one last “opt-out” note...

If indeed we have to “opt-out” of the expansion, that WILL require some joint agreement from the legislature which I think needs to be clear in tomorrows meeting with speaker designate and ppt

Do we have any other confirmation of this opinion?

Katie –

The first document includes maps of where we believe the “new” eligibles would be (by county). There are actually three maps – one representing 100% enrollment, one representing 75%, and one at 57%.

The second document provides you information about the eligibles, economic impact, reduced uncompensated care, federal matching rates, etc. (I provided notes on the second page to explain the numbers on the first page.) Also, wanted to point out that we did use the 2007 economic impact study - - newer IMPLAN values are not available at this time (ie, for tax revenue). We did talk with the OTC regarding this and they believe, because of other factors occurring since 2007, that the number we have would be pretty well on target.

And, then on another note, we learned today that this will be an “opt-out” eligibility group rather than an “opt-in”. This changes things a bit now; in order to “opt-out” we would probably need legislation.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Yep, guess we just send that...but I would try to make sure with her...its going to start a shitstorm... and basically make her decision for us...without even having met with the speaker and the ppt yet, which I'm not comfortable with. we don't get to write our own dialogue on this, which would be unfortunate.

Can we beg off and say the gov is in the air and wait until tomorrow?

Subject: RE: FOX 25 healthcare reform question

Governor Fallin was disappointed and frustrated with the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the bulk of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). She believes the law is unaffordable and unworkable, and that many aspects of the bill — including the individual mandate — grant Congress power that was not intended by the authors of the Constitution. She voted against the bill as a congresswoman and supported the lawsuit filed by Oklahoma's attorney general as governor. She continues her adamant opposition to the law, and will actively campaign for conservative candidates, including the Republican presidential nominee, who pledge to overturn and replace the ACA.

However, in light of the Supreme Court's decision to uphold most of the ACA, Governor Fallin believes it is her responsibility to thoroughly and thoughtfully review the state of Oklahoma's options regarding the future of both Medicaid and the creation of a health insurance exchange. Her priority is not to make a decision soon; it is to make the right decision. The governor will continue to review how the state of Oklahoma can best meet the health care needs of its citizens. Our office will proactively relay these decisions to Governor Fallin's constituents and to the media as they are made.

Oklahoma(18%). Gov. Mary Fallin, a Republican, plans to wait until after the November election to decide how to proceed, according to local news accounts. ## Pelosi on Obamacare: I Knew Ted Kennedy 'Would Go to Heaven and Help Us Pass the Bill'

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) (CNSNews.com/Penny Starr)

(CNSNews.com) – House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) said Thursday that “It’s pretty exciting” that the Supreme Court upheld the health-care law’s individual mandate as a tax, saying now Sen. Ted Kennedy can “rest in peace.”

“I knew that when he left us he would go to heaven and help pass the bill,” Pelosi said of the late Massachusetts Democratic senator.

“Now I know he was busily at work until this decision came down, inspiring one way or another. And now he can rest in peace.”

Pelosi, who had previously predicted a 6-3 victory for Obamacare, said the decision was “no surprise.” The Minority Leader cited “interstate commerce” in defending the constitutionality of the law, despite the Supreme Court’s ruling that the mandate is not justified under the Commerce Clause.

“We thought—we knew we were on solid ground in terms of interstate commerce, solid ground in terms of the constitution, it was just a question of what the vote would be,” she said. “And with that confidence we happily embraced the decision that came down.”

“Now it can move forward with the full implementation of the law and when that happens for the American people the best is yet to come,” Pelosi said.

Congressional Democrats utilized the slogan, “Win one for Teddy,” when trying to pass healthcare reform in 2009 after Kennedy died of brain cancer that August. Kennedy was a longtime champion for health-care reform.

“I want to say a word about Senator [Ted] Kennedy,” Pelosi said. “I spoke to Vicki Kennedy this morning and Patrick Kennedy before coming here, thanking them for the important role that he played a lifetime of commitment to making healthcare a right, not a privilege in our country. He called it the great unfinished business of our country, our society.”

In a Supreme Court decision Thursday, Chief Justice John Roberts wrote that the individual mandate is not justified under the Commerce Clause but could be justified under the Congress’ power to tax and spend.

“The Court today holds that our Constitution protects us from federal regulation under the Commerce Clause so long as we abstain from the regulated activity. But from its creation, the Constitution has made no such promise with respect to taxes,” he wrote in the 5-4 majority opinion.

“We thought—we knew we were on solid ground in terms of interstate commerce, solid ground in terms of the constitution, it was just a question of what the vote would be,” she said. “And with that confidence we happily embraced the decision that came down.”

“Now it can move forward with the full implementation of the law and when that happens for the American people the best is yet to come,” Pelosi said.

Congressional Democrats utilized the slogan, “Win one for Teddy,” when trying to pass healthcare reform in 2009 after Kennedy died of brain cancer that August. Kennedy was a longtime champion for health-care reform.

“I want to say a word about Senator [Ted] Kennedy,” Pelosi said. “I spoke to Vicki Kennedy this morning and Patrick Kennedy before coming here, thanking them for the important role that he played a lifetime of commitment to making healthcare a right, not a privilege in our country. He called it the great unfinished business of our country, our society.”

In a Supreme Court decision Thursday, Chief Justice John Roberts wrote that the individual mandate is not justified under the Commerce Clause but could be justified under the Congress’ power to tax and spend.

“The Court today holds that our Constitution protects us from federal regulation under the Commerce Clause so long as we abstain from the regulated activity. But from its creation, the Constitution has made no such promise with respect to taxes,” he wrote in the 5-4 majority opinion.

Pelosi on Obamacare: I Knew Ted Kennedy ‘Would Go to Heaven and Help Us Pass the Bill’

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) (CNSNews.com/Penny Starr)

(CNSNews.com) – House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) said Thursday that “It’s pretty exciting” that the Supreme Court upheld the health-care law’s individual mandate as a tax, saying now Sen. Ted Kennedy can “rest in peace.”

“I knew that when he left us he would go to heaven and help pass the bill,” Pelosi said of the late Massachusetts Democratic senator.

“Now I know he was busily at work until this decision came down, inspiring one way or another. And now he can rest in peace.”

Pelosi, who had previously predicted a 6-3 victory for Obamacare, said the decision was “no surprise.” The Minority Leader cited “interstate commerce” in defending the constitutionality of the law, despite the Supreme Court’s ruling that the mandate is not justified under the Commerce Clause.

“We thought—we knew we were on solid ground in terms of interstate commerce, solid ground in terms of the constitution, it was just a question of what the vote would be,” she said. “And with that confidence we happily embraced the decision that came down.”

“Now it can move forward with the full implementation of the law and when that happens for the American people the best is yet to come,” Pelosi said.

Date: Wednesday, August 01, 2012 7:17:25 PM

Just finished the conference call with the Romney campaign. They will eventually send us a memo but these are my notes on the call.

The format is an "in the round" discussion in which Gov McDonnell introduces the various states and governors, at which point Mitt Romney leads a discussion on public policy, at times throwing the conversation to various governors. Govs will be seated at chairs. The topics are included below; Governor Fallin's is "CUT THE DEFICIT."

The 5 "topic buckets" which are also Romney goals are:

- energy independence
- skills to succeed (education/workforce)
- trade that works for america (fighting trade abuse from countries like china)
- cut the deficit (we balanced our budgets in our states by cutting spending and living within our means
- the federal government needs to do the same)
- support small business

A note on our topic assignment: you were originally assigned to "trade that works for america." I asked them to give us either energy or deficit and they complied.

Other notes:

- the totality of this event is supposed to be 40 minutes long, with 11 governors speaking as well as a presidential candidate. Assuming Mitt talks for half the time, that leaves about 90 seconds for every other governor. Good luck.
- our message on "cutting the deficit" is really simple. The federal government is heaping debt on top of our children and grandchildren and threatening the future of this country. The way forward isn't complicated -- governors do it all over the country. Make cuts and hard spending choices, budget responsibly and live within your means. In Oklahoma we took a $500 million budget shortfall and closed it, WHILE cutting taxes. We did it by trimming the fat, making some tough choices and by making government more efficient and effective. Weve also taken a $2 savings account and turned it into almost $600 million in rainy day savings. If we can do it in Oklahoma, they should be able to do it in Washington. Mitt Romney is the leader who can get us there.
- they have asked to couple any messages about economic success with a mention of the fact that happened IN SPITE of Obama's poor policies, EPA meddling, ObamaCare, constant threats of government shut downs, etc. So "imagine how much more successful Oklahoma energy companies could be with an administration that didnt treat oil and natural gas like a toxic waste"
- dress code is business casual

What concerns me is the misinformation and the uneducated idiots that are screwing up this story and intertwining the $54 million, the refusal to expand Medicaid and the exchange...

For example...does he really have a freakin clue what he's talking about? At ALL?

"I have two concerns," said State Rep. Ed Cannaday (D-Porum). "One is will the attorney general's (Scott Pruitt) approach to this be successful and, two, that we don't want any federal oversight and involvement in our healthcare."

Cannaday is worried the money, that would have gone to support healthcare initiatives in Oklahoma, will end up as part of an exchange in a neighboring state.

If Fallin had agreed to Medicaid expansion, more than 200,000 additional Oklahoma men, women and children would have been eligible for healthcare coverage.

Healthcare exchange money has been reported at $54 million for Oklahoma, which would include operating expenses.

"Because other states around the country have decided to seek healthcare coverage for their citizens," Scott Inman (D-Del City) said. "Oklahoma Republican leaders created a situation where Oklahoma tax dollars will be sent to other places to insure their citizens."

Ok folks - we all know you can't tell tone in emails. This was not an adversarial discussion on the healthcare
exchange.

I'm only suggesting that Gov Fallin do what she's done before by rejecting the exchange. She did a brave thing last year returning federal funds and now we need for her to be consistent in protecting consumers and businesses in our state.

Ok folks - we all know you can't tell tone in emails. This was not an adversarial discussion on the healthcare exchange.

I'm only suggesting that Gov Fallin do what she's done before by rejecting the exchange. She did a brave thing last year returning federal funds and now we need for her to be consistent in protecting consumers and businesses in our state.

A few thoughts from my end....

It isn't that states need just a delay on the exchange decision. We need flexibility and room to do exchanges our way. What regulations we have seen from HHS had several references to "will be issued later/to be determined". States need specific answers to our many questions—it is hard to just "trust HHS" and Governor Fallin would say that if it were a Republican Administration. Governors really do want to work with HHS but wish that now that the election is behind us, we can face where PPACA is flawed and fix those challenges. PPACA must be changed. Just simply giving governors more time to consider what HHS has already provided us as it relates to exchanges is just not what we need. We'll still be having the same questions and conversations a month from now if we don't get more answers....

Sorry- that was a rant.

Denise,

A.J. is great with it and is extremely excited and honored.

That's plenty of time to get an event together.

I do want to let you know that Patrice also has a fund-raiser event that evening, and I guess I'm a bit concerned we'd be competing against each other. However, it's not that it would be the first time events competed. We will make it work.

Below, I also have attached an auto call we're hoping the governor will record for distribution on April 2, the day before the election. It would be sent to Republicans and previously identified conservative Democrats.

Here is the call in number and passcode. Just follow the prompts after you call in. [REDACTED], passcode [REDACTED]. We will add the disclaimer at the end. Thanks, Denise!

Script is below.

Hello. This is Governor Mary Fallin -- tomorrow is a special election day --- and I'm asking you to help send AJ Griffin to the state Senate.

AJ is a no-nonsense wife, mother, businesswoman and a leader for our families and youth.

I need AJ at the Capitol to help me lower state income tax rates so we can attract new industries to do business in Oklahoma.

AJ will protect our freedoms and our values.

She will stand strong beside me to protect Oklahoma from federal intrusion and help stop Obamacare mandates.

The election is tomorrow, Tuesday, April 3rd, and every vote for A.J. Griffin is important.

Please don't forget to go to the polls.

Thank you!

SCOTT: Florida will not implement Obamacare

Health law treats symptoms, not the disease

By Gov. Rick Scott
Friday, July 6, 2012

Obamacare, in its effort to force everyone into a health insurance plan, is attempting to treat a symptom - the uninsured - rather than the cause of the problem.

I think everyone agrees there are far too many who want health insurance and can't get it. But the truth is, the real problem isn't with health insurance. The underlying cause is the rapidly increasing cost of health care.

Instead of forcing people into another big-government program that eliminates natural incentives to keep costs down, we should be focused on free-market reforms that make health care more affordable. With costs lowered, more people would have access to medical doctors and services, and we wouldn't have to place another heavy burden on taxpayers to make it work.

After the U.S. Supreme Court's stunning pronouncement on Obamacare, all 50 governors face two big decisions:

1. Do we let the federal government impose a massive Medicaid expansion on us?
2. Do we establish a state insurance exchange or let the federal government come in and run it?

My answer is simple. No. We just can't afford it.

Medicaid is the fastest-growing part of our state budget. And unlike the federal government, which isn't required to balance its budget, we could only pay for expanding Medicaid by increasing taxes or cutting from other parts of the budget. Expanding Medicaid puts other vital government functions, such as education, public safety and infrastructure, at risk. That is not something I am willing to do.

History repeatedly has shown that the costs of many government health care programs far exceed early projections. This daunting reality is not unique to Florida. Washington acts as if it's doing states a favor by covering the first few years of expanded Medicaid payments, but where does it think those tax dollars are coming from? Floridians, as well as taxpayers from every other state, are the ones footing the bill. Furthermore, once the responsibility begins to shift away from the federal government, states will be left to start picking up the tab, putting too much pressure on state budgets.

We already have safety-net programs that cover the needs of the most vulnerable in our state. But if we don't implement a real solution to our health care and economic problems, there will never be enough programs to meet the demand. Since 2009, I've advocated a solution that implements four pillars of free-market reforms: choice, competition, accountability and personal responsibility.

Choice: Patients should be able to choose their own doctors. Providers should not force families to buy a plan with services they don't intend to use. By giving every American a choice, providers are naturally forced to compete if they want to stay in business.

Competition: People should be allowed to buy a health insurance product across state lines, and they also should know the prices upfront. You wouldn't buy a car or groceries without knowing the price, and you shouldn't have to choose your health care services and providers without knowing how much it's going to cost you. Patients should be able to easily find out the cost for services before they receive them.

Accountability: Government should be giving the same health insurance tax breaks to individuals that they give to employers. People should be able to own their own health plans.

Personal responsibility: Let's reward people for taking care of themselves. Good drivers are rewarded with lower auto insurance policy rates. Life insurers give preferred rates for healthy lifestyles. The same should apply for health insurance.

As governor of the great state of Florida, I am committed to breaking the cycle of dependence on public assistance. As a person who lived in public housing as a child, I know that cycle can be broken. And I want all of us to have the chance to live our version of the American dream.

For this to happen, we need to focus on the real problem with our health care system, the costs. We need to reduce the high price of health care and help the unemployed get jobs so more people can afford the care they need and more employers can afford to offer health insurance. That's what I'm focused on in Florida. The more opportunity we provide for people to get a quality education and a job, without raising their cost of living, the more we can improve the quality of life for everyone.

Subject: state of the state general sketch/outline
Date: Wednesday, December 05, 2012 10:22:20 AM

This is obviously a very rough outline/sketch of how I see the SOTS being structured. Will bring to policy meeting.

State of the State

Strong Economy: Republicans said they would focus on growing the private sector and bringing more and better jobs to the state. We have succeeded

- Employment rate
- Rate of job growth
- Median income (broad based recovery)
- Other stats

How did we get there? By staying focused and disciplined in pursuit of a pro-jobs agenda. Getting government out of the way; removing barriers to growth; and giving our citizens the tools they need to succeed in the global economy through education reform.

- Lawsuit reform
- Workers comp reform (and we will continue to pursue?)
- Removing red tape and regulation, or modernizing regulations (one stop shop biz licensing, updated regs for energy industry)
- Lowering taxes – we will continue to look at ways to lower
- Transportation – 8 yr plan, roads and bridges, investment in jobs
- Education reforms and implementation of education reforms; complete college America

We also said we would work to eliminate government waste; make government work more efficiently and effectively, and reduce its size when and where that made sense. In short we said we would govern responsibly. We have achieved enormous successes in that area and we must continue to do more:

- Agency consolidation (introduce plan to slash/consolidate agencies)
- Energy Plan, including energy efficiency initiative and CNG vehicle initiative
- Asset evaluation w/Speaker Shannon

This is obviously a very rough outline/sketch of how I see the SOTS being structured. Will bring to policy meeting.

State of the State

Strong Economy: Republicans said they would focus on growing the private sector and bringing more and better jobs to the state. We have succeeded

- Employment rate
- Rate of job growth
- Median income (broad based recovery)
- Other stats

How did we get there? By staying focused and disciplined in pursuit of a pro-jobs agenda. Getting government out of the way; removing barriers to growth; and giving our citizens the tools they need to succeed in the global economy through education reform.

- Lawsuit reform
- Workers comp reform (and we will continue to pursue?)
- Removing red tape and regulation, or modernizing regulations (one stop shop biz licensing, updated regs for energy industry)
- Lowering taxes – we will continue to look at ways to lower
- Transportation – 8 yr plan, roads and bridges, investment in jobs
- Education reforms and implementation of education reforms; complete college America

We also said we would work to eliminate government waste; make government work more efficiently and effectively, and reduce its size when and where that made sense. In short we said we would govern responsibly. We have achieved enormous successes in that area and we must continue to do more:

- Agency consolidation (introduce plan to slash/consolidate agencies)
- Energy Plan, including energy efficiency initiative and CNG vehicle initiative
- Asset evaluation w/Speaker Shannon
- Pension reform
- Open Range (?)
- Transparency initiatives
- Improvements to vets facilities

Said we would fight for the things that continue to make Oklahoma special ... for our rights and for our ability to govern ourselves

- Fighting environmental regs?
- Rejecting ObamaCare, Medicaid expansion and insurance exchange ...

But its not enough to just say “no” ... we do need to help our citizens. That’s why we are proposing a Medicaid waiver to expand Insure oklahoma ... and continuing to invest in health and mental health initiatives ...

Potential Talking Points

- While Governor Mary Fallin has opted not to build a state-based insurance exchange or expand the Medicaid program as proposed in PPACA, she and the Oklahoma legislature remain deeply committed to the health of all Oklahomans. One demonstration of this commitment is that they protected the Health and Human Services agencies during the recent economic downturn from significant reductions that would jeopardize the health and safety of our citizens. The end result is that the Health and Human Services area took the smallest reduction of any of the cabinet areas.
- The Governor and her staff have been exploring the impact of PPACA and working with healthcare experts and lawmakers across the country in order to make sound decisions on implementing a state-based exchange or expanding Medicaid in Oklahoma. The final determination is that this law will not improve the quality and availability of healthcare services in Oklahoma and cannot be administered in a financially sound or sustainable manner.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovations in healthcare and the Governor is committed to building upon those innovations to create Oklahoma solutions to our healthcare problems. She welcomes the opportunity to work with the Oklahoma legislature to develop an Oklahoma plan to reduce the number of uninsured families, provide quality healthcare and address rising healthcare costs.

Medicaid Expansion

- Medicaid is an outdated program that was expanded without reform in PPACA. The Medicaid expansion does not adequately address needed improvements in the availability or quality of healthcare services and it does not begin to address the ever-increasing costs of healthcare. Further, the federal law does not provide flexibility for states to meet the unique needs of their citizens.
- Expanding Medicaid as written in PPACA would cost the State of Oklahoma as much as $475,000,000 between fiscal years 2014 and 2020. Paying for these increases would necessitate significant cuts to other critical parts of the state's budget like education and public safety. The cost of Medicaid expansion is unsustainable and creates an additional burden on taxpayers and the federal deficit.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovative programs and fiscally responsible enhancements to the Medicaid program. In fact, Oklahoma has reduced the rate of uninsured among children to just 7%. Oklahoma has also created an outstanding on-line enrollment system that allows families in need of healthcare real-time access to Medicaid coverage. These are the very successes that Oklahoma wants to build upon to create a viable healthcare system that actually begins to reduce the costs of healthcare in our state.
- Oklahoma has a history of creating innovative solutions to reducing the number of uninsured, for example the Insure Oklahoma program (created in 2006) offers premium assistance to small businesses to support the purchase of private insurance for their employees. Under PPACA the Insure Oklahoma program would be discontinued and qualifying workers (those under 138%) would be required to enroll in traditional Medicaid. Oklahoma small businesses and their employees should have the same option to purchase private insurance coverage as other large employers and their employees.

- Oklahoma does not anticipate that the failure to expand Medicaid as written in PPACA will jeopardize Oklahoma hospitals when CMS implements the mandated reduction in Disproportionate Share Hospital (DSH) funds. Oklahoma's DSH payments do not meet the threshold for significant reduction.

Insurance Exchange

- HHS continues to delay the release of critical guidance and regulations that would allow states to understand the full ramifications of building and implementing a state based insurance exchange. Without HHS regulation and guidance it is unclear how much flexibility and freedom of control will be provided to states operating an exchange.
- The cost of building a PPACA compliant exchange in Oklahoma is estimated at $30 million to $50 million dollars. The cost of implementing PPACA in Oklahoma, and nationwide, is staggering and unsustainable. Governor Mary Fallin will continue to work with the Oklahoma legislature to develop financially sound healthcare solutions.
- While the pricing structure has not yet been released, HHS will likely pass the cost of the federal exchange to the insurers selling products on the exchange. This fee, in turn, will likely be passed on to the purchaser of the healthcare plan.

What about the special provisions for Native Americans?

- An Oklahoma Plan will be developed to provide care to all citizens of Oklahoma. As always, we will continue to seek input and guidance from tribal nations and other partners so that we may develop solutions that meet the needs of all Oklahoman's.

Oklahoma Plan

- Governor Fallin recognizes the importance of having healthy citizens. Healthy people create a more productive workforce and children that are able to learn. The governmental system of providing healthcare (Medicaid) is important, but it should not be the primary source of healthcare for so many of our citizens. We need to transform the healthcare system into one that supports individuals and families who need a hand-up while also supporting a robust private insurance market that is focused on making people healthier.
- Oklahoma will be developing an Oklahoma Plan to reduce the number of uninsured and the costs of healthcare. The Oklahoma plan will include some of the following elements:
  - Establish goals that include improved health for our citizens
  - Empower individuals to be engaged in making good healthcare (and health) choices
  - Ensure payment incentives focus on preventive care and improving health
  - Support the purchase of private insurance products where possible
  - Focus on reducing the cost of managing chronic disease, a major cost driver in Oklahoma, including;

- High-risk case management
    - Chronic disease self management
    - Improving care coordination within communities of care
  - Specifically target the reduction of unnecessary hospitalizations and emergency department visits
  - Realign the public health system to support these goals
- The Oklahoma Plan will address the concerns of healthcare providers about the strain of uncompensated care by reducing the number of uninsured
- The Oklahoma Plan will be developed with consultation from tribal nations and other stakeholders to ensure the unique needs of our citizens are met

Great – I was struggling with efficiencies too. There may not be many.

Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt ongoing legal challenge of the ACA. Our second, and equally important task, will be to pursue state-based solutions that promote the health of Oklahoman's, empower individuals to take personal responsibility for their health, offer more families better access to affordable, high quality health care in the private sector and transform our Medicaid and public health systems to contain the increasing costs of healthcare. This transformation must address the increasing burden of chronic disease in Oklahoma by creating a system of care that provides incentives for prevention and disease management programs rather than paying the high-cost for avoidable hospitalization and emergency department visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.

Draft of exchange/medicaid expansion press release. We have not reached a decision on timing. Still waiting on some policy content in last paragraph.

Governor Fallin today released the following statement, announcing that Oklahoma would not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the proposed Medicaid expansion under the Affordable Care Act:

For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the possible creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or to the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that the ACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the U.S. while contributing to the nation's growing deficit crisis.

Nevertheless, the ACA remains the law of the land, and Oklahoma has now been placed in a highly undesirable position by the Obama Administration. We are being asked either to join the federal government in helping to implement the ACA by creating a state based exchange approved by the Obama Administration, or else to accept one created and run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma despite the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the ACA through their support of State Question 756 in 2010.

As I do not believe an ACA-compliant state based exchange will further the health care goals of the state of Oklahoma, and because our citizens have spoken loudly and clearly on this issue, I have today informed the federal government that Oklahoma will not be pursuing the creation of a state-based exchange.

After careful consideration, I have also informed the federal government that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration's proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would increase the burden on our state budget and would further our reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future. Massive new costs associated with the Medicaid expansion would also require cuts to other important government priorities, such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a system that people of all ideological stripes have criticized as inflexible and inefficient.

Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt ongoing legal challenge of the ACA. Our second, and equally important task, will be to pursue state-based solutions that offer families better access to more affordable and high quality health care in the private sector. Building upon [looking for more concrete language from Health Dept/policy shop]. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.

General,

Thanks for letting us know about the Integris meeting. We know that Oklahoma Hospitals are not taking the governor's decision well, largely because a Medicaid expansion gives them a lot more money. They are advocating for their own financial interests, which is expected.

The press release below, as well as the talking points attached and above I feel do a good job of articulating the governor's position. Let me know if you have any questions and I will do my best to answer!

I appreciate the invite for the radio show – we will do what we can to get her on it soon, with the understanding that we are really swamped with scheduling!

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
November 19, 2012

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation's growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit

Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor Mary Fallin Announcement re/ PPACA Talking Points

- There is an absence of critical guidance and regulations that would allow states to understand the full ramifications of building and implementing a state based insurance exchange. Thanks again Ed.

It has certainly been an honor to represent Indiana Governor Mitch Daniels but also a learning experience well beyond my expectations. The "Hall of States" group is a lobbying powerhouse all to themselves and I've gained an important understanding of the issues specific to state governments, the individuals who represent them here in Washington and policymakers on the Hill and in the Administration. Building coalitions within state governments in addition to representing issues with a narrow focus on one state are the cornerstones of my eight years of service. I believe I am a leader within the NGA network and have mentored many new state directors who have come on board during the Daniels Administration.

My role for the state of Indiana has included work for all Indiana Cabinet agencies, representing the State's position with Congress, the Administration and federal agencies as well as with the National Governors Association and Midwest Governors Association. As an independent contractor, I am also able to represent Governor Daniels with the Republican Governors Association. Major issues we have worked on include advocacy against ObamaCare while researching the issues surrounding implementation based on cost of the Medicaid expansion and state-run exchanges; submission and approval of an 1115 Medicaid waiver establishing the Healthy Indiana Plan; executive branch approval and Congressional oversight of the state's modernized welfare eligibility system; secured legislative language to streamline the statewide workforce organization and an additional carve out for Indiana's Unemployment Insurance program; passage of the latest highway bill with a fair and balanced funding formula and no language penalizing Indiana's unique public-private partnership, Major moves. We have fought the EPA and other federal agencies on unnecessary regulations and strongly supported the Keystone Pipeline. We staff every visit of the Governor and Cabinet officials from planning to on-the-ground execution of the schedule. Working with the Indiana business community, we support issues of importance to their job-creation efforts.

Based on decades of Washington experience, I am able to efficiently and effectively communicate and advocate the state's priorities across the full spectrum of national constituencies including policymakers, opinion leaders and media. We build key internal relationships with state government officials in the Governors office and within agencies to ensure focus on issues of importance with measurable results. My contacts are extensive in terms of partnering, where necessary, with bi-partisan subject and policy experts as well as coordinating their efforts.

The State of Indiana has always maintained a DC presence through contracting with an outside lobbyist. Many other states follow this model (such as PA, NV, MN, ND, KS) as it is cost effective and far more flexible. My contract with the State of Indiana is for $22,000/month plus out of pocket expenses (primarily cabs and pre-approved trips to Indianapolis). My retainer has been consistent throughout the Daniels' tenure with no fee increases. The cost is spread across all Cabinet agencies. Unlike a state-based office, with long-term real estate leases, creation of new FTEs and the accrued benefits, Indiana and a growing number of states find contracting an effective way to stay engaged in Washington, DC on policy and politics. In addition to myself, a young attorney on my team, assists with the state account and we are both registered lobbyists for the State of Indiana. I have attached a document, The Perfect Storm, which outlines the many issues facing the 2012 Lame Duck session and new Congress in 2013. With sequestration having a direct impact on states, especially those with significant defense investments, engagement in federal relations is even more important than ever. Containing health care costs will continue to dominate state budgets and federal policymakers for years ahead, regardless of decisions related to ObamaCare. Tax reform and its impact on state financial instruments will likely be on the table in 2013. Budget pressure will continue to be pushed to state governments and the work of Governors to pursue program flexibility in exchange for decreased funding is critical.

Although in her first term, Governor Fallin has the reputation as a national party leader and I would welcome the opportunity to assist the state of Oklahoma and the Governor. As a member of the NGA Executive Committee, having an active DC representative is crucial. Republican Governors staff look to Executive Committee staff for issue coordination, message points and early warnings. I would be pleased to put together a formal proposal that would meet the specific needs of the State of Oklahoma.

Again, many thanks for your interest.

Exchange Establishment Cooperative Agreement Funding FAQs

Below are a number of Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) about funding available to States under Affordable Care Act Section 1311(a). These FAQs are applicable to the Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA), released in June 29, 2012, Cooperative Agreement to Support Establishment of Affordable Care Act's Health Insurance Exchanges, and related 1311 Funding ("new FOA"), which can be found at www.grants.gov, search for CFDA number 93.525. They also apply to prior Funding Announcements, most recently amended November 29, 2011 (old "FOAs") found at:

Q1: In the new funding opportunity announcement (FOA), released in June 29, 2012, States may be awarded establishment grants through December 2014. Does this change the deadlines for State Exchange approval?

A1: No. The new FOA does not change the deadlines for State Exchange approval, which are set forth in the Affordable Care Act and regulations.

Q2: How many opportunities remain for States to apply for funding?

A2: Ten additional opportunities for States to apply for Level One and/or Level Two funding were announced under the new funding opportunity announcement, with all awards made by December 31, 2014.

In addition to the final funding opportunity under the old FOA, HHS anticipates Level One Establishment and Level Two Establishment applications will be due: August 15, 2012; November 15, 2012; February 15, 2013; May 15, 2013; August 15, 2013; November 15, 2013; February 14, 2014; May 15, 2014; August 15, 2014; and October 15, 2014. HHS anticipates making Notices of Grant Award approximately 45 days after application due dates.

Q3: What Exchange costs can be covered by 1311 grant funding?

A3: The Affordable Care Act provides the Secretary authority to provide §1311(a) grant funds for State activities related to establishment of an Exchange, including establishment of a State-based Exchange, development of functionalities that allow the State to participate in a State Partnership Exchange, and State activities to establish interfaces with the Federally-facilitated Exchange. These costs are outlined in the new FOA as well as in prior FOAs.

The first year of Exchange activity is critical to ensuring Exchange self-sufficiency. The establishment of an Exchange and activities related to such establishment also include start-up year expenses to allow consumer outreach, testing and necessary improvements during the initial start-up year. For example, in the start-up year, we anticipate significant resources will be committed to enhancing systems, developing protocols, raising consumer awareness, training staff, and strengthening the overall effectiveness of operations. Thus, the Secretary has determined that §1311(a) grant funds are available to fully fund Exchange-related expenses (in the State's approved work plan and budget) until: 1) the end of the start-up year that coverage is provided through the Exchange, 2) the time a State-based Exchange becomes self-sufficient, or 3) §1311(a) grant funds have been expended, whichever comes first.

Similarly, a Partnership Exchange State may receive funding for its start-up year expenses supporting the FFE in a Partnership model, as well costs associated with transition to and establishment of a State-based Exchange. These funds are available to cover the costs of approved start-up year expenses or State activities in a State-based or State Partnership Exchange, consis

Oklahoma State Senate

Communications Division
State Capitol
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73105

For Immediate Release: July 3, 2012

Anderson calls on Gov. Fallin to reject ObamaCare

State Sen. Patrick Anderson urged Oklahoma's chief executive to join her fellow Republican governors across the country and state for the record that she will not implement ObamaCare. Anderson, a Republican from Enid, said Gov. Mary Fallin needs to be on the front line with those governors who have already announced they won't submit to the federal health care law.

"Bobby Jindal in Louisiana, Chris Christie in New Jersey, Rick Perry in Texas, Scott Walker in Wisconsin, Rick Scott in Florida and Nikki Haley in South Carolina have officially stated they will not implement ObamaCare in their states in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision last Thursday," said Anderson. "Oklahoma needs to join these other states and be a leader, not a follower, in the opposition to this law and the substantial burden that it will place on taxpayers.”

Anderson said despite promises from the President, the end results of the federal health care law would be disastrous for citizens, for Oklahoma and for the nation, with many reports pointing to a revised estimate by the Congressional Budget Office saying the price tag for the law had already risen from under $1 trillion to $1.76 trillion.

“In the short-term, the economic brunt will fall on the middle-class. Those who already have insurance will see their out-of-pocket costs skyrocket, while those who don’t will be forced to purchase policies far more costly than they would have been without this federal mandate,” Anderson said. “Businesses are going to be hamstrung by red tape and regulations that will derail economic growth and recovery. At the federal level, this will dramatically worsen our national debt. At the state level, Oklahoma’s Medicaid costs will soar and it will force budget cuts in education, transportation and public safety.”

“We have had enough time to consider last Thursday’s ruling, and we know that the end result will be larger deficits, greater costs to working Oklahomans, and punitive regulations that will cripple many businesses,” said Anderson. “Governor Fallin needs to make Oklahoma’s position clear and tell President Obama that she will not choose to implement this new tax on the taxpayers of Oklahoma.”

I don't think that is accurate, right? Should I say that is one way a health care exchange could be developed but it is possible one could be created on an agency level without legislative action?

Newsaper Armageddon Arrives for Senator Mazzei, Senator Newberry, and Representative Mulready

Surprise, Surprise, Surprise Senator Mazzei! You really didn't think we would leave you out did you?

And we haven't had any tunes lately so click on this link and listen while you read.

Okay, I just watched a sci fi show about a meteor striking the earth but the parallel is there. Think of the meteor that was supposed to kill off the dinosaurs, a bunch of fat, happy, big butt reptiles standing in lush grass chomping away till something new caused them to starve to death if they weren't smashed in the impact.

The Tulsa paper was delivered to an airport hangar at the Jenks airport on Friday morning, 15,000 copies including an extra 5,000 copies for Senator Mike Mazzei for skipping the ALAC vote. We need all the local help we can get to get these papers delivered before the primary. But let's motivate you a bit with some facts.

Here is the 2008 primary election numbers for Glen Mulready's district, only 1,987 people bothered to vote:

|                                                |              |
|------------------------------------------------|--------------|
| REP) FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE, DISTRICT NO. 68 | 17 OF 17     |
| BRIAN JACKSON                                  | 397 19.97%   |
| CHRIS BENGÉ                                    | 1,591 80.03% |

In 2010 there wasn't a Republican primary race but here is the general election numbers.

|                                           |                  |
|-------------------------------------------|------------------|
| FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE, DISTRICT NO. 68 | 17 OF 17         |
| GLEN MULREADY                             | REP 6,768 67.98% |
| SETH WATKINS                              | DEM 3,188 32.02% |

See the difference? In a general election almost 10,000 voters participated, five times the number in a primary. And the Democrat primary that Watkins won was less than 700 voters casting votes....

If you help drop the 10,000 Oklahoma-Guardian newspapers into Representative Glen Mulready's district he is likely going back to work for Blue Cross/Blue Shield as a lobbyist this summer. Yeah, I know, only the name at the top of the paycheck will change for Glen but taking down one of the State Chamber of Commerce's golden hair boys will reverberate through the legislature and we will have ensured the death of Obama Care Health Insurance Exchanges here in Oklahoma unless the Supreme Court lays down on the Constitution.

Also it looks like this will be the last issue before the primary due to time constraints but we can do one thing that would help Todd Thompson's opponents as well as Paul Blair and Bob Dani, increase the number of papers printed. We put a good story on Representative Todd Thompson's voting record along with a bit about his opponent, Donald Cole Gallup of Stratford. Right now we are going to print an extra 1,300 copies for the Ada area but if we get donations we can increase the number to 5,000 copies for Mr. Thompson's district.

Thompson was an Obama Care supporter, anti everything we stand for basically, helped give the 167 million dollars to the higher ed endowment fund, enough cash to have operated over 25 state agencies for the 2012 budget year. Old Todd said he refused to support the Personhood bill because it would endanger his chairmanship on a committee. Let's show Todd that his refusal to support a core issue for both his party and his voters can cost him his political career.

Here is Todd Thomson's 2008 General election numbers:

|-------------------------------------------|-----|--------------|
| FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE, DISTRICT NO. 25 |     | 27 OF 27     |
| TODD THOMSEN                              | REP | 7,187 52.61% |
| GARY STARNS                               | DEM | 6,473 47.39% |

But look at his General election numbers in 2006, only two votes separated winning and losing:

|                                           |     |              |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|--------------|
| FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE, DISTRICT NO. 25 |     | 27 OF 27     |
| DARRELL E. NEMECEK                        | DEM | 4,796 49.99% |
| TODD THOMSEN                              | REP | 4,798 50.01% |

But the real story is his primary against a fellow Republican in 2006 which is the only identical election that we need to base our chances on as there is no General election this year!

|                                                 |     |          |
|-------------------------------------------------|-----|----------|
| (REP) FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE, DISTRICT NO. 25 |     | 27 OF 27 |
| BLAKE CANTRELL                                  | 608 | 46.70%   |
| TODD THOMSEN                                    | 694 | 53.30%   |

People, we need only around 700 votes to beat Todd Thompson... Can you see the effect that 5,000 newspapers that divulge his sorry voting record will have on the outcome of the election? And Representative Marian Cooksey? That Obama loving RINO grandma? Her 2006 primary numbers are the relevant ones to consider:

|                                                 |       |          |
|-------------------------------------------------|-------|----------|
| (REP) FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE, DISTRICT NO. 39 |       | 23 OF 23 |
| CLARK DUFFE                                     | 858   | 21.48%   |
| MARIAN COOKSEY                                  | 3,137 | 78.52%   |

What do you think that 10,000 Oklahoma-Guardian newspapers is going to do to her chances of winning? Most homes have two voters and they usually go together to vote so that is as many as 20,000 people that could get their eyes opened and get motivated to show up at the polls.

Now, dig in your pockets! Please!

This is your shot at making a huge difference when the RINOs are at their weakest, a primary election with a few thousand voters determining who gets the House seat, coming in a short election year where the incumbents couldn't raise money from their lobbyist buddies during the session. We have good candidates that stood up now they need our support.

Send money, small amounts is okay, just send it tonight or early tomorrow so we can increase the amount of newspapers printed. Use this email address for Paypal: soonerteaparty@gmail.com or call me and drop off a check if that is better. Make it for a subscription, for future advertising, heck just give us the money as a donation.

It will be another two years before this chance comes around again, to do so much with so little money

We can derail Senator Clark Jolley's $500,000.00 campaign with ten cent newspapers.

We can derail Representative Cooksey's $60,000 campaign with ten cent newspapers.

There are stories on Mike Turner who is running against Guy Liebmann and on A J Bailey who is running against Gary Banz. There is a Charles Key story on his race for the Court Clerk position and a good story on Darrell Sorrels who is running against Sheriff John Whetsel in Oklahoma County. Representative Elsie Hall's opponent's contact info is in the Action Alerts and her voting record is exposed. Bob Dani and Paul Blair both have articles on them and their opponents voting record.

Send in enough donations tonight and tomorrow morning before noon and we will hit all of those districts with newspapers. Once we have the first ten thousand papers the next 5,000 is much cheaper IF we print all of them in one shot. This one paper can win all seven races if we put out enough papers into the districts.

Or you can go back to forwarding anti Obama emails or links to stories about how bad things are getting. But you won't have another chance till 2014 to slap a handful of politicians straight across the mouth for stealing your liberty, for stealing your tax dollars, for lying to the voters, for being State Chamber whores, for selling out when our children and grand children need us to stand up and stop the madness. Help us slap these chamber stooges silly and you can bet that Coburn, Inhoffe, Sullivan, Lucas, Boren, and Cole or whoever replaces them will be watching like a hawk. Send them back to Washington D.C. knowing that things are changing.

Are We Really Going to Let This Agenda 21 Happen in Oklahoma?

By Ms. PM

Agenda 21 anyone? Why is Oklahoma afraid to pass laws protecting private property and due process? What is it about state sovereignty they refuse to understand? A very clear indicator is the fact that we have morons running the state. In this article, it shows how legislatures armed with the wherewithal of doing the right thing by protecting the citizens is not that difficult of a task, unless you're dealing with the imbeciles within the walls of our State Capitol building.

What is it about the citizens here in Oklahoma not demanding our state come up with a bill that protects us from UN intrusion? For the life of me, this is one I cannot figure out.

Alabama was on the same course until heavy pressure from activists forced the hand of Alabama's governor, Robert Bentley, and he signed this popular bill into law.

The media in Alabama isn't any different than what we deal with here in Oklahoma. These issues, if they are covered, are spun around and made to look like a ball of yummy cotton candy. This law is aimed at protecting private property rights and specifically prevents all state agencies and local governments from participating in this global scheme. Why would the citizens of any state give up their power of acting through their elected representatives? Enacting Agenda 21 strips the citizens of their rights and the decisions will be made by UN bureaucrats. You can forget about the Constitution of the United States and our Oklahoma Constitution.

Whenever you hear Agenda 21, the long tentacles of non-governmental ICLEI are right there working in step and encroaching like the insidious cancer both of these entities stand for. These parasites gain traction by giving money and contracting services within the states. They infiltrate local governments and color their agenda to look like a beautiful rainbow. We all know how easy it is for state government to extend their hand whenever power and money is involved.

Another interesting fact is state government is afraid to pass these tough laws because of the loss of federal funding. Their shortsightedness affects their judgment and they forget that they are in-between the citizens and the federal government; we elect them to represent us. We are being sold out, first because there are still a lot of people that don't find it necessary to pay attention, therefore these miscreants continue to hold office. Second because when they are in office, the citizens are their last priority. Third, the federal government doesn't have to implement any of this because the state governments are more than willing to do their dirty work under the guise of they know what's best for us. The U.S. Senate never ratified Agenda 21 so don't you think it's time to stop this freedom stomping agenda?

Whenever you hear the terms "sustainable living", "smart growth" or "green" you can make a safe assumption that Agenda 21 is behind it. Sustainable living will put you stacked on top of one another to live like good people are supposed to live inside the cities. Those in power want the land to do with what they deem an appropriate way to save the planet. Smart growth will have cities planned out without parking spaces because you should be walking and not polluting. This nudge will get you to loose weight regardless of your wants or needs .

Surprise, Norman is already talking about this. Anything green will come with regulations to make sure you are in compliance with the list of what you will or will not do. Remember the "smart" chips on the Tulsa garbage cans. More of your money will go toward fines once they take the tracking one step further and pass the law that you must recycle. Is this how you want to live? These terms the government uses are more than deceptive. This plan will place you into a situation and by the time you figure it out, the gate will be locked.

Alabama's model could bring about the change needed to protect Oklahomans. It keeps Constitutional Law above International Law. Our freedom and sovereignty is slipping away. Are you going to sit by and let this happen or make the choice to do something about it? This map shows what the country will look like when they're finished with this Agenda 21.

State of the Governor Report

By R. H.

And tunes for Mary Fallin's first couple of years...

It's been just over two years since Governor Fallin took office. It's time to do an evaluation of her midterm performance. How has she done? Has she lived up to the Conservative values she campaigned on, or has she performed as a Liberal politician? With a high profile job as she has, the record is easy to access.

It's obvious that the Governor learned her campaign financing rules from an expert. We went to the Oklahoma Ethics Commission Web site and took a look at her expenditures for the calendar year of 2010. There wasn't much to look at. With few exceptions for salaries, taxes to the I. R. S., and office necessities, everything else seems to have been placed on a credit card. I guess she learned that trick in D. C.

We didn't stop there. We also went to www.votesmart.org to see what they had available. The voting record made for some interesting reading. I also found that the campaign finance records were incomplete. They failed to list the $3,500.00 donation she received from George Kaiser. That's the same George Kaiser that will get his money back from the Solyndra scandal before the taxpayers see a dime. I guess if I wanted to masquerade as a Conservative I'd leave his name off my donor list too. You can find this information at www.libertyok.org.

Since the Governor has been in office, she has signed 354 bills into law. She has vetoed only 10. That's less than 3 percent of the bills she has vetoed. Some of the ones she has signed into law that have mattered to Oklahomans are listed below.

HB 2171 Obama Highway Bill-fiscally liberal
HB 1953 Governor's Quick Action Fund, Slush Fund-corporate welfare
HB 2131 Soft on Crime-Liberal
SB 154 21st Century Quality Jobs Act-corporate welfare

These are all bills that deserved the veto pen.

So let's take a look at her voting record while she was in D. C. How well did she represent the Conservative values of Oklahoma during her tenure there?

Jan. 5, 2007 Pay As You Go Rule, Voted Nay-Liberal
Mar. 14, 2007 Union Organization Bill, Voted Nay-Conservative
June 7, 2007 Stem Cell Research Act of 2007 voted Nay-Conservative Primarily a party line vote on most bills. I would rate her performance in Washington as an overall 70 on the conservative scale. She let us down on several votes.

The Governor has pushed for an income tax reduction in the state. I received this Mary Fallin in my email the other day. Some wonder how we, as a state can afford a tax cut when we lag so far behind in our education funding. But do we really lag behind in funding, or do our funds get wasted on subjects that aren't germane to teaching our children what they need to know. Do we spend our education dollars wisely, or do we spend them on intrusive programs deemed necessary by frivolous dictates from the Department of Education at both the State and the almighty dollar driven federal funds. There can be no denying that our children were better educated before there was ever a federal Department of Education. Maybe it's time to exert our 10th Amendment rights and say NO to the federal government when it comes to educating our kids. We know better locally.

Economic Mobility in Oklahoma has recently become a topic of discussion in the state. It seems that the PEW Institute has decided that Oklahoma ranks among the worse in the Nation for upward mobility in the country. I can't believe that. You can read the report here Economic Mobility in Oklahoma is Among the Worst in the Nation | StateImpact Oklahoma It's always been my experience that if a person worked hard and did a good job, he or she would get the promotions that they deserved. I think one has to consider the left leaning PEW organization when one considers their report.

One of the biggest problems that the Governor has ignored is the Department of Human Services. They have been a problem for a long time. They are one agency, along with the Department of Corrections, that is habitually underfunded. The death of children entrusted to the care of the state is abhorrent to the senses of every Oklahoman. The documented cases of falsified home visits by case workers are tantamount to negligent homicide in the death of a child, yet in most cases they go unpunished.

Then they highlight the 2012 legislative session. You start off by saying that "The Fiscal Year 2013 budget deal reached by Governor Mary Fallin and state legislators represents a fiscally responsible plan to limit the size and growth of government while increasing funds for core areas of government." The Governor and legislators seem to forget that an increase in the size of government decreases the liberty of the citizens.

Other areas of savings are mostly consolidation of agencies that do the same thing. This should have been done long ago.

Another area of savings is a Memorandum of Understanding of a multistate contract for natural gas vehicles. The idea is to convert the states fleet of vehicles to natural gas by purchasing new vehicles that are already set up to run on natural gas and selling the existing fleet. This is a ludicrous idea. What should happen is convert the existing fleet to natural gas. There is the technology and facilities in state to do the job. Local workman would be happy for the business and it would support Oklahoman owned businesses. In addition, it would encourage residents to make the change.

She seems proud of the Turnpike improvement plan. I have a Turnpike improvement plan for you Governor. As soon as the existing bonds are paid off on the turnpikes, make them part of the regular highway system. That would put more money into the pockets of taxpayers and help attract more business.

The Governor touts the “Statewide Public Safety Plan” in the form of HB 3052. This plan was nothing more than another one of Speaker Steele’s social justice plans. It is in fact a soft on crime bill. This is the second soft on crime bill that the Governor has signed.

This one takes the cake. The Water for 2060 Act. Are you kidding me? The state is now embroiled in a lawsuit with two sovereign Native American Nations because you and the state legislature refused to negotiate with them over their water rights. Instead you feel that you have the power to break a federal treaty and confiscate what does not belong to you.

After reviewing all the information available and even considering that the Governor was dealing with a liberal House and Senate, I can only give the Governor a conservative rating of 30. That makes her a RINO Republican. She is influenced by her metropolitan surroundings, her time as a Representative in Washington, D. C., and her desire to be everything to everybody in the desire to win a second term. If she is a conservative as she claimed, she needs to start acting like one and using the veto pen more often on bills that don’t uphold conservative values no matter who it upsets.

Skirting Ethics Laws or Hiding the Truth?

By R. H.

This one is for Clark Jolley for not living up to his momma's expectations

This is round two on the ethics complaints filed against Senator Clark Jolley last week. The reports available were consistent about the basic complaint. They all centered on the Senator accepting campaign contributions and holding campaign fund raisers in January 2012 and not filing the required “SO-1” (Statement of Organization form) “ which was due within 10 days of accepting or spending in excess of $500 or by February 10.” All but one report failed to give but a cursory acknowledgement of the complaint by the Senator.

In a report to News9, which can be read here Edmond Man Files Ethics Complaint Against Senator - News9.com - Oklahoma City, OK - News, Weather, Video and Sports |, Senator Jolley defends his actions by saying that “We have complied with every one of the laws in the state of Oklahoma-period. We have reported every contributor. We have reported every expense.” He went on to blame this complaint on a campaign gimmick of his opponent.

Let’s take a look at his campaign filings and see if he’s telling the truth, or skirting campaign laws. It just so happens that the Statement of Organization for both 2010 and 2012 are available online at the State Ethics Commission web site. The one for 2010 raises some questions.

The Statement of Organization is a relatively simple form to complete. There are no trick questions on the form. Question six seemed to pose a problem for Senator Jolley in 2010 though. He likes to claim he was running for Attorney General, so why did the one question where it ask “Office Being Sought” did he file as undecided? This immediately sends up red flags. This indicates that this was never a serious run for Attorney General. This was a way to raise money for future campaigns. Apparently I wasn't the only one who felt this way. The following is from his schedule e expenditure reports.

| Date          | Item                | Name        | Purpose | Amount   |
|---------------|---------------------|-------------|---------|----------|
| Jan. 01, 2011 | Contribution Refund | Contributor | Refund  | $200.00 |
| Jan. 01, 2011 | Contribution Refund | Contributor | Refund  | $300.00 |
| Jan. 01, 2011 | Contribution Refund | Contributor | Refund  | $400.00 |

Apparently other people felt used. Does this sound like the actions of someone truly running for Attorney General? Now let's take a look at his expense reports for problems for the years 2009 through 2012. This is all the information available through the Oklahoma State Ethics Commission web site.

| Date          | Item           | Name            | Purpose        | Amount |
|---------------|----------------|-----------------|----------------|--------|
| Nov. 25, 2009 | Travel Expense | Boingo Wireless | Travel Expense | $7.95 |
| Dec. 26, 2009 | Subscription   | The Edmond Sun  | Subscription   | $7.25 |

This is unbelievable. You bill a wireless service, for who knows what, to your campaign? Are you really so cheap that you have to pay for a subscription to your hometown newspaper out of your campaign funds? You also listed the beneficiary as Clark Jolley for Attorney General, but how can that be. According to your Statement of Organization you had yet to declare what office you were running for.

|               |                 |                     |                 |          |
|---------------|-----------------|---------------------|-----------------|----------|
| Feb. 17, 2010 | Subscription    | The Edmond Sun      | Subscription    | $4.35   |
| Mar. 19, 2010 | Membership Dues | Leadership Oklahoma | Membership Dues | $150.00 |
| Mar. 22, 2010 | Travel Expenses | American Airlines   | Travel Expenses | $401.30 |
| Mar. 22, 2010 | Travel Expenses | American Airlines   | Travel Expenses | $271.90 |

This gets redundant. Why is he billing the local newspaper subscription to his campaign? Why are his membership dues in civic organizations being paid by the campaign? Why is out of state travel being billed to the campaign? The biggest question here is why is he traveling out of state in the middle of a legislative session? How many votes did he miss? How can he represent the citizens of District 41 out of state?

|               |                |                    |                |          |
|---------------|----------------|--------------------|----------------|----------|
| Mar. 25, 2011 | Travel Expense | American Airlines  | Travel Expense | $553.80 |
| Jan. 12, 2011 | Membership     | Edmond Rotary Club | Membership     | $447.50 |

Again he travels in the middle of a legislative session. This is getting to be a habit with him. How many votes did he miss this time?

One thing noted throughout the campaign is a repeated reimbursement to AT&T. There is no other explanation offered than reimbursement. Through the course of the Jolley for Undecided campaign these reimbursements came to a total of $1,225.30. I think an explanation needs to be made for this.

Next go to votesmart a look at his campaign finances for the 2012 campaign cycle, it reads like a who's who of liberal political players.

One such liberal lion is George Kaiser. No one can accept a campaign donation from this man and still claim to be a conservative. George Kaiser is a trusted ally of President Obama who stands to receive his investment back from the Solyndra debacle before us taxpayers will ever see a dime. He is also a campaign donation bundler for President Obama.

Other organizations known to keep favored politicians in office have also donated heavily to his campaign.

| Organization                                             | Amount     |
|----------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| Oklahoma Medical Association                             | $5,000.00 |
| Oklahoma Public Employees Association                    | $5,000.00 |
| Professional Firefighters of Oklahoma                    | $5,000.00 |
| Oklahoma City Firefighters                               | $5,000.00 |
| Oklahomans For Better Housing (ACORN)                    | $2,500.00 |
| Greater Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce                | $2,500.00 |
| American Federation of Teachers Oklahoma Solidarity Fund | $1,000.00 |

With big donors like this, one has to ask where his allegiance lies. Going back to project vote smart, I went to the area that covers interest group ratings. The last year available was 2010. That year he scored a 100% for Pro-Business Policy. His score for Consumer and Patient Advocacy was 64%.

Senator Jolley it looks like you have violated Oklahoma's campaign laws. You held campaign fundraisers for your Senatorial campaign in January of 2012 for sure and possibly as early as December of 2011. You failed to file the required Statement of Organization within the ten day limit as required by law. Your own campaign expenditure reports show you expended well over the $500.00 dollar limit. The ethics complaint is warranted and justified.

Senator Jolley you are nothing but a RINO Republican politician. In fact after reviewing your records more closely you are worse than a RINO. You qualify as a DIRC. In case you don't know what that means, it's the abbreviation for Democrat in Republican Clothing. I'm not even sure the Democrats would have you. For the good of the party, it's time for you to step down and let a true conservative step up and represent District 41.

Dear Governors:

Once the United States Supreme Court reminds our constitutional lawyer professor-turned-President of the existence of the Tenth Amendment and the limits of the Commerce Clause, thereby repealing Obamacare, the natural question becomes, what's next? All of the problems that existed before President Obama, then-Speaker Pelosi, and Senate Majority Leader Reid forced through a bill to raise hundreds of billions of dollars in taxes, cut Medicare spending, and create yet another entitlement program we cannot afford will still exist.

The American health care system has many well documented flaws, but reminds me of Churchill's description of democracy as the "worst form of government, except for all those other forms that have been tried." Surely, our health care system is too expensive, leaves too many families without coverage, and is plagued by redundant paperwork and procedures. Yet, at its best, there is no better. When your child or parent is sick, you don't wish they could be treated elsewhere. But, you might be worried about how you are going to pay for the medical bills after they get better.

The President often promised that he would bend the health care cost curve down, and I just wish he had succeeded, or even really tried, and had done so in a way that maximizes our freedom. Health care reform is filled with confusing acronyms and large numbers, but really comes down to one simple question: Who do we want making our health care decisions? Do we want doctors and their patients in charge or do we want government bureaucrats in charge? Since health care is such a personal matter – impacting us when we are the most vulnerable - and also expensive – consuming an increasingly larger share of our economy, how we answer this question may be one of the most important domestic policy decisions we make.

President Obama has made it clear his answer involves a top down government run approach that, as President Reagan famously said, "would have the efficiency of the Postal Service and the compassion of the I.R.S." I was no great fan of the late Senator Ted Kennedy's policies or politics, but did admire his philosophical consistency and dogged determination to get to a single payer system. I only wish more of our Republican members of Congress displayed those same traits in defense of a consumer based system. Senator Kennedy would pursue incremental steps or huge leaps towards government run health care, depending on the political circumstances, but he always worked to move the system in his direction. We need Republicans in Washington to stop viewing health care as simply a Democratic issue and to stop thinking they have achieved victory when they merely adopt a cheaper version of the Democratic plan. Over the years, Republican members of Congress have slowed down the other side, but have not prevented government from taking over more and more of our health care system. Indeed, the government is soon expected to pay for half of all health care spending, with that portion continuing to increase.

So, what next? How do we strengthen and improve a consumer based health care system? Let's consider three main purchasers of health care – Medicare, Medicaid, and private insurance.

Medicare

The recent trustees report confirms what everyone already knows, but most in Washington want to ignore. Medicare is going broke, based on solvency of the hospital trust fund, percentage of GDP spent, growth in spending versus revenues, etc. The program today wastes billions of taxpayer dollars each year in fraud and waste, while trapping seniors in a system drowning in what the Mayo Clinic once counted as 130,000 pages of rules and regulations. Len Nichols described the program as the federal government trying to set 10,000 prices in 3,000 counties, making the Pentagon's $400 hammers and $600 toilet seats look quaint by comparison. The Left wants to raise payroll taxes, while Congress and the bureaucrats continue to make political decisions on how much services should cost, which treatments are covered, and how often patients can visit their providers. The consumer based alternative is to adopt a premium support model, similar to the one used for federal employees, Members of Congress, and many in the private sector, to subsidize the majority of the premiums paid by seniors free to choose their own health care plan which best meets their needs.

Medicaid

The Medicaid program, jointly financed and overseen by the states and the federal government, continues to overwhelm state budgets, consuming more scarce tax dollars and threatening funding for schools and roads, while failing to deliver health care efficiently. While welfare reform continues to stand as one of the most impressive recent domestic policy accomplishments to come from Washington, not exactly a high bar, liberal advocacy groups pressured Congress to inexplicably exclude Medicaid. States need to be freed from the D.C. bureaucracy. The same local flexibility, accountability based on outcomes not process, and an emphasis on helping the poor to thrive in the mainstream that succeeded in transforming welfare will work with Medicaid. There is no excuse for a continued “separate but equal” health care system in this day and age. Democrats have blocked various Republican attempts to block grant the Medicaid program for years, while ignoring the pleas of governors from both parties for regulatory relief and an end to the unfunded mandates.

At the very least, Congress should allow states to opt-in to a more flexible long-term funding arrangement; the Obama Administration could accomplish this through waivers, but won't. States would receive guaranteed federal funding, adjusted on a per capita basis to account for economic cycles, and would agree to predictable federal funding caps set lower than current predicted growth rates in exchange for relief from federal regulations. States would have the freedom to design programs that best meet their people's needs, combined with an incentive to lower costs rather than game the system. Instead of the federal government designing one size fits all eligibility requirements and micromanaging benefit designs and copayment rules, states would be required to focus on improving health outcomes for their vulnerable populations. At the very least, Washington should allow states to start such a program for the able bodied populations, i.e., those who qualify for Medicaid primarily due to income and not health status, which comprise the majority of Medicaid beneficiaries, while considering special protections for the elderly and disabled.

Here is a radical thought – why not free the states to focus their efforts and spending on helping beneficiaries get better paying jobs so they can afford their own health care and break the cycle of dependence? Why not use more Medicaid spending to subsidize private coverage, rather than building public bureaucracies, as a transition to the independence envisioned in welfare reform?

Private Coverage

The American health insurance marketplace simply does not work as it should today. It actually does not resemble any reasonably functioning insurance system. The idea of insurance should be to pool risk over large populations and time to protect individuals against unpredictable and potentially overwhelming risk. Obviously, different people with different income, assets, and medical conditions will have different levels of overwhelming risk. Yet, health insurance, especially individual coverage, today often effectively screens out the sick, offering coverage when we least need it, and too often simply offers prepaid health care coverage.

A good way to understand the failings of the marketplace is to compare health care insurance with other insurance. For example, most of us don't file claims with our auto insurers for every ding our car doors get in the parking lot, knowing the resulting increase in premiums and hassle in paperwork aren't worth the payout. We either pay to fix the car door ourselves or live with the scratches. Yet, we have been trained to expect first dollar coverage for minor procedures, while more and more employers and plans are capping coverage with episodic, annual, or lifetime limits. Also, most of us aren't frustrated at the end of the year that our homes haven't flooded or burned down, expecting refunds for our property insurance premiums. We don't set fire to a bedroom at the end of the year to ensure we get our money's worth! Yet, many patients flood their doctors' offices or refill prescriptions early towards the end of the year once they have exceeded their deductibles, determined to get their money's worth.

Part of the problem is that our health insurance system has evolved over time almost by accident in response to wage controls, tax policies, and other pressures so that most Americans get their coverage through their employers. The resulting subsidy and economies of scale are important benefits, but it is time to modernize our health care system since neither the status quo nor the President's prescribed fix is acceptable.

Just as technology is transforming our society and empowering the individual, our health care system must also evolve from a top down approach, run by either insurance or government bureaucrats, to a bottom up system where patients make decisions. We need more transparency, where individuals have access to pricing and easily understandable and comparable outcomes and quality data via the internet and also have portable electronic health care records, so that patients can easily navigate what could otherwise be a confusing, potentially scary, and highly technical array of options. Consumers should share in the savings of best practices and have more, not less, access to health savings accounts and other tax advantaged financing mechanisms that reward them for seeking care in cost-effective settings, reducing the likelihood of chronic disease, complying with medical regimens, and applying savings towards future health care costs. Insurance must be made portable across state lines and jobs, and accompanied by policies that reduce the dangers of adverse risk selection with the least amount of intrusion into the markets and our lives (e.g., reinsurance, high-risk pools, fixed open enrollment periods). Consumers, including those working for or owning a small business, must have the opportunity to purchase coverage through voluntary pools, whether through trade associations or churches or unions or whatever, to enjoy the same benefits of scale currently offered to those receiving care through large employers or the government. Payment should be for performance, not activity, rewarding integrated networks offering coordinated care, disease management, and preventative care. Frivolous lawsuit reform is a critical component of a reformed health marketplace that will save billions of dollars while also reducing overutilization. Finally, those needing help to afford their care should get that help via refundable tax credits to subsidize the cost of private coverage rather than building another government-run health plan.

Churchill also said about the American people, "We can always count on the Americans to do the right thing, after they have exhausted all the other possibilities." With Obamacare, we have certainly exhausted all the other possibilities; now is the time to do the right thing and reform our health care system to empower the patient instead of the bureaucrats.

Thanks,

Bobby

RSC: The State Health Flexibility Act

Providing States the Tools to Help Their Most Vulnerable Citizens

Later this afternoon, Representatives Todd Rokita, Tim Huelskamp, Paul Broun, M.D., and Jim Jordan will introduce The State Health Flexibility Act—a bill that streamlines federal Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) funding into one block grant to the states, giving them maximum flexibility to better address the unique health care needs of their most vulnerable citizens.

The bill text, bill summary, FAQs, and spending comparison chart (all available here) describe how the bill provides maximum flexibility for states, better care for vulnerable Americans, affordability for everyone, and accountability for taxpayers.

In short, the bill:

- Funds federal assistance to the states to provide health-care-related items and services for their indigent populations at current fiscal year 2012 levels;
- Eliminates burdensome red tape and regulations promulgated from Kathleen Sebelius' Department of Health and Human Services (HHS);
- Gives maximum flexibility for states to determine eligibility, benefits, and provider reimbursement rates, as well as to improve the quality of care and access to vital health services;
- Meets the seven principles for Medicaid reform proposed by 29 Governors in June 2011;
- Prevents the federal government from borrowing and spending $1.8 trillion we do not have, without cutting a penny from current Medicaid and CHIP federal funding;
- Requires annual state audits and reports to the U.S. Treasury, state legislatures, and the public to ensure federal funding is spent properly. Misused funds detected by an audit will result in forfeiture of the funds with a 10% penalty to encourage proactive efforts to root out waste, fraud, and abuse;
- Maintains current law prohibitions against abortion funding, health care services for illegal aliens, and discrimination; and
- Repeals ObamaCare and its costly mandates to help keep state health care programs affordable and focused on the truly needy.

The State Health Flexibility Act is the legislative embodiment of the Medicaid assumptions of last year's RSC Budget —it begins the conversation of devolving federal programs to the states by reforming the largest federal mean-tested welfare program.

RSC Chairman Jordan urges all RSC Members to cosponsor this important bill. For more information or to cosponsor the bill, please contact myself or Tom Borck with Rep. Rokita at Tom.Borck@mail.house.gov /5-5037.

Governor, the "Joint Committee on the Federal Health Care Law" chaired by Stanislawski and Mulready is releasing a report in a few minutes. One of their recommendations will be to create a free market health insurance exchange that is integrated with Insure Oklahoma and similar to the Utah Model.

Our planned response will be something along the lines of:

As Governor Fallin has said in the past, she supports developing an Oklahoma-based free market exchange, not only to prevent the creation of a federal exchange run by Washington bureaucrats, but also to increase access to affordable health insurance for Oklahomans.

If no action is taken by lawmakers in Oklahoma, federal law under “ObamaCare” clearly states that a federally designed and run health insurance exchange will be forced on the state and its citizens. The governor is absolutely opposed to such a federal incursion and believes a state based solution is the best way to prevent that outcome.

Governor Fallin is reviewing the recommendations of the legislature. She appreciates their work on this issue and the positive steps they have taken towards an Oklahoma-based, free market solution that will help to prevent the implementation of ObamaCare.

I am not convinced. The Gov. has the authority that was then delegated to HCA. She also could claim it is an unconstitutional authority requiring the legislation, opt out and dare anyone to file a lawsuit. Steve, can you research. This sounds like Howard over lawyering this to me.

Katie –

The first document includes maps of where we believe the “new” eligibles would be (by county). There are actually three maps – one representing 100% enrollment, one representing 75%, and one at 57%.

The second document provides you information about the eligibles, economic impact, reduced uncompensated care, federal matching rates, etc. (I provided notes on the second page to explain the numbers on the first page.) Also, wanted to point out that we did use the 2007 economic impact study - - newer IMPLAN values are not available at this time (ie, for tax revenue). We did talk with the OTC regarding this and they believe, because of other factors occurring since 2007, that the number we have would be pretty well on target.

And, then on another note, we learned today that this will be an “opt-out” eligibility group rather than an “opt-in”. This changes things a bit now; in order to “opt-out” we would probably need legislation.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Phil Lakin, George Kaiser, and Obama

A few weeks ago we went over the candidates for Tulsa City Council. One of the candidates for District 8 is Phil Lakin; Phil is also the Chairman of the George Kaiser Family Foundation. George Kaiser is one of the investors of the defunct solar energy company that was in the news last week for going bankrupt owing the U.S. government hundreds of millions of dollars. Lakin is also on the board of the Tulsa Community Foundation and other boards.

Here is an email from a Washington Post reporter responding after a Tulsa activist reached out with info on Phil Lakin and George Kaiser:

Quote:

"We are very interested in George Kaiser and any help you might be able to give us would be greatly appreciated. Our George Kaiser is chairman of Tulsa-based BOK Financial Corp. and owner of Kaiser-Francis Oil Co. He also is one of Solyndra's biggest backers through an organization known as the George Kaiser Family Foundation. He is an Oklahoma oilman who bundled campaign contributions from multiple sources for Obama's 2008 campaign. Kaiser raised, or bundled, $50,000 to $100,000 for Obama's 2008 campaign, according to a list that had been posted on Obama's 2008 campaign website. He gave $2,300 personally, according to the FEC.

As you probably know, the George Kaiser Family Foundation is a charitable organization based in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and backed by donations from Kaiser. It holds about 35.7 percent of the company, according to a Solyndra filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Kaiser made three visits to the White House on March 12, 2009, and one on March 13. Kaiser has denied any direct involvement in the Solyndra deal. In a statement from his foundation he said he "did not participate in any discussions with the U.S. government regarding the loan."

The White House meetings put that statement to a test. He met with former Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors Austan Goolsbee, Senior Advisor Pete Rouse, Deputy Director of the Domestic Policy Council Heather Higginbottom and Deputy Director of the National Economic Council Jason Furman. People who work for him also went to the White House, including chairman and founder Christian Gronet and Board Members Thomas Baruch and David Prend. This information is according to the WH visitor logs. Former Chief of Staff Rahm Emmanuel and Adviser Valerie Jarrett reportedly also met with Kaiser.

Representative Glen Mulready Talking Trash Again

Occasionally one of our members asks why we expose so much of the legislator's dirty laundry and focus on their response to our newsletters. For two reasons:

1. It shows people that the legislators are no better than the rest of us, almost anyone could run for office regardless of what baggage they might have or their "qualifications".
2. Their responses to our newsletters are illuminating, especially when they lash out in anger over the exposure of the seamy side of the legislature.

Last week, one of our old sparing partners, Representative Glen Mulready, just had to open his mouth again. Like the old joke about the hunter and the grizzly bear, one begins to wonder if Representative Mulready is doing this for the sport of it. Representative Mulready was one of the founding members of the Short Bus Caucus, a group of Republican House members that were running their mouth against the Tea Party during one of the Republican Caucus meetings. Here is a link to that May 8th newsletter where Representative Mulready helped us come up with the name transvestite Republican: Transvestite Republicans

So last week Representative Mulready once again shot off his infamous mouth in an email to one of our allies. Here is the email:

So, "relevant to the topic" from your perspective is someones (Sic) innuendo and rumor tossed around without any kind of evidence. This is one radical person, with no evidence, throwing things out there about people he doesn't like....plain and simple.

The bottom line is no different than I tell my young boys daily. Choose your friends wisely...you will be known by those you hang out with. If you wish to be identified closely with this group, then by all means, continue to forward their emails. I'm telling you that this is a quick way for you to move you and your group towards irrelevance by association.

I have a lot more detail about this groups posting of comments and pictures of my family earlier this year that I could share with you, but will not take the time.

Choose your friends wisely!

Best regards,

Glen”

End quote.

Representative Mulready's purpose in taking the time to respond to B.L. is obvious; to try to drive a wedge between the Tea Party and the rural interests.

If you have taken one of my classes on the Real Nature of Politics, you will recognize the classic responses regurgitated by Representative Mulready. He starts by stating that forwarding the Sooner Tea Party newsletter undermines B.L.'s credibility. When a politician tells you something, the first thing you should ask yourself is how it benefits the politician if you believe what he says. Think about it, Representative Mulready is not supporting B.L.'s effort so if B.L. was hurting his credibility then Representative Mulready would just stay silent and let him hang himself.

Next Representative Mulready admits that forwarding something is the same as endorsing something. Using that logic, he supports and endorses the House leaders that voted for the transvestite birth certificate bill, therefore Representative Mulready supports everything else the House leadership stands for: allowing illegal immigration, biometrics on our drivers license for future facial recognition tracking systems, highway cameras watching car license plates for ticketing those without insurance (next will be those that are running an expired tag, next are those driving 5 miles over the speed limit), implementing the Obama Care/Fallin Care Health insurance exchanges (Mulready is heading that interim study), stopping Open Carry, and stopping all the Tea Party/Constitutional bills that support the 2nd, 4th, 9th, and 10th Amendments.

As to the list of immoral legislators cheating on their spouses, multiple sources backed up each instance of infidelity. One case was dropped after a Democrat legislator vouched for the legislator after approaching him on our behalf; five or six others are still under investigation so we did not put them on the newsletter. The Kirby and Osborn affair was checked using both GOP and Democrat sources. The Charles Ortega story was confirmed using legislators and local sources, he is the talk of the town these days... the old goat! The Lee Denney story was verified using local sources as well as multiple legislative sources.

We back up 100% of our info before we use it in the newsletter. As far as ruining a cheating legislator's reputation, they ruined it themselves; we are just spreading the news. As far as the Sooner Tea Party's "agenda", it is simple, force legislators like Representative Mulready to represent their constituents instead of ruling over them like they are royalty and to force the legislators to support the Constitution including the Bill of Rights. If Representative Mulready needs stepped on to force him to do right, we have no problem stepping on him.

As to posting his family picture, we took the picture off his campaign website. If he drags his family into his campaign to claim family values, then what is wrong with using the picture when Representative Mulready is going against family values? We posted his family shot next to a drag queen smoking a cigarette and asked the readers to see if the two men looked alike and to let us know if Mulready didn't look like a transvestite.... not as single email came in against the article, people understood that we were pointing out that Mulready was a hypocrite.

Lastly, Representative Mulready talks big about not slandering people and tossing around innuendo and rumor, yet he doesn't look into the stories before claiming we are "radical" and are slandering people. The difference between Representative Mulready and our group is that we put our info out in public, Representative Mulready prefers to slink about and whisper lies in private. And where is Representative Mulready's outrage over Representative Dan Sullivan's behavior?

But the highest nail gets the hammer so Representative Mulready has earned another article in the newsletter about his character and his refusal to represent the people in his district. He is an elitist, he said so at that meeting in May, said that regardless of how the people in his district want him to vote he is going to vote his way. I've got it on tape, it is going to make a great robo call.

Remember always that the Mulreadys of this world believe that the rest of us are sheep to be sheared. They stay in power only by dividing any that rise against them. They are accomplished liars; the most dangerous of them are the sociopath liars who tend to rise into leadership positions. They truly believe they are not lying, from being so wrapped up in their fantasy world and their belief that they are above everyone else.

Oklahoma Real Estate Commission Whitewashes Sullivan Real Estate Investigation

And after all that documentation of the forged document that we looked at last week, what did the Oklahoma Real Estate Commission do? They whitewashed the investigation, seizing upon a comment from Mrs. Sullivan that stated she didn't know which party altered the document and forged the initials. That is the problem with reasonable people, they talk reasonably, and Mrs. Sullivan was just stating an obvious fact. Most people would understand that an investigation was required to ascertain who altered the document and forged the initial. A bureaucrat on the other hand would jump at the chance to get this issue off their desk and done with! All they had to do was question the realtor about the document and she would have rolled over on either Representative Sullivan or his attorney.

Did Representative Sullivan Lie To Tulsa Police on September 19th 2007?

Two weeks ago we told the story of a terrified woman fleeing her home around 11:30 pm, in her night clothes, barefoot, not even taking the time to grab her cell phone. A source claimed that after an argument over continuing the marriage counseling, Representative Sullivan eyes were so dark with anger that they were like "looking at the end of the world".

Sources say Mrs. Sullivan fled northeast on I-44 in the early hours of September 19th, so afraid for her life, so shocked, so intimidated by her husband's behavior that she could only think of putting distance between them. Remember that reports state that Representative Sullivan had been mixing prescription medicines, over the counter cold medication, and booze. Documents and emails show that he was in dire financial straits, had impregnated a House staffer that worked under him at the capitol during an illicit and illegal affair, and was becoming increasingly unstable.

Mrs. Sullivan could think of only one place to go where her reserve deputy/Judicial Committee Chairman/Representative husband wouldn't likely find her, a bed and breakfast place near Grand Lake that she remembered from a previous trip long ago. She realized that she couldn't hope to find a vacancy at 2:00 or 3:00 am so she parked in the parking lot of the Cherokee Yacht Club near Ketchum, Oklahoma.

It wasn't long before a security guard came over to see why a woman was parked by the lake in the predawn chill. Dressed in night clothes, shoeless, and scared, the officer recognized the signs of an abused woman in need of help. The officer opened up the lobby and allowed Mrs. Sullivan to wait inside until daylight, then after telling her the bed and breakfast she was searching for had closed the previous year, the officer recommended another small business that rented secluded lake cabins.

The innkeeper was a woman that had also had experience with abused women in shelters and immediately recognized the tell tale signs: no shoes, no luggage, night clothing rather than suitable attire, a woman clearly frightened that her husband would find her and do harm. Since Mrs. Sullivan was still terrified of being found, the innkeeper suggested parking the car away from the cabin, lessening the chance that Representative Sullivan could track her down.

And what was Representative Sullivan doing about this time? Well, he had gone to work. Doesn't sound like something that a normal husband would do after his wife fled in terror the night before, most would be out looking for her or calling her friends and family, perhaps even calling the state police since she was the wife of a legislator. But not Representative Sullivan, where most of us would have been worried sick, Representative Sullivan went to work, had lunch, and went home.

Finally around 9:30 pm Representative Sullivan reported his wife missing, twenty two hours after she fled. Representative Sullivan told the officer of the cell phone left behind, that he had called his family and friends in an effort to find her, and had looked online to see if she had used her credit cards or withdrew money from an ATM. The police report states that Representative Sullivan said that he didn't believe that Mrs. Sullivan was suicidal but she had been upset over health issues. No mention of the argument that turned physical, no mention of the marriage counseling as a result of Representative Sullivan's infidelities, Representative Sullivan chose to lie and say Mrs. Sullivan was upset over health issues...

Look for the file labeled: “Missing Person Police Report 9.19.2007”.

But much later Representative Sullivan testified under oath as part of the divorce proceedings. During his testimony Sullivan denied that he had told the Tulsa Police that Mrs. Sullivan was worried about her health the night she fled. In fact Representative Sullivan admitted on the witness stand that they had had an argument which caused Mrs. Sullivan to flee.

“Representative Sullivan Deposition Proving He Lied About The Reason Mrs. Sullivan Fleed”

Okay, some of you might say, so Representative Sullivan didn't want to air his dirty laundry. He told a little white lie to save face. If that were all, we wouldn't be reporting this but what came next is absolutely chilling.

The missing person report also states:

“Dan, who is also a TCSO reserve deputy, verified that his only owned weapon was accounted for in their home.”

Did Representative Sullivan own only one weapon?

Representative Sullivan claimed only one gun in his statement to the Tulsa police on the missing person report. Here is what Sullivan had in the way of weaponry around that time, many of them left loaded around the home.

I counted 16 guns, not one that he told the Tulsa police officer about.

And here are pictures of the guns that Representative Sullivan denied owning.

Now many people collect guns, nothing wrong with that. The problem here is Representative Sullivan lying.

One can only wonder why Representative Sullivan would lie to a police officer about the number of weapons he owned. Was he was covering his tracks in case a body was found and ballistic tests were run? What we can be certain of is that Representative Sullivan has no qualms about lying to a police officer or on the witness stand, if it suits his purpose. All that remains is to ask why Representative Sullivan lies. There are three types of liars:

- 1.Pathological Liar, someone that doesn't lie purposely, they actually believe that they are telling the truth.
- 2.Compulsive Liar, someone that lies out of habit because it feels "right".
- 3.Sociopaths, someone that lies incessantly in order to get their way and does so with little concern for others.

Of the three types of liar, I believe that Representative Sullivan better fits the Sociopath model better than any other. link to list of traits of sociopaths.

Yes, this was a messy divorce! But if character matters, something that the country forgot when they elected Bill Clinton, and if past behavior is indicative of future behavior, do we dare allow Representative Sullivan to walk away from his behavior and crimes without penalty? Do we dare allow the other 148 legislators think that if Representative Sullivan got away with it, that they can get away with it?

Oh, and what happened to Mrs. Sullivan? Her brother and her sister in law found her on Thursday, two days after she had gone missing. They had gone online to the Pike Pass website and found the Vinita exit charge, then cruised around till one of them spotted her car.

Representative Sullivan never went looking for her.

Obama Administration Exporting American Jobs DOJ Advises Gibson Guitar to Export Labor to Madagascar

This story has been in the woodworking journals for some time. Gibson Guitar was raided in 2009 and despite their exotic woods coming from certified importers, millions of dollars worth of lumber and finished guitars were confiscated. Their competitors, Martin Guitar and Fender Guitar, use the same importer but they haven't been raided, likely due to the owner of Martin Guitar being an Obama donor and both companies not having the deep pockets that Gibson Guitar possesses. Despite obtaining letters from the Madagascar government stating that the wood in question was exported legally, the Obama administration contends that the wood was imported in violation of Madagascar law (not U.S. law!).

The wood the Government seized on August 24 is from a Forest Stewardship Council certified supplier and is FSC Controlled, meaning that the wood complies with the standards of the Forest Stewardship Council, which is an industry-recognized and independent, not-for-profit organization established to promote responsible management of the world's forests. I've seen articles in the wood working journals about Gibson Guitar's commitment to the Forest Stewardship Council program.

The Obama administration contends that only finished wood products are allowed to be exported from Madagascar and have told the Gibson Guitar company that all of this would go away if they moved production into the country that exported the exotic woods. Gibson is one of those rare companies that has been able to keep ahead of foreign imports by focusing on top quality products, keeping hundreds of jobs right here in the U.S.

I firmly believe that there is no such thing as a crazy person or a crazy law. Most alleged insanity usually looks reasonable once viewed from the correct angle. If one believes the Cloward-Pivens strategy is behind the Obama administration wanting to close down an American factory and send the jobs to Madagascar, then this story begins to make perfect sense.

I am a former employer. I've owned furniture factories and cabinet shops over the years, employing from a few to over 40 employees. My current shop was built to employ ten employees but the most employees we could ever amass at once was eight. The restriction was finding someone willing to actually show up for work, and then once there, be willing to put in a productive eight hour day putting out quality work. Once people stuck around long enough to pick up the skills required to work efficiently, they could earn as much as $15.00 per hour. Not enough, I know, but with the other cabinet shops employing illegal workers at $7.00 to $8.00 per hour, that was the best we could pay. The wood working industry has always had wages up to 60% less than other manufacturing industries, the low barrier of entry for new shops has always caused professional shops to compete with those working in their garages or working on site to build cabinets, with the low overhead giving the unprofessional shops a large advantage.

Low wages in itself isn't 100% of the problem. Once people figure out how to play the system, they don't need to work for low wages if they use Section 8 housing, free medical care at the emergency room, food stamps, and the other welfare programs. So companies like Gibson are hit with both low price foreign competition and finding workers with enough self esteem that they are willing to work rather than sit on the government dole. And then the Obama administration wants to shut them down and ship the jobs overseas.

I started winding down the number of employees I worked years ago. When the internet age came upon us it was obvious that if your quality was not the best, it mattered not what price range you were in, unhappy customers would post bad references about your company online for all to see. I've seen comments where people talked about the price of a set of cabinets being the only standard toward choosing a company because they could always demand quality. Well, cabinets are like any other product, you get what you pay for, all that type of customer can do is set themselves up for problems. So I decided to avoid the low end of the market, focusing on the upper end where one could charge enough to do top notch work and avoid the bad reviews. That meant that I could afford to hire only the best workers, because the old system of bringing in a new hand and absorbing the cost reworking his mistakes wasn't possible anymore.

If a manufacture can manage to get past the foreign competition and the lack of work ethic in the majority of the workers in the lower pay scales, then government regulation is still there to cause problems. It was bad enough back in the mid eighties when I had over 40 workers on my payroll, with untold dozens more producing materials, supplies, or components for my factory. It is ten times worse these days as Gibson Guitar is finding out.

So like John Galt in Atlas Shrugged, I went on strike. Now I work no employees, just do what I can do by myself and I've found I make more than I did with eight employees even carrying the enormous overhead of a 10,000 square foot shop. This strategy is the only safe way to survive in business these days unless you have a very profitable business and can just burn money to solve problems. One wonders how much of the current 9% unemployment and the enormous under employment is due to capitalist like myself just refusing to play the game.

Speaking of which, I'm about to write my memo for that phone call. Here's a rough draft -- please do not forward but I'd be interested in your comments as we all write our memos..... I just typed this out in about 1 minute....

I think I'll begin with the state of play--

Two issues of disagreement-

1. Relief from the MOE: We need MOE relief from both Congress and Sebelius. It is not something that can be separated from this discussion even though a letter was sent in January. Any language about MOE should address unfunded mandates. Gov Gregoire will probably try to tell you NGA has already addressed MOEs.

2. Block Grants: Some Democrats, notably Governor Patrick to this discussion, oppose the block grant idea.

Governor Gregoire is upset with staff and had hoped that we would come up with a list of things in which governors can agree, saving the last couple of "hot" items for governors to resolve. She is concerned the one governor on either side of the aisle can veto a consensus document.

Governor Heineman, through his leadership, identified on the front end what our "line in the sand" would be. 1) Relief from MOE and 2) Block grants. Any list not including those items would be a deal breaker for our caucus.

Politically, agreeing to a document with items that the Secretary might approve while ignoring other items is not agreeable to either side. Democrats are just as concerned about Chairman Ryan using what we release as we are concerned about the President using what we produce. (the President has referenced this NGA healthcare task force in his remarks in the last couple of weeks, adding fuel to our concern that HHS/WH is looking for us to produce something they can use). Governor Gregoire was going to talk to Governor Patrick about compromise language on block grants, and, at this time, I am unaware of what such language could include. I'd caution you on such a position.

The document, attached to your memo is lengthy. It divides the subject matters into three sections: high cost savers, middle and low cost savers. The details of the memo is not critical to your conversation today.

My recommendation is that you support Governor Heineman and his efforts to graciously conclude the NGA healthcare task force on the basis that healthcare reform is very political and we are unable to agree on two of the most important issues we face. NGA should focus on the other 85% of issues beyond healthcare where we do have agreement.

Reminder- We do have the RGPPC healthcare process which is still at the Medicaid Director level but will be presented to Governors in the near future for their edits and eventual approval/release.

Applaud his move to contain costs - paying for outcomes not fee-for-service using an accountable care model, but note my highlights, like the the federal government's just released 500 pages of ACO regs, Patrick believes the government - not patients - should drive the decision-making and cost savings, they think they need to command and control from Boston and/or Washington.

Massachusetts, pioneer of universal health care, now may try new approach to costs

By Amy Goldstein , Friday, April 15, 6:15 PM

BOSTON - Five years ago this week, Massachusetts became the first state to move toward universal health insurance, foreshadowing the 2010 federal health-care overhaul . Now, the commonwealth is debating whether to become a role model again by replacing the fee-for-service system that has long defined U.S. medicine.

Massachusetts Gov. Deval L. Patrick (D) is trying to "shove," as he put it, the health-care system here into a new era of cost control. He is proposing a new way of paying for care that would try to propel changes in the way it is delivered. It would give lump payments to teams of doctors responsible for almost all the care of a group of patients, with bonuses for saving money and dispensing high-caliber services that keep people healthy.

The governor's plan - stirring an impassioned debate inside the gold-domed State House on Beacon Hill and among players in the state's vaunted health-care industry - would make Massachusetts the only state to promote wholesale new arrangements of "integrated care."

Massachusetts in 2006 created a health insurance exchange, a requirement that most residents carry coverage and subsidies to help them pay for it - central elements now in the federal law. As a result, 98 percent of the residents here are now insured, the highest rate in the nation. But the state's first round of health-care changes devoted far less attention to medical costs.

"We did access first," said state Senate President Therese Murray (D). "Now we have to figure out how we afford that."

With that question widely regarded here as unavoidable, "Massachusetts is where the feds are going to be" in a few years, predicted Robert Laszewski, a health industry consultant. "It's a time machine."

The governor's proposal builds on a surprising consensus among leaders from the state's insurance and hospital industries, medical society, legislature and governor's staff who served on a special state commission assigned to diagnose the culprit behind the soaring medical spending.

Fee-for-service medicine "is a primary contributor to escalating costs and pervasive problems of uneven quality," the commission unanimously concluded in 2009.

Despite the consensus, huge questions loom: Who should be part of the new medical teams? How would the idea work for most doctors who practice alone or in small groups? How much clout should the state wield to blunt the ability of powerful local health systems to drive up costs? And, importantly, how heavy a hand should the government use to compel change?

"We are preparing ourselves to grapple with a certain amount of constructive disruption in the industry," Patrick said in a lengthy interview. "It's a journey."

In the pressure-cooker of medical costs in the United States, Massachusetts offers a particularly vivid example. The spending per person on health care is 15 percent higher than the national average - even taking into account the comparatively high wages here and outsize role of medical research and training. The move to near-universal coverage, state figures show, accounts for a sliver of recent increases in insurance premiums, which have soared above inflation. The main reason has been a rapid escalation in prices.

"The growth is outstripping every single measure of society's ability to keep up," said Glen Shor, executive director of the Commonwealth Health Insurance Connector, which runs the insurance exchange.

Having committed to health care for almost everyone, Shor said, Massachusetts does not have the same "safety valve" as other states, which are carving services and sometimes people from public health and insurance programs. "As a result, we have to, more than anywhere else, stare squarely at cost containment."

In this climate, the private health-care marketplace already is taking steps away from fee-for-service, the method by which doctors, hospitals and others who treat patients are paid for each service they provide. The rationale is that such a system rewards more care rather than coordinated treatment and upfront care that can lessen the need for more expensive services later on.

The biggest move is being made by Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, the commonwealth's largest insurer. In 2009 it began a new payment system called Alternative Quality Contracts with some of the doctors and hospitals in its network.

The arrangement is a version of the accountable care organizations that the federal government also is trying to encourage in Medicare. They pay teams of doctors or hospitals a lump sum or what is called a "global budget" for the patients assigned to them. If a team can provide care for less, it keeps some of the savings, assuming it also meets enough of 64 measures of quality that Blue Cross has defined. Today, about one-third of the primary care doctors in Blue Cross's network are taking part. A half-million HMO patients have been put in them - but not told by the insurer.

The arrangement is voluntary, but Andrew Dreyfus, Blue Cross's president and chief executive, said that if doctors and others stay with the old fee-for-service model, "we can no longer pay the kind of price increases we have . . . in the past."

Some doctors are embracing the new way of working. David C. Pickul is the medical director of the physicians group affiliated with Lowell General Hospital, in an economically bruised community about 30 miles northwest of Boston. The group is in the third year of a five-year "alternative quality" contract with Blue Cross involving a hub of 70 primary care doctors and a looser group of 200 specialists who are responsible for 20,000 HMO patients. The team now has a financial incentive, Pickul said, to track down patients when it is time for their mammograms or for eye exams for those with diabetes. Under Blue Cross's quality rating, Lowell has soared the past two years.

Blue Cross is not alone. At Partners HealthCare, the famous Boston-based medical system that dominates health care here, Massachusetts General Hospital has been conducting a Medicare experiment in which nurses are assigned to coordinate care for about 2,500 older patients with multiple ailments. The experiment, which began five years ago, so far has reduced hospital re-admissions by one-fifth and cut medical spending by 7 percent.

"Frankly, the market has already . . . responded," said Gary Gottlieb, Partners' president and chief executive. "There is enough momentum for us to do this without instrumental regulation" by the state.

The governor and some other officials disagree. The need to lower costs, they say, is urgent enough that the government should step in, and they have been laying groundwork.

A 2008 law that created the special commission also gave the state sweeping new powers to document the problems of medical costs. Attorney General Martha Coakley used new subpoena power to produce a report laying out large disparities in hospitals' prices and concluding that they are unrelated to the quality of their care, the sickness of their patients or whether the institution is a teaching factor that drives prices was "market leverage," Coakley wrote, singling out Partners as the greatest offender.

Then, in a February 2010 speech before the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce, Patrick "just lost my patience," he recalled. Unless insurers lower their prices, he told the audience, he would direct the insurance commissioner to take the unprecedented step of rejecting any rates the state viewed as excessive.

"I said, 'Look, something has got to give,' " he said in the interview. "They didn't think I would do it." But on April 1 last year, the commissioner rejected 235 of 274 proposed increases for individuals and small businesses.

Some insurers sued. Eventually, many settled with the state for smaller increases. "I meant to get people's attention, and we did," Patrick said. This year, insurers returned with smaller increases.

The commonwealth has begun to use its large purchasing power - through Medicaid, subsidies for people to buy coverage in the exchange and insurance for state and municipal workers. For instance, in November, Massachusetts Health and Human Services Secretary JudyAnn Bigby said, Medicaid began an experiment with "medical homes" that coordinate care for the patients of about 200 doctors statewide.

The governor's legislative proposal, introduced in February, would go further, setting changes in motion for both public and private insurance. In addition to the goals for a broad shift to global payments within four years, it would give the insurance commissioner authority to reject insurance rates based on the prices providers charge.

Such a plan has influential allies, including Murray, the state Senate president, who is urging fellow lawmakers to adopt the global payments plan this year.

"We've seen how patients in these integrated care organizations are much healthier and happier. . . . It has been a godsend," said Brian Rosman, research director of a group called Health Care for All that is part of a new coalition pushing for the governor's proposal.

Skeptics urge caution. House Majority Leader Ronald Mariano (D) says the state "ought to take more time. You turn the system upside down, you don't educate people sufficiently, you are going to have a repeat of what we had in the '90s with the [backlash against] HMOs."

And Alice Coombs, president of the Massachusetts Medical Society, is especially concerned about physicians who work alone or in small groups, older physicians who might choose to retire rather than switch or new doctors who might leave for other states.

Among the biggest unresolved questions - for critics and supporters alike - is what the government would do if the shift to global payments and integrated care did not reach the goals by 2015. Patrick is admittedly vague on the question. "Yes, there should be accountabilities," he said. "I am not persuaded that the market is going to get this right all by itself."

But he said, "I don't want to pre-suppose" the precise power the state should have to force changes. The bill we filed," the governor said, "is to provoke a debate, not to conclude it."

Hello,

I take great pride in Oklahoma as I'm sure you do also. From time to time, we find news articles, studies or other pieces that highlight some of our state's accomplishments or feature some of our wonderful residents. I would like to take the opportunity to share this information with you on occasion. Below is the first such piece. It features a wonderful story about an Oklahoma mother and her child. I hope you enjoy it as much as I did.
I welcome any thoughts or feedback.

Sincerely,

Medicaid, the public program that provides health and long-term care coverage for low-income individuals and families, covers about 60 million people currently, or 1 in 5 Americans. Medicaid beneficiaries include pregnant women, children and families, individuals with disabilities, and seniors. During down economies, Medicaid places pressure on state and federal budgets as the number of people who qualify for the program grows. Without Medicaid, most of its beneficiaries would be uninsured or lack coverage for essential care. Although Medicaid reaches many poor Americans, it does not reach all of them. Under the new health reform law, beginning in 2014, millions of uninsured, low-income Americans will gain health coverage through a major expansion of Medicaid

Anthony Burke, 11
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

"...I'm just really grateful. The Medicaid SoonerCare program has had a profound effect on my family." – Anthony's mother, Latrita

Latrita McFadden noticed from the beginning that her son, Anthony Burke, now age 11, always walked on his tiptoes. When he began to complain that his knees were hurting, she tried to get help. Latrita took him from doctor to doctor, but she was advised each time that Anthony would probably grow out of it and no one referred her to a specialist. Anthony fared well enough until he started school, where he was taunted about his walk and also about a speech impairment. "He used to walk around with his head low and just kind of avoid everybody," Latrita reports. Anthony became withdrawn and would not read aloud in class. His first-grade teacher held him back, saying that he was immature and unable to speak well enough to rise to second grade.

Things changed dramatically for Anthony when, newly covered by SoonerCare (Oklahoma's Medicaid program), he received some much-needed care. Latrita took him to a new primary care doctor, who referred him to a specialist about his walking. That led them to an orthopedist, who diagnosed Anthony's shorter-than-normal Achilles' tendons and operated on one of his feet (he will need the same surgery on his other foot). Anthony also began to get speech therapy as well as some counseling. According to his mother, "Once he got that surgery and he stopped walking on his toes like he was doing, his self-confidence skyrocketed." Shortly after the operation on his foot, Anthony "graduated out" of speech therapy, and though he continues his exercises on his own, he no longer needs to see the physical therapist either.

Latrita has trouble containing her amazement as she describes a boy who now has the self-esteem not only to speak, but to serve as junior deacon in his church and run for student body president. And in a sharp contrast to a few years ago, his fifth-grade teacher now has him tutoring other students in his class. Anthony didn't win the school election, but he says he's going to run next year and keep on running until he wins. His mother enjoys the unintended pun, "It's funny because he says, literally, I'm going to keep on running... He knows he can run and his feet are working like they're supposed to work now."

Hi Craig-

I, along with some other freshman representatives, would like to have an opportunity to meet with the Governor briefly to discuss the "Early Innovator" grant. As you know, several GOP freshman, most of who support the Oklahoma health insurance exchange, issued a statement encouraging the rejection of the federal funds. Our intent was simply to make record of our opinion. Unfortunately, some have interpreted this statement as singling out our Governor or standing in opposition to her. This was not the intent and we would like the opportunity to confirm our support of the Governor and commitment to her leadership. Please "reply all" to let us know when she may be available, and thank you in advance for your help with this issue.

Most sincerely,
Randy

Freshman GOP Representatives Encourage Return of Federal "Obamacare" Funds

OKLAHOMA CITY – Freshman Republican representatives are encouraging state officials to not accept federal funds promised to Oklahoma under an “Early Innovator” grant authorized by the federal Affordable Care Act.

In February, the House approved HB 2130, which establishes a state health insurance exchange. The bill did not include a provision to accept or deny the $54M grant.

“What we voted for was a free-market exchange based on choice and competition, which will ultimately lower health care costs,” said Rep. Randy Grau, R-Edmond. “We did not vote to accept federal money that may require us to set up a federal health care system.”

“Since the vote on HB 2130, it has become increasingly apparent that we cannot accept this money without also accepting the strings attached to it,” said Rep. Elise Hall, R-Oklahoma City. “It is time to go on record that we do not want this money, but instead, we want to set up an exchange that is right for Oklahoma, not Washington D.C.”

“We join Senator Tom Coburn and many conservative organizations in supporting health insurance exchanges like that established in Utah,” said Rep. Tom Newell, R-Seminole. “But we think it is important to sever any ties to Obamacare, which means that the federal funds need to be rejected.”

“The idea of an exchange based upon free-market principles comes from the Heritage Foundation, a leading conservative think tank,” said Rep. Sean Roberts, R-Hominy. “The idea was around before President Obama, but it appears he is now trying to use exchanges to push federal health care.”

“We will continue to work with the Governor and House leadership in promoting Oklahoma health care solutions, not Washington D.C. solutions,” said Rep. Marty Quinn, R-Claremore.

“Many of us in the House campaigned on the platform of free market principles. If we accept federal money with strings attached, we are going back on our word,” said Rep. Josh Cockroft, R-Tecumseh. “It is time for us to sever any ties to Obamacare and allow the private sector to thrive under these free market principles.”

“I strongly support the private sector and oppose Obamacare and the use of federal money for a health care exchange,” said Rep. Dennis Casey, R-Morrison.

“The state must learn to stop accepting federal money and let Oklahomans take care of Oklahoma,” said Rep. Aaron Stiles, R-Norman.

“The attachment of the federal money and its link to federal health care was not fully recognized before the vote on the exchange,” said Rep. Dustin Roberts, R-Durant.

“Clarification of the issue seems to tie federal grant money to the Obamacare effort,” said Rep. Jadine Nollan, R-Sand Springs. “I support an Oklahoma health insurance exchange without any federal ties.”

Debbie,

This is a great summary. I'm going to go further in my memo to Governor Barbour and recommend that our governors put their energies in vetting the WI, LA, IN, VA, SC document through the RGPPC process with all of our R gov's as a baseline doc to decipher what it is we are "for". We should spend more time working through the R gov's rather than watering down our efforts through NGA for the reasons indicated in your email.

I'm an advocate for slowing down the NGA process through the summer meeting, until we have some parameters for what the unified R position can be. While I realize we need to find a way to work with the Democrats through NGA, I don't necessarily think this healthcare issue ought to be where we extend an olive branch. Obamacare doesn't work, won't work and whatever we agree to through this process can and will be used against us.

Hi guys.

Here are some suggested message points for the Republican Governor's calls on Sunday/Monday with Governor Heineman. After speaking with some of you, I think I've captured our take on the situation and the decision for moving forward Governors need to make. Please let me know your comments. Hope this helps you with any briefing you might provide your Governor before the call(s). I'd welcome your comments/ideas/suggestions.

1. NGA Staff led by Governor Gregoire's team is pushing a comprehensive effort to find consensus on a Medicaid reform proposal that would be shared very publicly with Hill leaders and Secretary Sebelius I mid-May.
2. To date, all ideas (the good, the bad and the ugly) have been put on the table through an open process led by the NGA. The next step is for Executive Committee staff representatives to come to consensus on reform elements we can agree upon.
3. Democrat Governors recently sent a letter to Hill leadership stating their objections to a mandatory Medicaid block grant, although it seems they are open to an optional block grant proposal - no details provided on what that might look like however. Our understanding is that the assignment from the Governor's only meeting on health care was to find some common ground on a block grant proposal. We are not off to a good start.
4. We have concerns that this NGA effort will result in a least common denominator document that undermines Hill leadership efforts to put forth serious reforms as illustrated in the Ryan FY12 proposal. A watered down NGA proposal will offer the Administration a tool to use in hearings, press releases, speeches and other communication vehicles to paint the Republican proposals on the Hill as too radical even for our nation's Governors.
5. For some unstated reason, there is a rush to find consensus to get this NGA Medicaid Reform proposal to Governors for approval by the end of April and up on the Hill by mid-May. Conspiracy theories abound.
6. Finally, a small group of health policy staff from key states (WI, LA, IN, VA, SC) are working on a comprehensive Medicaid Reform proposal that expands on the Ryan budget proposal and offers bold flexibility, state control and cost containment strategies for this runaway entitlement program. (DRAFT document attached). LA and SC are anxious to release the document although other states have not fully vetted internally.

7. Republican Governors on the Executive Committee should have an honest conversation about the political strategy of working with the NGA on consensus proposals and/or moving with a more aggressive agenda on their own.

Text of DGA letter to Hill leadership:

Dear Majority Leader Reid, Minority Leader McConnell, Speaker Boehner, and Minority Leader Pelosi:

We strongly oppose a congressionally-mandated block grant of federal Medicaid spending, which would shift costs and risk to states. Such a cost shift would severely undercut our ability to provide health care to our residents and adequately pay providers.

The current Medicaid financing structure is a partnership between federal and state governments that provides basic access to health care for the poor and disabled. The cost of providing this care has grown as a percentage of both federal and state budgets as health care costs have increased and as the economy faltered making more Americans unable to provide for their basic health needs. As Governors managing budgets in a difficult fiscal environment, we have pursued strategies to reduce Medicaid costs while still preserving the integrity of the program. We are concerned that Congress, in an attempt to reduce the federal deficit, may pursue the exact opposite course of action by creating a mandated block grant which would do little to address cost growth while shifting costs to states and threatening program integrity.

A Medicaid block grant imposed unilaterally by Congress on all states that would cap the federal government's share of costs and provide fixed annual funding below the projected growth of program costs is simply unacceptable. The inadequacy of funding would grow over time and would be exacerbated by unanticipated increases in health care costs or enrollment. The costs of population increases, aging populations, economic downturns, natural disasters, new diseases or epidemics would all be shouldered by states. States would be forced to bear all costs after hitting the annual cap just as the "baby boom" generation is entering their retirement years with a likely steep increase in their health care and long term care costs over the next few decades. The ensuing funding shortfall would leave states with an untenable choice between increasing taxes, cutting other state programs, or cutting eligibility, benefits, or provider payments.

In the face of state and federal budget pressures and rising health care costs, we need federal policy that creates cost savings, not cost shifting. States are already innovating within Medicaid, and the current financing system provides ample room to manage our Medicaid programs to provide increasingly efficient quality care.

We continue to seek greater flexibility to improve our Medicaid programs in ways that work for our individual states and we welcome a productive conversation about how the federal government can maintain its critical role in funding the safety net and maintaining national standards while facilitating state-level innovation. Still, we reject the notion that flexibility can only be provided to states if it is tied to a transformation of the Medicaid program's finances that significantly shifts costs and risks to states.

Sincerely,

Deborah Hohlt

There is language in the bill saying that it will be funded through federal grant money. Speaker included that language thinking at the time that if it included state money it would not get passed because of the budget shortfall. You can say we are requesting that provision be stricken from the bill.

We are also working on additional recommendations with regard to representation on the governance board, but no details yet, but you can say that we are open to considering/ recommending changes. Ultimately it is the Speakers bill and in Senate hands and they decide what changes are made, so I want to be a little careful.

I think we need to get these Senators in a room and go over their concerns. They are all over the map about the grant funds and this obligates the state. Also Coburn is opposed and is likely to say so soon. We may not get these guys back if that happens.

Brecheen and Treat both Coburn staffers r on the retirement and insurance cmte. Coburn says its a bad idea to take the grant money we'll likely lose their vote.

Grow the economy and revenues will go up -- put in place pro-business, pro-growth policies that will free up some of the capital businesses are afraid to spend because the Obama Administration says one thing and allows its agencies to do another....or, and ObamaCare is just another unfunded entitlement that needs to be repealed...Democrat governors are just whining because they are afraid to make the hard decisions, they'd rather have Washington do it for them.

O'Malley: Silence of GOP governors on debt impasse is 'deafening'

By John Wagner <http://www.washingtonpost.com/john-wagner/2011/03/02/ABjcy5M\_page.html>

Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley led a chorus of Democratic governors who on Thursday chided their Republican counterparts for not playing a more constructive role in the federal debt-ceiling negotiations <http://www.washingtonpost.com/business/economy/democrats-bash-cantor-over-debt-talks/2011/07/14/gIQAAMDrPEI\_story.html?hpid=z1>.

"The silence is deafening from the Republican governors," O'Malley said. "We need our Republican colleagues to stand up and say, 'Enough's enough.' ... The dinosaur wing of their party is silencing the more moderate wing of their party."

O'Malley's comments came on the opening day of a summer gathering of the National Governors Association in Salt Lake City.

O'Malley, who chairs the Democratic Governors Association, held a news conference with three colleagues from his party just prior to the NGA's evening "welcome reception." At the event, the Democrats warned of dire consequences for states governed by both parties if the United States defaults on its debts.

"They all know what this would do to their own bond ratings," Connecticut Gov. Dannel Malloy (D) said of his Republican counterparts in other states.

The news conference was the start of a busy few days in Utah for O'Malley, who is trying to build his national profile.

He is booked as the keynote speaker <http://www.washingtonpost.com/blogs/maryland-politics/post/omalley-political-travels-include-illinois-utah/2011/06/14/AGuar4UH\_blog.html> at the Utah Democratic Party's annual Jubilee dinner on Friday night and is leading an NGA panel on homeland security and public safety on Saturday.

Besides Malloy, O'Malley was joined at Thursday's news conference by North Carolina Gov. Bev Perdue (D) and Montana Gov. Brian Schweitzer (D).

Perdue voiced concern that federal budget cuts that are part of a late-hour debt-reduction agreement could also be damaging to states and said she and her colleagues are closely monitoring the situation.

O'Malley left Maryland early Thursday morning on a flight with his wife and an aide, and he plans to return Sunday.

October 2, 2011

The Honorable Kathleen Sebelius
Secretary
U.S. Department of Health and Human Services
200 Independence Ave., SW
Washington, DC 20201

Dear Secretary Sebelius:

On behalf of the nation's governors, we appreciate the opportunity to weigh in on the proposed health insurance exchange regulations. States are taking diverse approaches to the establishment of exchanges. (NM) As your department works to design ~~federal~~-state-~~federal~~ partnership models for the implementation of health insurance exchanges, we encourage you to structure these models based on traditional state-federal functions and with the goal of allowing states to earn compliance in the short term as they build capacity for state-operated exchanges. In particular, we recommend that states be given the flexibility to each determine whether exchange functions that align closely with ongoing state activities should remain state responsibilities, or if while functions with little overlap with existing state activities can be handled by the federal government. (MN)

Implementation of health insurance exchanges requires a number of complex policy decisions amid aggressive timelines. (VA – see below) As states work to implement exchanges, the ability to partner with the federal government on a broad range of functions could assist greatly. States considering a “partnership” model generally fall into two categories: 1) Those that view the partnership as a way to earn compliance in the short term while building capacity to fully run the exchange themselves; and 2) Those planning to operate a state-based exchange while the federal government continues to handle functions the states view as naturally federal. Alternatively, some states not considering a partnership model will offer their own unique state-run health exchanges and will not want to rely on the federal government for any aspect of its functionality. (MN)

Under the proposed partnership models, states would be required to cede many operations that have been traditionally handled at the state level, such as Medicaid eligibility and enrollment. The proposals also appear to preclude states from obtaining funding to establish new state exchange functions after 2012. States are concerned that this construction would lock states into an all-or-nothing approach where the state's role in operating the exchange would be limited with little opportunity to gain additional operational authority.

To best facilitate a ~~federal~~-state-~~federal~~ partnership, we suggest the federal government offer states the option of performing perform functions in those (MN) areas where states have little or no current operational role such as determination of eligibility for federal tax credits and subsidies, facilitation of advance payment of premium tax credits by the Department of the Treasury to insurers, enforcement of the individual responsibility provisions, and reporting of user and employer data to the Department of the Treasury. In addition, federal assistance in pre-certifying and identifying information technology products and services that meet ACA requirements could greatly facilitate some states' (MN) efforts to design information technology systems necessary to operate an exchange. For example, federal development of software that could be provided to states, such as a benefit calculator, would be very helpful.

Implementation of health insurance exchanges requires a number of complex policy decisions amid aggressive timelines. Dear Secretary Sebelius:

On behalf of the nation's governors, we appreciate the opportunity to weigh in on the proposed health insurance exchange regulations. States are taking diverse approaches to the establishment of exchanges. (NM) As your department works to design ~~federal~~-state-~~federal~~ partnership models for the implementation of health insurance exchanges, we encourage you to structure these models based on traditional state-federal functions and with the goal of allowing states to earn compliance in the short term as they build capacity for state-operated exchanges. In particular, we recommend that states be given the flexibility to each determine whether exchange functions that align closely with ongoing state activities should remain state responsibilities, or if while functions with little overlap with existing state activities can be handled by the federal government. (MN)

Implementation of health insurance exchanges requires a number of complex policy decisions amid aggressive timelines. (VA – see below) As states work to implement exchanges, the ability to partner with the federal government on a broad range of functions could assist greatly. States considering a “partnership” model generally fall into two categories: 1) Those that view the partnership as a way to earn compliance in the short term while building capacity to fully run the exchange themselves; and 2) Those planning to operate a state-based exchange while the federal government continues to handle functions the states view as naturally federal. Alternatively, some states not considering a partnership model will offer their own unique state-run health exchanges and will not want to rely on the federal government for any aspect of its functionality. (MN)

Under the proposed partnership models, states would be required to cede many operations that have been traditionally handled at the state level, such as Medicaid eligibility and enrollment. The proposals also appear to preclude states from obtaining funding to establish new state exchange functions after 2012. States are concerned that this construction would lock states into an all-or-nothing approach where the state's role in operating the exchange would be limited with little opportunity to gain additional operational authority.

Hi, Andrew -- Great talking to you on the phone today. As I mentioned, I'm not quite sure which analogy would fit your request, as I'm not convinced that a state exchange will be any different than a federal one. As such, I've copied our friends at the Cato Institute to see if they can provide some research -- Michael Cannon is Cato's director of health policy studies, and Brandon Arnold and Caitlyn Korb handle Cato's government affairs.

Michael, Brandon, and Caitlyn: Andrew is Gov. Fallin's policy director. Oklahoma has done some great work recently in sending back the "Early Innovator" grant money for an exchange. But, the state is still considering setting up its own exchange, and is looking for research on what happens when the feds take over state government programs (not just in health care). Any insight you could provide Andrew (andrew.silvestri@gov.ok.gov; ) would be super helpful.

Any questions, please let me know -- or .

Christie-

Here is the follow up from my VM.

Oklahoma is considering creating its own insurance exchange program. The Governor's office is looking for examples of what happens when the fed gov't takes over states programs. Any additional information on the subject would be great.

Here is the contact information for the staffer from Mary Fallin's office:

Oklahoma Senate won't hear health insurance exchange bill

Gov. Mary Fallin has supported the bill.

BY JOHN ESTUS Capitol Bureau jestus@opubco.com Oklahoman  3
Published: March 31, 2011

The Senate won't hear a bill championed by Gov. Mary Fallin that would help create an online state health insurance exchange, Senate Pro Tem Brian Bingman said today.

House Bill 2130 would set up a board to oversee development of a website for Oklahomans to shop for health insurance policies. The website is commonly referred to as a health care exchange.

The new federal health care law passed last year calls for health insurance exchanges.

Oklahoma Republicans have been divided on whether the state should create the exchange. Many oppose it because the state has sued the federal government to challenge the constitutionality of the health care law.

"I want to make it plain that the Senate Republicans are not for the Obamacare," Bingman said.

Bingman, R-Sapulpa, said he has not spoken with Fallin yet about the decision not to hear HB 2130 in the Senate.

Fallin has been criticized by fellow Republicans for accepting $54 million in federal money to create the exchange despite voting against the health care bill while she was in Congress and supporting Oklahoma's lawsuit challenging the health care law.

While defending her support for the exchange earlier this week, Fallin said the health care law is, for now, "the law of the land" and that the state is required to follow it.

Dear Representative,

We would like to make you aware of the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location.

As mentioned in the State of the State address, our goal is to ~~expand its role further, by creating~~ create an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs. Our vision is to protect consumers and guarantee the role of licensed agents and brokers. Therefore, we are asking for your support for HB 2130, which establishes a governance structure for an Oklahoma Exchange.

We believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work for its demise. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law found unconstitutional. This is now our opportunity to stand up for our 10th amendment rights and create an Oklahoma based free-market exchange.

An Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange would be an online marketplace where costs are reduced, where insurance products could be bought and sold to meet individual needs and where all insurers could compete to promote real choices for consumers. This is the exchange that my administration, the Insurance Commissioner, the Speaker, the Pro Tem, and others are dedicated to creating. We hope you are as excited by this opportunity as we are.

I have a couple of thoughts:

We should probably take out the paragraph about the $54 million because that is really a separate issue by itself for members. And, we should reference the OCPA article and eliminate the language about being attached to this letter.

Lastly, with some changes Katie and I discussed, can we make reference to HB 2130 in this letter?

Thanks so much,

Dear Colleague,

I would like to take this opportunity to visit with you about the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location. That online hub was designed to affect the health insurance industry in Oklahoma the same way travel websites like Travelocity and Expedia have empowered consumers across the globe.

As I told lawmakers in my State of the State address, our goal is now to fund the creation of that website and expand its role further, by creating an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs.

~~To build the IT infrastructure necessary for that exchange, the Oklahoma Health Care Authority applied for and received an Early Innovator Grant in the sum of $54 million. The state needs this money to develop the kind of high quality, free market, patient-centered exchange program that our citizens expect and deserve. Using this money will make Oklahoma one of 48 states that have already accepted such federal aid in order to begin the creation of a state exchange.~~

I believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange governing outline in HB 2130 represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work for its demise. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law found unconstitutional. This is now our opportunity to stand up for our 10th amendment rights and create an Oklahoma based free-market exchange.

An Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange would be an online marketplace where costs are reduced, where insurance products could be bought and sold to meet individual needs and where all insurers could compete to promote real choices for consumers.

This is the exchange that my administration, the Speaker, the Pro Tem, The Insurance Commissioner and others are dedicated to creating. We hope you are as excited by this opportunity as we are.

Please do not hesitate to call my office if you have questions about this issue, at 405-522-xxxx.

Sincerely,

Governor Mary Fallin

Dear Representative,

We would like to make you aware of the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location.

As mentioned in the State of the State address, our goal is to ~~expand its role further, by creating~~ create an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs. Our vision is to protect consumers and guarantee the role of licensed agents and brokers. Therefore, we are asking for your support for HB 2130, which establishes a governance structure for an Oklahoma Exchange.

We believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work for its demise. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law found unconstitutional. This is now our opportunity to stand up for our 10th amendment rights and create an Oklahoma based free-market exchange.

I have a couple of thoughts:

We should probably take out the paragraph about the $54 million because that is really a separate issue by itself for members. And, we should reference the OCPA article and eliminate the language about being attached to this letter.

Lastly, with some changes Katie and I discussed, can we make reference to HB 2130 in this letter?

Thanks so much,

BD

Dear Colleague,

I would like to take this opportunity to visit with you about the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location. That online hub was designed to affect the health insurance industry in Oklahoma the same way travel websites like Travelocity and Expedia have empowered consumers across the globe.

As I told lawmakers in my State of the State address, our goal is now to fund the creation of that website and expand its role further, by creating an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs.

~~To build the IT infrastructure necessary for that exchange, the Oklahoma Health Care Authority applied for and received an Early Innovator Grant in the sum of $54 million. The state needs this money to develop the kind of high quality, free market, patient-centered exchange program that our citizens expect and deserve. Using this money will make Oklahoma one of 48 states that have already accepted such federal aid in order to begin the creation of a state exchange.~~

I believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange governing outline in HB 2130 represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work for its demise. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law found unconstitutional. This is now our opportunity to stand up for our 10th amendment rights and create an Oklahoma based free-market exchange.

An Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange would be an online marketplace where costs are reduced, where insurance products could be bought and sold to meet individual needs and where all insurers could compete to promote real choices for consumers.

This is the exchange that my administration, the Speaker, the Pro Tem, The Insurance Commissioner and others are dedicated to creating. We hope you are as excited by this opportunity as we are.

Please do not hesitate to call my office if you have questions about this issue, at 405-522-xxxx.

Sincerely,

Governor Mary Fallin

Dear Colleague,

I would like to take this opportunity to visit with you about the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

The state needs this money to develop the kind of high quality, free market, patient-centered exchange program that our citizens expect and deserve. I have a couple of thoughts:

We should probably take out the paragraph about the $54 million because that is really a separate issue by itself for members. And, we should reference the OCPA article and eliminate the language about being attached to this letter.

Lastly, with some changes Katie and I discussed, can we make reference to HB 2130 in this letter?

Thanks so much,

Dear Colleague,

I would like to take this opportunity to visit with you about the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location. That online hub was designed to affect the health insurance industry in Oklahoma the same way travel websites like Travelocity and Expedia have empowered consumers across the globe.

As I told lawmakers in my State of the State address, our goal is now to fund the creation of that website and expand its role further, by creating an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs.

~~To build the IT infrastructure necessary for that exchange, the Oklahoma Health Care Authority applied for and received an Early Innovator Grant in the sum of $54 million. The state needs this money to develop the kind of high quality, free market, patient-centered exchange program that our citizens expect and deserve. Using this money will make Oklahoma one of 48 states that have already accepted such federal aid in order to begin the creation of a state exchange.~~

I believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work for its demise. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law found unconstitutional. Dear Representative,

We would like to make you aware of the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location.

As mentioned in the State of the State address, our goal is to ~~expand its role further, by creating~~ create an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs. Our vision is to protect consumers and guarantee the role of licensed agents and brokers. Therefore, we are asking for your support for HB 2130, which establishes a governance structure for an Oklahoma Exchange.

We believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work for its demise. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law found unconstitutional. This is now our opportunity to stand up for our 10th amendment rights and create an Oklahoma based free-market exchange.

An Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange would be an online marketplace where costs are reduced, where insurance products could be bought and sold to meet individual needs and where all insurers could compete to promote real choices for consumers. This is the exchange that my administration, the Insurance Commissioner, the Speaker, the Pro Tem, and others are dedicated to creating. We hope you are as excited by this opportunity as we are.

I have a couple of thoughts:

We should probably take out the paragraph about the $54 million because that is really a separate issue by itself for members. And, we should reference the OCPA article and eliminate the language about being attached to this letter.

Lastly, with some changes Katie and I discussed, can we make reference to HB 2130 in this letter?

Thanks so much,

BD

Dear Colleague,

I would like to take this opportunity to visit with you about the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location. That online hub was designed to affect the health insurance industry in Oklahoma the same way travel websites like Travelocity and Expedia have empowered consumers across the globe.

As I told lawmakers in my State of the State address, our goal is now to fund the creation of that website and expand its role further, by creating an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs.

~~To build the IT infrastructure necessary for that exchange, the Oklahoma Health Care Authority applied for and received an Early Innovator Grant in the sum of $54 million. The state needs this money to develop the kind of high quality, free market, patient-centered exchange program that our citizens expect and deserve. Using this money will make Oklahoma one of 48 states that have already accepted such federal aid in order to begin the creation of a state exchange.~~

I believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange governing outline in HB 2130 represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

The Commissioner and I strongly oppose ObamaCare and will continue to work for its demise. We are proud to stand with General Scott Pruitt and his efforts to have this law found unconstitutional. This is now our opportunity to stand up for our 10th amendment rights and create an Oklahoma based free-market exchange.

An Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange would be an online marketplace where costs are reduced, where insurance products could be bought and sold to meet individual needs and where all insurers could compete to promote real choices for consumers.

This is the exchange that my administration, the Speaker, the Pro Tem, The Insurance Commissioner and others are dedicated to creating. We hope you are as excited by this opportunity as we are.

Please do not hesitate to call my office if you have questions about this issue, at 405-522-xxxx.

Sincerely,

Governor Mary Fallin

At the exchange press conference, are we going to say we're sending back or not taking the $54 million grant?

If so, Doak also wants to announce at the press conference he's giving back a separate $1 million grant the Henry administration applied for.

If we're not making the announcement, Doak will not mention his grant.

So for what's its worth (not much apparently), we now have editorials from the Enid paper, Muskogee paper, Tulsa World and Oklahoman supporting our position. That's two traditionally conservative papers and 2 Democratic ones. I have not seen any criticizing our position.

If we wanted to put together a document, which I don't think would be particularly helpful, it would read something like:

"Fallin is right" –Tulsa World

"Senate is wrong" – Enid News and Eagle

"Senate Misses Mark" – Muskogee Phoenix

"Everyone who disagrees with Mary on this issue is a total nut job" – Kirk Humphreys

Turning down grant to build health insurance exchange is a bad idea

Anonymous Enid News and Eagle The Enid News and Eagle Thu Apr 07, 2011, 08:53 PM CDT

Although the entire state government is controlled by the Republicans, that doesn't mean the leaders in the party are going to agree on everything.

A first ripple was demonstrated last week when the Oklahoma Senate announced it will not consider a bill to help establish a state health insurance exchange. In doing so, they are turning down a federal grant of $54 million to build a health insurance exchange.

Gov. Mary Fallin had promoted the exchange, saying the state's establishing such an exchange is the best way for the state to have control over health care costs.

The governor is right and the Senate Republicans are wrong on this issue.

The Senate Republicans are afraid the federally-funded health insurance exchange is too much like the President Barack Obama's health care reform law. Many Republicans campaigned on their opposition to the federal health care plan.

Fallin has been very clear she doesn't support Obama's health care plan either. Yet, she also believes if the state does not have an exchange in place by 2013, the federal government will step in and create its own.

We agree, overall, most voters in the state do not approve of the Obama health care plan. Yet, we also are realistic at least parts, if not all, of that plan eventually will come to pass, despite court fights.

Fallin is right in that the state has to be ready for what comes down the pike.

The state Senate totally missed an opportunity to have better control over any kind of federal health care mandates that come our way, and in doing so, has done a disservice to Oklahomans.

I actually don't see how this is better than no bill at all. The legislature is not going to touch this issue with a ten foot poll next year, which likely means we're only creating another task force to write another report. I know we want the legislature's buy in on this but if the end goal is to create something that will ultimately keep Obamacare out, I think the state is better off if we ultimately put something in place ourselves if the legislature does not pass a halfway substantive bill.

I know there are other political forces to think about, but from a policy perspective, I don't think this is beneficial.

Had a nice chat with gen baxter tonight. He's convinced that the language in the grant ties us into implementing obamacare, so we might want cline to call him.

He also said david brown is chomping at the bit for ocpa to release a position paper against it and that more board members are calling about this than any other issue in recent memory.

When I asked why none of them seem to be calling the gov (because people like daryl woodard DO have the gov's cell phone) he really didn't have an answer.

I think ocpa is prepared to release their statement soon if we don't have some sort of resolution (which it doesn't seem like we will have) andf gen baxter again alluded to ocpa doing some sort of "assessment" of what needs to be raised from the private sector to do this. He also asked why we just didn't do what utah did, it only cost 600k!

This makes my head hurt, but I do think we need to continue discussions.

Sure. First off, I don't think Doak should say anything until we have our ducks in a row, so please pass that on.

The conversation I had with Brian was that we could combine the announcement about the exchange with other health care initiatives that are coming down the pipeline, such as the House's work with HSA's (Katie, please correct me if that's not the particular initiative). So we would have a leadership press conference with Steele, Bingman, Fallin and others, similar to what we did with workers comp. I think that's a good idea.

Alternatively, we could just drop a release on the health care exchange on Friday, and Steele could echo our statement in his own release or give us a statement to use in ours.

I like the idea of either including the health care exchange announcement as part of the unveiling of a broader "health agenda." I could also see just dropping a release about the exchange by itself on a Friday afternoon. Having thought about it, both of those make more sense than just dropping it alone at the beginning of the week. And no one in the media at least has asked us about this yet so it's not like we are facing enormous pressure to make an announcement.

It sounds like Steele will do whatever we want. I was not able to get in touch with Brejcha today to ask about the Senate.

Yes, we have both reviewed the grant, and I just got off the phone with julie, and she spent at least 2-3 more hours with derek and nicole, getting them settled, oriented, etc. on friday. Our general sense is that this is a good opportunity for oklahoma, and to make this an oklahoma specific project. The timelines are very aggressive. In order to submit this grant on time, it was rushed, but it gets our foot in the door in a way that could be helpful. We now have an opportunity to have a more inclusive process, and there is a period of time where we can modify some elements of the grant response if we need to do so. Through this steering group we must build in more participation from doi and the private sector, as well as building on what the ohca has done already. I look forward to our meeting this week on the topic. Tc

Overall interviews went well, especially tv. Wanted to touch on some points that may have veered into the unknown, or off message etc, so there are no surprises in the immediate future. Can send more detailed update tomorrow. Remember I am sending what might have gone wrong or might look strange in print ... Almost everything was fine

The guardian - overall interview was good. veered at one point into ethical arguments about drones killing civilians for a few mins. Gov basically said that's a discussion for the us military but ultimately drones have the potential to save lives. Also talked about how the "pray for rain" thing seems strange to secular england. Gov just said we really needed rain and it didn't seem strange to us

Washington times - first 30 mins of ed board were great. After that - gov was asked about keystone pipeline. At one point she said creating the pipeline would raise prices in our market, which we want (? ). No idea if that's true but sounds strange.

Tarp also came up and she gave a wishy washy answer about voting against it before she voted for it. Also a wishy washy answer about whether she would sign arizona style immigration legislation. Exchange came up and was dicey as always although her answers were fine. They have asked about that since then so I expect a story of some kind. Aaron and katie sending them info

Financial times - interview went fine but the reporter asked for some specifics which we don't have but will send.

Forbes - focused on women in politics and was easy

Bloomberg ed board - extremely hostile questioning from editor in chief on teacher's salaries, obamacare, and don't ask don't tell. Governor gave standard answers and did well

Time - no hiccups

Only 'authorized' media was allowed into the closed-door sessions. Security was extremely tight, with the Governors, along with their entourages, entering and exiting their tour buses at the back entrance to The Grand America Hotel.

The photo above was taken during Saturday's Health & Human Services Committee Session on 7-16-2011.

This link takes one to the NGA video on this particular session, where Governors asked questions about a proposed federal rule dealing with state-based exchanges and PPACA compliance.

Governor Fallin's question (albeit a long, confused one) about establishing a state-based exchange begins at minute-marker 35:49.

Video links to the entire NGA Conference, including the U.S.-China Governors Forum held on Friday, July 15, 2011 are available at the National Governors Association website.

Other NGA Sessions dealt with Foreign Direct Investment, and included several Memorandums of Understanding signings.

The state of Utah, for one, is dedicated to developing "unprecedented partnerships" with the Communist Chinese, at the government level, as well as at the business and University levels.

Hotels - Or The Best Little Whorehouses in...Utah?

Over the four-day span these two otherwise fine hotels could have more appropriately been named the "The Best Little Whorehouses in... Utah". (Where 'whorehouse' is defined as a place where those seek after that which is immoral and idolatrous.)

Liberty Forge is a social network devoted to connecting voters and groups who support a constitutionally limited government. Since elections are the only part of our Republic that is democratic, and the representative to citizen ratio is so low, it only makes sense to have a discussion forum to enable voters to vet candidates and issues. The power of Liberty Forge is in assigning a discussion forum to each individual voting district. As a member you enroll in your voting district discussion groups and focus your time and energy on the aspects of government which you have the most power and responsibility to effect.

Denise, appreciate the call on Thursday and have attached four instances of OCPA strong support for the Governor's great work in the past months. Please be certain, OCPA is in full support of our leadership and considers her to be the most conservative Governor in the United States. Doubt we can always agree on every issue, but we clearly are on the very same azimuth.

As we discussed on Thursday, Michael Carnuccio and I would like to meet with you, Secretary Coffee and Katie Altshuler so we may gain insight into the remaining portion of the Governor's agenda and understand how we can better input our concerns early on, and understand the Governor's perspective. I want to add a couple of things.

1. Everybody needs to understand that the opinion of an individual Board member who may be an outspoken advocate for a particular position, does not represent an OCPA position. We want to clarify with you who "speaks" for OCPA so there is not confusion on that point.

2. Know your concerns that we all want to see strong Workers Comp reform, though we might differ on the means to that end. I believe OCPA will be pleased to understand that this reform can be “incremental” and may not all be completed at once. I am certain OCPA can be very supportive, and publicly, when we understand that first steps are not final steps. The individual concerns of Board members that I have heard have not been sensing an immediacy to solve it all at once, but rather that steps taken this year are not to be the only steps. I think that is worth discussion when we meet.

3. I personally have a horrible business travel schedule ahead, but Michael and I could meet on April 29th in the afternoon or May 2d in the afternoon. Would either of those work for the three of you? Would also be available May 9th.

OCPA Applauds Passage of Senate Bill 3

OKLAHOMA CITY (March 2, 2011) -- The Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCPA) released the following statement today regarding the passage in the Senate of Senate Bill 3, which included an amendment by Senator Tom Adelson to eliminate the state corporate and individual income taxes.

“Lawmakers have repeatedly stated their goal is to make Oklahoma the state of choice for business,” said OCPA Fiscal Policy Director Jonathan Small, CPA. “The weight of evidence shows the best way to do that is by reducing the tax burden on businesses and individuals. Therefore, we applaud lawmakers on both sides of the aisle for advancing the conversation of comprehensive tax reform this session. It is clear that lowering Oklahoma’s tax burden is a bipartisan effort.”

OCPA Statement on Gov. Fallin's Decision to Reject Federal Insurance Exchange Grant

OKLAHOMA CITY (April 14, 2011) – The Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCPA) released the following statement regarding Gov. Fallin's decision during a media availability today to reject the $54 million federal grant awarded to the state to begin implementing health insurance exchanges as required under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

"Today Gov. Fallin and our state leaders stood on their campaign promises to protect the people of Oklahoma from the rigid, one-size-fits-all approach of Obamacare," said Jason Sutton, J.D., health policy analyst for OCPA. "Oklahoma needs patient-centered health reforms that meet our state's unique needs. A health insurance exchange could be a useful tool in creating an insurance market based on choice and competition; unfortunately, using the federal grant to build our exchange would handcuff our state to Obamacare. Rejecting those funds is the best decision for Oklahoma."

"The best way to protect Oklahoma from Obamacare is to not implement Obamacare," said Michael Carnuccio, OCPA president. "Today, Gov. Fallin and legislative leaders showed that they are willing to put the citizens of Oklahoma above bureaucrats and do what is right for our state. Gov. Fallin has demonstrated the type of true conservative leadership our state and nation need."

OCPA Statement on the Governor's Signing of House Bill 2128

OKLAHOMA CITY (April 6, 2011) – The Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCAPA) released the following statement today regarding the Governor signing into law House Bill 2128, which places a cap on non-economic damages in civil disputes.

“The signing of this significant bill achieves a core component of genuine lawsuit reform,” said Andrew Spiropoulos, OCPA’s Milton Friedman Distinguished Fellow and a Constitutional Law professor. “This sensible framework for the award of non-economic damages will discourage the filing of meritless lawsuits while protecting the right of the truly wronged to be made whole.”

“Oklahoma's economy has long been waiting for the leadership displayed today by the Governor and Legislature,” said OCPA President Michael Carnuccio. “Today, our state became more competitive by removing the specter of lawsuit abuse.”

OCPA Statement on Commissioner Doak's Decision to Return Federal Grant

OKLAHOMA CITY (April 14, 2011) – The Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCPA) released the following statement today regarding Insurance Commissioner John Doak's decision to return a $1 million federal grant awarded to the state to review "excessive" rate increases as required under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

"Commissioner Doak made the right decision today to stand with Oklahomans, who are overwhelmingly opposed to Obamacare," said Jason Sutton, J.D., health policy analyst for OCPA. "As a long-time insurance agent and industry executive, Commissioner Doak knows better than anyone the harmful effects Obamacare will have on the insurance industry, on premium costs and on our state's economy. This decision shows tremendous leadership on his part and we commend him."

Wayne Greene with the Tulsa World called about this mornings meeting ... I told him there appeared to be consensus that we need to build a state exchange to prevent an ObamaCare exchange being implemented in 2013. I told him no decisions were reached on the composition of that exchange or who would fund it but we were working with the Senate and House to build consensus on that. We anticipate more meetings in the near future to that end

We did this to get out in front of obamacare and draft free market plan. We all oppose obamacare. Looking forward to seeing what bingmans concern is and what his plans are.

I don't know.

- can we still spend the money?

If we don't establish a board and a free market exchange then the feds will come in and establish it - will state give money back?

I don't know

Respectfully disagree. Its meant to prevent obamacare. We will have obamacare in 2013

Oklahoma Senate won't hear health insurance exchange bill

Gov. Mary Fallin has supported the bill.

BY JOHN ESTUS Capitol Bureau jestus@opubco.com
Published: March 31, 2011

The Senate won't hear a bill championed by Gov. Mary Fallin that would help create an online state health insurance exchange, Senate Pro Tem Brian Bingman said today.

House Bill 2130 would set up a board to oversee development of a website for Oklahomans to shop for health insurance policies. The website is commonly referred to as a health care exchange.

The new federal health care law passed last year calls for health insurance exchanges.

Bingman, R-Sapulpa, said he has not spoken with Fallin yet about the Fallin has been criticized by fellow Republicans for accepting $54 million in federal money to create the exchange despite voting against the health care bill while she was in Congress and supporting Oklahoma's lawsuit challenging the health care law.

While defending her support for the exchange earlier this week, Fallin said the health care law is, for now, “the law of the land” and that the state is required to follow it.

Alex:

Sen. Bingman made mention of two things that I think it's important to seek a comment from the governor on:

1. He indicated the Senate will not hear HB 2130 which sets up the health insurance exchanges because he's concerned about the state "falling into a trap of adopting Obamacare." He also indicated he thinks the state should not accept any more of the $54 million offered by the feds to help set up the exchange.
2. Bingman also indicated that he expects cuts to public education will be deeper than the 3 percent Fallin proposed in her executive budget. He said today he anticipates those cuts will be deeper, reaching as high as 5 to 7 percent.

Also, the Senate today approved bills to eliminate trial de novo and to expand the power of the state superintendent, both of which are headed to the governor's desk, as I understand it.

I am interested in Fallin's response to these developments, as well as any statement she may have with regard to former Senate President Pro Tem Mike Morgan being indicted in federal court.

Thanks,

Office of Governor Mary Fallin Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange: Frequently Asked Questions

- What is a health insurance exchange?

Health insurance exchanges are online portals where consumers can get information about various health insurance plans, compare prices and ultimately purchase health insurance. The Oklahoma-based exchange that Governor Mary Fallin supports will be a patient-centered, pro-market exchange consistent with her conservative values. The purpose of the exchange will be to empower consumers with information and to use free market principles to contain health insurance costs.

The premiere conservative think tank in the nation, the Heritage Foundation, supports the creation of these exchanges. In a March 21, 2011 document entitled "A State Lawmaker's Guide to Health Insurance Exchanges," the Heritage Foundation outlines the necessity of developing a state exchange in the immediate future.

- What happens if Oklahoma does not establish its own exchange?

If a state does not establish its own health insurance exchange, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA, also known as "ObamaCare") mandates that President Obama's HHS Secretary is required to establish a federally run exchange in that state. As the Heritage Foundation writes, "...the sooner a state declares 'non-compliance' with the PPACA, the sooner HHS will build an exchange in that state to act as a federal insurance regulator." In other words, a state that does not build its own insurance exchange is resigning itself to the presence of a federally designed, federally run exchange.

The best way to ward off a federal takeover of that kind is to pursue what the Heritage Foundation calls "defensive" reform efforts to block federal interference. One of those defensive efforts is the creation of a market-based exchange that Governor Fallin and other conservative lawmakers are seeking to create.

- President Obama says he supports exchanges and one element of ObamaCare is the creation of a federal exchange? How can exchanges be conservative?

The Heritage Foundation writes:

Consumer-Centered Exchanges vs. ObamaCare Exchanges

“The first point to understand is that the entire design for health insurance exchanges in the PPACA is a perversion of the core concept of what is an otherwise sound approach to improving health insurance markets. ... It is important to recognize that it is ObamaCare’s perversion of the exchanges, not the original concept itself, that is the problem. ... Consequently, the PPACA’s misappropriation of the term ‘health insurance exchange’ should not deter state lawmakers from pursuing their own defined-contribution, market-based reforms that employ state exchanges to perform purely administrative functions.”

- How much will it cost to build a health insurance exchange in Oklahoma? How will we pay for it?

Cost estimates vary based on the composition and governance of the exchange. Currently, the plans for an Oklahoma exchange are in their infancy. HB 2130, which the governor is asking lawmakers to support, creates a governing board for the Oklahoma exchange which will, over the course of the next months and years, answer that question. The governor’s office and the state department of health are also holding regular “stakeholder meetings” to allow consumers, industry professionals and concerned citizens to weigh in on what they would like to see in an exchange.

Currently, it will be a challenge for the state of Oklahoma to afford the cost of implementing and maintaining a health insurance exchange on its own. The state is facing a $500 million budget shortfall and cuts to the department of health are expected to be at least 3% in the next fiscal year.

Fortunately, Oklahoma has received a $54 million Early Innovator Grant from the federal government. That does not mean, however, it will cost $54 million to establish and run an exchange. Governor Fallin plans on returning any money the state does not use.

- Does accepting federal money mean that Oklahoma is agreeing to implement ObamaCare?

No. The Early Innovator Grant was awarded to Oklahoma to be used to build a state-based exchange. The Oklahoma legislature had already passed a bill authorizing the creation of such an exchange; the grant simply provides the money needed to fund it. Governor Fallin will not support any legislation that forces ObamaCare on the state of Oklahoma.

There is language in the bill saying that it will be funded through federal grant money. Speaker included that language thinking at the time that if it included state money it would not get passed because of the budget shortfall. You can say we are requesting that provision be stricken from the bill.

We are also working on additional recommendations with regard to representation on the governance board, but no details yet, but you can say that we are open to considering/ recommending changes. Ultimately it is the Speakers bill and in Senate hands and they decide what changes are made, so I want to be a little careful.

I think we need to get these Senators in a room and go over their concerns. They are all over the map about the grant funds and this obligates the state. Also Coburn is opposed and is likely to say so soon. We may not get these guys back if that happens.

Brecheen and Treat both Coburn staffers r on the retirement and insurance cmte. Coburn says its a bad idea to take the grant money we'll likely lose their vote.

Oklahoma passed a measure (and state question I believe) last year asking to opt out of ACA(Obamacare)

The feds have now granted over 1,000 waivers to private companies such as McDonald's

I was simply suggesting that Matt Pinnell or Pruitt or a legislator should say they should give the citizens of Oklahoma the same courtesy to either grant a waiver or a block grant to build a solution that fits Oklahoma.

Not a big deal.

- 1) IT Freeze: My state of the state and executive budget included a freeze on IT capital spending for all agencies, which will result in major savings for this fiscal year. This will enable us to capture existing money and to put a hold on all projects until the CIO can perform due diligence on each of these projects. In many cases we are throwing money away on these projects and enabling agencies to continue to support outdated systems that are not uniform. I am very serious about moving forward with this and if we all agree it would be beneficial to move legislation asap, so that agencies do not begin to spend this money now. I am in the process of working with the following departments to voluntarily participate in the freeze and consolidation of IT staff: Health, Ag, Commerce and Tourism. However a mandate will be required for the other entities. This is a portion of the $146 million dollar savings figure associated with shared services.

- 2) Exchange Update:
  - I have designated Secretary of Health Terry Kline to serve as the lead on implementation of the Health Insurance Exchange. My staff has been in regular communication with the stakeholders: Insurance Department and Health Care Authority. I am meeting with Commissioner Doak, Secretary Kline and Director Mike Fogarty to establish a formal line of communication regarding this process going forward. My staff has also been in contact with interested legislators and will continue to keep you all informed.
  - The Feds are scheduled to announce the Early Innovator Grant (OHCA applied for the grant in December under Governor Henry). We are uniquely qualified based on Insure OK and our HUB enabling legislation. Seven (states that made applications have been kept confidential) states applied and apparently five will receive grants in the ballpark of $50 million each. If we are awarded the grant we will review it with a fine tooth comb to make sure that it is in keeping with our philosophy on reform.

I had breakfast with Estus and Nate this morning and just wanted to share some thoughts:

- Their offices – or at least their press secretaries -- don't understand why we need to know about the health insurance exchange soon or what the possible "decisions" facing the governor are. It might be helpful, if we do want to share this info, to say: here are the governor's options, here are the dates she would have to make these decisions by, and here's why.
- Estus says the gov's transportation plan is going to be a big topic at the House retreat. If the governor is not going, or even if she is, it might be a good idea to try to get Ridley in there to present some info on it. We can also take the bullet points, press release, talkers etc
- On pension reform, was it McDaniels' plan that you all were not sold on? If so, you may want to talk to House staff. It seems like that's going to be an agenda item for Steele and McDaniels is going to run point on it.

Cost estimate for insurance aid jumps $111B; administration cites technical budget issues

Associated Press

March 2, 2012

http://www.washingtonpost.com/business/cost-estimate-for-insurance-aid-jumps-111b-white-house-cites-technical-budget-changes/2012/03/02/gIQAfGNhmR\_print.html

WASHINGTON — Cost estimates for a key part of President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law have ballooned by $111 billion from last year's budget, and a senior Republican lawmaker on Friday demanded an explanation.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dave Camp, R-Mich., wants to know by Monday why the estimated cost of helping millions of middle-class Americans buy health insurance has jumped by about 30 percent for an eight-year period, from 2014-2021.

Administration officials say the explanation lies in budget technicalities and that there are no significant changes in the program.

Cost estimates for new government programs can be wide off the mark. For example, the actual cost of President George W. Bush's Medicare prescription drug benefit came in lower than estimated, so it wasn't as big a drag on federal finances as initially forecast.

The revised health care overhaul numbers, buried deep in the president's budget, stumped lawmakers and some administration officials earlier in the week. At a congressional hearing Tuesday, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius, who is in charge of carrying out the health care law, indicated she was unaware of the changes.

At issue are subsidies that will be provided under the health care law to help middle class people buy private coverage in new state insurance markets that open for business in 2014.

Last year's budget estimated the cost of the aid to be $367 billion from 2014-2021. This year's budget puts it at $478 billion over the same period.

"This staggering increase ... cannot be explained by legislative changes or new economic assumptions, and therefore must reflect substantial changes in underlying assumptions regarding ... costs," Camp wrote Friday in a letter to Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner.

Republicans say they're concerned about two possibilities: that the estimated cost of the insurance has gone up, or that the administration has quietly determined that more people will be losing employer coverage as a result of Obama's overhaul. That means they'd have to purchase coverage in the new government-subsidized markets, called exchanges.

Either of those explanations could have major consequences for taxpayers and the nation's health care system.

But administration officials say the big increase is no cause for alarm and that the administration is not forecasting an erosion of employer coverage or higher insurance costs.

About two-thirds of the increase is due to effects of newly signed legislation that raises costs for one part of the health care law, but still saves the government money overall. The rest is due to technical changes in Treasury assumptions about such matters as the distribution of income in America.

“The estimates do not assume changes in what exchanges look like, the cost of insurance, or the number of Americans who will get their insurance in this new marketplace,” Treasury spokeswoman Sabrina Siddiqui said in a statement Friday.

That explanation has drawn skepticism from Ways and Means Committee Republicans.

They say a big reason for their doubts is that the Congressional Budget Office — the fiscal referee for lawmakers — has different numbers from the Obama administration. The budget office is not forecasting a major impact on the health insurance exchanges from the same newly signed legislation that the administration says accounts for two-thirds of the $111 billion increase.

That legislation fixed a glitch in the health care overhaul law that would have allowed some middle-class people to get virtually free insurance from Medicaid. As a result, projected Medicaid spending under the health care law will drop significantly. But spending for subsidies in the exchanges will go up.

Both the administration and the budget office agree on a bottom line conclusion that the fix saves money for the government, because the Medicaid savings are bigger than the new exchange costs. But their underlying numbers differ.

Camp says he wants a full accounting.

The Real Tragedy Of ObamaCare Has Yet To Be Felt By The Poor

Grace-Marie Turner
Forbes: Health Matters, August 21, 2012

One of the most tragic failings of ObamaCare is that it will make it harder for many of the most vulnerable citizens – patients with no option but Medicaid – to get care.

Medicaid is cumbersome, complex, and wasteful – already the worst health care program in the country. But rather than making changes to improve or modernize this program designed to finance care for the poor, the Obama administration is trying to convince states to add at least 16 million more people to Medicaid, including families making more than $30,000 a year.

That means the poorest and most vulnerable patients enrolled today will be competing with millions of new Medicaid patients for appointments to see a limited number of physicians. Those who have the greatest need and nowhere else to go are likely to have the hardest time getting care.

In its ruling in June, the Supreme Court made it optional for states to expand Medicaid to cover new enrollees. Even with generous federal funding, several states have said flatly they cannot afford the expansion, which would cost states at least $118 billion through 2023.

They are resisting not only because of budget concerns but also because this large Medicaid expansion could have catastrophic effects on those who provide society's health care safety net.

First, there simply aren't enough doctors to handle this influx of new patients. Given Medicaid's abysmally-low payment rates, private doctors won't be able to afford to take much more of the exploding caseload.

A recent article in Health Affairs found that nearly one-third (31%) of physicians are not accepting any new Medicaid patients. Sandra Decker, an economist with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, used a survey of 4,326 office-based physicians from across the country to find that just under 70 percent said they were accepting new Medicaid patients. That number was significantly lower than those accepting privately-insured subscribers (81 percent) or Medicare patients (83 percent).

The problem is particularly acute in states that have the lowest reimbursement rates for physicians.

Health policy analyst Avik Roy of the Manhattan Institute has produced a map showing the reimbursement rates for Medicaid relative to private insurance.

Many states that plan to expand Medicaid under ObamaCare are those with low Medicaid reimbursement rates. In California, for example, up to 1.6 million residents are expected to gain coverage under the state's Medicaid program, called Medi-Cal, but fewer than 60 percent of providers accept new patients in the program. That's largely because California reimburses doctors 38 cents for every dollar private insurance pays. New York, which is anxious to further expand its Medicaid rolls, pays doctors only 29 cents on the dollar.

Where would these newly “insured” Medicaid patients go for care with fewer doctors willing to accept new patients? A Medicaid card clearly will not guarantee access to a physician.

Longer waiting lines for emergency rooms are inevitable.

Safety-net hospitals that provide care to the poorest and most vulnerable in our society already are stretched to the limit financially. Adding millions more people to Medicaid will put crushing new demands on them.

In addition, at least 30 million people will remain uninsured after the law is fully in effect, based upon optimistic projections from the Congressional Budget Office. These uninsured will continue to need care, often without the ability to pay.

ObamaCare adds a further distortion: To help pay for its expanded coverage, the health law cuts existing payments to hospitals that provide care to a “disproportionate-share” of uninsured patients. So there will be less money to compensate hospitals for patients who will still show up needing care.

Studies consistently show that Medicaid patients have the worst health outcomes of any group in America, worse than those with private insurance and, in some cases, worse than those with no insurance.

A large study by the University of Virginia found that surgical patients on Medicaid are 13 percent more likely to die than those with no insurance at all and 97 percent more likely to die than those with private insurance.

The problem is particularly acute for Medicaid recipients who need to see specialists. One Florida doctor reported that, after a long battle with the state over payment for treating a patient with complex lung disease, he received a check from Medicaid for one penny.

Medicaid patients will find access to care restricted in other ways.

States already are restricting access to drug services for existing Medicaid beneficiaries. Kaiser Health News reports that “Illinois Medicaid recipients have been limited to four prescription drugs [per month] as the state becomes the latest to cap how many medicines it will cover in the state-federal health insurance program for the poor.” A total of 16 states impose monthly limits on prescription drugs for beneficiaries, “and seven states have either enacted such caps or tightened them in the past two years.”

Clearly, the huge expansion of Medicaid will make it even harder for the patients already on Medicaid to get the health care they need and will be little more than the paper promise it is today for those who receive a new Medicaid card.

Despite these many problems, many states are tempted and are seriously considering whether to accept the generous 100 percent federal matching money ObamaCare initially offers if they expand eligibility for Medicaid up to 138 percent of poverty (more than $32,000 for a family of four).

But states should be warned: It’s likely a loss leader. There are no assurances that Washington would be able to keep its promise to continue the generous funding.

There already is evidence that could be the administration's plan. President Obama proposed reducing federal Medicaid spending by \$100 billion over 10 years during last year's "supercommittee" budget negotiations. He proposed changing the traditional federal Medicaid matching rate in a way that would lead to a smaller overall federal contribution to the program — and a larger state-based one.

Given time, resources, and greater flexibility, hospitals could work with other medical facilities to create a system of care for the uninsured. But with millions more people added to an unreformed Medicaid program all at once, safety net providers will be overwhelmed.

There is a better way: Allow people on Medicaid the option of private insurance so they can get coverage through private competing plans. Florida has a successful model underway. These plans could provide much better access to physicians, coordinate care for patients with multiple health problems, and allow patients to be seen in doctors' offices rather than in expensive hospital emergency rooms.

Patients would have the dignity of private coverage, and safety-net hospitals will be able to keep their doors open so they can continue their mission of caring for the poorest and neediest in our society.

Three “What-if” scenarios for ObamaCare

Grace-Marie Turner
National Review Online, May 29, 2012

The health sector is in a state of semi-paralysis over the fate of Obamacare.

While the Supreme Court’s decision is likely a month away, the American people already have made up their minds: Opinion polls show support for the law is at its lowest level since it passed more than two years ago, and two-thirds of Americans say they either want the whole law or the individual mandate overturned, according to a recent Washington Post/ABC News poll.

Meanwhile, Congress, state governments, and businesses across the country are puzzling over “what if” alternatives to try to be ready when the decision is issued. Here are the three most likely options:

1) If the Court upholds the whole law, then the battles would move to the ballot box while implementation of the sweeping health overhaul charges forward. Repealing Obamacare would instantly move to the top of the agenda for the presidential contest as opponents of the law work to elect a new president and majorities in both houses of Congress who are pledged to repeal. Their arguments would be compelling since the Court’s validation of the compulsory purchase of private insurance would mean the government would have authority for the first time to direct how citizens spend their private, after-tax money.

A parade of new lawsuits would march through the courts to challenge other provisions in the law, such as the contraceptive/abortifacient/sterilization mandate that 43 Catholic institutions are challenging as a violation of religious liberty, and the Independent Payment Advisory Board — the Medicare rationing board which the Goldwater Institute in Arizona is challenging as unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, the health sector and overall economy will be forced to start answering to the 159 new agencies, programs, and bureaucracies authorized under Obamacare and complying with the 12,000 pages — and counting — of new regulations. The burden of costly mandates on businesses will kill any hopes of job recovery. And the law's perverse incentives for employers to drop insurance will likely toss tens of millions more people into taxpayer-subsidized coverage, destroying any chances of getting the federal budget deficit under control. The legislative and legal battles over the unpopular law will go on and on.

2) If the Court strikes part of law — the individual mandate and related insurance provisions — the battle over “fixes” will be instantly engaged. The House would quickly take another repeal vote — which would likely die in the Senate — while the president and the law's supporters would mobilize to rescue the law. Expect them to propose alternatives to the individual mandate, such as limiting enrollment in federally subsidized insurance to a fixed period each year and imposing premium penalties for people who sign up later. Another alternative: automatically enroll people in health plans but permit them to opt out.

Neither will get any traction from conservatives. They will argue that the Court has removed the center pole in the Obamacare tent, and the rest of the law therefore must be struck to avoid doing even more damage.

Full repeal will rise to the top of the political agenda for November, while the administration works overtime to put as much of the law in place as fast as possible.

The business community and health sector will have no choice but to continue their plans to implement the law, even as they operate under a continuing cloud of uncertainty awaiting the election outcome.

3) If the Court strikes the whole law, activist groups that have been the strongest supporters of Obamacare will instantly take to the airwaves and possibly the streets. To calm the protests, a new and very different conversation must begin right away about viable short- and long-term solutions.

Congress will be pressured to act quickly to rescue some of the early Obamacare provisions that already are in place, such as allowing 26-year-old “children” on their parents' health insurance policies and insurance pools for people with pre-existing conditions.

Congress must move very cautiously with any legislative backstop. Private health insurers likely could be convinced to keep the policies in place that allow 26-year-olds to stay on their parents' policies since the policies already have been priced and written.

There also will be pressure to continue funding for the 50,000 people receiving insurance through the law's pre-existing condition insurance pools so they don't get thrown off the rolls. A short-term patch may be necessary. But over the longer term, legislators should focus on helping states fund their own pre-existing condition pools, or create them, but in ways that fit their needs and resources.

Any temporary solutions should not block the path for Congress to work in the next term on real patient-centered, market-based health reform that gives people control and choice over their health care and health-coverage arrangements. After Obamacare, any new comprehensive 2,800-page health-reform bill will be toxic. Incremental steps will be essential.

Presumptive nominee Mitt Romney is expected to release details of his long-term health-policy agenda this summer, which will set the terms for the general-election conversation. In recent speeches and articles, he has emphasized his support for “a free market, federalist approach” that spurs competition, flexibility, and consumer choice. That's a hopeful sign.

Most people know only about the few early provisions of Obamacare, and few have seen major changes to their coverage. But it is a freight train that is gaining steam every day and is headed straight at our health sector and economy in 2014.

If the Court upholds the whole law, it will quickly become clear that the law simply can't work. The American people will resist its intrusion into their lives, the states will find new ways to fight back, lawsuits will proliferate, and Congress will be forced to protect taxpayers from its budget-busting entitlements.

If the Court strikes it down, the nation will breathe a collective sigh of relief that we now can get on with the business of real reform that is consistent with our Constitution, our liberty, and our market economy.

Though The U.S. Is Healthcare's World Leader, Its Innovative Culture Is Threatened

Grace-Marie Turner
Forbes: Health Matters, May 23, 2012

The United States remains the world leader in medical innovation, having produced more than half of the world's new medicines over the last decade. But our edge is slipping away because of crippling domestic regulatory and tax policies.

A new report by Battelle, an international science and technology company, found that other countries are working aggressively to lure research facilities and high-paying jobs away from the United States. They are offering friendlier regulatory policies so companies can get products to patients faster, and they are lowering taxes and offering other incentives to boost private investment in new medicines and medical devices.

Our edge is not gone yet, but U.S. legislators must quickly act to stop the drain. Today, 12 of the top 20 medical device companies are headquartered in the U.S. Last year, U.S. companies had more than 3,000 new pharmaceutical products in development.

This superior medical innovation not only creates life-saving drugs, but boosts our economy. Battelle also found the biomedical industry contributed $917 billion to the U.S. economy in 2009 and supported more than four million jobs.

The cost of developing a new drug now exceeds $1.3 billion and takes an average of 12 years, and only a small percentage of new molecular entities ever reach the market. Instead of mitigating the risks that go along with these huge investments, the U.S. government has been erecting ever higher hurdles.

High American corporate taxes, in particular, deter investment. The top corporate income tax rate in the U.S. is 38 percent compared to an average of 15 percent in other countries.

In addition, many countries have instituted strong and permanent incentives for research and development, but the United States has kept its R&D tax credit "temporary" for decades.

America now ranks 17th out of 21 countries in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in the effective rate of its R&D tax credit.

The new health law also has created major new hurdles for investment in the biomedical sciences. Consider ZOLL Medical Corporation, a medical device company that now finds itself in the bull's eye of ObamaCare. The law imposes a 2.3 percent tax rate on the revenue that medical device manufacturers collect — revenue, not profits! This will increase ZOLL's tax rate to more than 50 percent, completely wiping out its R&D budget.

As ZOLL President Jonathan Rennert explained in a recent forum, “every one of the jobs in our company is now in the United States. But [when the medical device tax takes effect in 2013] we will have every incentive to move jobs offshore ... the tax will lead to less innovation, fewer jobs, and fewer lives saved.”

Many other American companies, large and small, are driving innovation in the medical field — working to promote healthy lifestyles and develop new, life-saving treatments. Washington needs to support reforms that will allow their groundbreaking advances in the health sector to continue.

The engine of enterprise in the U.S. can continue if Washington were to understand the competition U.S.-based firms face from other countries and reverse its destructive policies.

In one small step, companies are working with the FDA to improve clinical trials so they can be smaller and better targeted, getting drugs to patients faster. Pfizer, for example, was able to bring its newest drug for lung cancer, Xalkori, to market in just four years using new research models that target drug trials to patients genetically tested to be most likely to respond. In one study reported at an American Society of Clinical Oncology meeting, 60 percent of patients were alive after two years, compared to only nine percent in historical trials.

The United States remains the undisputed leader in biopharmaceutical research for now, but our continued leadership is far from guaranteed. While other countries fight ferociously to lure biotech jobs and medical breakthroughs, our outdated regulations and burdensome taxes put the biomedical sector at risk. Once these jobs are lost, it will be extraordinarily difficult to get them back.

Real solutions in the health sector have come not from government, but from entrepreneurs working to find new treatments and improve care. These are the people and companies who will bring transformational change for the 21st century — provided Washington gets out of their way.

Violating the DNA of Our Culture

Grace-Marie Turner

National Review Online: Critical Condition, August 2, 2012

Obamacare violates American values down to our country's very DNA.

A majority of Americans continue to oppose the health law because we understand that it is at odds with the fundamental principles and democratic processes of our country. We were aghast at the way the law was enacted two years ago — ignoring citizens who were marching in the streets and burning up the phone lines on Capitol Hill pleading with legislators to vote “no.”

We oppose its government-centric takeover of our health sector with its mandates on individuals to purchase government-approved health insurance, mandates on businesses to pay for insurance or pay huge fines, and the massive new government bureaucracy to centrally manage one-sixth of our economy.

The HHS anti-conscience mandate that has now taken effect is not an aberrant rule but is woven into the fabric of a law that is in conflict with the Constitution and with American values. The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops called the federal regulation an “unprecedented threat to individual and institutional religious freedom.”

But the Obama administration has determined that most employers and health plans now will have to provide “free” access to a long list of “preventive” health services, including sterilization procedures and contraceptives that can cause abortions. Citizens and businesses have become servants to the state.

The White House is trying to deflect opposition and frame this as a fight over the right to free birth-control pills. But we understand that this is really about the fundamental issue of the founding principles of this country and the meaning of the Constitution's protection of our freedom. The real question is not whether women can have access to these products but whether health plans and employers can be compelled by the government to pay for them even if doing so violates their religious beliefs.

When the law was being debated in Congress, the Obama administration repeatedly assured Catholic leaders that it would respect religious liberty in implementing Obamacare. This mandate shows that the Obama administration has broken its promises and has no intention of reversing course.

The anti-conscience rule gives pro-life private employers and health plans the choice of violating their fundamental beliefs by paying for the offending products or dropping health insurance for their employees, in which case they are subject to steep fines.

Forty-three Catholic dioceses have filed twelve lawsuits challenging the anti-conscience mandate. The Becket Fund for Religious Liberty also is representing a number of colleges and other religious institutions in suing the government over the mandate.

More than 2,500 pastors and evangelical leaders have signed a letter to President Obama asking him to reverse the mandate.

As George Weigel has said, the anti-conscience rule is “a grotesque overreach by state power, one that threatens the entire fabric of civil society as well as the first of American liberties, religious freedom.”

We will not allow the First Amendment to be trampled, and this battle will continue.

Just days after Franciscan University of Steubenville announced it was cancelling its student health plan due to Obamacare, another Catholic institution said it's considering the same response. Once again, it's not just the law's infringements on religious liberty sparking Florida's Ave Maria University to contemplate dropping coverage – it's the massive premium increases sparked by the law's new regulations: "The school's insurance provider told them that students would be looking at a premium increase ranging from 65 to 82 percent in the coming year if no changes are made." Ave Maria's President said the institution needs "to communicate to students on why they're going to see a huge spike in insurance," but "just might get out of this business" altogether.

On one level, it's ironic that while the President is attempting to re-connect with younger voters during his re-election campaign, students are about to see massive premium increases on the order of 60-80 percent thanks to Obamacare. No wonder the President's first campus campaign rally met with thousands of empty seats – all the students were busy working extra hours to pay the higher premiums Obamacare is bringing them.

Second, as we previously pointed out, millions of union members received waivers from Obamacare – and specifically the new regulations on benefit limits that are causing premiums to spike at schools like Ave Maria and Franciscan. So, to re-state the obvious, if union members can receive Obamacare waivers to avoid massive premium increases and keep their current insurance, why can't young people studying at Catholic colleges?

Date: Thursday, May 17, 2012 3:15:32 PM

During National Women's Health Week, the Administration is making an attempt to promote Obamacare's effects on women's health. However, one of the biggest effects the law will have on women's health is its massive expansion of the highly flawed Medicaid program. As of 2007, nearly 70 percent of Medicaid beneficiaries – ranging from women of child-bearing age to elderly seniors receiving long-term care – were female. That's a total of more than 41 million women receiving Medicaid benefits.

The problem is that, for these 41 million women, a Medicaid card doesn't ensure access to care – let alone quality care:

- Numerous studies have documented that in many cases, outcomes for patients on Medicaid are worse than those with no insurance at all.
- Medicaid patients themselves don't believe the program constitutes a legitimate benefit. For instance, one struggling mother told the Wall Street Journal in 2007, "You feel so helpless thinking, something's wrong with this child and I can't even get her into a doctor.... When we had real insurance, we could call and come in at the drop of a hat." That's far from a ringing endorsement of the Medicaid program from one mother struggling to take care of her family.
- The program's dysfunctional culture "clearly condones gross underperformance" at both the state and federal levels – so said a caseworker for Deamonte Driver, the Maryland boy who died from a tooth infection in 2007 because he could not access care under the state's Medicaid program.
- The Medicaid program is so bad that not a single Democrat voted to place themselves in the program when given an opportunity to do so back in 2010.

Worse yet, Obamacare will expand Medicaid – without reforming the program. According to the Administration's own actuary, Obamacare will add nearly 26 million more individuals to this broken program. At a time when states are struggling under the weight of budget deficits totaling a collective \$175 billion, Obamacare is imposing new unfunded mandates of at least \$118 billion. And Obamacare precludes states from taking many types of actions that would modernize the program – and crack down on fraud – because of the new federal requirements being imposed.

Democrats have spent the last several weeks making politically-motivated claims about a supposed Republican "war on women." Some may argue that, before those individuals get carried away with their own self-righteousness, they take the time to contemplate the Medicaid ghetto into which they have consigned more than 41 million women – to say nothing of the millions more who will be subjected to Medicaid "care" under the 2700-page health care law.

The Center for American Progress recently released a paper making incoherent claims against conservative proposals for entitlement reform. Take for instance the below paragraphs criticizing the Medicare premium support proposal included in the House-passed budget:

The House Republican premium support plan would also limit growth in Medicare spending to growth in the economy plus 0.5 percentage points. But it's unclear how this cap would be enforced. As a result, it's likely that the cap would be enforced by limiting the amount of vouchers provided to beneficiaries. Since the proposed growth rate is much slower than the projected growth in health care costs, the voucher would leave beneficiaries to pay substantially more over time. The CBO estimates that new beneficiaries could pay more than $1,200 more (in 2011 dollars) by 2030 and more than $5,900 more by 2050 under the House Republican budget.

What's more, the Affordable Care Act already established an Independent Payment Advisory Board that will control the growth in Medicare spending. While the target growth rate for the independent panel is growth in the economy plus 1 percentage point, the president has proposed reducing that growth rate to growth in the economy plus 0.5 percentage points—the same growth rate as the cap under the House premium support plan.

The premium support budget cap, therefore, would produce little or no savings compared to the president's alternative approach. But the cap under the premium support plan would have serious consequences for Medicare beneficiaries.

The CAP paper admits that under the House budget plan, Medicare would grow at the same rate as under the President's budget. But to CAP, the House premium support proposal would result in seniors paying thousands of dollars more in costs – while under the President's budget, Medicare would grow at the exact same rate, but seniors would miraculously avoid paying higher costs, and still have the same access to care. To some, this argument brings to mind the old phrase, "That dog won't hunt."

The premise behind these claims lies in CAP's belief that only government – through Obamacare's new Independent Payment Advisory Board and its rulings capping Medicare spending – can reduce health costs. This belief can be found elsewhere in the paper, where CAP states that "traditional Medicare cannot provide an integrated benefit package...modify benefit designs, or offer provider network options" – all things that generally reduce health care costs – only to turn around and claim that "increasing the privatization of Medicare does not make sense because traditional Medicare costs less than comparable private coverage." It's almost as if CAP believes a "Medicare fairy" can magically erase higher costs in a completely pain-free way that doesn't affect seniors' health care.

The problem is, most experts don't believe CAP's magical "Medicare fairy" exists. An analysis from CBO released in January found that most Medicare demonstration programs implemented over the years “have not reduced Medicare spending: In nearly every program involving disease management and care coordination, spending was either unchanged or increased relative to the spending that would have occurred in the absence of the program, when the fees paid to the participating organizations were considered.” And both CBO and the Medicare actuary have concluded that Obamacare’s IPAB-driven spending reductions won’t work either: CBO concluded that the Medicare reductions will be “difficult to sustain for a long period,” and the Medicare actuary found that provisions in Obamacare “are unlikely to be sustainable on a permanent annual basis.” The actuary went so far as to estimate that the law will cause 40 percent of hospitals and medical providers to become unprofitable in the long term.

While Democrats’ government-centric “Medicare fairy” approach has been weighed over the years and found wanting, the conservative idea that competition can help lower costs has never been truly explored. As we noted last week, even the Obama Administration admits that competition has generated savings for parts of the Medicare program. So instead of waiting around for a “Medicare fairy” that will never show up, why not empower patients instead of bureaucrats, and use competition to reduce costs in health care the same way it has in every other industry?

Subject: [Caution: Message contains Suspicious URL content] Why Obamacare Is NOT a "Tax Cut"
Date: Tuesday, July 31, 2012 8:01:51 AM

---

By now you've heard claims from President Obama and others that Obamacare provides a massive middle-class tax cut – largely by funding coverage for health insurance through Exchanges. We figured we would take this opportunity to summarize why that claim doesn't hold water:

1. CBO Scores Most of the "Tax Cuts" as Government Spending

We previously noted that, according to CBO's March 2012 baseline, projected spending on insurance subsidies totaled $806 billion during FY2013-22. As of March, $628 billion of that $806 billion was classified by CBO as government spending, NOT reduced tax revenues. But since the Supreme Court's ruling on Obamacare, those numbers have actually increased. CBO now assumes more low-income people who previously would have enrolled in Medicaid will receive Exchange subsidies instead in light of the Court decision. In its updated score of the repeal bill, CBO last week projected that $793 billion of the $1.017 trillion in subsidies represent government outlays, NOT revenue reductions. That means that over 78% of Obamacare insurance subsidies are pure government spending to individuals who have no income tax liability.

Democrats are quick to cite CBO to claim that Obamacare will reduce the deficit – why aren't they also quick to cite CBO when it states that the subsidies are NOT a tax cut, but instead largely comprise new government spending?

2. Democrat Claims on "Tax Cuts" Undermine the Social Security Trust Fund

When confronted with the fact that most of the Exchange subsidies constitute outlay spending by the federal government, President Obama and Democrats argue that these refundable tax credits – i.e., people receiving refunds even though they have zero income tax liability – offset payroll taxes paid by the low-income. But Democrats have told Republicans for years that those payroll taxes are used solely to fund Social Security benefits, meaning those workers will get their payroll taxes back in future benefits (and especially in the case of low-income workers, will get their payroll taxes back and then some, due to the way Social Security benefits are calculated). Do Democrats now want to admit that the Social Security Trust Fund is effectively meaningless, and that those who pay only payroll taxes are funding general government obligations rather than their own retirement benefits...?

3. Low-Income Individuals Don't Pay Enough Other Taxes to Offset this "Tax Cut"

Even if you disregard points #1 and #2 above, and believe that the subsidies will offset payroll and other taxes paid by individuals, the massive subsidies will still overwhelm many individuals' total tax liability – federal, state, AND local. In its analysis of the fiscal impacts of the Supreme Court ruling, CBO noted that in 2022, Exchange subsidies for low-income individuals – i.e., those persons who were originally projected to enroll in Medicaid, but who will now enroll in Exchanges instead due to the Court ruling – will average about $9,000 per year. These low-income individuals have incomes under 138% of the federal poverty level ($15,414.60 for a single person, $31,809 for a family of four in 2012).

To put it into perspective: A single person with income of 138% FPL, or $15,414.60, would pay total federal payroll taxes of $2,358.44 (that includes employee AND employer shares). Assume also for illustrative purposes that this person would pay $1,541.46 in state and local income taxes, given a combined 10% state and local tax rate. As noted above, this person's average insurance subsidy will total $9,000. Given payroll and state/local income tax liability totaling $3899.90, that means the individual in question would have to pay an additional $5100.10 in sales taxes for the federal subsidy to offset existing tax liability. And at a 6% local sales tax rate, an individual with income of $15,414.6 would have to spend just over $85,000 – enough to buy a Platinum Edition Cadillac Escalade – to pay enough sales tax to have a net tax liability.

All this is to say that there is virtually NO WAY some of the individuals receiving subsidies will pay enough in payroll taxes, state and local taxes, sales taxes, or any other kind of taxes for the subsidies to offset taxes they actually paid – as opposed to the government spending money to buy them health insurance.

4. Obamacare Subsidies are Paid Directly to Insurance Companies

Democrats' claims to the contrary, the law and record are very clear about the fact that this massive new entitlement will go straight into the pockets of the insurance industry:

- Section 1412(c)(2)(A) of the law provides that “The Secretary of the Treasury shall make the advance payment under this section of any premium tax credit allowed under section 36B of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to the issuer of a qualified health plan on a monthly basis.”
- Page 37 of the report on the Finance Committee bill states: “The Committee Bill provides a refundable tax credit for eligible individuals and families who purchase health insurance through the state exchanges. The premium tax credit, which is refundable and payable in advance directly to the insurer, subsidizes the purchase of certain health insurance plans through the state exchanges.”

Even liberal professor Jonathan Gruber – a paid Obamacare consultant – admitted in an interview that “Most households will never actually get their hands on the credits, so their existing tax liabilities won't actually change. In most cases, credits will go straight to insurance companies, to pay for health benefits.” And according to CBO's updated estimates, Obamacare will now provide over $1 trillion in spending on subsidies, which will go directly into the pockets of insurance companies.

Of course, candidate Obama opposed sending subsidies straight to insurance companies when he ran for President, only to flip-flop on this issue when he signed Obamacare. An Obama campaign ad derided Senator McCain's proposal to subsidize insurance through tax credits: “That tax credit? McCain's own Web site said it goes straight to the insurance companies, not to you, leaving you on your own...” Likewise, in a campaign speech, candidate Obama vilified Senator McCain for this policy: “But the new tax credit [McCain’s] proposing? That wouldn’t go to you. It would go directly to your insurance company – not your bank account.”

If this isn’t enough to convince you, consider a hypothetical example whereby Congress orders the IRS to send checks to Ferrari dealerships to pay for new sports cars for all Americans with incomes under $50,000 per year. This is clearly NOT a tax cut – because the cost of the Ferrari obviously exceeds any and all taxes low- and middle-income families pay, and because the individuals in question don’t receive cash through the transaction. It’s the same situation with health insurance. And unfortunately for the shrinking number of Americans who DO pay taxes, giving $1 trillion in Exchange subsidies straight to insurance companies will prove to be a fiscal wreck that even loads of Ferraris couldn’t begin to match.

In their re-estimate of the health care law in light of the Supreme Court's ruling, the Congressional Budget Office yesterday noted that the ruling would likely result in some individuals previously thought to gain Medicaid coverage receiving subsidies to buy insurance on Exchanges instead. CBO believes that these individuals “generally have somewhat poorer health. As a result, CBO and JCT now estimate that the premiums for health insurance offered through the exchanges, along with premiums in the individual market, will be 2 percent higher than those estimated in March 2012.”

This 2 percent increase highlighted yesterday amounts to a little over $300 per year for a family, given an average premium on the individual market of about $15,200 per year, according to a CBO analysis published in 2009 (page 6). And that increase comes in addition to the $2,100 per family premium increase CBO previously predicted when the law first passed – meaning that the average premium increase in the individual market thanks to Obamacare will be just under $2,500 per family per year.

Candidate Obama repeatedly promised premiums would be impacted by about $2,500 per family in his proposal – a development CBO has now confirmed. The only problem is that candidate Obama promised premiums would go DOWN $2,500 – but under the law President Obama signed, premiums will go UP by nearly the same amount. It's one more reason why Obamacare is a step in the wrong direction for struggling middle class families.

The liberal group Families USA released another report that supposedly makes the case for Obamacare – but in reality just demonstrates the lengths liberals will go to in order to gin up support for their flawed law. The report claims that “64.8 million non-elderly Americans have been diagnosed with pre-existing conditions that could lead to denials of coverage, absent health reform.”

There are several problems with this claim. First, the Administration released a report last year claiming that 129 million individuals have pre-existing conditions and “could be denied affordable coverage.” In other words, the Families USA study also claims that the number of individuals with pre-existing conditions has just been cut in half when compared to the prior HHS report. Which is another way of saying the Families USA report implicitly admits that the HHS study is flawed, biased, and should not be considered reputable. (But hey, what does a difference of a mere 65 million people make among friends?)

Second, enrollment in pools for people with pre-existing conditions is nowhere near as high as the Families USA report would suggest. According to the most recent data released by the Administration, 73,333 individuals with pre-existing conditions are enrolled in the federal high-risk pool program established under Obamacare. These enrollment data do not come anywhere close to earlier projections – the Medicare actuary originally projected enrollment at 375,000 individuals in 2010, and Congressional Budget Office estimated up to 700,000 individuals would attempt to enroll in the program by next year. To put it another way, the number of enrollees in pre-existing condition pools under Obamacare is .11% of the 64.8 million people Families USA claims have pre-existing conditions.

Finally, it’s worth pointing out that today’s report was conducted for Families USA by the Lewin Group. The Huffington Post and other liberal allies called Lewin a front group for insurers back in 2009, when it released studies showing how a government-run health plan could cause millions to lose their health insurance. Surprisingly, we have yet to see HuffPo and other liberal groups similarly criticizing today’s Families USA/Lewin study as being biased by a tainted insurer front group, when it helps trumpet the talking points of Obamacare supporters.

It’s true that the problem of individuals with pre-existing conditions is real – but nowhere near as pervasive as the types of reports produced by HHS and Families USA would have you believe. That’s why Republicans have offered and supported targeted solutions that would solve this problem WITHOUT a 2700-page law intruding into every corner of the American health sector. The trumped-up claims in this latest Families USA report once again illustrate that while pre-existing conditions are a problem for some Americans, Obamacare is far from the right solution.

Subject: [Caution: Message contains Suspicious URL content] CBO's Assumptions about the Health Care Law

In its re-estimate of the health care law in light of the Supreme Court's ruling and new cost estimate for repealing the legislation, the Congressional Budget Office made some interesting assumptions that are worth examining in greater detail.

First, CBO opined that “the Supreme Court’s decision upholding the constitutionality of the ACA’s provision requiring most individuals to obtain insurance coverage or pay a penalty tax does not change CBO and JCT’s assessment of the mandate’s effect on coverage.” Some observers had argued that the Court’s ruling upholding the mandate as a tax rather than a penalty would undermine CBO’s behavioral assumptions – because the mandate can be easily circumvented by paying the tax, and individuals would not feel they were “breaking the law” by doing so. CBO generally declined to change its assumptions regarding compliance with the mandate in light of the ruling, although it did allow that the Court’s decision will likely result “in an increase in the number of people who will be eligible for hardship exemptions [from the mandate], which will slightly reduce the prevalence of coverage and thus the strength of the social norm to obtain insurance.”

Second, CBO assumed that the law’s Medicaid maintenance of effort requirements “were not directly affected by the Court’s decision” and remain in place. However, there is significant uncertainty and ambiguity about this assumption. While the Administration believes the requirements were unaffected by the ruling, some states believe the Court’s decision nullified the maintenance of effort mandates, have said they will not be bound by those mandates, and are prepared to litigate their position accordingly should the Administration attempt to enforce requirements that states believe have been nullified by the Court.

Third, and perhaps most importantly, CBO assumed HHS would give states significant flexibility in determining how they will expand their Medicaid programs:

CBO anticipates that, instead of choosing to expand Medicaid eligibility fully to 138 percent of the FPL [federal poverty level] or to continue the status quo, many states will try to work out arrangements with the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to undertake partial expansions. For example, some states will probably seek to implement a partial expansion of Medicaid eligibility to 100 percent of the FPL, because, under the ACA, people below that threshold will not be eligible for subsidies in the insurance exchanges while people above that threshold will be if they do not have an offer of affordable coverage from an employer and meet other eligibility requirements. Other states may seek to expand coverage to levels above their existing thresholds but below 100 percent of the FPL....How the current Administration and future ones will respond to states’ interest in pursuing these various approaches is unclear.

This is very much an open question, given that HHS has not opined on the impact of the Court’s ruling – except to deny states flexibility to modify their Medicaid programs. If HHS takes a similarly absolute “all-or-nothing” approach to the entire Medicaid expansion, CBO’s assumptions could be vastly different indeed.

Finally, as one observer noted, CBO's score of the law's repeal "also assumes that a controversial tax on high-cost health insurance plans goes into effect as scheduled in 2018, though critics argue Congress will act to avoid that." If Congress does act to avoid that tax, then the law will INCREASE the deficit – because the $111 billion in revenue from this insurance tax on the middle class (to say nothing of the additional $216 billion in various tax-related interactions) outweighs the $109 billion in supposed deficit savings CBO assumes. It's pretty ironic that, given candidate Obama's "firm pledge" not to raise taxes on the middle class, the only thing keeping Obamacare from raising the deficit is a tax increase on the middle class.

Date: Tuesday, September 04, 2012 7:35:46 AM

Speaking on ABC's This Week Sunday, Obama Administration adviser David Plouffe made a series of false and misleading comments about Medicare. It's worth unpacking them one by one.

"The president's approach to Medicare...extended Medicare solvency for eight years..." That's not what the Congressional Budget Office said. The non-partisan CBO said that the Medicare reductions in Obamacare "will not enhance the ability of the government to pay for future Medicare benefits" – because those savings will be used to fund other unsustainable entitlements. Even President Obama himself admitted this irrefutable logic in a 2010 interview, when he stated that "You can't say that you are saving on Medicare and then spending the money twice."

"...which was supported by AARP..." As a House Ways and Means member report last year showed, AARP stands to benefit by over $1 billion, thanks to the numerous exemptions included in Obamacare for AARP's lucrative Medigap insurance policies – making AARP far from a neutral arbiter in the Obamacare debate.

"The savings all came from waste and fraud and subsidies that shouldn't have been going to the insurance companies..." Administration rhetoric notwithstanding, these reductions will have a measurable impact on many Medicare beneficiaries. First, Obamacare's cuts to Medicare Advantage will reduce that program's enrollment by half and cut plan choices by two-thirds – undermining the President's promise that those who like their plan will be able to keep it under Obamacare. Second, both the Medicare actuary and the Congressional Budget Office have concluded that some of the law's biggest Medicare reductions will not be sustainable in the long-term; the Medicare actuary said the reductions could cause up to 40 percent of hospitals to become unprofitable – at which point they may have to stop treating Medicare patients.

"Not a dime came from Medicare beneficiaries." That statement is flat-out FALSE. The President HAS enacted cuts to Medicare benefits – namely, additional means-testing in Obamacare. And in his budget submitted to Congress this spring, the President proposed additional cuts in benefits – cuts that would (conveniently) take effect only after he leaves office. As we previously wrote, many of these benefit cuts (both enacted and proposed) make sense from a policy perspective – but that does NOT give the Administration the right to claim they haven't proposed cutting Medicare benefits, when in reality they have already enacted benefit cuts.

"The suggestion that we're raiding Medicare, absolutely untrue." Nancy Pelosi thinks otherwise. Last November, she admitted that Democrats "[took a half a trillion dollars out of Medicare in \[Obamacare\], the health care bill](#)" to pay for more federal spending.

Looked at as a whole, there is a larger irony in Plouffe's comments, and that's this: For all the talk of "Mediscare" tactics by Democrats around premium support or other comprehensive entitlement reforms, the largest batch of misinformation from the Left has involved what Obamacare does and doesn't do for seniors. The fact that Democrats can't even admit the true facts behind their unpopular 2700-page health care law is as good an argument as any for why they should not be trusted to enact the reforms necessary to strengthen and preserve the Medicare program.

Date: Tuesday, July 24, 2012 9:43:00 AM

The Wall Street Journal reports this morning about an earnings call yesterday in which McDonald's Chief Financial Officer admitted Obamacare could cost his company nearly a half-billion dollars in revenue:

The Affordable Care Act could cost McDonald's and its franchisees more than $400 million a year in additional health-care expenses, Chief Financial Officer Peter Bensen said on Monday.

McDonald's estimates that each restaurant will incur between $10,000 and $30,000 in added annual costs, Bensen said in response to an analyst's question on a conference call to discuss the fast-food giant's second-quarter results, according to an unedited transcript of the call provided by FactSet. There are about 14,000 McDonald's restaurants in the U.S., meaning McDonald's expects the total cost to the company and its franchisees to be in the range of $140 million to $420 million....

Spokeswomen for McDonald's added that the final cost will also depend on what percentage of its eligible employees elect to accept health insurance from the chain, as well as any changes McDonald's might make to its health-care plan. McDonald's worked with its franchisees to analyze and estimate the potential costs, the spokeswoman said, which could be mitigated by higher menu prices.

Because the federal government will be imposing hundreds of millions of dollars in regulatory costs and mandate penalties, the company may have to lower wages and/or reduce job opportunities for workers. In addition, the article notes that the company may "change" – read: "reduce" – its health care plan, and increase prices to respond to the new costs of Obamacare.

Any way you slice it, it's a very unhappy meal for McDonald's, which will be facing penalties from a new "Hamburglar" – the federal government.

Date: Tuesday, July 17, 2012 10:00:14 AM

In the past 24 hours, two new polls have once again demonstrated that Obamacare is causing uncertainty for businesses, thereby hindering economic growth. In a Gallup survey, 57% of Americans thought Obamacare would make things worse for businesses – a margin just short of the 60% of Americans who thought the law would make things worse for taxpayers as a whole.

A separate survey of small businesses conducted by the US Chamber of Commerce echoes the Gallup findings. That survey found that 72% of small business owners concluded that Obamacare makes it harder for their firms to take on new workers, compared to only 3% who said that the clarity of the Supreme Court’s decision on the law would lead to new hiring. Many owners also commented that the law would encourage their firm to reduce the size of their labor force, and/or cancel health insurance entirely and dump their workers on to Obamacare Exchanges.

President Obama has attracted controversy in recent days on the basis of remarks he made Friday implying that government is the source for businesses’ success. Yesterday’s Obamacare surveys reveal, however, that under Obamanomics, those businesses who still can succeed aren’t succeeding because of government intrusion – but despite it.

Date: Friday, July 13, 2012 10:23:25 AM

In an interview with Charlie Rose yesterday, President Obama said his biggest mistake as President was that he was too focused on “getting the policy right....The nature of this office is also to tell a story to the American people that gives them a sense of unity and purpose and optimism, especially during tough times.”

The President’s comments indicating he was too focused on policy may seem to some like the famous response from an interviewer asking for a job applicant’s biggest flaw: “My biggest flaws are that I work too hard and care too much.” But when it comes to health care, we actually disagree with the President. He HAS been good at telling stories – quite a lot of them actually:

Story #1 – “If You Like Your Plan, You Can Keep It:” The Obama campaign platform promised that “you will not have to change plans. For those who have insurance now, nothing will change under the Obama plan – except that you will pay less.” But the Administration’s own estimates revealed that Obamacare’s onerous regulations will force most firms – and up to 80 percent of small businesses – to give up their current plans, thus subjecting them to costly new mandates that will increase premiums. Millions more seniors will lose access to the Medicare Advantage plans they have and like.

Story #2 – Obamacare Will Cut Premiums by $2,500 per Family: Candidate Obama repeatedly promised premiums would go down by $2,500 – and would go down that amount by this year. But since making that promise, premiums have gone up by nearly $2,400 per family – from \$12,680 in 2008 to \$15,073 in 2011, according to Kaiser Family Foundation data. And the legislation he signed into law will result in even more massive premium increases. The Congressional Budget Office projects that individual health insurance premiums will increase by \$2,100 per family as a result of Obamacare.

Story #3 – No New Taxes on the Middle Class: After telling the squeezed middle class during his campaign that he would not raise “any of your taxes,” President Obama’s health care law broke that promise no fewer than 12 separate times. These massive revenue increases will have a devastating effect over the coming years; destructive taxes on job creators will harm an economy struggling to grow.

Story #4 – Individual Mandate, Part I: In 2008, candidate Obama claimed that penalizing people for not buying health insurance was like “[solv\[ing\] homelessness by mandating everyone buy a house](#).” Yet Obamacare created an unprecedented federal requirement for all citizens to purchase a product merely because they exist.

Story #5 – Individual Mandate, Part II: In 2009, President Obama told George Stephanopoulos that “For us to say that you’ve got to take a responsibility to get health insurance is absolutely not a tax increase.” Yet more than two years later, his Administration argued before the Supreme Court that Obamacare’s individual mandate “operates as a tax law.” But President Obama still refuses to acknowledge his individual mandate is a multi-billion dollar tax increase on the middle class – and has gone so far as to criticize others for playing politics regarding the issue.

Story #6 – Protecting Medicare: In an address to Congress in 2009, President Obama claimed he would “protect Medicare.” Yet former Speaker Pelosi admitted in an interview last year that Democrats “took a half a trillion dollars out of Medicare in [Obamacare], the health care bill” to pay for more federal spending. That doesn’t protect Medicare – that undermines Medicare.

Story #7 – Federal Spending on Obamacare: Candidate Obama promised his health care plan would cost “$50-65 billion a year when fully phased in.” However, the Congressional Budget Office now projects that the REAL cost of the coverage expansions will be $250 billion in 2021 and $261 billion in 2022 – more than four times the levels of spending candidate Obama promised.

Story #8 – Containing Health Care Costs: In June 2009, President Obama claimed that any health care legislation must control costs: “If any bill arrives from Congress that is not controlling costs, that’s not a bill I can support. It’s going to have to control costs.” However, according to the Medicare actuary, national health spending will go up by $478,000,000,000, thanks to Obamacare.

Story #9 – Taxing Health Benefits: Candidate Obama promised not to “tax health benefits,” and derided his opponent’s proposals to do so. But Obamacare FORCES people to buy insurance, so the federal government can tax it at a whopping 40 percent rate.

Story #10 – Health Care Negotiations on C-SPAN: Candidate Obama said he would televis
e all health care negotiations on C-SPAN, but the process leading up to Obamacare was plagued with notorious backroom deals. Worse yet, Obama adviser David Axelrod received a multimillion dollar severance package indirectly paid for by the pharmaceutical industry, as part of its “rock-solid deal” with Democrats in Congress and the Administration.

So yes, President Obama is good at telling stories – quite good, in fact. The problem is that few of them happen to be true.

A Transformative Moment

Grace-Marie Turner
National Review Online: The Corner, August 30, 2012

Listening to Paul Ryan's acceptance speech in the convention hall last night evoked a similar transformative moment I witnessed in 1980 when Ronald Reagan reset the agenda for the Republican party.

Then-candidate Reagan took his pledge to cut taxes by 30 percent across the board, and he gave the Republican party a new mission. Instead of being stuck as the "tax collectors for the welfare state," the GOP became the party of economic growth and opportunity. And Reagan's policies did just that — spurring two decades of prosperity.

Paul Ryan and Ronald Reagan drew their ideas from the same man, Jack Kemp. "I learned a good deal about economics, and about America, from the author of the Reagan tax reforms — the great Jack Kemp," Ryan told the audience last night. "What gave Jack that incredible enthusiasm was his belief in the possibilities of free people, in the power of free enterprise and strong communities to overcome poverty and despair. We need that same optimism right now."

Ryan, like Kemp, is a happy warrior, ready to take on the challenge of a new century — reform of the welfare state. No one knows the frightening future we face better than Ryan, who can see through his deep study of budgets and finance the inevitable crisis ahead if we do not act. Governor Romney's selection of Ryan shows he also knows Republicans must take on this challenge.

"In this generation, a defining responsibility of government is to steer our nation clear of a debt crisis while there is still time," Ryan said.

The Romney-Ryan campaign clearly intends to focus on gaining a mandate for entitlement reform, singling out the 800-pound gorilla, Medicare.

President Obama missed his opportunity to tackle entitlement reform when he had a huge election mandate and strong majorities in both houses of Congress. Instead, “We got a long, divisive, all-or-nothing attempt to put the federal government in charge of health care” with “more than 2,000 pages of rules, mandates, taxes, fees, and fines,” Ryan said.

President Obama didn’t reform the crumbling infrastructure of Medicare — or Medicaid — and gave no indication he has any plans to tackle entitlement reform in a second term.

Ryan made it very clear that after more than 40 years of the party’s being on the defensive on Medicare, this Republican presidential ticket is ready to lead the change:

The biggest, coldest power play of all in Obamacare came at the expense of the elderly.

You see, even with all the hidden taxes to pay for the health care takeover, even with new taxes on nearly a million small businesses, the planners in Washington still didn’t have enough money. They needed more. They needed hundreds of billions more. So, they just took it all away from Medicare. Seven hundred and sixteen billion dollars, funneled out of Medicare by President Obama. An obligation we have to our parents and grandparents is being sacrificed, all to pay for a new entitlement we didn’t even ask for. The greatest threat to Medicare is Obamacare, and we’re going to stop it. . . .

Medicare is a promise, and we will honor it. A Romney-Ryan administration will protect and strengthen Medicare, for my Mom’s generation, for my generation, and for my kids and yours.

So our opponents can consider themselves on notice. In this election, on this issue, the usual posturing on the Left isn’t going to work. Mitt Romney and I know the difference between protecting a program, and raiding it. Ladies and gentlemen, our nation needs this debate. We want this debate. We will win this debate.

Whether Republicans like it or not, Medicare is a promise to Americans. If we are going to save our economy and our ability to fulfill this promise for the future, change is absolutely essential. Otherwise, the status quo will prevail, and that is a path to decline.

Paul Ryan’s speech last night reset the agenda for the Republican party, perhaps for a generation. This is going to be a big fight — one that requires courage and big ideas. Last night’s speech shows Romney and Ryan are ready.

Earlier this week consultants at Towers Watson, in conjunction with the National Business Group on Health, released their annual survey of large employers offering health insurance. And the results are not encouraging for businesses or employees:

Higher Costs: “Employers anticipate total health care costs will reach $11,664 per active employee in 2012, up from $10,982 in 2011 — a 6.2% increase in total costs over the period.”

Higher Premiums: “Employees, on average, paid 23.0% of total premium costs in 2011 and are expected to pay 23.7% in 2012, as companies take steps to control their costs. In paycheck deductions, this translated into an average employee contribution of $2,529 to premiums in 2011, which is expected to rise to $2,764 in 2012 — a 9.3% increase in one year.”

Higher Out-of-Pocket Charges: “The share of total health care expenses paid by employees, including premium and out-of-pocket costs, is expected to be 34.4% in 2012, up from 33.2% in 2011.”

Employers Dropping Retiree Coverage: “If [Obamacare] works as intended, the health insurance market in 2014 and beyond will become an attractive alternative and further push companies to exit sponsorship of their pre-65 programs.”

Employers Dropping Workers’ Coverage: “Nearly one in five companies is likely to offer health care coverage to a subset of its workforce and direct the remainder of its employees to the insurance Exchanges.”

Employers Less Confident about Offering Coverage: “Against the backdrop of [Obamacare], companies have never been more uncertain about the future of their health care programs over the long term....With the health care marketplace changing rapidly and parts of [Obamacare] already starting to take effect, employer confidence is at its lowest point (23%) since we began tracking this data.”

Businesses Bugged Down by Paperwork: Nearly one in six firms (15%) cited the cost of Obamacare compliance as one of the “biggest challenges to maintaining affordable benefit coverage.”

Firms Reducing Employee Hours: “Nearly 40% of companies that traditionally use a high number of part-time workers expect to limit them to less than 30 hours per week by 2014 to escape having to pay benefits.”

The report once again illustrates Obamacare's broken promises – instead of premiums going down by \$2,500, they continue to skyrocket, even as individuals are unable to maintain their prior coverage. It's yet another example of the way in which Obamacare has failed to deliver for the American people.

Innovation In The Health Care Sector Marches Forward

Grace-Marie Turner
Forbes: Health Matters, May 14, 2012

All eyes are on the Supreme Court as the nation awaits its decision about ObamaCare, but progress in the health sector nonetheless marches on. These changes in the real world of health care are driven not by Washington's laws, rules, and endless regulations, but by companies, large and small, that are developing new ways to improve health care.

The Galen Institute held a conference adjacent to Capitol Hill on Wednesday in which speakers from more than a dozen companies described the investments they are making in better health, better health care services, and more efficient care delivery.

They demonstrated that the best solutions to the problems in our health sector come not from remote Washington bureaucrats trying futilely to re-engineer our health sector through costly, cumbersome, and confusing rules and regulations, but from innovators who are listening to doctors, patients, and consumers.

Here are examples of some of their real-world solutions:

Incentives for healthy lifestyles:

Walmart is making a major investment in its new "Healthy Food Initiative" to help families stressed for time and money to eat better, more nutritious meals. Joe Quinn, senior director of issue management and strategic outreach for Walmart, described the company's new five-year program to make it easier to live healthy by making more nutritious food more accessible and affordable.

Walmart will work to reduce sodium, sugars, and trans fats in the packaged foods it sells, buy more local products, and develop algorithms for labels that will help shoppers identify healthy foods offering the best value, as just a few examples of the Walmart initiative. This will bring "better nutrition to kitchen tables across the country," Quinn said. Only the world's largest retailer would have the market power to facilitate this transformational change by working at the micro level with suppliers, developing educational programs, and responding to customers who want to live better at affordable prices.

Innovations in drug development:

Robert Sweetman, M.D., the lead lung cancer researcher for the Oncology Business Unit at Pfizer, explained that innovations in technology, genetics, and basic science are helping companies discover and develop effective treatments at a much faster pace.

For example, researchers have new tools to better understand the molecular characteristics of a tumor so they can more precisely target treatment options. They also are able to determine which patients are more likely to respond to treatment. As a result, Pfizer was able to expedite clinical trials and bring its newest drug for a specific type of lung cancer, Xalkori® (crizotinib) to market 4 years from target discovery to approval, rather than decades using the older research models. This represents a new chapter in drug development.

Powerful computer software is speeding the process of drug discovery and development. This means smaller clinical trials that are targeted to patients likely to benefit from the drug, helping to lower the extraordinarily expensive cost of drug testing, and getting new drugs to patients faster.

Threats to innovation:

ZOLL Medical Corporation is one of the medical device companies in the bull's eye of ObamaCare. ZOLL President Jonathan Rennert explained that the new taxes the law imposes on his company's revenue – revenue, not profits – will raise ZOLL's tax rate to greater than 50%, which will in turn drastically curtail the company's investment in research and development. "The medical device tax would have completely wiped out our profit if it were in effect over the last several years," Rennert said. "Every one of the jobs in our company is now in the U.S. But we will have every incentive to move jobs offshore" when the tax takes effect in 2013. "The medical device tax will lead to less innovation, fewer jobs, and fewer lives saved."

Timothy Ring, chairman and CEO of C.R. Bard, Inc., said the medical device tax is killing jobs, innovation, and America's leadership in medical science. He cites as evidence: Investments in health technology firms are down 65% over the last five years.

Similarly, Michael Russell, M.D., president of the board of directors of Physician Hospitals of America, described the health law's crushing impact on the newer, more efficient doctor-owned hospitals. ObamaCare effectively blocks creation of new doctor-owned hospitals and it even kept those which already were under construction from opening, denying patients access to care and medical professionals access to jobs. So far, the bigger, lumbering community hospitals have been successful in using their political clout to crush these smaller, more efficient competitors.

Better care with better information

Keynote speaker John Niederhuber, M.D., CEO of Inova Translational Medicine Institute and former director of the National Cancer Institute, says we should expect that, within a decade, each one of us will have our genome sequenced. (The cost has fallen from $1 billion to map the first human genome to about $2,000 now.) "The next 10 years in biomedical research and patient care will be defined by genomics and our ability to analyze and integrate this data effectively with a patient's phenotypic information into their actual care," he said.

"The power of genomics and information management is the key to bending the cost curve," he said, as better and earlier information allows us to get the right treatment to the right patient at the right time – even before any symptoms manifest. He said the challenge will be in managing the explosion of information (measured in "zettabytes").
