The people Verses the GOP

A letter of Opinion by Roger Warren March 29, 2011

I have so much I want to discuss with you. It frustrates me almost to the point of surrender that our GOP leadership in the US Congress are a bunch of Lilly Livered Cowards. Why do I sat this? let us see.....

John Boehner 8th Dist. Ohio: Just can't bring himself to break the House Rule allowing no changes in a Budget Resolution to temporarily fund the Government. He gives that, as a reason to do nothing about suspending Obamacare funding and not make a 100 Billion dollar cut in the budget. I am beginning to wonder how he will find a way to NOT present the two mandates the 2010 voter gave Congress. Those Mandates are: Defund Obamacare and cut the budget a significant amount (starting at One Trillion dollars). Which brings us to:

Our Governor, Mary Fallin, whom I admire for her accomplishments and support 99%. That 1% is a dozy-a little ole donation by the Federal Government of 54.5 million dollars to establish an Oklahoma Health Care Exchange (information exchanged about YOU) which is a super crummy thing to do to you, because you will have no privacy left. Even if Obamacare is never shouldered onto the backs of our poor bankrupt Government, the ability to access any and all information about you would still remain available to anyone with a computer. We tell our girls don't be naked on facebook and we are going to allow any sorry person that wants it, every detail of our sordid existence. The Government CANNOT understand why we want our privacy. If they know every detail of our lives, then they can Control our lives (which is the dream of Obama). Why do you poor fools resist Control by Obama? He just does not understand your resistance.

Kirk Humphreys thinks I am Nuts. He was on Flashpoint TV show when he said this. According to him, since I question the wisdom of the Health Care Exchange, I am a Conservative Nut. Mr. Humphreys, I may be a Nut but I still question that taking the Obamacare money is a wise thing. I worked for Uncle Sam 34 years. If I take 10 cents of taxpayer money, there is a one dollar string attached. I know. I used to find ways to tie that string. I know the folks saw Billions of dollars of Stimulus money just disappear into thin air. It made them very suspicious and absolutely mistrustful of Obamacare. Obamacare is a hundred times worse than the Stimulus. They believe, Mr. Humphreys, that all of the money will be wasted. I defy you to account for more than one fifth of the stimulus money. That is where the Obamacare money will go too. Don't you realize these people in the White House are thieves?

If my neighbor steals 100 dollars from my bank, do I get to steal 25 dollars? We are not SAD people. I think our good Governor is of the opinion, that Congress will never defund Obamacare or will make the drastic, but necessary, cuts to the National Budget. She may be right. My experience with Uncle Sam leads me to conclude the story of the Camel and the tent is a simile of the Federal government. Which brings me to.....

Senators Coburn and Inhofe and Representative Cole. Also people of whom, I mostly admire. Again that little I don't admire is a dozy. Senator Dr. Coburn is not adverse to a bailout. He supported the 2008 bailout as did Representative Tom Cole. The two and Bailout voter Mary Fallin insulted the Oklahoma Republicans at the 2009 GOP Convention. I was embarrassed for them. I was ashamed of the Oklahoma Republicans for not telling them, "Don't lie to us and treat us like idiots". I am no different than anyone else. I just sat there and contained my embarrassment and shame (of me for not speaking up). And then we sent them back to Congress and to the Governors Office.

Senator Inhofe did NOT support the Bailout but loves Earmarks. He did not attend the 2009 GOP Convention. I believe he thinks this: If he doesn't make sure Oklahoma gets their share, some other State will. Which is not a bad Philosophy if we had money. Unfortunately, our Country is Bankrupt.....

What! You don't believe we are Bankrupt? I will tell you a story about paying bills. This is parable of our Government which must borrow 40 cents of every dollar it spends. 60 cents of every dollar is committed to Mandatory (Entitlements) spending for Social Programs, such as Social Security, Medicare and Food Stamps. Defense requires an additional 25%. A total of 85 cents.

We paid bills this way in the 1970's. You deposited your weekly earnings in the bank. You have bills you received through the mail or were per-mandated, such as a car payment. You wrote checks paying the bills but you did not exceed what you had in your bank account and you left enough to live on. This was typical of most people.

Now we go crazy, Let's suppose you sit down, begin writing checks to pay your bills. 60 cents of every dollar you pay is from your earnings. The remainder comes from Seaboard Finance Company and they loan you 40 cents of every dollar you pay. You do not have any other sources of income except your job. One day it occurs to Seaboard that you are paying them with money you are borrowing from Seaboard.....Except that.....

Every body in the world has been doing this. The only reason Seaboard has money is because everybody in the world has been paying them with money BORROWED FROM SEABOARD. When does Seaboard say "I am calling the note"? They did and it was yesterday.

Question: Are we Bankrupt? My answer is yes. Obama says no, because Seaboard will give us more money. Boehner says if we stop borrowing from Seaboard, "The voters and the media will say bad things about me and my gang if we stop borrowing". Maybe Coburn, Inhofe, Cole and Fallin are right. Rape the treasury while you can and the devil take the hindmost. The GOP is scared of their own shadow except some remarkable people that are despised by the Republicans because they are saying "Don't borrow any more from Seaboard. Let us begin paying our bills". Which brings us to.....

Jeb Bush (aka Jebby boy): Jeb shares Kirk Humphreys fine opinion of me. I can't speak for you. My friends, according to Jebby boy, I am STUPID! I heard him say that with my own outsized ears. I heard it on the radio, but I still heard it. Why do I bring Jebby boy into the discussion? Because it seems most of the Future Republican Presidential Candidates, that went to Iowa last week, are consulting him on what to do next. I can't imagine the advice he is giving them. Uh oh! OMG, LOL, Great shades of SADs! Ha, got you on the SADs thing did I not? Ok, I confess. I made it it up. S means stupid. A means gluteus maximus. D means Democrats. I prefer Nit wit because it is more polite.....

Coburn-Inhofe-Cole-Fallin-Boehner, listen to me. The people out here are not Stupid. Grow a spine. That is all we voters ask. I am happy that Coburn is taking on the Ethanol Industry. Ethanol is such a ripoff, only a SAD person could have dreamed it into existence. Once we don't have plain old gasoline available, we must quit using our lawn equipment. Ethanol destroys their Aluminum carburetors. Inhofe, you could be the leader of the Senate if you wanted it. Forget Earmarks (i.e. Pork ) and lead the Budget fight. Be a Statesman. That is what we pay you for and you have the capabilities. Do you not realize the people out here are worried sick about the insane spending and the unbridled theft of federal funds that goes on? Federal law enforcement is a thing of the past. The Obama people steal with impunity. Cole, you are the Granddaddy of the House. If you don't have the heart for a fight to control our Budget, quit! You start raising billy blue hell and Boehner will listen to you. So what do you believe? If you can't lead the fight, step aside and let somebody in there that will. Fallin, there was a lot of people who supported Brogdan against you. Here is why. They were afraid you would not stand and spit in the eye of the Tiger. Well, the day is here and the Tiger is in front of you. Spit in its eye. It is not to late. Once you take that 54.5, Obama owns you. You know it just as I do.

Boehner. Grow a spine. Representative Bachmann or Sarah Palin will show you the way if you ask. Maybe Tom Cole is ready to start the Budget Control battle.

Any way, now that I have angered everybody, I will move on to a new subject. If I have a friend left, would both of you email me? I have a letter from a typical voter in my possession. I will send it with this letter. The letter is real but I will not give the writers name. Not ever, to anyone. That is the deal I make with every one that sends me information. I am going to be forwarding you stuff all week. I have a letter from the OK GOP that needs to be sent. I have a letter from Americans for prosperity that needs to be sent. I have commentaries on various subjects that I wish to send. They are just great.....

Incidentally, speaking of Mrs. Barresi, the new State Schools Superintendent, isn't she great? She may be the best thing that has happened to Oklahoma education in the last 100 years.

Senator John Cornyn

Chairman – National Republican Senatorial Committee

P.O. Box 96028

CC: Senator Tom Coburn and Senator Jim Inhofe

Dear Senator/Chairman Cornyn:

I received your letter and membership record verification form asking for me to renew my membership and make a donation to NRSC. I felt compelled to write you and explain my feelings and why I am not renewing at this time. My wife and I have been more political in these past few years than any other time in our lives. We are both in our late 50's and face each day with shock, horror and disbelief in what our nation has become. Prior to the November elections, we donated money to Republican candidates that we supported and we prayed for an overwhelming victory at the ballot box. Fortunately, we got that victory in the House, but not the Senate. I write Senators Coburn and Inhofe on a regular basis and both are very good about responding to my concerns. However, I am disappointed in the Republicans, in general, by their lack of aggressiveness in attacking Obamacare, the deficit, wasteful spending and, more importantly, illegal immigration.

I am not alone in my concerns with the Republican Party. The majority of us working, voting taxpayers are fed up with what is going on in Washington. There seems to be too many of the "old guard" Republicans who are somewhat "progressive" in their thinking and their politics. "Republicans in name only" (RINO) I believe they call them. By their actions, or lack thereof, they appear to the average voter to be reverting back to the status quo of Washington politics. They want to compromise with the Democrats, who are singularly responsible for the ungodly deficit that we now find ourselves in. It appears that they want to compromise, or "reach across the aisle", so they can be admitted to "the club". The club is the northeastern "elitists" who feel that they need to think for us and lead us, the "unwashed masses", because we're just too stupid to know what is best for us and our country. They are more worried about jeopardizing their reelection than making the tough decisions that will put our country back on the right path.

Governors Scott Walker and Chris Christie are both shining examples of the type of aggressive, "don't care what the Left or anyone else thinks", attitude that we hunger for. We want federal spending cut, cut now, and dramatically. The few billion in cuts that we hear about is just laughable. We expect to see whole departments eliminated or to have their budgets dramatically cut. We can do without the Department of Education. It's a joke. We spend more now than ever and our kids are less educated than ever before. Put it back at the State level. We can also do without the Department of Energy. I see no tangible benefits that it has brought us, such as a viable energy policy other than "don't drill domestically". Ridiculous! Eliminate collective bargaining from ALL government worker unions. They should not have been allowed to unionize in the first place. We're tired of carrying the burden of their exorbitant salaries and pension plans on our backs. We can no longer afford it, but evidently no one has the guts to stand up to them. I guess we just keep paying them what they want until the entire system crashes and then no one will have any pensions or benefits – period!

I could go on and on and list gripe after gripe, and I'm sure you have talking points for all of them. I will just say that, until I see significant change in the way the Republicans in the House and Senate conduct the people's business, I'm keeping my money. I will continue to support Senators Coburn and Inhofe, but I will not contribute to some general fund for you to reelect many of the RINOs that are causing or contributing to the problems. I would encourage you and the rest of the Republican leadership to "thin the heard" and start paying attention to their Libertarian and Tea Party colleagues. They will be the next major political party if you don't.

Respectfully

See Ya!
Roger

Friend,

Did you see what the President tweeted yesterday? The man who decries the lack of civility in the name of protecting his daughters' futures tweeted this in response to the Supreme Court's decision: "@Barack Obama: Still a BFD" and offered an equally vulgar and offensive T-Shirt in return for a campaign donation.

Shortly after the decision, the Executive Director of the Democratic National Committee joined the President's distasteful display, tweeting "it's constitutional. B*tches." This—from the so-called party of women? Is this the example the President sets for his daughters? Is this civility?

It's time for a change, and the pundits and political experts all agree—the power to repeal Obamacare is in your hands, and in the hands of those you vote to send to the next Congress.

It's now up to those in Congress to repeal and replace this crushing law and the largest tax increase in our country's history. We know the conservative women we support will be difference-makers equipped to stop Obamacare, and we need your help getting them to Congress.

As conservatives, it may shock many in our own movement to hear us agree with the left: yes, there is a war—and yes, women are involved. But women are not the victims, as the left would have you believe.

In fact, it was women who fired the first shots heard across America against crushing Obamacare. Our "Moms Against Mandates," "Mama Grizzlies," and "Nurses Against Nanny States" fight everyday on the frontlines against Obama's "fundamental transformation" of America.

Governor Sarah Palin was the first to recognize Obamacare's dangers; she warned of "death panels" in the legislation as early as August 2009. In 2012, Congress recognized and finally acted on Palin's warnings. Republicans and Democrats joined together to strip the "Independent Payment Advisory Boards" from Obamacare—delivering what the media called a "political blow" to President Obama.

The morning after Obamacare passed, Congresswoman Michele Bachmann stood in front of Congress to introduce legislation repealing Obama's plans for socialized healthcare and stated her intent: to "make sure Obamacare is completely repealed."

He may not know it, but President Barack Obama has woken a nation of slumbering Mama Grizzlies from hibernation. With the flourish of his pen stroke, he made good on his promise of a "fundamental transformation," and forced socialized health care on millions of Americans and their families.

Show President Obama that we won't stand for his intrusive legislation by helping us send more conservative women to Congress who will repeal and replace Obamacare with a generous donation of \$25, \$50, \$100, or whatever you can give today!

Nurses Diane Black, Rennee Ellmers and Anne Marie Buerkle refused to let Obama push their families around. These women took matters into their own hands by deciding to run for Congress in 2010, and they defeated their opponents in Democratic districts. These nurses know first hand the dangers of taking control away from health care professionals so that it can be handed over to Washington bureaucrats. These three joined with other moms, advocates, and women in the House to stand firm against Obamacare.

And they are joined by new candidates for Congress, like Lisa Wilson-Foley. Lisa attended our DC Kickoff event this past week. She's not a politician—instead, this mother of four is a successful business woman and health care professional who knows that Obamacare hurts small business and poses risks to the quality of our health care. She is running on a platform to repeal and replace this legislation with solutions that make sense for all Americans. We need Lisa and more like her in Congress.

GOP Women on the Hill, led by Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers, reminded us why women oppose this law: "Women make 85 percent of the health-care decisions in this country. They also represent the vast majority of health-care professionals. And they don't like the idea of the federal government coming in and making the decisions they typically make-for themselves, for their families, and for their patients."

If you agree with great conservative women like Governor Sarah Palin and Representatives Michele Bachmann and Cathy McMorris Rodgers, then please help us send more of them to Washington with a generous donation today!

Women are the leaders of the fight to stop Obamacare, and soon with your generous support, we'll send more to Congress to help. This battle is not over. Thank you governor Fallin for your decision to continue the legal challenge to Obamacare and to not expand Medicaid or create the state based exchange. As a physical therapist for 39 years, I have grave concerns over full implementation of the law and its detrimental effects on our US Health care system. Keep up the greats work to challenge the over reaching arms of the federal government and hold tight to our state rights!!

Gov Fallin,

Please do not accept federal monies from ObamaCare or the stimulus. We MUST hold the feds accountable for overspending. Accepting these borrowed federal funds makes us guilty of doing the very thing we mandated they NOT do. Please keep your campaign promise to govern as a conservative. Do not accept borrowed money!! The power of the Fed government MUST be limited and downsized!!

Subject: Tribal Concerns Re: ACA
Date: Wednesday, November 21, 2012 10:09:05 AM

Hello Jacque:

As requested by phone yesterday, Oklahoma tribal nations want to provide meaningful input into any decisions that are made in Oklahoma regarding the ACA, especially because they are directly impacted by the outcome of decisions made.

They are wanting a Medicaid waiver to be more inclusive of their people.

Tribes and Tribal Organizations have expressed that they should be engaged to resolve issues related to the following topics:

Any decisions made regarding health insurance exchanges.

Network Adequacy – requiring all QHPs to offer contracts to all I/T/U providers with an Indian Addendum.

Essential Health Benefits –reviewing the scope and duration of services and providers covered, and offering pediatric oral and vision services in the QHP versus a separate plan.

Eligibility – identification of individuals who are eligible for special protections and provisions as AI/AN in the eligibility process and at the provider level to assure that deductibles and co-pays are waived. Utilization of existing databases or development of new databases to expedite eligibility determinations. Identifying how additional documentation will be requested and reviewed and eligibility determinations will be made when individuals are not included in approved data systems.

Enrollment – enrollment processes must accommodate not only special provision for AI/AN in Exchanges (monthly enrollment, waiver of cost sharing, exclusion of certain sources of income), but also in Medicaid, Medicaid Expansion, Child Health Insurance Programs, and Basic Health Plans, if there are any in the State.

Enrollment Assistance - carve outs for navigator contracts for the I/T/Us and other enrollment assistance funding, such as Medicaid Administrative Match (MAM).

Tribal Sponsorship – allow aggregate payment of premiums and other policies to encourage Tribal sponsorship of individuals to enroll in Exchange plans.

Outreach and Education – provide outreach and education that is culturally appropriate and assures that AI/AN know which QHPs have I/T/U providers in their networks and informs them of the special protections and provisions for AI/AN.

Call Centers – decide whether it is most appropriate to have an Indian desk to handle questions and resolve problems regarding AI/AN and I/T/Us, or whether everyone who works at a call center should receive training about Tribes in the State, the Indian health care delivery system and special provisions in the law, regulations and systems for AI/AN.

Website – ensure that the design of the website includes information specific to AI/AN and the I/T/U and is easy to access by consumers, as well as those assisting with enrollment.

Waiver of Penalties for AI/AN without Insurance -- develop the system to assure that individuals are not penalized and to communicate who is covered by this provision in the law.

Enforcement of Section 206 of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act (IHCIA) -- assure that the I/T/U is paid in a sufficient and timely way for services delivered to individuals who are enrolled in QHPs if the I/T/U is not a network provider.

Reimbursements for Waived Cost Sharing --process to assure that the I/T/U receives payment for the co-pays and deductibles that are waived for AI/AN.

Referrals through Contract Health Services (CHS) --rules and processes to assure that AI/AN who are enrolled in a QHP and referred through an I/T/U CHS program are not charged a co-pay or deductible for services they receive outside the I/T/U.

Let me know if you have any questions or need more information.

Best Regards, Sally

Date: Saturday, December 01, 2012 11:11:07 AM

#1. On Thursday, Nov. 29 the Federalism Task Force of ALEC, the conservative, free market association of state legislators UNANIMOUSLY endorsed a "no runaway convention" law similar to the one passed by the NH legislature in 2012.

This is a huge step forward for our strategy of passing such laws to empower the states and protect the Constitution!

#2 We now have an offer from the "Advance Arkansas Institute" to MATCH 50 PERCENT OF ANY DONATION we receive from an individual or business by December 6th!

The contribution is TAX DEDUCTIBLE and can be used to help to educate legislators about our strategy.
Advance Arkansas is the official Arkansas affiliate of the State Policy Network, a national network of free market think tanks.

#3 We now have just days to line up legislative sponsors in all 30 of our target states before legislative sessions begin in January.

This includes 27 states with both GOP state legislative majorities and GOP Governors or the ability to override a Governor's veto. These 27 states alone have a majority of the U.S. population. We have identified potential sponsors in a more than a dozen states but there is much work to do.

#4 We are also working with leaders in the U.S. House of Representatives on the idea of placing in the Rules package that will be adopted in January, 2013 a MADISON RULE that recognizes the authority of STATES under Article V and the 10th Amendment to limit the scope of a Convention they call for. Adoption of such a rule to prevent a runaway convention would be a powerful statement in support of protecting the Constitution and empowering states.

NOW is a critical time for action for our effort to restore a balance of state and federal power and protect our Constitution. Many state legislative sessions are short, and some don't meet at all in 2014. And the House won't vote on a Rules package again until 2015.

There are FIVE things you can do to help right now

#1 MAKE A DONATION BY THURS DEC. 6!

Consider making or asking someone you know for a tax deductible contribution to "Advance Arkansas" by Thursday December 6th so our educational effort can receive 150 percent of that amount in matching funds. You may make a donation of any amount from $25 to $25,000 or more! For information on how to send or wire a donation, email or call us.

#2 CONTACT A STATE LEGISLATOR OR MEMBER OF CONGRESS!

If you know a state legislator anywhere in America who might be interested in sponsoring or co-sponsoring a "Madison Law" to prevent a no runaway convention and empower the states to force Congress to propose an amendment, such as a balanced budget amendment, without the need for a Convention, let us know.

We can send you a list of the states where we need the most help.

If you can contact a Member of Congress or staff who would like to learn about the MADISON RULE, let us know and we can send you more information.

#3 VOLUNTEER SOME TIME NOW!

Of course we are all busy with the Holidays, but if we don't have sponsors and supporters in 27 states by the beginning of 2013 legislative sessions that begin in January, the opportunity won't come again for TWO YEARS. We can't afford to wait.

You could help us contact pro-limited government group leaders, opinion leaders, youth leaders, legislators, and staff in key states by phone or by email. There is also research and much other work to do.

#4 REACH OUT TO OTHER POTENTIAL ENDORSERS AND SUPPORTERS

Even if you have no time, you can pass this email on to others you know, especially to those whose public support you think would be helpful to our effort.

We are asking opinion leaders to ENDORSE the passage of a Madison State Law and the "Madison Initiative" effort to empower states and protect our Constitution.

THE MADISON INITIATIVE:

The Madison Initiative is a four part strategy to protect our Constitution from a runaway convention and restore a balance of state and federal power.

#1 Passage of "Madison" state laws in a majority of states with a majority to strictly limit the authority of delegates to any article V convention, and to immediately replace and subsequently punish "faithless" delegates who violate the law and their pledge to obey it.

#2 Eventual adoption of "Madison" state constitutional amendments in at least 13 states to bar consideration in that state of any amendment from a convention that the states who called for the convention did not authorize the convention to consider.

#3 Adoption of a House "Madison" Rule to bar floor consideration of any measure to refer to the states for ratification, any Amendment from an Article V Convention that the states who called for the Convention did not authorize the Convention to consider.

#4 Securing a "Madison" pledge by at least 41, and eventually 51 U.S. Senators to protect our constitution from a runaway convention and to empower the states by opposing floor consideration of any measure to refer to the states for ratification, any Amendment from an Article V Convention that the states who called for the Convention did not authorize the Convention to consider.

We call this effort which has both an educational and advocacy component the 'Madison Initiative' because James Madison believed the states had the same power as Congress to propose a specific Amendment to our Constitution when he said in Federalist #43:

"It (the Constitution) equally enables the general and the State governments to originate the amendment of errors, as they may be pointed out by the experience on one side or the other"

If states understand that they can safely limit a convention they call for to an up or down vote on a single amendment, 2/3 of the states can force Congress to propose an specific Amendment those states want WITHOUT the need to convene a Convention.

Congress fears a Convention more powerful than Congress, and has always in American history chosen to propose an Amendment states want rather than call a Convention.

If Congress and the states understand that 2/3 of the states can force Congress to propose an Amendment those states want, the entire balance of state and federal power has shifted and a path is open to new state-initiated limits on federal power.

While getting 34 states to agree on a specific amendment will never be easy here are some of the possibilities:

#1. A BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT or other some constitutional restriction on federal borrowing, spending or taxing.

#2. A ban on UNFUNDED FEDERAL MANDATES on states.

#3. A constitutional requirement that major FEDERAL REGULATIONS be approved by Congress,

#4. Deny Congress the power to tax persons for failure to make a purchase, thus REVERSING the recent decision of the U.S. Supreme Court on "OBAMACARE".

100 years ago the passage of the 16th and 17th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution began the acceleration of the growth of Federal power. In 2013, the passage of STATE laws in a the states with pro-limited government majorities could help to rein in the growth of Washington's power and put America back on a course towards more limited government.

But we need your help now!

Please donate or offer to help right away.

We must have our state sponsors in place by January and the House Rule's package will be finalized in December.

We simply can't afford to miss these unique opportunities.

Thank you!

P.S. Everyone is asking, now that the election is over, "What do we do now?" The answer, as I told Arthur Brooks from AEI yesterday, is we EMPOWER THE STATES!

The fight for free markets, limited government, and reining in Washington must be fought in every state legislature where we have a chance to win, not just inside the beltway!

Help us now to empower the states to rein in Washington. Please do what you can to help.

RE: IL's Time To NULLIFY Obamacare!

Dear Governor Henry,

I am writing to express my support for every State to NULLIFY the "Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act," otherwise known as "Obamacare," by declaring it to be unconstitutional and void within that State's borders; and to arrest any agent of the federal government who attempts to enforce Obamacare within that State.

Under Article I, Sections 8 and 10 of the U.S. Constitution, in combination with Amendment X, the American people's healthcare and any laws relating to it belong to the individual States and the people themselves, NOT to the federal government. Nowhere does the U.S. Constitution enumerate a central government power over healthcare, and the federal government is certainly given NO power to force Americans to buy it. The federal government's unconstitutional determination that Americans must purchase healthcare, government-run or otherwise, must be overturned, but it is doubtful -- even with all of the hard efforts in Congress -- that it will be fully reversed at the national level.

Under Article VI, Section 2, since Congress passed a law that was not made in pursuance of the U.S. Constitution, and since the wording of the Constitution is in fact "to the contrary," the States are not bound by it. Therefore, the States MUST fulfill their roles as protectors of the Constitutional rights of their citizens, and interpose themselves between their citizens and the federal government; as Thomas Jefferson said, "Whenever the general government assumes undelegated powers... a nullification of the act is the rightful remedy." I'm counting on you to SUPPORT the nullification of Obamacare within the States, and with the rest of the country, I will be watching your actions on this matter closely. Thank you.

While Washington is sworn to do it's job in defending the Constitutional principles upon which this Republic was founded, when they fail, it is up to us to work on a local level to preserve our rights and freedoms.

Obamacare essentially has created a monopoly for the criminal pharmaceutical cartel, which has delivered to the American people poisonous drug after poisonous drug. Some of us would rather choose what kind of medicine we give our families and we prefer alternatives to standard health care.

The American people hate Obamacare. As I'm sure you're aware, recent news reports have highlighted the many job layoffs that companies have been forced to implement because of this terrible law.

Dear Governor Fallin:

I want to encourage you to stand up for the Constitution and for the citizens of your State by refusing to implement an Obamacare health insurance exchange.

The American people hate Obamacare. As I'm sure you're aware, recent news reports have highlighted the many job layoffs that companies have been forced to implement because of this terrible law.

If enough Governors refuse to implement the state-level insurance exchanges, Obamacare will collapse under its own weight.

Stand firm for America and for your State! Draw a line in the sand and refuse to implement Obamacare.

The American people support you on this, and I will pray for you to have the strength to carry this out!

Sincerely,

Mary Nguyen

Dear Governor Fallin:

Obamacare is a Trojan horse that is designed to unionize America's health care system.

The violence perpetrated by the public sector union thugs in Michigan this month will spread to every state in the union if you do not oppose and defeat Obamacare.

You should refuse to set up an Obamacare health exchange in your state in order to prevent this.

Imagine a mother taking her child to the hospital and getting punched in the face by a union goon, because the doctors and nurses are on strike and demanding more money from the taxpayers.

I believe that type of violence and coercion is coming to every state unless the Governors unite to oppose and defeat Obamacare.

Do the right thing! Refuse to set up an Obamacare health exchange in your state!

Dear Governor Fallin:

Please investigate whether Barack Hussein Obama is eligible to run for President of the United States from your state.

And, if he is not, or if he refuses to prove that he is, eligible, please remove his name from November's Presidential election ballot in your state.

The U.S. Constitution is very clear on who may run for, and serve as, President of the United States. And, to date, no one has conducted a complete investigation into whether Mr. Obama meets those qualifications.

A recent, independent, law enforcement investigation has determined that the birth certificate that Mr. Obama produced last year may be a forgery. It is also quite likely that his registration with the Selective Service System is a fraud as well.

The American people need to know that the Constitution is being followed, and that our elections are fair.

Please, for the good of our nation, conduct your own investigation into this matter, and TAKE ACTION.

Governor Brad Henry

RE: It's Time To NULLIFY Obamacare!

Dear Governor Henry,

I am writing to express my support for every State to NULLIFY the "Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act," otherwise known as "Obamacare," by declaring it to be unconstitutional and void within that State's borders; and to arrest any agent of the federal government who attempts to enforce Obamacare within that State.

Under Article I, Sections 8 and 10 of the U.S. Constitution, in combination with Amendment X, the American people's healthcare and any laws relating to it belong to the individual States and the people themselves, NOT to the federal government. Nowhere does the U.S. Constitution enumerate a central government power over healthcare, and the federal government is certainly given NO power to force Americans to buy it. The federal government's unconstitutional determination that Americans must purchase healthcare, government-run or otherwise, must be overturned, but it is doubtful -- even with all of the hard efforts in Congress -- that it will be fully reversed at the national level.

Under Article VI, Section 2, since Congress passed a law that was not made in pursuance of the U.S. Constitution, and since the wording of the Constitution is in fact "to the contrary," the States are not bound by it. Therefore, the States MUST fulfill their roles as protectors of the Constitutional rights of their citizens, and interpose themselves between their citizens and the federal government; as Thomas Jefferson said, "Whenever the general government assumes undelegated powers... a nullification of the act is the rightful remedy." I'm counting on you to SUPPORT the nullification of Obamacare within the States, and with the rest of the country, I will be watching your actions on this matter closely. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Garland D Cox

Dear Governor Fallin:

I want to encourage you to stand up for the Constitution and for the citizens of your State by refusing to implement an Obamacare health insurance exchange.

The American people hate Obamacare. As I'm sure you're aware, recent news reports have highlighted the many job layoffs that companies have been forced to implement because of this terrible law.

If enough Governors refuse to implement the state-level insurance exchanges, Obamacare will collapse under its own weight.

Be a hero for America and for your State! Draw a line in the sand and refuse to implement Obamacare.

The American people are with you on this and I am personally praying for you!

Sincerely,
Ralph Busch

I want to encourage you to stand up for the Constitution and for the citizens of your State by refusing to implement an Obamacare health insurance exchange.

The American people hate Obamacare. As I'm sure you're aware, recent news reports have highlighted the many job layoffs that companies have been forced to implement because of this terrible law.

If enough Governors refuse to implement the state-level insurance exchanges, Obamacare will collapse under its own weight.

Be a hero for America and for your State! Draw a line in the sand and refuse to implement Obamacare.

The American people are with you on this and I am personally praying for you!

Dear Governor Fallin:

Obamacare is a Trojan horse that is designed to unionize America's health care system.

The violence perpetrated by the public sector union thugs in Michigan this month will spread to every state in the union if you do not oppose and defeat Obamacare.

You should refuse to set up an Obamacare health exchange in your state in order to prevent this.

Imagine a mother taking her child to the hospital and getting punched in the face by a union goon, because the doctors and nurses are on strike and demanding more money from the taxpayers.

I believe that type of violence and coercion is coming to every state unless the Governors unite to oppose and defeat Obamacare.

Do the right thing! Refuse to set up an Obamacare health exchange in your state!

Sincerely,

I am qery upset to hear that oklahoma want to secceed from the union .. in the past this would be a call to arms.. I am a democrat by choice and proud to have made that choice based on the behavior of the republican party.this secession b.s. is just another reason. We teach our children to be honorable in sporting competition but then your party acts like idiots wgen. You loose. Shame on you..for me to see ghe news report that we want to secceed. Has made me mad as hell. I along with hundreds of thousands like m_yself don't see obamacare as a loss but a chance to fix healthcsare but you clearly don't plan to work towards making it a good thing ..I will donate all resources and rally as a performing artist thousand s against the agenda of splitting this state any further.. we will. Se a democrat back in power as soon as you vacate the job you choose not to do. Shame on you ..we are oklahome. Dems and gop togather ..you need to remember that before you bite off more than you can chew.. obama won. Get over it. Make an effort to work as a bi partisan or get out of our capitol as you don't deserve the title of govenor of this fine but confused state. I'm gonna go throw up now I used to think you were a halfway decent person ..but as before many times in my life I was wrong. ..you are a sore looser that can't play fair with others .. in school we called you bullies now I won't lower myself to call you what we @all people like you now. We will not secceed we will not let you .. we fought for this union and so many died before. Please don't. Destroy what we worked so hadt to achieve just because you are a sore looser like most of your party.

Dear Mr. Dietz:

I am responding to your request for more information about Governor Fallin's efforts concerning the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, sometimes referred to as "Obama Care".

Last November, Oklahomans overwhelmingly approved a ballot initiative stating that the federal government cannot force our private citizens to purchase health insurance. Governor Fallin agrees that a federal mandate is unconstitutional and wrong. Therefore, she and Attorney General Scott Pruitt added Oklahoma to the list of states that are now challenging the President's health care law in court. I have included below the text from a press release sent from our office regarding this legislation earlier this year.

If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Sincerely,

Keili McEwen
Director of Public Affairs
Office of Governor Mary Fallin

PRESS RELEASE TEXT:

Governor Mary Fallin Issues Statement on Anniversary of Federal Health Care Law Passage

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin issued the following statement today regarding the one year anniversary of the passage of the federal health care law. While in Congress, Fallin voted against the bill.

She supports the national effort to repeal and replace the law with legislation as well as the legal effort to have the bill struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court. Oklahoma is one of the many states that filed a legal challenge to the federal law.

Fallin's statement:

"A year ago today, President Obama signed into law one of the most ill-conceived pieces of legislation to have ever come from Washington, D.C.: the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. 'ObamaCare,' as it has come to be known, is both an assault on our constitutional liberties and a burden on our already struggling economy.

"In Oklahoma, the law stands to impose approximately $441 million in unfunded mandates on our state government at a time when we are already struggling to balance our budget and pull our economy out of a recession. And unlike the federal government, we can't print money or borrow it from China – those funds will come directly out of other government programs in Oklahoma.

“I was proud to be one of the 65 percent of Oklahomans who voted for and helped to pass an amendment to the Oklahoma Constitution designed to block the ‘individual mandate’ contained within the federal health care law. As governor, I continue to offer my full support to our attorney general, who is leading our legal challenge against ObamaCare, as well as the national effort to repeal and replace the law.”

Dear Friends:

Right now we are in one of the most important times in the history of our nation. This weekend culminates a battle for the future of our nation. It has been described by Pierre Bynum as a "Mount Carmel-style Prayer Confrontation" (Read 1 Kings 18:16-40).

Though it has been clouded by political rhetoric and media misrepresentation, at stake is whether the government will be able to force you to take actions that directly violates your constitutionally protected religious freedoms.

Please fast and pray that every attempt to transform America into a Godless nation will be defeated!

Friday: 140 Religious Freedom Rallies Scheduled to Protest HHS Mandate

Friday individuals gathered to "RALLY in defense of religious freedom and STAND UP against the Obama administration's HHS mandate at federal buildings in cities across the country." The mandate, first announced by the Department of Health and Human Services in August of 2011, will require scores of religious employers to provide employees with health plans that cover abortion-inducing drugs, contraceptives, and sterilization--services that directly contradict many of the employers' religious beliefs. The Becket Fund hosted a rally in front of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services building from 12:00-1:00 PM.

Info about the religious freedom implications of the HHS mandate: <http://ow.ly/9Q9UB>

Yesterday: Atheist Rally on National Mall in Washington, DC

March 24th, from 10:00 AM-6:00 PM, thousands of people were expected to gather on the National Mall to attend the "Reason Rally," an event organized by many of the nation's largest secular and anti-faith organizations. Event sponsors include the American Atheists, the Secular Coalition for America, the Freedom From Religion Foundation, and the Military Association of Atheists and Freethinkers. Speakers will include Richard Dawkins; Herb Silverman, President of the American Atheists; Annie Laurie Gaylor, Co-President of the Freedom From Religion Foundation; and Jessica Ahlquist, a high school student who recently succeeded in a lawsuit that forced a Rhode Island public school to remove a prayer mural that had hung for almost fifty years.

More information about the event is available here: <http://reasonrally.org>.

Today: Family Research Council Prayer Rally at Christ our Shepherd Church and the Supreme Court -

Ask those in your network, wherever they may be, to be praying with us from now through the time that the Supreme Court will issue its ruling, sometime in June, but especially Sunday, March 25th thru Wednesday, March 28th. This is the greatest prayer challenge of its kind in our lifetime.

The Supreme Court will being hearings on Obama Care tomorrow. Per Pierre Bynam - Obamacare - The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) - is binding law right now, to be implemented in stages. Rules are still being promulgated by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and it will be fully implemented unless either both Houses of Congress pass a bill to repeal it and the President signs it into law, or the U.S. Supreme Court rules it unconstitutional.

Blessings,

TOPIC: Videoclips 12

(revised 15 March 2012)

Did not Mitt Romney learn anything as a quasi-deacon in the moralistic Mormon church he grew up in and is affiliated with? So why did he so change his position from adamantly being abortion-choice . . . to [supposedly and probably-deceitfully] becoming "pro-life?" - on something as theologically and Biblically basic as whether or not to murder non-born human womb-babes by committing and not performing abortion-homicide? Why was he even abortion-choice to begin with at all?

It's as if true-Jew Saint Paul, and formerly one duce of a devoutly-dogmatic Jewish-Pharisee Saul, had said, "I never was for G-d but instead was always against Him from the beginning, because I always hated His guts and cursed Him as much as I could whenever I could. But, later on, I saw the light, and changed my mind, so now I do not curse Him as much anymore."

The GOP's RNC, and state affiliates thereof, supporting Romney instead of Gingrich, along with "jewish" and non-Jewish network-media subversives disparaging, discounting, and discrediting Newt Gingrich, reminds me of the nazis in the movie Raiders of the Lost Ark digging in the wrong place nearby where the Ark of the Covenant had been buried.

The incessant and harshly-dogmatic, satanic mantras of pro-Romney-pontificating cowardly-"conservative," RINO-consortive, radio-network-talkshow wrongheads, along with bassackward-imentality Romney-endorsing GOP governors and senators (in close cohorts with republicrats who sadistically desire to bankrupt the Social-Security-dependent poor by Flat-Tax mandate and thus force them to lose IRS low-income cutoff and Standard Deductions so as to start paying IRS taxes) . . . belligerently blattering out that:

"all republicans will support whoever the only-for-the-rich, waffling and windsniffing, homogay-inclusive, Massachusetts-insurance-mandate, actually pro-abortion-choice, GOP presidential candidate is"

or:

"all republicans (and enough Obama-loyalist-democrats and mistrusting-GOP-candidates independents) will eventually all rally around Romney" . .

. . . are deceptively fraudulent presumptions of irresponsibly-absurd defeatist propaganda.

This webpage author is a bonafide 'born-again' Christian evangelical, who would [of course] indeed vote for solid-on-sexual-social-issues Newt Gingrich, but will definitely vote 3rd party (probably aligning with the Constitution Party if Mitt Romney becomes the GOP presidential candidate in 2012 (no matter who Romney chooses for VP running mate).

Limbaugh-supportive and yet-loyal new and older advertisers - plus who for and what those Rush-supportive advertisers advertise regarding company products and services - deserve your meager and limited purchase money, and will obviously make best moral use of it for the sake of quite-qualified-to-become-President Newt Gingrich.

Boycott the sponsors who dropped and will not reinstate advertising for Limbaugh, who would take your purchase funds and give them to manipulative Obama/Romney media conspirators and diabolical election-shenanigans devil-Obama subversives.

While perusing the Tube, and encountering Obama, it behooves the sane and rational to mute the sound with the remote control button to silently watch the half-negroid, born-in-Kenyan/lying-about-Hawaii deceiver, who - with insidious cunning craftiness and weaselword satanspeak - impudently rants on while taking House-Republicans-based credit for what he and his demoncrats have no right to steal credit from, promising betterment as things actually get worse, brown-nosing confusion-and-consternation-causing sexist feminists, cowering to arrogantly-incendiary homogay perverts, patronizing Israeli Jews for politically self-aggrandizing purposes, threatening sexual purists, fanning the flames of retaliatory fundamentalist-orthodox catholi-protestants as gasoline prices disasterously inflate relating to the wildly-fluctuating yoyo-like Stock Market.

WILL lying-[Mombasa-Kenyan-not-Hawaiian-born] Barack Obama brag about all he himself (allegedly) along with his democrat cohorts (like filthy-mouthed guttermind and bonafide-bunghole Bill Maher and even goof Jon Stewart) have done to keep America going during the past year? Will he take credit for what he alone and his activist supporters have supposedly done to [allegedly] keep all Christians and Jews from not going bankrupt, loosing their residences and jobs, and dying off?

Will the socialistic Chicago Agitator and ACORN ballot-box-stuffer take credit for dependable sunlight and gravity, lack of planetary destruction by asteroid, absence of volcanic eruption, and no devastating earthquakes in major cities?

For what - in fact - House Republicans have done to constrain him and his demonutzos, which GOP has facilitated continuously-smooth law-and-order operation of the country?

Will Barack "Barry Soetoro" Hussein Obama remind us of how Pelosi's/Reid's Obamascare will force the impoverished to purchase health insurance under his Individual Mandate, and tyrannize doomed health-insurance companies to insure everyone with preexisting conditions (which many of such irresponsible crippled were to blame for handicapping themselves)?

Has Obama opened up America's fossil-fuel resources and brought the price of gasoline down to $1.99 a gallon like it was before . . . or will he continue to capitulate to his waffling Energy Secretary Chu (and others like him who probably want everyone to "save energy" by repeatedly turning off the lights and then turning them on again to burn out light bulbs quicker and thus waste more money) and shelve gasoline engines without first putting something adequate enough its place (and we're not talking green companies making no profit with wind generators that don't turn on when there is no wind, and pathetically-weak photovoltaic cells which product little juice when it is cloudy and none at night - all for the purpose of saving some endangered locust or earthworm per the insane hallucinations of nutcase environmentalists?

Has he enraged Al Qaeda operatives by conspiring to murder Osama bin Laden without trial - unlike what George W. Bush did against Saddam Hussein?

Has Obama snubbed Netanyahu and both deceitfully patronized yet inhibitorily worked against both Israeli security and settlements by imposing pass-the-buck war-mongering . . . dangerously disrupting the status quo in Egypt and Libya?

Has Obama put two inferior-gender, pro-abortion-choice, life-term feminists on the High Court, and lauded Planned-Parenthood abortionists - thus co-conspiring to murder scads of non-born womb babes . . . far worse than Rush inferring that contraceptives-for-fornication-insinuating females-sterilization-accommodating anti-women's-health Sandra Fluke was (by probable sordidly-lewd and lascivious intention) what he rightly inferred?

Is his intent with discontinuing 'Don't-Ask-Don't-Tell' to promote homoperversity - thus weakening our our Obama-defunded military. . . .or instead to expose them as the pink-triangle-reminiscent, concentration-camp-deserving, disgusting sinners and anti-heterosexual harassers they actually are?

Read the informative transcript available at breakingnews.topcities.com to find out!

Being that Americans already have "socialized medicine" and "government-run healthcare" with Medicare (which should begin at age 60 and not age 65, concordant with . . .

Leviticus 27:7 And if the person is sixty years old and upward, then your valuation for a male shall be fifteen shekels, and for a female ten shekels.

Second Chronicles 11:21 [NON-porn, NON-prostitute?] Rehoboam loved Maacah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and concubines (he took eighteen wives and sixty concubines, and had twenty-eight sons and sixty daughters).

First Timothy 5:9 Let a widow be enrolled if she is not less than sixty years of age, having been the wife of one husband

. . . so-called Obamacare (or, better put: Forced-Individual-Mandate ObamaScare) should be replaced with what Alan Grayson suggested: Cradle-to-Grave Medicare.

To force individuals to buy any commercial good or service (such as a food item or vehicle) with non-free-market rationing regulations (as ObamaScare does, with IRS tax penalty for those who fill out Form 1040) is obviously non-constitutional.

Should Romney and even Santorum drop OUT of the GOP presidential-candidate race - for the sake of Newt Gingrich?

Should Romney and even Santorum stay IN the GOP presidential-candidate race - for the sake of Newt Gingrich - up to a brokered 2012 GOP National Convention in Tampa?

IF Mitt Romney and even interruptively-rude rookie-hotshot Rick Santorum suspended their presidential-candidate campaigns now, would not all of Obama's mega-funded vitriolic and venomous anti-Gingrich network media overwhelmingly attack and wear out Gingrich alone?

It is clear that Romney is a verified handsome but cultically-mormonic, deceptive and Mandate-imposing, RINO-endorsed, windsniffing-waffler, blatantly-then-undercover-pro-choice loser (as seen in <http://videoclips12.tripod.com>) . . . assuredly not able himself to take on Kenyan-not-Hawaiian-born Obama (exposed in <http://lyingaround.tripod.com>) . . . in victorious debate, nor get the support of somewhat-disillusioned Obamanites nor disappointed Independents nor even moderates, and especially not genuinely-Christian-and-fervently-activist moral-social-issues Republicans (who would rather vote Constitution Party and let the chips fall where they would if Romney got to be the GOP nominee).

But, as the open-minded, non-prejudiced, and carefully-attentive reader can detect by the following hotlinked videoclip, Rick Santorum is another one who (like Obama and Romney) has explicitly stated that the Scriptural dogma and doctrines of the Catholic Church will in no way influence his public-policy decisions as a potential president . . . thus exposing Santorum as an inept, snobbishly-arrogant, impulsive-comments novice who has NOT the crucial experience, social-issues track-and-voting record, nor professionalism which - in stark contrast - Mr. Gingrich certainly has.

As one can obviously hear in the videoclip, Santorum accuses Iranian leadership of "discriminating against women and gays."

And gays?

Should not homogays indeed be non-inclusively discriminated against - no matter what type of government?

The facist-nazi Adolf Hitler ordered that pink triangles (his version of eliminating 'Don't-Ask-Don't-Tell') be put on homosexuals during the 30s or 40s and confined in concentration camps, plus sent his Gestapo to suddenly execute homo-bullyboy brownshirt nazi thugs who got Hitler into power (which noble anti-homosexual purge the Biblically-based German Christian church of course did not object to).

WHY does Santorum condemn Iranian leadership about women being "abused" and "oppressed?" Does not pseudo-"catholic" Santorum believe that nuns should have the holy habit of being dressed modestly in the equivalent of burkas and hijabs?

IF Iranian (and other Middle-Eastern islamic-fundamentalist) women truly thought that they were being "abused" and "oppressed" by voluntarily choosing to accomodate to the Koranic-interpretation general-consensus dresscode of being dressed very modestly in public view on warm days, WHY do such women (emigrating into the United States, and coming under the power and authority of non-sharia American law-enforcement) still choose to be dressed modestly in burkas and hijabs when in general public view on warm days?

Do they not see what their hedonist porn-in-motion bikini-clad harlot-sight neighbors are mis-wearing as they shamelessly and defiantly flaunt loose long hair, naked arms bared with sleeveslessness, nude legs bared with shortened skirts and shorts, and soxless feet in flipflop sandals?

Hey, like all other women in America, each fundamentalist-islamic woman has a brain of her own to be aware of what is going around her and what her potentially-licituous options are, a mouth of her own to call 911 if harassed or molested by extremist-to-them dictates or dogma, and two feet of her own to escape to a police station - to be dressed however she wants in accord with the liberty and freedom of American fashions and styles.

Moreover, fundamentalist-muslim women are quite capable of depriving fundamentalist-muslim men of sexual submissiveness if such women thought that dresscode-concordant fundamentalist-islamic men deserved such divorce-and-alienation-causing non-reproductive frigidity. And who needs men when they could sodomize with "liberated" american women as despicable and disgusting hell-bound lesbians?

So why don't American muslims mis-dress like the other lewd-exhibitionist pervertesses around them?

Why does Santorum castigate Iranian men and women for dressing modestly, while pandering to "gays" to not discriminate against them?

Who is the true "evangelical-Christian" "conservative?"

Is it not Newt?

Santorum criticizes Iran for being anti-homogay

Most of us have heard the vow, or at least promise, required to be stated by witnesses "on the stand" who are to be interrogated by both prosecuting and defense attorneys in courtrooms:

Do you promise to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?

.. . . to which the proper reply is something like:

"I do" or "Yes."

Such intentions are congruent with the Scripture references:

Exodus 20:16 You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.

Deuteronomy 5:20 Neither shall you bear false witness against your neighbor.

Matthew 19:18 He said to him, "Which?" And Jesus said, "You shall not kill, You shall not commit adultery, You shall not steal, You shall not bear false witness . . ."

Mark 10:19 You know the commandments: "Do not kill, Do not commit adultery, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Do not defraud, Honor your father and mother."

Luke 18:20 You know the commandments: "Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honor your father and mother."

Colossians 3:9 Do not lie to one another, seeing that you have put off the old nature with its practices.

Even telling a partial lie: "You shall not die" [completely?; all at once?] - as The Tempter did to inferior-gender Eve in The Garden of Eden - is exposed and disallowed by the above-stated verses.

Antagonistic reaction and retort is not expected for kindly correction which is justified:

First Corinthians 4:21 What do you wish? Shall I come to you with a rod, or with love in a spirit of gentleness?

Second Corinthians 10:1 I, Paul, myself entreat you, by the meekness and gentleness of Christ-I who am humble when face to face with you, but bold to you when I am away!

Galatians 5:22 But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, Galatians 5:23 gentleness, self-control; against such there is no law.
Galatians 6:1 Brethren, if a man is overtaken in any trespass, you who are spiritual should restore him in a spirit of gentleness. Look to yourself, lest you too be tempted.

First Timothy 6:11 But as for you, man of God, shun all this; aim at righteousness, godliness, faith, love, steadfastness, gentleness.

Second Timothy 2:25 correcting his opponents with gentleness. God may perhaps grant that they will repent and come to know the truth

First Peter 3:15 but in your hearts reverence Christ as Lord. Always be prepared to make a defense to any one who calls you to account for the hope that is in you, yet do it with gentleness and reverence

However, when the criticism is unjust, then the opposite reaction is to be expected:

Titus 1:13 This testimony is true. Therefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith

It does no one any good for a critic to be quick to condemn judgmentally:

Ecclesiastes 5:2 Be not rash with your mouth, nor let your heart be hasty to utter a word before God, for God is in heaven, and you upon earth; therefore let your words be few.

Matthew 7:1 Judge not, that you be not judged.

Luke 6:37 Judge not, and you will not be judged; condemn not, and you will not be condemned; forgive, and you will be forgiven.

James 1:19 Know this, my beloved brethren. Let every man be quick to hear, slow to speak, slow to anger.
James 3:2 For we all make many mistakes, and if any one makes no mistakes in what he says he is a perfect man, able to bridle the whole body also.

And a potentially inflammatory situation is exacerbated by being legalistically nitpicky about something of someone:

Matthew 12:7 And if you had known what this means, 'I desire mercy, and not sacrifice,' you would not have condemned the guiltless.
Matthew 23:24 You blind guides, straining out a gnat and swallowing a camel!

Mark 7:6 And he said to them, "Well did Isaiah prophesy of you hypocrites, as it is written, 'This people honors me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.

Mark 7:7 in vain do they worship me, teaching as doctrines the precepts of men.' "

... especially when one does not have all the facts:

Proverbs 18:17 He who states his case first seems right, until the other comes and examines him.

... and accuses with malicious arrogance:

Psalms 17:10 They close their hearts to pity; with their mouths they speak arrogantly.

Psalms 73:3 For I was envious of the arrogant, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.

Psalms 94:4 They pour out their arrogant words, they boast, all the evildoers.

Psalms 101:5 Him who slanders his neighbor secretly I will destroy. The man of haughty looks and arrogant heart I will not endure.

Psalms 140:5 Arrogant men have hidden a trap for me, and with cords they have spread a net, by the wayside they have set snares for me.

Proverbs 16:5 Every one who is arrogant is an abomination to the Lord; be assured, he will not go unpunished.

Proverbs 21:24 'Scoffer' is the name of the proud, haughty man who acts with arrogant pride.

Isaiah 10:12 When the Lord has finished all his work on Mount Zion and on Jerusalem he will punish the arrogant boasting of the king of Assyria and his haughty pride.

Isaiah 13:11 I will punish the world for its evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; I will put an end to the pride of the arrogant, and lay low the haughtiness of the ruthless.

Habakkuk 2:5 Moreover, wine is treacherous; the arrogant man shall not abide. His greed is as wide as Sheol like death he has never enough. He gathers for himself all nations, and collects as his own all peoples."

Malachi 4:1 "For, hey, the Day comes, burning like an oven, when all the arrogant and all evildoers will be stubble; the day that comes shall burn them up," says the Lord of hosts, "so that it will leave them neither root nor branch."

First Corinthians 4:19 But I will come to you soon, if the Lord wills, and I will find out not the talk of these arrogant people but their power.

First Corinthians 5:2 And you are arrogant! Ought you not rather to mourn? Let him who has done this be removed from among you.

First Corinthians 13:5 it is not arrogant or rude. Love does not insist on its own way; it is not irritable or resentful

Second Timothy 3:2 For men will be lovers of self, lovers of money, proud, arrogant, abusive, disobedient to their parents, ungrateful, unholy

Titus 1:7 For a bishop, as God's steward, must be blameless; he must not be arrogant or quick-tempered or a drunkard or violent or greedy for gain.

It thus behooves each of us to be patience and search out all the facts before we utter our final assessment:

Ecclesiastes 7:8 Better is the end of a thing than its beginning; and the patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.

First Corinthians 11:33 So then, my brethren, when you come together . . .
wait for one another
First Corinthians 14:31 For you can all prophesy one by one, so that all may learn and all be encouraged

Revelation 12:10 And I heard a loud voice in heaven, saying, "Now the salvation and the power and the kingdom of our God and the authority of his Christ have come, for the accuser of our brethren has been thrown down, who accuses them day and night before our God.

In any case, it is interesting to note the reaction of King David when confronted by the actually-having-occurred potentially-Divinely-lethal accusations of Nathan the Prophet in the Old Testament of the Judeo-Christian (Old-&-New-Testament) Holy Bible pertaining to the actually-having-occurred event of David indirectly-but-directly conspiring to murder Uriah the Hittite after the actually-having-occurred phenomenon of David committing adultery with murdered-Uriah's beautiful exhibitionist wife Bathsheba (who was actually bathing - probably nude - in the general public view of David).

Moreover, there are ample indications that the Christians-persecutor-pharisee trying-to-please-God Saul actually did see the Light on the Damascus road according to the New-Testament book of Acts which (or, better yet, Who) definitively and genuinely changed him into completely-opposite-intentions-and-actions still-trying-to-please-God Saint Paul.

As Ralph Waldo Emerson's words state in Ralph Vaughn William's Sea Symphony:

Yet soul be sure
The first intent remains
And shall be carried out.

The contest of GOP presidential candidates would be more interesting, less confusing, and better for the country as a whole, if (at the time of this writing) both non-commander-in-chief-type mere-economics-professor Ron Paul and yet-pro-choice/homogay-nondiscriminating tricky-semantics, Dole/McCain-retread Mitt Romney and even less-qualified/less-professional-than-Gingrich Rick Santorum dropped out of the race and left Newt Gingrich to compete against Barack Hussein Obama for the 2012 Election.

Romney-Endorser John McCain's videoclip about Non-Discrimination for Homogays is found at the beginning of:

<http://pseudomarrriage.tripod.com/sodomarrriage.htm>

It is politically advantageous for Obominites to support Mitt Romney as the GOP candidate for President in 2012, because they know that IF Romney does become the GOP presidential nominee, Icorigin (and his growing number of followers!) will vote 3rd party [ relating to <http://cdccmn2.tripod.com/atheism.htm> ]

So, both Kenyan-and-not-Hawaiian-born Barack Hussein "Barry-Soetoro" Obama and Mitt Romney are purported to allegedly be "christians?"

Below are some Bible verses or Scripturally-based statements which you will probably NEVER hear either one quote or agree with:

- (1) Jesus, the Son of God, was never created. He always existed back throughout eternity.
- (2) Homogays and homosodomites will not inherit the kingdom of God. [ Explore <http://antihomogays.tripod.com> ]
- (3) Jesus is The Way, The Truth, and The Life. NO one (including mormons and muslims) comes to the Father except through Him.
- (4) No true Christian allows any woman to teach or have authority over men; they are to keep silent.
- (5) Women will be saved through childbearing, instead of committing (and not "performing") abortion-homicide or sterilizing themselves into extinction using contraceptives.
- (6) No harlot fornicator nor adulteress engaging in an [immoral] "affair" will go to Heaven.
- (7) Jesus Christ, the Son of God, created planet Earth and everything in the entire Universe.
- (8) The Holy Father, Jesus the Son of God, and the Holy Spirit are One Triune God.
- (9) Those who do not believe that Jesus Christ's death on a cross cancels the full penalty of all their sins will be forever tormented with the flames of The Lake of Fire in Outer Darkness.

WHAT do credo-Catholic Newt and Callista believe?

Fascinating it is that the Mormon Church bypasses 'separation of "church" and state' by funding governmentally-enforced legislative and judicial efforts in California to prevent same-gender "marriages" - yet Romney (a cultic mormon who presumes that Jesus, the Son of God, was created by his Elohim father and Virgin-Mary mother, and whose brother is Lucifer/Satan) has declared in a videoclip at <http://videoclips12.tripod.com> that his mormonic church doctrine will not interfere in his 'separation-of-"church"-and-state' public policies for homogay inclusiveness and refusal to discriminate against homogays.

OVERHEARD?

Guy 1: Gonna vote for Romney?

Guy 2: Heck No! Why would a guy be adamantly pro-choice for abortion-homicide in Massachusetts, and accommodate Planned Parenthood in that state, but then now pretend to be pro-life - on such a basic religiously-related issue - when he said that the goody-goody moral stances of his quasi-cultic mormon "church" would not affect his public-policy decisions as Prez?

Guy 1: So you support Obama?

Guy 2: I never said that, did I?

Guy 1: Well obviously, if you don't vote for Romney, you'll be throwing away your vote to Obama.

Guy 2: No I won't. I won't vote for either one, so neither gets my vote - for or against. I'll probably patriotically vote 3rd party, rather than merely abstain and not vote at all.

Guy 1: Don't you support any of the GOP presidential candidates - imperfect as they are - like Ronald Reagan, who divorced his first wife and brown-nosed the sexist feminists by appointing Sandra Day O'Connor to the High Court?

After all, did not Newt put bathing-exhibitionist Bathsheba under duress by ordering her up to his royal castle and getting her pregnant without first marrying her, then set up her husband Uriah to be murdered who then was indeed murdered, for which criminal act he never ever repented?

Guy 2: Callista knows.

If the November 2012 Election choice came down to Obama vs. Gingrich, who do you think so-called "moderate" [republican] RINOs would vote for? You know in your heart that most of them would not vote for Obama, but instead (albeit perhaps fearfully and reluctantly) vote for Gingrich.

Guy 1: Got a point there.

And if genuine ultra-orthodox Christian Evangelicals and Jews (not to mention fundamentalist Islamic) lose respect for Romney and consider him a waffling and internally-dishonest wind-sniffer to simply get votes, he probably would lose to charismatic Obama who has cunningly convinced Americans that "things are gradually improving but more time is needed for really-positive improvement" - being that Romney would remind such confused voters of defeated compromisers H.W. Bush (who lost to Clinton in '92 when Icorigin voted for Howard Phillips of the Constitution Party, Bob Dole (who also lost to Clinton in '96 when Icorigin again voted for Howard Phillips of the Constitution Party, and McCain/Palin in 2008 (when Icorigin voted for the Prez and VP candidates of the Constitution Party once again).

Dear Kaleb,

There is too much to the real story behind the volatile Middle East events to fit in WAM's prior alert. It's frustrating that ever escalating indicators of Obama's danger to our nation's future stand in contrast to his ongoing high poll ratings (the vital topic of a forthcoming Election Analysis.)

To keep our attention and actions on real issues NOW is vital!

- What's the missing in action Commander in Chief up to while our embassies are stormed? Dashing from the Letterman show to a Beyonce campaign fundraiser! On TV Obama praised "auto workers and single moms," before chatting with Dave about how Muslim leaders need to stand with America. As 1 former State Department official asked: Are TV talk shows a new replacements for Presidential addresses in a crisis? Egypt's new President has now uttered a word against the violent protests - and U.S. property is under attack across the entire Middle East while Obama parties at $40,000 a plate fundraisers!
- Now is no time to get diverted by supposed leaks of Romney's candid take on Obama supporters. That's their game - to divert attention. Meanwhile, there's no comment by Obama about the 51 American soldiers recently killed by Afghanistan's "friendly" forces! Right now Obama and his media minions would like U.S. voters to forget there even is a Middle East. Let's not play their game!
- The surest way to defeat Obama's reelection edge is to continue in-depth exposure of the Middle East debacle currently unfolding! On September 9, Obama's AP mouth-pieces bragged (to divert from the question "Are you better off than you were 4 years ago?") how much safer Americans since he took office. Now national security is suddenly a hot topic. Let's keep it that way!
- All of US who want Obama out before it's too late have a window of opportunity to expose the depth of his lies and the scope of his failure in the President's primary Constitutional duty of national defense. Sworn to protect the U.S. at home and abroad, his apathetic disinterest in 33 (count them!) uprisings against US around the world this past week should be enough to wake up some sleep walking voters. Let's keep this in attention - with early voting in crucial Ohio starting OCTOBER 2.
- Help expose shocking facts (below) of crumbling U.S. security abroad far and wide. Obama uses social media like wildfire to spread his lies and promises. Spreading the word of what mainstream media hides is up to US. Don't underestimate your impact.
Share contents of this vital update via emails, social sites and blogs!
Our future rests on the vote of every Independent who is still in the undecided column!
- On the domestic front, you'll find 2 quick easy ways to make a difference. Take action on these smart strategies. They cost nothing, take little time and have solid impact - when enough of US follow through.

Help expose the Truth about Election "social" issues

Dear Kaleb,

Wake Up America movement initiated the summer of 2008, as a network dedicated to restoring Constitutional government through elimination of corruption, waste and fraud. As such, we have never editorialized on "social issues." However, distortion of these issues to misinform and misdirect the public's attention has become a major strategy of the Obama re-election effort. So it must be addressed. Read through these clarifying bullet points with the straight facts below. Sadly, with this historic election less than a week away, many voters have been so misled on these issues that many Obama supporters do NOT even know what they are really voting for! It's a tragedy to consider how many votes may be cast by those ill-informed due to deceptive media talking points and Obama campaign ads.

We urge you to share these corrections to the bogus campaign record through every means you have available. People who vote for Obama at least deserve to understand the real choice they are making and the consequences it will have. Underneath the economic and international issues we face, it all comes down to this: Do our rights come from government or - as Paul Ryan recently quoted Thomas Jefferson - do they come from nature and God? The foundation of the Obama administration - and its intents to "move forward" are all based on government as the ultimate authority in our lives. Not integrity, not "choice" and certainly not any sane version of morality. In their place, if Obama remains in office, all of US and our beliefs will be transcended by the White House Executive authority. If history serves, isn't that why our forebearers started the American revolution to begin with?!

The unburied and undistorted facts about this campaign's so-called social issues:

- The reversal of Roe vs. Wade is not a real election issue at this time. Even those who wish it so must know (with the current Supreme Court) that isn't happening. However, fear of that outcome have become fuel for Obama to amass votes of pro-choice young women. This distortion of facts by the DNC is luring pro-choice young women who actually believe that without Obama, they'll lose their birth control rights. NOT SO! Let them know.
- The real reproductive rights election issue is this: Is the government entitled to enforce laws which demand free distribution of procedures and products which prevent life? If asked directly, how many sane mature taxpayers want to foot the bill for new costly long term birth control procedures (more profitable to Planned Parenthood than just "the pill?") And that all of US pay for other's abortion-on-demand (including "morning after" abortion pills) and even permanent sterilization given to whoever asks (including by HHS standards any of menstrual age and without parental knowledge or consent)? This bogus profit-plan is called "preventive care." It should, more aptly, be called genocide by design.

- Obamacare not only overrules parental rights but religious rights. It demands Catholic institutions (among others) negate their religious freedom by forcing participation and cost coverage of the above products and procedures. And that creates a Constitutional crisis. However, if Obama retains office, don't count on the Supreme Court to protect US from that, anymore than our Justices did on ObamaCare itself. As you know, we oust Obama or forget the Constitution.
- That brings up an even broader issue. If the Fed can demand Catholic hospitals implement government rules that contradict their own credo, it's a short step "forward" to regulate all private businesses with dictates on how they must operate, whom they must serve and by what means. So much for free enterprise. (Read here the Department of Justice reply to Hobby Lobby's company complaint to be excluded: "Plaintiffs' challenge rests largely on the theory that a for-profit, secular corporation established to sell art and craft supplies can claim to exercise religion and thereby avoid the reach of laws designed to regulate commercial activity. This cannot be.")
- Beneath the Obama administration's arrogant posturing for its contorted versions of "civil rights" it should not be forgotten that the new Progressive party (which has replaced the original Democratic party) aimed to totally remove "under God" from their platform! Respect for a higher authority than government and respect for life, itself, tend to go hand in hand. Such was the wisdom of our Founding Fathers.

Please pass this around and spread the above bullet point facts, so more voters see the real consequence of their 2012 Presidential vote.

We urge those who see through the social engineering behind the "rights" Obama claims to offer to redistribute and/or post the following letter from a deeply concerned, well-informed voter. It reveals the bigger picture that too few see or know. Also hear below an AA leader calling on his fellow voters to wake up!

Bishop E.W. Jackson
from Democratic Party

I am writing to alert you to some disturbing news that you may or may not have seen a few weeks ago. Some selected schools in NY are now distributing contraception materials and "morning-after pills" to students without parental permission. This gives students as young as 14 access to the Plan B morning-after abortion pill and other forms of contraception. Injectable Depo Provera is included under this New York City program called CATCH (Connecting Adolescents to Comprehensive Health). Some states are even looking at this for Junior High School students as young as 11 yrs. old. On the other coast California Governor Jerry Brown signed into law a bill (State Senate Bill 1172) making it illegal for a minor with unwanted same-sex harassment to receive professional counseling, even based on parental consent and agreement. These are clear and blatant attacks on parental rights coming directly from government.

The distribution of contraception materials to our children is a very dangerous practice that will do them great harm. Not only does this usurp parental rights and responsibilities, it blatantly promotes immorality and promiscuity, and poses serious health risks to our children. The drugs being distributed through this program should be given under medical supervision after the health of the patient has been assessed. There is no medical supervision with this program and thus no informed consent. Planned Parenthood has been seen telling girls there is no danger in having an abortion.

And even worse, school sanctioned handouts or not, the Obamacare law put this in place August 1, 2012 wherever Obamacare implementation has started, so the path is set and the practice will spread quickly. Also under Obamacare children (boys and girls) as young as 15 years old, and some argue 12 years old, may get free permanent sterilizations without parental consent. Even before Obamacare, girls 15 and older do not need parental consent to be sterilized in Oregon State, so precedence is set.

This is a clear case where elections have consequences. Many may not pay much attention to "down ballot" elections such as electing members of the local school board. However, this action by NY schools is a perfect example of why these elections are as critical to saving our nation as those for the top elected offices. Now, however, with Obamacare not even school boards will be in a position to stop these evil practices. Still they can serve as a first line of defense.

With the current administration in Washington D.C. and the loading of our courts with liberal judges is there any doubt that actions like these would stand if challenged? As we saw with the health care law when it was being rammed through Congress, massive objections from citizens will not stop those in power from acting against the will of the people. I urge you not to be apathetic regarding this matter. If we do not act now to turn around the moral decay in our great Nation there will be no turning back.

As you thoughtfully fill out your ballot for the upcoming election reflecting on your own conscience and moral teachings, I ask that you be fully aware of the moral stands of the candidates you select. Conscience is not just a "feeling." Where there is moral clarity, the right answer is always clear. I pray that we all go through this election cycle with moral clarity as our guide. As so many aren't aware of the above facts and dangers, I also urge you to communicate this information to others. You are welcome to share this letter.

Respectfully,

L. S.

Act to Stop Undercover 2012 Fraud Happening Now!

Dear Kaleb,

While the lamestream media holds public attention on GOP candidate rivalries, a Progressive strategy is underway to eliminate the role of the states in electing a U.S. President. By transferring electoral votes to a "national popular vote" this "Compact" would usurp the role of the states as safeguarded by our Constitution. In doing so, it could also neutralize Obama's critics totally!

This may be the most vital - and time sensitive - expose WAM has ever uncovered and shared! And it's happening now, under the radar, with the general public in the dark. This "ultimate vote fraud" is intentionally complicated to keep it obscure until it's too late to stop it.

This complete expose on the "National Popular Vote Compact" won't be found elsewhere. Because of the complexity and urgency of this issue, read it through completely. See who is behind this scheme and what its intended consequences are.

Then spread the word in your blogs, forums and forward to all your contacts now. There is still time to BLOCK the NPVC sufficient states passage - only if WE ACT NOW!

All of US urgently need to contact our State Assemblymen, State Senators and Governors to vehemently OPPOSE this covert MEASURE! See below the real facts of this manipulation of the Constitution and American electorate. See Your State Status and ACTION needed in last column.

Plan for 2012 (& Permanent) White House Control by Progressives Happening Now

Called the "National Popular Vote Compact" this movement has been in the works nationwide - without public attention - on a state-by-state level since at least 2008.

Like other surreptitious actions against the U.S. Constitution, the NPVC "movement" has several promotional websites claiming to represent "true democracy."

The NPVC is a bill now moving state-by-state to make the popular vote winner President by bypassing normal requirements to amend the Constitution. Its outcome would ensure the Presidency would be declared by giving all the required 270 Electoral Votes needed for a "winner" to the candidate who wins the largest number of popular votes nationally - no matter how small the win margin and no difference how many states voted to oppose him. Here's how it works:

- Once enough states have passed the NPVC bill into law to reach the requisite 270 Electoral Votes (by totaling the EV's of those states which pass this bill) the NPVC goes into immediate effect in the next - and all subsequent - Presidential elections. It doesn't matter how strongly other states oppose this. We'd all have to go along, if even a minority of states pass it!
- Currently, this bill has passed enough state houses to reach more than 160 EV's - so they are well over half way to their goal right now.
- According to most up-to-date information this National Popular Vote Pact has already passed 1 of the 2 required chambers in more than 30 other states- without public attention.
- If their magic number of 270 EV totaling states is reached, it won't matter how the rest of the states vote on this; nor whether other states never take up the bill; not even if other states vehemently object and oppose this action. It would be the Law of the Land!

This sneaky scheme to upend Constitutional rights and protections of all states and their residents in selecting the nation's leader is underway as an explicit attempt to defeat the careful Constitutional amendment process with NO public knowledge, NO voter input, NO public referendums and NO input from states which object to this measure. All NPVC takes is a portion of current state houses to make it law for all of US - always!

WHY WOULD PROGRESSIVES WANT TO SWITCH TO A NATIONAL POPULAR VOTE POTUS?

DO THE MATH . . .

The electoral vote system protects voting rights by giving every individual state a number of electoral votes representing the level of population. In this way, all states in the Union have a proportionate and representative say in who becomes President. It doesn't matter if the state has more land mass than populace, or if more of the people live in rural areas, etc.

Here's what would happen with an NPVC that hands all the needed 270 Electoral Votes to the national popular vote winner: Those states with larger populations - especially those with heavily populated big cities will pick the President. Period. The politically savvy know that big city voters trend "Democratic" - and that controlling big city vote results (by buying votes, duplicating votes, "fixing" vote count machines on a large scale basis - these are all "Democratic" party specialties!

Take Illinois as a case in point. No matter the notorious corruption in politics there. Year after year, all the suburban and rural vote populations together can't get their voices heard to change who runs the state. Why not? Because the votes of the city of Chicago always outnumber the total combined votes in the entire rest of the state. Is that what we want to happen to the White House?

The state houses of Illinois, California, New York and New Jersey - with their large combined Electoral Votes - are among those that have already passed the NPVC into law. A list of states which have passed this treacherous law is given below. Do you think the voters in those states (of which you may be one) have an idea this has happened? Of course not - as with all Progressive take-over tactics, this one is being arranged as quietly and quickly as possible, before the actual voters there even find out!

So, if you've wondered why Obama isn't more worried about his "re-election" - despite growing public dissatisfaction - now you know. Just pass the NPVC in a handful more states. Then, put the usual paid workers out in the precincts with lies and pockets full of bribes for votes; send out more union propaganda enflaming and threatening union members into support; continue using state paid staff to bring in the votes of the infirm and institutionalized; doctor up more absentee vote records; alter the vote totals of machines in key areas. And voila - Obama gets even the tiniest combined margin of the "popular" vote (by hook or crook) - and he stays in office!

If this NPVC vote scam gets enough states to go along, the rest of US are doomed to non-elect but appoint Obama again - by the magic 270 with claims that its all very constitutional! Akin to ObamaCare, if this National Popular Vote Compact is passed - no matter how wrong and corrupt - it would take massive funding and endless delays to drag through the courts in hopes of any reversal.

An NPVC success in its remaining targeted states would mean: states that have been trending GOP and don't support NPVC won't matter; states with large land expanses sprinkled with Conservative voters and rural farmers won't matter; suburbanites who pay the taxes that support city entitlements won't matter; the original fair and balanced Electoral College system won't matter. After all, they tell US: this is just one of those parts of that old Constitution that's not really fair and needs to be updated!

Here's a summary of why the National Popular Vote Presidency is a really bad idea.

WHO'S BEHIND the NATIONAL POPULAR VOTE COMPACT? SOROS - and that's not all

If you have any doubt left about the purpose of this Constitutional reversal in favor of a Presidency by national popular vote, consider these facts and check out these references:

SUMMARY: George Soros favorite game is taking over the politics (and governments) of countries. If you're not familiar with his bio, you should be. See here his role in the bogus movement toward a popular vote. Soros son, Jonathan, propoganzed "It's time to junk the electoral college" all the way back in 2008. We know by know how their ilk uses long-term, heavily financed astro-turf "reform" movements - under cover of nice-sounding names, multiple websites and distorted messages to increase their public appeal. Here's what the National Popular Vote movement wants you to believe. Their operatives began moving this Plan through state assemblies even before 2008 election.

See an actual chart of the scope of Soros spiderweb of behind-the-scenes influence here.

WHAT'S THEIR GAME: Take the 2012 election - and those that follow - by the cheapest, most expedient means. Save time and money by focusing "electioneering efforts" (including illegitimate ones) in major population areas to make those vote totals overwhelm the votes of the rest of US. This makes it easy for Obama to continue ignoring increased public resistance - if half the states and nearly half the voters just won't count anymore anyway. Most of US are by now familiar with the bombardment of attempts to subvert our government under cover of populist propaganda to appear "more truly democratic." See below those behind this clever manipulation of the law - to pass a "newer and better" way to choose a President without the proper Constitutional amendment. (And somebody tell them our founding fathers formed a Republic, not a democracy!)

MEET the Men behind this "Compact" AKHIL REED AMAR & VIKRAM AMAR National Public Vote Compact bill, promoted nationwide, came from this source in 2001. Since then, the same bill based on their strategy has been filed in states nationwide!

Digging into the background of the National Public Vote Compact - as a means to radically and permanently shift the basis of the Presidency, here's what we found: highly credentialed attorneys (and brothers) who devised this "state bill" compact, as a strategy to get around the normal requirements for constitutional amendment - and, instead, undermine the Electoral College by bypassing both Congress and the voters! V. Amar is the author of hundreds of legal articles and several books. Although his age is included in a wiki-bio, Vikram's country of origin is not mentioned. His articles cover topics like this: "Should Christian groups on state campuses be allowed to restrict their membership to Christians." Many articles are aimed at using the legal system against the Constitution. Here's two books he's written: "Processes of Constitutional Decisionmaking" and The Bill of Rights: Creation and Reconstruction

Akhil Amar has also "recently proposed that every American should be required to undergo a DNA test so that a national DNA database can be created." Together this pair has made many other monstrous "legalese" proposals including how an "Instant Run Off System" could "remedy the flaws" in America's voting system; term-limiting Supreme Court Justices and improving the Presidential line of succession in the event of "election terrorism."

By no strange coincidence, the brainstormer of this end-run to trick the public and the Constitution by a minority of favorable state lawmakers, Vikram, also keeps busy writing frequent legal articles in defense of the constitutionality of ObamaCare! Need we wonder who is financing this scribe?

VITAL & URGENT: SEE YOUR STATE STATUS & CONTACT STATE OFFICIALS!

CONCLUSION WAM HAS DONE THE MATH and CITIZEN ACTION is URGENT to stop this Compact! States where it's already passed add up to 171 Electoral Votes of the 270 required. 81 more Electoral Votes are at stake in states where NPV has passed 1 of the 2 needed chambers. Additionally, States where NPV is listed as currently active legislation hold more than 100 EV.

There are under 100 total (electoral vote bearing states) more for this to be our law nationally - and there are way more than enough states with this in process to meet that end goal before 2012 Election!!!

Shockingly, NUMEROUS Republican state officials have fallen for the popular vote strategy. Enough GOP have supported it, for NPV.com to brag this is a "bi-partisan" measure (along with bogus polls claiming how We the People want this!) Banners of progressive newspaper Editorial endorsements are topped (of course) by the New York Times. Some GOP have co-sponsored this in their state. More have even voted for its passage! Whether these are ill-informed, popularity-seeking, bribed or just too dumb to do the math we can't say. What we know is this probably means NO more Republican presidents ever - and Obama back in 2012, if only by the tiniest of margins!

Evidently, it's going to take all of US to contact our own state Assemblyman, state Senator and Governor to inform them of how destructive (and Progressive) this national vote compact really is.

Staying informed, getting involved and working together is the only way to reform and preserve our nation

March 2012

Election 2012 Alert

Dear Kaleb,

With the most critical election in our nation's history happening this year, it's a good time to look back on where we're coming from. Wake Up America Movement has been a volunteer network since 2008 when the dangers of where we were headed began to be exposed. Back then, WAM investigated and exposed the roots of Obama's background and his real agenda for our land's highest office. Since then, more Americans have been waking up and our opposition has continued to gain ground and public attention.

Not many know it was WAM that initiated the Tea Party movement for grass roots involvement in taking back our government. While WAM has never organized events the research and strategies our volunteers share have continued to have significant impact. All that is thanks to concerned citizens like you staying informed, spreading the word and - wherever possible - getting involved in pro-active ways to preserve our democratic Republic.

When Obama first took office in 2010, WAM then uncovered and exposed a prepared group of shell bills - ready and waiting - to flood the Congressional floor with costly and unconstitutional Federal take-overs of every area of our lives. Again, thanks to all of US, many of these were stopped in their tracks for now. And the centerpiece of that ten bill package - ObamaCare - is now under fire and due to - with your help - fall by the wayside. By now, many more of US are aware that these new "laws" of the land haven't been written - or often even read by our voting representatives! We've also learned both parties are laced with officials who serve special interests rather than We The People. In the coming months, WAM will give exposure to who's bought and paid for - to help you know who does not deserve reelection!

Moving forward to 2010 elections, the outreach of waking-up Americans built enough influence to elect more real reformers to the House. Some have kept their promises and some have not. WAM will be reporting on that soon- on a state by state basis - naming names - for your voting information. However, as we all know the Progressively controlled Senate (with its compliment of added R.I.N.O.'s) has quashed attempts for more responsible reform-based legislation. WAM is now researching information and smart strategies for retaking the Senate with committed candidates of integrity.

The urgent issue - at this point - relates to the final contents of that original January 2009 bill package - because its agenda is currently underway and is at the core of every crisis facing our country. That original 10 bill shell package - with 9 composite bills designed to break the U.S. economy concluded with a 10th set of measures claiming a need for sweeping new Federal powers to crush the core of our liberties - due to "economic emergency". Yes, you read that right: this has been a set up from the start: spend lavishly on government programs and then use all of that as an excuse to crush Constitutional rights with sweeping new Fed powers! The real facts of what's going on continue to be buried from public attention by the complicit mainstream media. See more below.

This is the critical stage we have reached now. Will America be "fundamentally transformed" or not? That's now up to us - and this years elections may decide it. The 2010 House recomposition slowed this down but has not stopped it. All of US need to stay informed, keep spreading the word of what's really happening - and most of all, get involved in this year's election process - for both the Presidency and Congress - while we have this window of opportunity!

Watch for your upcoming WAM Alert emails to be informed on vital races and vote records!

Obama caught on mic saying "After My Election I Have More Flexibility"

In saner times this would have made big headlines - but not with the media censorship these days. Not only did this "secret" Obama remark offer promises to Russia. His statement reveals 2 other serious implications. #1 He acknowledges that what he wants to do with Russia would be opposed to the American people (hence hold it back until after November's vote.) #2 What he says and how he says it suggests he is confident he will remain in the White House - but he doesn't say "after my last FOUR years. Only "after my election." Do some others recall the bill laying in wait to eliminate term limits? If any still don't see his intention to be a Dictator, they aren't listening.

U.S. appears to face crises in every direction at this point. What to do? Expose and route out the worst offenders. How? WAM will be publishing a Vote Tracker showing KEY VOTE RECORDS of the corrupt on Capitol Hill.

The Real Agenda

Bit by bit our Bill of Rights is taking a beating

Obama continues his expansion of Executive Powers behind the scenes while Mainstream Media does its job of diverting attention.

THE DIVERSIONS

ROMNEY will be the GOP candidate - all the rest is a media drive to prop up ratings despite a done deal. Is Romney not your favorite? Just compare him to Obama - and we all have something to get excited about and work for. He has 1) positive executive and management expertise 2) does know how to create jobs and really wants to 3) loves America and has personal faith beyond his own ego. NOW the question is will the forces for divisiveness in Obama opposition give US time to get Obama out of our Capitol?

Whether or not the Supreme Court nullifies ObamaCare We the People will keep moving forward until it is unwritten! So we don't need to wait with baited breathe for Justice Kennedy's vote - which will likely decide the Court Ruling.

Insider says VP announced today!

Vital Announcement - Spread the Word!

Dear Kaleb,

Insiders say Mitt Romney is announcing his running mate this morning. Guess who? Congressman Paul Ryan of Wisconsin! And we thought you'd like to be among the first to know. Pass this notice along ASAP to all your contacts - and announce on your websites and social forums.

If you've opened this email quick enough, you can turn on TV to see this momentous announcement live. So start spreading the word right away (said to be forthcoming at 7 AM/MT today)

No doubt the Obama campaign is already ready to come out swinging, considering their previous ad of a Ryan like visage shoving a grandma off a cliff.

The best way to counter this typical progressive misspeak is to show our enthusiasm about Romney's choice of a running mate. Strategically speaking, it doesn't really matter if Ryan is our preferred choice. What matters most is we all want Obama out of our White House! So, the smartest thing all of US can do is to focus on the positives of Romney's selection and trust our nation's future can only be steered in a brighter direction by this duo.

They - and our future generations - are counting on US to get behind this pair wholeheartedly and immediately. There will plenty of critiques coming from our sell-out mass media. Opponents of Obama have typically been pitted against each other - to weaken our resolve and our results. Now's a crucial time to be positive and enthusiastic about Romney's choice. That's the best way to counter the onslaught of condemnation about to blast out from the left.

The choice of Paul Ryan has certainly been made after extensive deliberation. Despite mainstream media's constant efforts to portray the GOP candidate negatively, Romney is no fool. This is a crucial moment to trust our candidate and show that we believe that this ticket can win, will win - and will reverse many crippling Obama policies around. That much we can count on.

The timing of this VP announcement - and the choice of Ryan as a running mate - can be no accident. What does it tell US? That Romney really wants - and needs - the Tea Party, conservatives (and Independent voters at large) to back him 100%. It also points out that the GOP is solidly focused on an economic turn-around - known to be Ryan's greatest strength.

Add to that the fact that Congressman Ryan is one of Obama's most outspoken and articulate critics can also be useful! Some may recall it was Ryan who faced down Obama in committee (and on national TV) to articulately confront the failings of Obamacare.

We suspect that a diligent vetting process has also played a role in this choice. Ryan is squeaky clean - as well as a fiscal conservative. Let's be ready to counter fear laden propaganda with this optimistic and realistic fact: the antidote to the disastrous national debt, imbalanced policies.

unconstitutional overreach and permanent welfare state is now in our hands - with this capable sensible pair of statesmen running on our behalf.

Help spread the word with such enthusiasm and vigor that the cries of outrage of the opposition are drowned out by all of US who still believe in the American way. Shout out the good news on your own emails, blogs, twitter and social sites. The new White House team is ready to move ahead and help US save ourselves from the disastrous fate another -zero- term would do.

On a personal note: Residing in Congressman Ryan's district, I have participated in his Town Hall meetings - and while I don't always agree with his voting record - I can vouch for his equanimity, his acumen and capacity to keep a cool head when under fire - valuable timely traits he and Romney share. Two real statesmen vs. two liars in chief should be an easy choice - but only if all of US team up to wake up and mobilize more Americans to reverse the mistake of 2008's election and get our economy moving again.

Picture, for instance, Ryan in debate vs. Biden where this next VP would dizzy the current dodgy VP's sloppy misstatements with actual statistics and real facts! Doubt that Biden will ever be willing to face Ryan in such a public showdown - but it's fun to imagine that match-up which illustrates the contrast between the two camps.

Now is our time to believe in America and work for this ticket to reclaim our nation's future,

Reminder Vital WI GOP Primary Tuesday Aug 14

August 12, 2012

WAM Alert: Support a New Senate!

Dear Kaleb,

Just a reminder that the Primary election in the state of Wisconsin is tomorrow. The results will determine which GOP candidate gets the nod to oppose Tammy Baldwin, gay lib DEM currently serving in the U.S. House - who wants more power as a Senator.

Some say Tommy Thompson, the well known former GOP governor is the safest choice - and may bolster support for the GOP ticket. However, others feel his record indicates that he may be too compromising as a U.S. Senator.

Newcomer to politics, Hovde, has run some good ads with great promises. However, his background in D.C. is longstanding and some are concerned he may not be trustworthy.

Both Senator Jim DeMint and Senator Rand Paul have endorsed Mark Neumann, a former Representative, whom they believe will serve with integrity. See a copy of Rand Paul's request to support Neumann below.

Odds are you may not live in WI - but it's equally likely that if you forward this email along, it will reach some Wisconsinites and remind them to vote!

Wisconsinites be prepared! If Neumann does win this primary, it will take strong on-the-ground efforts for him to beat Baldwin in November. Why? Because the DEM party will campaign much harder - and flood the state with scare tactic attack ads - to keep him out.

Thanks for your help in turning out the WI vote. Every GOP candidate for the Senate can make a historic difference - in this of all elections!

RAND PAUL endorses Mark Neumann for Senator

Wisconsin conservatives face an important choice tomorrow in their contest to determine the Republican nominee for senate. In a crowded field, many candidates have tried to lay claim to the mantle of true conservative. But only one candidate actually measures up to the values you and I hold dear.

That candidate is Representative Mark Neumann.

Mark has a long history of standing up to the establishment in both parties and fighting to slash spending and restore limited government. Mark's been endorsed by a host of grassroots conservative organizations and I am proud to list RANDPAC amongst his supporters.

While Mark is locked in a tight four-way race, the polls have shown him surging. He is clearly the momentum candidate as conservatives in Wisconsin realize he is the only candidate in the race who is a 100% vote to repeal ObamaCare and dismantle President Obama's socialist agenda.

Unfortunately, his other two main opponents are trying to erect a big money smokescreen to fool voters into thinking they are a conservative. Former Governor Tommy Thompson, who is being propped up by establishment insiders, championed the individual mandate and declared ObamaCare was "an important first step."

And hedge fund manager Eric Hovde is pouring millions from his personal fortune into this race to disguise the fact he donated money to the campaign of liberal former Governor Jim Doyle, proudly declared he is willing to pay higher taxes, and has not ruled out voting for tax increases in the future.

This race is crucial because Mark is running in an open seat race to succeed a liberal Democrat.

This is one of four seats conservatives need to yank away from Democrats to build a conservative majority that will repeal ObamaCare and fight for conservative values.

So the choice is clear: conservatives can rally around Mark's candidacy or a moderate will ride a divided conservative electorate to victory.

That's why I ask you to not only vote for Mark Neumann in tomorrow's Wisconsin Primary, but also to make sure five of your friends and relatives make it out to the polls and support Mark as well. As the Senate contests in Indiana and Texas have proved, when conservatives are united and show up to the polls, the establishment doesn't stand a chance.

Election 2012 Alert

Dear Kaleb,

WAM is working to update the website with vital Capitol Hill voting records and we're researching authentic reform candidates for Congress - to spread the word. In 2010 WAM election trackers, based on candidate evaluations and Congressional voting records, had real impact informing intelligent voters and reform-minded activists like you. Since then, we've continued to Watch Washington diligently and will soon have much to report of what we've found!

As we all know this last term's deadlock between the House and Senate has virtually immobilized D.C. But at least that has slowed the momentum of Obama's deadly agenda. This November is our time to reverse its course completely and move D.C. to restore Constitutional standards, reform corruption, special interest control and excessive regulation. WAM is now striving to review and prepare to release candidate reviews and smart strategies to retake the White House, take back the Senate and weed out Representatives who haven't been true to their platforms and promises.

If you hear of a worthy candidate for national office, do let us know so WAM can spread the word. And watch for ongoing WAM alerts. It's only because of concerned active citizens like you that we've all made it this far. We all know that this November will set the direction of our country - to sink or swim - for many years to come. So, thanks for staying alert and passing on these WAM alerts in your blog posts, social sites and by forwarded email to your friends and family.

The NEW DEFINITION OF HEALTH CARE? Speaking before Congress this week, a female law student bemoaned how - being a student - she can't afford the $3000 for birth control so that she can enjoy a "social life."

Do we really all want to pay for other people's indiscretions. Shouldn't that be up to them? And with the "morning after" pill included - this amounts to government paid and sponsored quickie abortions for all.

The most dangerous part of this outrage - aside from the possible compromise or shut down of Catholic hospitals? Friend,

We have a strategy to stop Harry Reid in his tracks - and we think you'll like it.

The Obama agenda in the Democrat-led Senate poses one of the greatest threats to our freedoms in recent memory. In 2010, common sense conservatives were able to dethrone Speaker Nancy Pelosi. In 2012, we have a strategy to do the same to Harry Reid - and our path to victory is with five straight talking, common sense Republican women.

Congressional approval ratings are in the tank, currently sitting at 13%. The male dominated, Democrat-led Senate has talked for over 1,050 days about the still-absent budget. Every day that passes with idle talk from career politicians is a day that our children sink further into debt. Today, each American child owes an astounding $50,017.33 of the national debt. Under the cloak of darkness, this Senate passed Obamacare strictly along partisan lines and has spurned efforts to undo this disastrous legislation.

Our country is in peril, but this do-nothing body just yesterday earned the honor of being the laziest U.S. Senate in the last twenty years, as voted by Senate historians. Have you had enough? Well, we have too. And we need your help to make a change.

With the Senate hanging in the balance, the 2012 election marks a historic opportunity to turn the war on women into a war by women. President Obama and Senator Harry Reid fulfill every conservative woman's worst nightmare--all the wrong talk with no action. Conservative role model Margaret Thatcher once said -- and her words resonate to today's do-nothing Congress -- "If you want something said, ask a man. If you want something done, ask a woman." With your help, we can shake Washington up and not only change the team in the Senate, but also the players.

Click here to see our video endorsement

In November, we can send five fearless, common sense women--Deb Fischer, Sarah Steelman, Heather Wilson, Linda Lingle, and Linda McMahon--to take the majority in the US Senate. These five women will fight for our freedom: repeal Obamacare, lower taxes, eliminate our children's growing debt and change the way Washington works.

Find out more about these women by clicking here.

If we do not elect these five bold, patriotic women this November, the Senate will have only two Republican women. Each of The Five are either leading or within striking distance of their liberal opponents, which means the time to act is now! Donate \$5 to each of The Five today to ensure that we are able to send these reformers to shake up Washington! Let's Stop Harry Reid, and get the Senate working for us again with these five great women.

Sincerely,

Teri Christoph
Suzanne Haik Terrell
Tim Crawford

PS - Forget about the war on women, this is a war BY women. Can we count on you to donate \$25, \$50, \$75 or more to make sure there will be principled leadership in Washington come 2013?

Liberty Univ. Case Could Either Gut or Sink Obamacare

Mat Staver of the Liberty Counsel says this Supreme Court decision ordering a federal appeals court to reconsider the university's challenge to ObamaCare is a huge step forward. "This, for example, is a challenge against the employer mandate in general, across the board," he explains. "And if we win that, that guts ObamaCare because [it] cannot operate if the employer mandate is not in effect. It literally guts ObamaCare across the board."

Federal Court Temporarily Blocks HHS Mandate

The first private business owner to sue the Obama administration over its contraception mandate has won a small victory in the larger battle to preserve his religious liberty.

Bipartisan House Bill Would Add Religious Exemption to Obamacare Mandate

TN: Appeal Filed After Prayer Injunction Denied

In a 46-page brief filed with 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Flores contends that "even one or two" prayers under the new policy were proof enough to show that the commission has not changed its ways and that the prayers still cause harm to those who feel excluded and isolated by them.

At the very least, everyone receiving this knows that the Constitution of the United States of America is under assault. You need to pay attention to this issue because if we allow this to go unchallenged it is the death-knell of our rule of law.

PLAYING THE RUBIO ROULETTE WHEEL

by William Loll, ©2011

(Jul. 14, 2011) — The Republican Party Leadership and their MSM acolytes don't know it yet, but they are setting themselves up as willfully ignorant participants in the further erosion of the US Constitution, as well as the possible implosion of our political system.

The Republican establishment, many TEA Party activists, and neo-con rank & files are all giddy with 2012 anticipation, as it appears that the Vice Presidential nominee has already been given the nod by the broadest spectrum of conservative politicians.

Marco Rubio is without doubt the darling child on the 2012 horizon. He is conservative, smart, articulate, principled, and can handle himself with senatorial equanimity in and out of a debate environment.

The July 11 edition of Hannity presented a segment with Dick Morris, where both host and guest gushed over the probability of Rubio being the VP-pick of any candidate who wins the Republican nomination.

The Birther Community, on the other hand, had an alarmingly negative, backside cattle-prod reaction for the simple reason that Marco Rubio is Article II, Section 1 ineligible to the POTUS office.

As has been pointed out elsewhere on the internet, Marco Rubio, born on US soil in 1971, was born to foreign [Cuban exile] parents. Marco's father Mario did not apply for Naturalized Citizenship until 1975, four years after Marco was born. Thus, without two citizen parents, Marco Rubio is not Natural Born. Marco Rubio is a citizen, for certain, as the 14th Amendment and elsewhere are clear about the positive law process of naturalization-at-birth for children born on the soil; but Natural Born, he is not.

A copy of Mario Rubio's September 1975 Petition for Naturalization can be viewed here.

The Birther Community are not the only ones interested in the fact that there is a Constitutionally blind love-affair with Rubio; Salon.com has also addressed and taken advantage of the issue, alleging the if the Birthers 'go after' Rubio for his unconstitutional qualifications, it "proves" that all Birthers are racist. Their race-card play is based upon the nexus linking one brown-skinned, half-white ineligible [Obama] with another brown-skinned semi-white ineligible [Rubio].

The race-rant is of course stupid, lacking in substance, an effort to distract, and demagogic boob-bait for the Marxist Masses—but the position has the tacit support of the mainstream media and thus is used as a tool to successfully oppress Birther debate.

So what has all this got to do with MAD Reverse Birther Leverage, as indicated in my first article?

Quite simply, the blind acceptance of Rubio as being a Natural Born, constitutionally-eligible candidate for VP by the Republican establishment is tantamount to handing a political weapon to Obama and The Powers That Be.

Marco Rubio was born in Florida in 1975 to two Cuban immigrant parents who were not yet naturalized, but the Republican Party is ignoring his non-natural born Citizen status

If in the case, for example, where Obama acts-out a psychological, 'Bill Ayers, Dorhn, Cloward and Piven' meltdown, pressing forward his Chicago-style plans to "fundamentally change America," the presence of Marco Rubio on the Republican 2012 ticket gives Obama all the tools he needs to create political and financial chaos.

As alluded to in my previous article, all Obama need do to take advantage of an Anybody & Rubio Ticket is to make an issue from the bully pulpit that his birth certificate is a fake, that it never really mattered where he was born, that he is an American by virtue of declarative fiat—and most importantly, that the Republicans agree with these notions since he has mountains of Republican congressional letters, emails, and faxes to constituents declaring that he was freely elected and certified by the Electoral College.

And the icing on the cake: Republicans agree that the Natural Born Clause is irrelevant, by virtue of the fact that Marco Rubio is on the 2012 Ticket.

Thus: 'If you try to remove me from office, you are a racist, a hypocrite, and have no legal foundation.'

Such a series of pronouncements would divide the Republican Party, throw its nomination processes and the 2012 election into chaos and virtually assure Obama of a second term, at the very least.

Of course, the Judiciary, as well as the Wall Street, banking, and Fed Powers That Be will be happy to go along with a second Obama term, since the prospect of the nullification of an Obama presidency due to ineligibility has always been feared.

Nullification of Obama would instantly remove two Supreme Court justices, reverse all court appointments of judges and federal posts made by Obama and the decisions heretofore made; reverse Obamacare, nullify the GM bond buyouts, reverse the GM stock sale to the Unions, make internationally illegal the orders to soldiers in four Islamic Wars, wreck EPA rulings, throw the SEC under the bus, drag BLM decisions back into court, confuse Federal Employee Pension deals, force the return of bailout money made to the states, dump Bernanke's 2009 second-term appointment – potentially nullifying all of the Bernak's decisions, — the list goes on.

So now you can see we are all playing Rubio Roulette. What we don't know is how many spins of the wheel we all have left.

State has already given $2.45 million to Oklahoma Youth Expo, records show

The Oklahoma Youth Expo - beneficiary of a planned $2 million state Agriculture Department donation that has brought controversy - has previously received $2.45 million from the department since 2002, state records show.

But tax forms filed by the charity earlier this year show expenses for the Oklahoma Youth Exposition Inc. were $693,866 higher than revenues in the year that ended May 31, 2011.

It was the second time in three years that expenses substantially outpaced revenue for the event, billed as the largest junior livestock show in the world, according to the expo's reports to the IRS.

The Legislature's general appropriation bill - the $6.8 billion spending measure that makes up the vast majority of the state budget for the year that began July 1 - included a $2 million increase for the Agriculture Department.

While the bill didn't specify how the increased funding would be used, legislative leaders and a spokesman for Gov. Mary Fallin have said there was an informal agreement that the money would go to the expo.

"The governor was presented with a budget deal that included funding for the Youth Expo which she agreed to, along with legislative leaders," said Alex Weintz, spokesman for Fallin. "She supported that funding at the time and continues to support it."

But legislators who were part of the negotiations in the tripartite talks among the governor's office, the House and the Senate, suggest it was Fallin's people who were advocating funding for the youth expo.

Governor's influence

When asked if any legislators were pushing for the money in the talks, Sen. Clark Jolley, R-Edmond, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said, "No, not really."

"It was not a request that originated in the Senate," Jolley said.

Rep. Earl Sears, R-Bartlesville, chairman of the House Appropriations and Budget Committee, said he didn't know where the initial push for the $2 million came from. He thinks some House Agriculture Committee members were aware of the request and supported it, but during the budget negotiations, there was no question about who was championing the spending.

"There is no question in my mind that this request was coming from the governor's side of the table," Sears said.

Rep. Mike Reynolds, R-Oklahoma City, has argued that the funding amounts to a donation of state money to a private group and is unconstitutional. Last week, he called on Agriculture Commissioner Jim Reese to block the spending, but Reese, listed as a member of the expo's board of directors, said the expenditure will be part of a legal contract between the department and the expo, and he plans to move ahead with it.

Reynolds has suggested that the political influence of the expo's backers has played a role in the funding.

Expo Chairman of the Board Bob Funk contributed approximately $180,700 to candidate and noncandidate committees between 2006 and July 11, Oklahoma Ethics Commission data show. Most of the money was for Republican candidates and causes.

Funk contributed $5,000 to Mary Fallin For Governor 2010 on June 30, 2009. Fallin's campaign made a $1,000 contribution to the Oklahoma Youth Expo.

Funk has said it is "asinine" to suggest that his influence had anything to do with the funding being approved.

Funk, Reese and other state leaders have said the expo is an important program that teaches important values to future state leaders.

Reynolds said he is sure the expo does many important things, but he wants the state constitution's requirements followed strictly.

"Since when does the governor, the head of the Department of Agriculture and the so-called legislative leaders get to reach an 'understanding?' " he asked.

The spending doesn't pass the smell test for transparency, he said.

If state legislative leaders wanted transparent government, they would have specified in the general appropriation bill how the money was to be spent.

"They would never dream of doing that because they knew the public would riot over it," Reynolds said.

$2.45 million

Jolley, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said he has concerns about how to make legislative spending bills more specific.

"I actually had this conversation with our fiscal staff the other day ... how are we going to do this stuff in the future because I don't like how we are doing it currently," Jolley said. "I don't think we're putting nearly enough legislative direction as to where these monies will be spent."

But legislative specificity in spending bills can be tricky business, he said.

Some years the Legislature has limited how money can be spent and other years it has not. Both methods have their potential problems, he said. If the Legislature specifies spending, the state constitution gives the governor the opportunity to veto the line item. That means the agency gets the money but not any direction on how to spend it, he said.

Meanwhile, the state Agriculture Department corrected statements from last week about how much money the youth expo has gotten from its budget in past years.

Last week, an Agriculture Department official said the department's budget has included $125,000 a year for the expo since 2002.

In fact, the agency's payments to the expo have never been $125,000, according to records released by the department. Between 2002 and 2005, the amount varied from $50,000 to $55,000. In 2006, the amount was $100,000. From 2006 to 2010, the amount was $200,000 with an additional $1 million in 2008 for an endowment in memory of the expo's executive director, who died in a plane crash.

In 2011, the amount went down to $167,000, and in 2012, it was $175,000.

For the 11-year period, the total was $2.45 million, including the endowment money.

All of the money, including the planned $2 million spending this year, came from the state's general revenue fund, several officials said.

Last week, Reynolds said the money was coming from fees paid to the Secretary of State's Office, which he said further clouded the legality of the spending.

Sears recalled that during budget talks he said there wasn't enough money in the state budget for the expo funding. At that point, representatives of the governor volunteered $1 million from the secretary of state's funds and another $1 million from the state's unclaimed property fund.

The money went into the general fund, and Sears emphasized that the money could have been used for any of the spending in the state budget. Reynolds said he still questions the connection of the expo spending and the secretary of state's funds.

Financial questions

IRS forms filed by the expo suggest it has struggled at times financially.

Expo expenditures exceeded revenues by $693,866, the charity's 2010 IRS reports show.

In 2009, revenues totaled more than $2.1 million and were $453,021 over reported total expenses, reports for that year show.

In 2008, reported expenses were more than $600,000 over total revenue.

The Tulsa World put several financial questions drawn from the IRS reports to expo Executive Director Tyler Norvell.

In response to several of the questions - including inquiries of what has happened to the 2008 endowment money from the state - Norvell said, "We are in the process of completing an audit, which I expect will be completed in the next 30 to 60 days. I am still in the assessment phase of all operations and will have a better grasp of prior year financial reportings once the audit is completed."

Norvell was able to clarify $961,931 in "unsecured notes and loans payable to unrelated third parties" reported on the most recent IRS form. The liability represents scholarships accrual for future scholarships to youths, he said.

The most recent IRS form shows that Norvell receives no compensation from the expo but receives $100,000 in reportable compensation from related organizations.

The form - covering the period June 1, 2010, to May 31, 2011 - also says no paid staff or volunteers attempted to influence state legislation.

Sunday: State leaders face difficult choice on Medicaid expansion

By WAYNE GREENE World Senior Writer

Last month's U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of most of the Affordable Care Act left Gov. Mary Fallin and state lawmakers with a difficult choice.

While the high court said most of the federal law was constitutional, it struck down a mandate that states accept expansion of Medicaid coverage to include families up to 133 percent of the poverty level ($30,657 for a family of four in 2012) or lose previous federal Medicaid funding.

Essentially, the ruling made the Medicaid expansion optional.

Accept the money and thousands of Oklahomans get medical care with the federal government picking up the lion's share of the cost.

Refuse it and save the federal and state governments billions and stymie the progress of an unpopular expansion of federal government.

It's a highly political decision that forces Fallin and lawmakers to weigh issues of economics, health care policy and philosophy.

While some other Republican governors were quick to reject the Medicaid money, Fallin has put off a policy call on the issue, possibly until after November's presidential election or even until next year's legislative session. Read pro and con arguments on expanding Medicaid in Sunday's World.

New IRS rule to tax businesses conflicts with health care law

OKLAHOMA CITY – Attorney General Scott Pruitt filed an amended complaint Wednesday in Oklahoma federal court, challenging the implementation of certain provisions of the Affordable Care Act.

“Oklahoma is in a unique position with the only active lawsuit against the Affordable Care Act to hold the federal government accountable in how it implements the law,” Pruitt said. “Now that the Supreme Court has deemed the ACA a tax, and therefore constitutional, the federal government must follow the law and proper procedures, and that is not being done.”

The original lawsuit, filed in January 2011 in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, challenged the health care act’s constitutionality under the Commerce Clause, specifically whether the federal government had the power to mandate individuals to buy health insurance as simply a condition of being a citizen. Oklahoma’s lawsuit was stayed by Judge Ronald White until the U.S. Supreme Court issued a ruling in the Florida case.

In June, the Supreme Court sided with the states, agreeing that the health care law had exceeded its power under the Commerce Clause, but the Court gave authority to implement the individual mandate as a tax under Congress’ Taxing Power.

Following the decision, General Pruitt filed a request with Judge White to lift the stay on the Oklahoma case, so new issues related to implementation of the act could be addressed. The judge granted the request last week, lifting the stay.

With Oklahoma’s lawsuit still at the district level, the state can amend the complaint, which would not be allowed with cases on appeal.

Among the issues raised in the complaint is a new IRS rule that violates the Administrative Procedures Act and conflicts with the ACA. Oklahoma also is asking the Court to recognize that because the Supreme Court deemed the health care act’s individual mandate a tax that it no longer conflicts with Oklahoma’s constitutional provision that no law or rule can “compel any person, employer or health care provider to participate in any health care system.”

For a copy of the original and amended complaints or the state’s motion to lift the stay, go online to www.oag.ok.gov.

Wayne compliments my well crafted response and asks a follow up: " Should the state exchange include a means for Oklahomans to take advantage of federal subsidies for purchasing health insurance?"

I would like to say: "The governor is satisfied with the direction the legislature has decided to move in."

>>> Alex Weintz <Alex.Weintz@gov.ok.gov> 3/2/2012 3:18 PM >>>

Wayne, Katie is not available but I have statements below attributable to me. Hope this helps.

Does the governor support a state exchange that is explicitly ACA noncompliant?

As Governor Fallin has previously said, she supports the construction of an online Oklahoma private insurance network for two reasons. First, it will help to provide easier access to affordable health insurance for a greater number of our citizens. That's why the legislature acted several years ago to lay the groundwork for an online insurance network, and why conservative groups like the Heritage Foundation have long been proposing the development of free market health insurance exchanges.

Second, the governor wants to avoid, at all costs, a federal Obamacare exchange being forced on the state of Oklahoma. Under current law, the federal government will impose an ObamaCare exchange on Oklahoma by January 2013 if the state does not act. While Governor Fallin envisions a marketplace governed by free market principles and consumer choice, President Obama does not. For that reason alone, it is far preferable for the state of Oklahoma to design and create its own marketplace than to have one imposed on it by Washington.

The governor is glad the legislature has taken steps to create an Oklahoma-based online marketplace. As the federal government is still changing and adopting its guidelines for state-based exchanges, it is not entirely clear what a 'compliant' marketplace looks like. However, it is clear that designing the kind of conservative, free-market online marketplace that we want in Oklahoma is a step in the right direction.

Do you anticipate a federal exchange being established in the state?

There are several factors that go into whether or not the federal government is able to impose a federal exchange on Oklahoma, including the outcome of the 2012 presidential elections and future Supreme Court rulings. These things are largely outside the control of the governor and our state legislators, although Governor Fallin sincerely hopes that we elect new leadership in Washington, just as she hopes Oklahoma and other states are successful in their lawsuits against ObamaCare.

What we can control is whether or not Oklahoma takes proactive steps to defend itself from having a federal exchange forced upon it. Building an Oklahoma-based online marketplace consistent with our values and the principles of consumer-choice is the best way to do that.

Governor Fallin Statement Regarding Supreme Court Decision to Hear Arguments on President Obama's Health Care Reform Law

Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement on the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to hear arguments on the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA), President Obama's controversial health care law:

"President Obama's health care law is unconstitutional and unaffordable. Not only will it limit choice and undermine the quality of American health care, it stands to cost the state of Oklahoma about half a billion dollars in the process.

"Our citizens have already passed a constitutional amendment blocking its implementation in Oklahoma, and it's clear that a majority of states are similarly opposed to the mandates, new taxes, and out-of-control spending proposed in the law.

"The Supreme Court should strike down the president's health care reform as unconstitutional as soon as possible. The uncertainty surrounding the future of PPACA is frustrating to those who believe it stands as an obvious affront to constitutional principles, and a hindrance to crafting serious budget and health care policy on both the state and federal levels."

This info should be plenty-thank you for sending. The topic will be Gov's position on setting up the exchanges and in the impact Medicaid expansions is having on the state of Oklahoma. Right now those are the topics and if something is added, we'll be sure to let you know.

The studio on Hudiburg Circle is being confirmed right now and I'll make sure you have the confirmation. We've ordered makeup for the governor-does she still want that? If she does we'd like her to arrive to the studio 30 minutes prior to her hit for hair/makeup. Exact hit time TBD but it's looking like 10:20pm EST/ 9:20pm CST.

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue a State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor, do you want to do an interview with Fox and Friends tomorrow in the 6 AM hour regarding health insurance exchanges and Medicaid expansion?
You have a late night tonight ... although it is a great opportunity to get some good press on a friendly show with a large audience.
It would be filmed from the Hudiburg Circle Cox Studio.

Fox News is set up for tomorrow although we are waiting on the exact time (it will be sometime in between 9 and 10 PM central.)

I promised them we wouldn't do any other national shows, which I think is fair since this is prime time and has higher ratings than the other networks.

On the CNG photo op tomorrow, ODOT requested a photo op of their first shipment of cars for their communications purposes (think website, glossy handouts etc). We did not invite any press. Although I will not pretend that was intentional, I think it's probably a happy coincidence since any media availability you would try to have would be a health insurance exchange press conference in front of a bunch of CNG cars.

If you would like, it may make sense to do a short press release with a photo?

Meet Representative Dan Sullivan

Sullivan is the Floor Leader at the Oklahoma House of Representatives, a post that gives him enormous power over bills, indeed he can kill a bill just by not allowing it to be placed on the agenda. Sullivan has served almost six terms, with his last legislative session ending in 2012, and term limits prevent him from running for state office again. So why are we singling out Sullivan?

Sullivan wasn't one of the original 12 Transvestite Republicans, so named for their votes for HR 1397 in the 2011 legislative session but he is an integral part of House Leadership that pushed HR 1397 forward. Their goal was to allow transvestites to change their birth certificates after a sex change operation, giving no notice that Ann was born an Andy. Sullivan claims to be a devout Christian, attends a big Baptist church in Tulsa, indeed he was called out during services and literally anointed with oil by his pastor after Sullivan's affair came to light, after he divorced his childhood sweetheart wife of two decades. The pastor proclaimed Sullivan a "Godly man". If I were to guess, I'd say Sullivan's part in this was to make sure HR 1397 made it to the House floor and to vote for it but when the transvestite birth certificate portion was exposed, Sullivan panicked and voted against the bill. Sullivan later voted yes on the bill so he is on record supporting this issue.

Why then would Sullivan support changes to the birth records of transvestites? Because the State Chamber of Commerce wanted it done so that companies on the East and West coast would think Oklahoma less "backward" and would move their workers here. In short they want to whip the redneck and religion out of us and turn us into a "tolerant" and "progressive" people. I don't know about you but as a lifelong Oklahoma resident, Oklahoma citizens have always been a pretty tolerant bunch, we just don't want things rubbed in our face.

Sullivan also led the fight to defeat the Charles Key amendment to HR 1008, the opening day vote that allowed almost all of our bills to be killed in committee without a vote. Sullivan also headed the GOP forces that "whipped" or punished Republicans that wanted to sign the HR 1004 Discharge Petition. Sullivan voted four times for the Obama Care/Fallin Care Health Insurance Exchanges, long after the state voted overwhelmingly to reject Obama Care in the November 2010 election. With Sullivan lobbying for a GRDA executive position after his term limited out, Sullivan is voting shamelessly to support big business and the State Chamber of Commerce agenda.

As I mentioned in February and again in our last newsletter, Sullivan has been the subject of a six month investigation by Tea Party activists. The man has many, many, enemies after 11 years of legislative work. Rumors of his corruption and low morals began flowing in as far back as 2010 during his efforts to kill the Open Carry legislation.

As we began asking around for leads on Sullivan's misdeeds, anonymous letters arrived filled with court records, medical records, insurance records, and divorce records. I found one packet sitting on my car one night after work, a thick folder packed with personal information on Sullivan. Some letters obviously came from a former employer; others might have come from an insurance agency, judged by the content.

From reading the divorce file at the Tulsa County Courthouse where Sullivan complained that someone had sent his tax records to a former employer and to his pastor, the list of motivated people sending documents is a long one. We even had Tulsa allies do some dumpster diving for us, targeting both Sullivan and his ex wife's trash cans. As we stitched together who were friends and family and who was on what side, other activists filled in gaps in our knowledge via facebook conversations, email, and the occasional phone call to Sullivan's acquaintances.

Earlier this year I began talking to Sullivan's ex wife who provided documentation not on Sullivan but on a realtor that had been involved in a transaction that included the forging of the first page of a six page document set, after the ex wife had signed the last page! The Oklahoma Real Estate Commission accepted a complaint against the realtor but did little in the way of either investigating or listening to the facts. To me it is pretty simple; you have two copies of the first page of a six page document set, both different. Was it the realtor that did the forgery? Was it Sullivan's attorney? We will never know if a real investigation doesn't put the pressure on both till one of them cracks.

The numerous allegations against Representative Sullivan run the gamut from insurance fraud, forgery of loan applications, forgery of real estate documents, embezzlement of marital assets while the same assets were frozen by court order, paying for his mistress using pre tax dollars, delinquent property taxes, pressuring Tulsa police officials to remove an off duty police officer serving as a body guard for the ex wife (that one is quite troubling), and receiving sweetheart loans from a major bank.

After reviewing the divorce file at the Tulsa County Courthouse, reviewing photographs of many of the documents from that file, one could make the case that Sullivan has used his position as a legislator to attempt to beat his ex wife into the ground. One source opined that of all the allegations, the discovery of the embezzlement of marital assets while those assets were frozen by court order is what tipped Representative Sullivan over the edge. Since 2005 Representative Sullivan went from making almost $600,000.00 per year to a quarter of that, even far less in one year. Stitching together Representative Sullivan's obligations and expenses from his Tulsa Home, his Waterford Condo in Oklahoma City, membership costs from his Tulsa Petroleum Club from public divorce file information and anonymously supplied tax records shows that Sullivan was in deep financial problems. I believe that it is likely that Representative Sullivan decided to beat his ex wife into the ground to prevent her from coming forward with evidence of his misdeeds. Knowing there is always two sides to a story however we will continue to watch until the current investigation is completed by authorities.

Would you believe that he filed 34 contempt charges against his ex wife after the divorce? One was for her refusing to co sign on a loan on their Oklahoma City condo. And the kicker? This was after their divorce was final! Another was because someone posted a message on his face book page! Another was over an old pocket knife that he had lost. One was over some broken cups in their storage building! Sullivan asked the court for six months jail time for some of the contempt charges and massive fines on others. Yes, divorces are sometimes caused by both parties, and yes they do get vicious at times but this poor lady's motions get filed and not heard while her ex husband seems to be able to tell the judge what to do!

There is so much material available and there are so many serious charges that we are going to parcel the story out issue by issue in our newsletter. Publication of some of the issues will be delayed while we send copies of the documents to State and County officials before releasing the documents to the public.

Around the last of May the story broke about our offices being ransacked. Now you are going to see just why they were so desperate that they resorted to burglary. What they didn't know was that we had an idea on just how hot this was going to get, those files were kept in another location and after the burglary they were scanned and copies placed where they could be brought to light should something happen.

Now for the first allegation against Representative Dan Sullivan...

Insurance Fraud:

On 6-14-2006 Dan Sullivan did a pretty mundane thing, he applied for a disability insurance policy from Guardian Life Insurance. In this application it appears that Sullivan made numerous major misrepresentations on his medical history, his emotional health, his family medical history, his travel history, his participation in hazardous sports, and his tobacco use. Insurance premiums set the monthly cost of the premium by attempting to gauge the risk of a claim so lying about major risks lowers the monthly premium. Yes the statute of limitations has likely ran on any fraud committed but our reason for exposing this corruption is to begin to paint a picture of the character of the man appointed Floor Leader of the Oklahoma State House of Representatives.

In the 2006 Guardian disability insurance application, Sullivan apparently misrepresented his Mitral Valve Prolapse problem that was originally diagnosed in 1978, a serious enough issue that it caused him to be turned down for health insurance in 1986. The heart problem was somewhat disclosed on a Massachusetts Mutual life insurance application in 1996. In the 2006 Guardian application Sullivan also called his Mitral Valve Prolapse a "heart murmur". A heart murmur is a common occurrence and not always a serious health issue, indeed the definition of heart murmur is simply an abnormal sound made by the heart. A Mitral Valve Prolapse is a diagnosed cause of a heart murmur, a specific cause and sometimes a serious disorder.

In the 2006 Guardian application Sullivan apparently claimed no treatment, consultation, or counseling for heart condition in previous ten years despite the extensive record of concern in 1988 and 1989 and lab work in early 2006. Yes, the ten years previous information request stops at 1996 but does a serious medical condition just lay dormant from 1988 to 2006? Then does his heart condition suddenly get worse and require hospitalization in 2007, a year after the disability insurance application is given? Or was Sullivan racing to have a disability policy in place in case he became unable to work?

The Guardian disability application is showing a different home phone number, why? When asked for my home phone number on an official document, I will give my home phone number. But if I didn't want someone at home to be privy to what I was doing, perhaps I wouldn't. Sullivan was in the midst of a sordid affair with a House staffer, a fellow attorney, so perhaps the old ticker was making him anxious.

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied his intent to travel despite a long history of foreign travel. He apparently traveled to Ensenada Mexico in 1992, St Thomas in 1995, Cancun in 1995, Cozumel in 1997, Canada in 1995 and 1997, Egypt in 1998, Russia in 1999, Israel in 1998, India in 2001, Cancun 2003, Cozumel in 2003 and 2004, the Dominican Republic in 2003, and Tapei in 2007. International travel is considered much more risky due to political instability, lower sanitation standards, exposure to regional diseases for which your body hasn't developed antibodies, and lower quality emergency care available should you run into health problems while overseas. Did Sullivan cheat his insurance company by downplaying the actual risks in his life?

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied participating in auto racing. Insurers charge a lot more for policies on individuals that participate in risky sports. Sullivan took professional race car driving lessons in Texas in 2005, apparently spent a lot of money doing so. Do most people usually spend that much time and effort on a hobby that they don't intend to pursue? Sullivan also apparently downplayed his scuba diving trips in Mexico, claiming only one occurrence in 1995. Sources put Sullivan scuba diving on numerous Cozumel and Cancun trips.

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied smoking despite reports saying that he was a regular cigar smoker at social events as well as being a regular smoker at work functions.

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied being treated at St Francis Emergency Room after returning from India in 2001. Unknown causes were blamed, could have been bad water causing dysentery. Sullivan supposedly took no vaccination shots before leaving country as is usually recommended for foreign travel. He reportedly came back to the U.S. extremely sick yet he seems to have omitted this part of his medical record from the Guardian disability application. Why?

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied any treatment or diagnosis of emotional disorders or mental health treatment. Sources put Sullivan seeing Tulsa therapist Carol Dillard five times in 2000 and 2001 and documents reveal that Sullivan received authorization to begin seeing another therapist from PacificCare Behavioral Health on Sept 27th of 2007, having a psychological evaluation and seeing a therapist on 9-28-07 and 10-11-07. Did Sullivan have a history of emotional disorders, anxieties, or stress that he chose not to reveal to the insurance company?

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied family history of illnesses on page 4 despite reports of maternal and paternal medical histories showing otherwise. Reports say that his maternal grandfather had brain surgery allegedly for a tumor, his uncle had stroke (an attorney in Sapulpa) and the some of maternal family members had heart issues and stroke issues. On his paternal side, his dad reportedly had heart trouble and high blood pressure issues, and hereditary sinus surgery issues followed the paternal side of his family.

Sullivan's tangled web caught up with him in late 2007 when his heart condition declined to the point where he required heart surgery, valvuloplasty on his long malfunctioning mitral valve, a cardiopulmonary bypass with a prosthetic ring implanted. Interestingly enough Dan traveled to Cleveland for his surgery rather than use a local hospital. Why?

By misrepresenting his medical history, travel habits, family medical history, risky sport hobbies, did Sullivan committed insurance fraud? Would a man capable of making over $500,000 a year chose to cheat an insurance company rather than pay premiums based upon his actual risks and condition?

The Tea Party is calling on the State Insurance Commission, the Tulsa District Attorney, the Bar Association, and the House of Representatives to conduct investigations into Sullivan's conduct and to file appropriate charges at the county and state level if the investigation proves actual insurance fraud.

Tulsa City Council Candidates Background Info Released

While we are refraining from endorsing a candidate in that race, there is one guy running that deserves Tea Party votes.

Dave Bell is a medically retired State Trooper, a long time supporter of the Sooner Tea

Party, and a determined defender of the Constitution here in Oklahoma. Dave can get rowdy when writing elected officials, extremely rowdy, but his anger is rooted in disgust at how corrupt state and local politics have become. Dave doesn't cut anyone any slack if he believes they are not standing up for what is right and he doesn't mince words while doing so. More than once I've had to wipe tears of laughter from my eyes while reading one of Dave's emails to elected officials, the dude takes no prisoners and he isn't afraid of any of them.

Dave does have some baggage as reported by the Tulsa World last week. Dave's sense of intense personal loyalty and his defense of constitutional rights got him arrested a while back. While helping his son retrieve personal belongings during a foreclosure a sheriff deputy refused to allow more time to clean out a garage. Bell announced his status as a retired trooper and asked for a few more minutes' time to retrieve the belongings, then was arrested for speaking his mind. As a Catoosa police officer Dave was once found guilty of violating a suspect's constitutional rights after striking him during an altercation in a Claremore hospital while drawing blood from the drunken suspect arrested for public urination. I suspect that he arrested a local boy and paid a political price for doing so.

Bell served as a Tulsa reserve auxiliary K-9 officer and was retired on disability from the Oklahoma State Police.

Dave is a staunch defender of our movement, one of those rare law enforcement officers that will take on other law enforcement officials and former law enforcement officials that hold elected office. A hard core defender of our 2nd Amendment rights and states rights, Dave would make an awesome Tulsa City Councilor. I would bet my last dollar that he will tear into the crooks and their cronies that have been bleeding Tulsa dry the last decade. Yes, Dave has a little baggage; most people do by the time they reach his age but take a look at some of the other candidates in that Tulsa City Council race:

District 1:

Democrat Jason Trent Jr

A convicted felon, 1984 conviction for failing to return rental property, fitted with an ankle monitor which he then cut off and fled to Oklahoma City. Once captured and charged with escape, Trent spent 1 ½ years in a prison at Taft. Trent blames his poor choices on a cocaine addiction, one that he claims he eventually beat but he was charged in 2001 for marijuana, speeding, driving with a suspended license, receiving a one year suspended sentence. In 1991 Trent was charged with embezzlement, amended to a lesser charge for which he received one year suspended sentence.

Democrat Twan Jones:

has had multiple drunk charges, a bankruptcy, a 2004 DUI with a six month suspended sentence. In 2006 Jones was arrested for carrying a loaded weapon while drunk, spending four days in jail and six months suspended sentence. In 2007 Jones was charged with public intoxication but the charge was dismissed. A related fine in the case landed a warrant for his arrest after he failed to pay. In May of this year Jones was charged with driving with a suspended license and having no insurance, pleading guilty last month to the charges in Osage County.

District 2:

Republican Jeannie Cue

was ordered to repay a $1769.00 retirement check that she cashed after her mother's death, claiming she used the check for funeral expenses. In 2009 she was ordered to pay a $5572.00 judgment to Capitol One Bank, claiming that retiring from a $10,000 a month nursing job caused her to fall behind. She allegedly is behind $3339 in property taxes although she is claiming her sons owe the taxes.

Republican Nancy Rothman

pleaded guilty for failure to pay seven years child support, given a suspended sentence as long as she continues to pay her support. Rothman lost her children after a court battle and an appellate court found that she tried to frame her ex-husband with child pornography and falsely accused him of sexually abusing one of their children, then being ordered to pay $70,099 in court costs. A 2005 foreclosure, a 2006 bankruptcy and a 2001 released tax lien round out her accomplishments.

Democrat Phillip Oylar

was charged with misdemeanor assault on a police officer in Chandler Ok in 2001, claiming he stepped in to take a blow intended for his brother.

District 4:

Democrat Ken Brune

was arrested in 2005 on a DUI complaint by State Troopers. After refusing to take a breathalyzer test, Brune lost his license but later a judge allowed Brune to drive to and from work. Brune somehow managed to get the DUI conviction expunged, but the revocation was upheld after being modified so there must have been some booze involved.

Republican Rocky Frisco

filed for bankruptcy in 1999.

District 5:

Republican incumbent Chris Trail

is paying off around $8000 in unpaid sales tax for the restaurant he owns, Ike's Chili. He is also paying off almost $4000 in unemployment taxes. He was arrested in 2008 for failing to appear for food code violations and was arrested for obtaining merchandise by bogus check but the charge was dismissed after he paid for the merchandise.

District 6:

Democrat Robert Gwin Jr

had a bankruptcy in 2001

Democrat Bobby Bookout Jr

is being sued by Gemini Capital Group for less than $10,000

District 9:

Democrat " Mike" Favez Batman was arrested in 1996 for assault with a deadly weapon and again in 1999 for assault but both charges were dropped. Batman claims that the assault charges stem from him chasing down people that stole gas from his convenience store, saying that policemen don't like foreigners so they arrested him. In 2004 he pleaded no contest to a charge of selling tobacco to a minor.

I encourage you to look up Dave Bell if you live in his area and get involved in his campaign. If you aren't near, donate toward his costs. He will make a fine City Council man, one that will shake up the establishment and insist on honest government.

Congressman James Lankford Town Hall Meetings

Lankford has turned out to be quite a disappointment for the Tea party movement due to his votes on the Patriot Act and raising the Spending Cap. I spoke with Lankford at the GOP county convention last spring and he is well aware of the arguments against the Patriot Act. Lankford claimed that he voted yes on the first vote so that he could vote against it on the second vote a few months later but the fact is that he caved in to pressure from other Congressmen.

Lankford is holding Town Hall meetings in August and he needs to be reminded of who sent him to Washington and who can cost him his job in 2012. Lankford rode the Tea Party wave into office, he needs to learn that the wave can go both ways if he forgets who he represents.

OCPAC's Charlie Meadows Responds To Criticism

The last few newsletters have taken Charlie Meadows to task for not thoroughly vetting candidates before endorsing them using the OCPAC newsletter.

Charlie is an icon in Oklahoma conservative circles and has done a lot of good in the past. The problem is that Charlie hasn't adapted to the new battlefield that arose once the GOP won control of both the House and Senate. Once the Republicans were firmly in charge, one would think that it was time to follow their GOP party platform and uphold conservative values but the GOP has proven as corrupt as the Democrats were when they were in charge.

Charlie remains rooted in his old access based lobbying methods, where personal access is used to encourage politicians to do the right thing. The problem with that method of political pressure is that there is no way to hold a politician to his promises without making him angry, and if they get angry they will cut off your access to them. Charlie set up a long running weekly meeting where politicians speak on the issues, and receive OCPAC endorsement and PAC money for elections. Therein lies the problem... if he dares hold them accountable, they will stop showing up and Charlie won't have anything to draw people to the meetings! So Charlie has done what innumerable activists have done before him, sold out by trading his group's power for access to the politicians.

But Charlie is learning. We hammered him on two occasions this year, both times he responded in his newsletter by changing his tune and doing the right thing. Last week we brought up another bad judgment call, his endorsement of Greg Childers in the Senate race. Childers was a Democrat till quite recent when he changed his affiliation to run for the Senate seat. His wife remains a registered Democrat.

Charlie did respond to the charges we leveled last week:

From this week's OCPAC newsletter.

"Let me clearly state, I don't know for sure just how conservative Greg Childers happens to be, but Republicans should NOT vote for Theresa Nelson for this position. I believe some involved with the Demokie web site are heavily involved in Nelson's campaign and they are quite upset I used a quote from their web-site to expose her liberalism. A credible source has informed me that an official with that web-site accompanied Nelson when she filed a protest against Childers' candidacy. She later withdrew the protest. I have also been informed that the same person with the Demokie web-site has been driving Nelson around as she is campaigning. I believe that many of the folks who regularly contribute to this web-site are some of the most extreme liberals in the Democrat party.

What we don't want is for the general election to boil down to a "progressive" Republican as I believe Nelson happens to be, against a Democrat in the general election. There is a lot going on in this race between supporters of the candidates, of which I choose not to go into right now other than to say I have been the recipient of e-mails which attempt to incriminate Mr. Childers as well as supporters for Nelson getting my cell phone number so I would receive her robotic phone calls, which make a lot of negative allegations regarding Mr. Childers."

End quote:

What Charlie leaves out is that the DemoOkie website postings were quite harsh on Nelson after the race was over, one poster calling her a profane name. Childers received praise from the DemoOkie website for his State Chamber survey answers supporting government healthcare (Obama Care/Fallin Care).

The truth of the matter is that the Democrats ran two Democrat candidates as Republicans, one of which was indeed a lesser of evils but Childers still looks more like a progressive Republican than a true Republican. Come February the truth will be obvious one way or another as the new Senator votes.

I believe Charlie was being honest in his reply when he wrote:

"Let me clearly state, I don't know for sure just how conservative Greg Childers happens to be..."

But a person in the position of leadership ought to know who he is endorsing before he endorses them. I do appreciate Charlie responding to our criticism but let's not forget that activist group leaders can act like politicians once they have drunk the Kool-Aid and it is up to their members to keep them honest.

What did I do on that election day? I stayed home, didn't vote for either one of the false Republicans. When the general election comes around, I might just cross party lines and vote for the Democrat. If enough of us did this, the Republicans would quite putting progressive RINO Republicans up for election and find candidates that represent Republican values.

Meet Representative Dan Sullivan

Sullivan is the Floor Leader at the Oklahoma House of Representatives, a post that gives him enormous power over bills, indeed he can kill a bill just by not allowing it to be placed on the agenda. Sullivan has served almost six terms, with his last legislative session ending in 2012, and term limits prevent him from running for state office again. So why are we singling out Sullivan?

Sullivan wasn't one of the original 12 Transvestite Republicans, so named for their votes for HR 1397 in the 2011 legislative session but he is an intergal part of House Leadership that pushed HR 1397 forward. Their goal was to allow transvestites to change their birth certificates after a sex change operation, giving no notice that Ann was born an Andy. Sullivan claims to be a devout Christian, attends a big Baptist church in Tulsa, indeed he was called out during services and literally anointed with oil by his pastor after Sullivan's affair came to light, after he divorced his childhood sweetheart wife of two decades. The pastor proclaimed Sullivan a "Godly man". If I were to guess, I'd say Sullivan's part in this was to make sure HR 1397 made it to the House floor and to vote for it but when the transvestite birth certificate portion was exposed, Sullivan panicked and voted against the bill. Sullivan later voted yes on the bill so he is on record supporting this issue.

Why then would Sullivan support changes to the birth records of transvestites? Because the State Chamber of Commerce wanted it done so that companies on the East and West coast would think Oklahoma less "backward" and would move their workers here. In short they want to whip the redneck and religion out of us and turn us into a "tolerant" and "progressive" people. I don't know about you but as a lifelong Oklahoma resident, Oklahoma citizens have always been a pretty tolerant bunch, we just don't want things rubbed in our face.

Sullivan also led the fight to defeat the Charles Key amendment to HR 1008, the opening day vote that allowed almost all of our bills to be killed in committee without a vote. Sullivan also headed the GOP forces that "whipped" or punished Republicans that wanted to sign the HR 1004 Discharge Petition. Sullivan voted four times for the Obama Care/Fallin Care Health Insurance Exchanges, long after the state voted overwhelmingly to reject Obama Care in the November 2010 election. With Sullivan lobbying for a GRDA executive position after he is term limited out, Sullivan is voting shamelessly to support big business and the State Chamber of Commerce agenda.

As I mentioned in February and again in our last newsletter, Sullivan has been the subject of a six month investigation by Tea Party activists. The man has many, many, enemies after 11 years of legislative work. Rumors of his corruption and low morals began flowing in as far back as 2010 during his efforts to kill the Open Carry legislation.

As we began asking around for leads on Sullivan's misdeeds, anonymous letters arrived filled with court records, medical records, insurance records, and divorce records. I found one packet sitting on my car one night after work, a thick folder packed with personal information on Sullivan. Some letters obviously came from a former employer; others might have come from an insurance agency, judged by the content.

From reading the divorce file at the Tulsa County Courthouse where Sullivan complained that someone had sent his tax records to a former employer and to his pastor, the list of motivated people sending documents is a long one. We even had Tulsa allies do some dumpster diving for us, targeting both Sullivan and his ex wife's trash cans. As we stitched together who were friends and family and who was on what side, other activists filled in gaps in our knowledge via facebook conversations, email, and the occasional phone call to Sullivan's acquaintances.

Earlier this year I began talking to Sullivan's ex wife who provided documentation not on Sullivan but on a realtor that had been involved in a transaction that included the forging of the first page of a six page document set, after the ex wife had signed the last page! The Oklahoma Real Estate Commission accepted a complaint against the realtor but did little in the way of either investigating or listening to the facts. To me it is pretty simple; you have two copies of the first page of a six page document set, both different. Was it the realtor that did the forgery? Was it Sullivan's attorney? We will never know if a real investigation doesn't put the pressure on both till one of them cracks.

The numerous allegations against Representative Sullivan run the gamut from insurance fraud, forgery of loan applications, forgery of real estate documents, embezzlement of marital assets while the same assets were frozen by court order, paying for his mistress using pre tax dollars, delinquent property taxes, pressuring Tulsa police officials to remove an off duty police officer serving as a body guard for the ex wife (that one is quite troubling), and receiving sweetheart loans from a major bank.

After reviewing the divorce file at the Tulsa County Courthouse, reviewing photographs of many of the documents from that file, one could make the case that Sullivan has used his position as a legislator to attempt to beat his ex wife into the ground. One source opined that of all the allegations, the discovery of the embezzlement of marital assets while those assets were frozen by court order is what tipped Representative Sullivan over the edge. Since 2005 Representative Sullivan went from making almost $600,000.00 per year to a quarter of that, even far less in one year. Stitching together Representative Sullivan's obligations and expenses from his Tulsa Home, his Waterford Condo in Oklahoma City, membership costs from his Tulsa Petroleum Club from public divorce file information and anonymously supplied tax records shows that Sullivan was in deep financial problems. I believe that it is likely that Representative Sullivan decided to beat his ex wife into the ground to prevent her from coming forward with evidence of his misdeeds. Knowing there is always two sides to a story however we will continue to watch until the current investigation is completed by authorities.

Would you believe that he filed 34 contempt charges against his ex wife after the divorce? One was for her refusing to co sign on a loan on their Oklahoma City condo. And the kicker? This was after their divorce was final! Another was because someone posted a message on his face book page! Another was over an old pocket knife that he had lost. One was over some broken cups in their storage building! Sullivan asked the court for six months jail time for some of the contempt charges and massive fines on others. Yes, divorces are sometimes caused by both parties, and yes they do get vicious at times but this poor lady's motions get filed and not heard while her ex husband seems to be able to tell the judge what to do!

There is so much material available and there are so many serious charges that we are going to parcel the story out issue by issue in our newsletter. Publication of some of the issues will be delayed while we send copies of the documents to State and County officials before releasing the documents to the public.

Around the last of May the story broke about our offices being ransacked. Now you are going to see just why they were so desperate that they resorted to burglary. What they didn't know was that we had an idea on just how hot this was going to get, those files were kept in another location and after the burglary they were scanned and copies placed where they could be brought to light should something happen.

Now for the first allegation against Representative Dan Sullivan...

Insurance Fraud:

On 6-14-2006 Dan Sullivan did a pretty mundane thing, he applied for a disability insurance policy from Guardian Life Insurance. In this application it appears that Sullivan made numerous major misrepresentations on his medical history, his emotional health, his family medical history, his travel history, his participation in hazardous sports, and his tobacco use. Insurance premiums set the monthly cost of the premium by attempting to gauge the risk of a claim so lying about major risks lowers the monthly premium. Yes the statute of limitations has likely ran on any fraud committed but our reason for exposing this corruption is to begin to paint a picture of the character of the man appointed Floor Leader of the Oklahoma State House of Representatives.

In the 2006 Guardian disability insurance application, Sullivan apparently misrepresented his Mitral Valve Prolapse problem that was originally diagnosed in 1978, a serious enough issue that it caused him to be turned down for health insurance in 1986. The heart problem was somewhat disclosed on a Massachusetts Mutual life insurance application in 1996. In the 2006 Guardian application Sullivan also called his Mitral Valve Prolapse a "heart murmur". A heart murmur is a common occurrence and not always a serious health issue, indeed the definition of heart murmur is simply an abnormal sound made by the heart. A Mitral Valve Prolapse is a diagnosed cause of a heart murmur, a specific cause and sometimes a serious disorder.

In the 2006 Guardian application Sullivan apparently claimed no treatment, consultation, or counseling for heart condition in previous ten years despite the extensive record of concern in 1988 and 1989 and lab work in early 2006. Yes, the ten years previous information request stops at 1996 but does a serious medical condition just lay dormant from 1988 to 2006? Then does his heart condition suddenly get worse and require hospitalization in 2007, a year after the disability insurance application is given? Or was Sullivan racing to have a disability policy in place in case he became unable to work?

The Guardian disability application is showing a different home phone number, why? When asked for my home phone number on an official document, I will give my home phone number. But if I didn't want someone at home to be privy to what I was doing, perhaps I wouldn't. Sullivan was in the midst of a sordid affair with a House staffer, a fellow attorney, so perhaps the old ticker was making him anxious.

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied his intent to travel despite a long history of foreign travel. He apparently traveled to Ensenada Mexico in 1992, St Thomas in 1995, Cancun in 1995, Cozumel in 1997, Canada in 1995 and 1997, Egypt in 1998, Russia in 1999, Israel in 1998, India in 2001, Cancun 2003, Cozumel in 2003 and 2004, the Dominican Republic in 2003, and Tapei in 2007. International travel is considered much more risky due to political instability, lower sanitation standards, exposure to regional diseases for which your body hasn't developed antibodies, and lower quality emergency care available should you run into health problems while overseas. Did Sullivan cheat his insurance company by downplaying the actual risks in his life?

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied participating in auto racing. Insurers charge a lot more for policies on individuals that participate in risky sports. Sullivan took professional race car driving lessons in Texas in 2005, apparently spent a lot of money doing so. Do most people usually spend that much time and effort on a hobby that they don't intend to pursue? Sullivan also apparently downplayed his scuba diving trips in Mexico, claiming only one occurrence in 1995. Sources put Sullivan scuba diving on numerous Cozumel and Cancun trips.

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied smoking despite reports saying that he was a regular cigar smoker at social events as well as being a regular smoker at work functions.

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied being treated at St Francis Emergency Room after returning from India in 2001. Unknown causes were blamed, could have been bad water causing dysentery. Sullivan supposedly took no vaccination shots before leaving country as is usually recommended for foreign travel. He reportedly came back to the U.S. extremely sick yet he seems to have omitted this part of his medical record from the Guardian disability application. Why?

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied any treatment or diagnosis of emotional disorders or mental health treatment. Sources put Sullivan seeing Tulsa therapist Carol Dillard five times in 2000 and 2001 and documents reveal that Sullivan received authorization to begin seeing another therapist from PacificCare Behavioral Health on Sept 27th of 2007, having a psychological evaluation and seeing a therapist on 9-28-07 and 10-11-07. Did Sullivan have a history of emotional disorders, anxieties, or stress that he chose not to reveal to the insurance company?

On the Guardian application Sullivan denied family history of illnesses on page 4 despite reports of maternal and paternal medical histories showing otherwise. Reports say that his maternal grandfather had brain surgery allegedly for a tumor, his uncle had stroke (an attorney in Sapulpa) and the some of maternal family members had heart issues and stroke issues. On his paternal side, his dad reportedly had heart trouble and high blood pressure issues, and hereditary sinus surgery issues followed the paternal side of his family.

Sullivan's tangled web caught up with him in late 2007 when his heart condition declined to the point where he required heart surgery, valvuloplasty on his long malfunctioning mitral valve, a cardiopulmonary bypass with a prosthetic ring implanted. Interestingly enough Dan traveled to Cleveland for his surgery rather than use a local hospital. Why?

By misrepresenting his medical history, travel habits, family medical history, risky sport hobbies, did Sullivan committed insurance fraud? Would a man capable of making over $500,000 a year chose to cheat an insurance company rather than pay premiums based upon his actual risks and condition?

The Tea Party is calling on the State Insurance Commission, the Tulsa District Attorney, the Bar Association, and the House of Representatives to conduct investigations into Sullivan's conduct and to file appropriate charges at the county and state level if the investigation proves actual insurance fraud.

Tulsa City Council Candidates Background Info Released

While we are refraining from endorsing a candidate in that race, there is one guy running that deserves Tea Party votes.

Dave Bell is a medically retired State Trooper, a long time supporter of the Sooner Tea

Party, and a determined defender of the Constitution here in Oklahoma. Dave can get rowdy when writing elected officials, extremely rowdy, but his anger is rooted in disgust at how corrupt state and local politics have become. Dave doesn't cut anyone any slack if he believes they are not standing up for what is right and he doesn't mince words while doing so. More than once I've had to wipe tears of laughter from my eyes while reading one of Dave's emails to elected officials, the dude takes no prisoners and he isn't afraid of any of them.

Dave does have some baggage as reported by the Tulsa World last week. Dave's sense of intense personal loyalty and his defense of constitutional rights got him arrested a while back. While helping his son retrieve personal belongings during a foreclosure a sheriff deputy refused to allow more time to clean out a garage. Bell announced his status as a retired trooper and asked for a few more minutes' time to retrieve the belongings, then was arrested for speaking his mind. As a Catoosa police officer Dave was once found guilty of violating a suspect's constitutional rights after striking him during an altercation in a Claremore hospital while drawing blood from the drunken suspect arrested for public urination. I suspect that he arrested a local boy and paid a political price for doing so.

Bell served as a Tulsa reserve auxiliary K-9 officer and was retired on disability from the Oklahoma State Police.

Dave is a staunch defender of our movement, one of those rare law enforcement officers that will take on other law enforcement officials and former law enforcement officials that hold elected office. A hard core defender of our 2nd Amendment rights and states rights, Dave would make an awesome Tulsa City Councilor. I would bet my last dollar that he will tear into the crooks and their cronies that have been bleeding Tulsa dry the last decade. Yes, Dave has a little baggage; most people do by the time they reach his age but take a look at some of the other candidates in that Tulsa City Council race:

District 1:

Democrat Jason Trent Jr

A convicted felon, 1984 conviction for failing to return rental property, fitted with an ankle monitor which he then cut off and fled to Oklahoma City. Once captured and charged with escape, Trent spent 1 ½ years in a prison at Taft. Trent blames his poor choices on a cocaine addiction, one that he claims he eventually beat but he was charged in 2001 for marijuana, speeding, driving with a suspended license, receiving a one year suspended sentence. In 1991 Trent was charged with embezzlement, amended to a lesser charge for which he received one year suspended sentence.

Democrat Twan Jones:

has had multiple drunk charges, a bankruptcy, a 2004 DUI with a six month suspended sentence. In 2006 Jones was arrested for carrying a loaded weapon while drunk, spending four days in jail and six months suspended sentence. In 2007 Jones was charged with public intoxication but the charge was dismissed. A related fine in the case landed a warrant for his arrest after he failed to pay. In May of this year Jones was charged with driving with a suspended license and having no insurance, pleading guilty last month to the charges in Osage County.

District 2:

Republican Jeannie Cue

was ordered to repay a $1769.00 retirement check that she cashed after her mother's death, claiming she used the check for funeral expenses. In 2009 she was ordered to pay a $5572.00 judgment to Capitol One Bank, claiming that retiring from a $10,000 a month nursing job caused her to fall behind. She allegedly is behind $3339 in property taxes although she is claiming her sons owe the taxes.

Republican Nancy Rothman

pleaded guilty for failure to pay seven years child support, given a suspended sentence as long as she continues to pay her support. Rothman lost her children after a court battle and an appellate court found that she tried to frame her ex-husband with child pornography and falsely accused him of sexually abusing one of their children, then being ordered to pay $70,099 in court costs. A 2005 foreclosure, a 2006 bankruptcy and a 2001 released tax lien round out her accomplishments.

Democrat Phillip Oylar

was charged with misdemeanor assault on a police officer in Chandler Ok in 2001,

claiming he stepped in to take a blow intended for his brother.

District 4:

Democrat Ken Brune

was arrested in 2005 on a DUI complaint by State Troopers. After refusing to take a breathalyzer test, Brune lost his license but later a judge allowed Brune to drive to and from work. Brune somehow managed to get the DUI conviction expunged, but the revocation was upheld after being modified so there must have been some booze involved.

Republican Rocky Frisco

filed for bankruptcy in 1999.

District 5:

Republican incumbent Chris Trail

is paying off around $8000 in unpaid sales tax for the restaurant he owns, Ike's Chili. He is also paying off almost $4000 in unemployment taxes. He was arrested in 2008 for failing to appear for food code violations and was arrested for obtaining merchandise by bogus check but the charge was dismissed after he paid for the merchandise.

District 6:

Democrat Robert Gwin Jr

had a bankruptcy in 2001

Democrat Bobby Bookout Jr

is being sued by Gemini Capital Group for less than $10,000

District 9:

Democrat " Mike" Favez Batman was arrested in 1996 for assault with a deadly weapon and again in 1999 for assault but both charges were dropped. Batman claims that the assault charges stem from him chasing down people that stole gas from his convenience store, saying that policemen don't like foreigners so they arrested him. In 2004 he pleaded no contest to a charge of selling tobacco to a minor.

I encourage you to look up Dave Bell if you live in his area and get involved in his campaign. If you aren't near, donate toward his costs. He will make a fine City Council man, one that will shake up the establishment and insist on honest government.

Congressman James Lankford Town Hall Meetings

Lankford has turned out to be quite a disappointment for the Tea party movement due to his votes on the Patriot Act and raising the Spending Cap. I spoke with Lankford at the GOP county convention last spring and he is well aware of the arguments against the Patriot Act. Lankford claimed that he voted yes on the first vote so that he could vote against it on the second vote a few months later but the fact is that he caved in to pressure from other Congressmen.

Lankford is holding Town Hall meetings in August and he needs to be reminded of who sent him to Washington and who can cost him his job in 2012. Lankford rode the Tea Party wave into office, he needs to learn that the wave can go both ways if he forgets who he represents.

OCPAC's Charlie Meadows Responds To Criticism

The last few newsletters have taken Charlie Meadows to task for not thoroughly vetting candidates before endorsing them using the OCPAC newsletter.

Charlie is an icon in Oklahoma conservative circles and has done a lot of good in the past. The problem is that Charlie hasn't adapted to the new battlefield that arose once the GOP won control of both the House and Senate. Once the Republicans were firmly in charge, one would think that it was time to follow their GOP party platform and uphold conservative values but the GOP has proven as corrupt as the Democrats were when they were in charge.

Charlie remains rooted in his old access based lobbying methods, where personal access is used to encourage politicians to do the right thing. The problem with that method of political pressure is that there is no way to hold a politician to his promises without making him angry, and if they get angry they will cut off your access to them. Charlie set up a long running weekly meeting where politicians speak on the issues, and receive OCPAC endorsement and PAC money for elections. Therein lies the problem... if he dares hold them accountable, they will stop showing up and Charlie won't have anything to draw people to the meetings! So Charlie has done what innumerable activists have done before him, sold out by trading his group's power for access to the politicians.

But Charlie is learning. We hammered him on two occasions this year, both times he responded in his newsletter by changing his tune and doing the right thing. Last week we brought up another bad judgment call, his endorsement of Greg Childers in the Senate race. Childers was a Democrat till quite recent when he changed his affiliation to run for the Senate seat. His wife remains a registered Democrat.

Charlie did respond to the charges we leveled last week:

From this week's OCPAC newsletter.

"Let me clearly state, I don't know for sure just how conservative Greg Childers happens to be, but Republicans should NOT vote for Theresa Nelson for this position. I believe some involved with the Demokie web site are heavily involved in Nelson's campaign and they are quite upset I used a quote from their web-site to expose her liberalism. A credible source has informed me that an official with that web-site accompanied Nelson when she filed a protest against Childers' candidacy. She later withdrew the protest. I have also been informed that the same person with the Demokie web-site has been driving Nelson around as she is campaigning. I believe that many of the folks who regularly contribute to this web-site are some of the most extreme liberals in the Democrat party.

What we don't want is for the general election to boil down to a "progressive" Republican as I believe Nelson happens to be, against a Democrat in the general election. There is a lot going on in this race between supporters of the candidates, of which I choose not to go into right now other than to say I have been the recipient of e-mails which attempt to incriminate Mr. Childers as well as supporters for Nelson getting my cell phone number so I would receive her robotic phone calls, which make a lot of negative allegations regarding Mr. Childers."

End quote:

What Charlie leaves out is that the DemoOkie website postings were quite harsh on Nelson after the race was over, one poster calling her a profane name. Childers received praise from the DemoOkie website for his State Chamber survey answers supporting government healthcare (Obama Care/Fallin Care).

The truth of the matter is that the Democrats ran two Democrat candidates as Republicans, one of which was indeed a lesser of evils but Childers still looks more like a progressive Republican than a true Republican. Come February the truth will be obvious one way or another as the new Senator votes.

I believe Charlie was being honest in his reply when he wrote:

"Let me clearly state, I don't know for sure just how conservative Greg Childers happens to be..."

But a person in the position of leadership ought to know who he is endorsing before he endorses them. I do appreciate Charlie responding to our criticism but let's not forget that activist group leaders can act like politicians once they have drunk the Kool-Aid and it is up to their members to keep them honest.

What did I do on that election day? I stayed home, didn't vote for either one of the false Republicans. When the general election comes around, I might just cross party lines and vote for the Democrat. If enough of us did this, the Republicans would quite putting progressive RINO Republicans up for election and find candidates that represent Republican values.

OCPA fiscal policy director Jonathan Small has long argued against expanding Medicaid as provided for under Obamacare. I commend to your attention his excellent new article in the Oklahoma Gazette ("Medicaid expansion is the new SQ 744") in which he explains why common education, higher education and various other tax consumers in Oklahoma should wake up to the dangers posed by Medicaid expansion.

Now you may ask: Given President Barack Obama's reelection, what's the point of resisting Obamacare now? After all, conventional wisdom says the law will now stay on course. But Heritage Foundation analyst Nina Owcharenko says this is "another example of the left's wishful thinking." Owcharenko (pictured here at OCPA) gives several reasons that "Obamacare is not here to stay."

Behind me, two gentlemen prayed over their meals before they began eating. Friends, THIS is Oklahoma. We still smile when we pass each other on the sidewalk, and we still wave when we drive past each other on the roads -- regardless of whether we know each other. As good as the burger was, it was a far cry (and about 50 floors) from where I ate lunch the day before -- high atop the Devon Tower, the house that free enterprise built. It was an amazing two-day stretch last week that started with an energy and environmental policy discussion event at the Devon tower and continued the next day with tours of a drilling rig and a hydraulic fracturing location. We were welcomed with open arms as we climbed all over the drilling rig and saw up close the process used to fracture shale formations thousands of feet below the surface. Friends, THIS, too, is Oklahoma. We know energy. |

Conservative U.S. Senator Tom Coburn, a physician who has treated Medicaid patients, wrote to Gov. Mary Fallin urging her to reject the Obamacare Medicaid expansion. A few days later, state Sen. Jim Wilson, one of the most liberal members of the Oklahoma Senate, wrote to Gov. Fallin urging her to embrace the Obamacare Medicaid expansion. Now what complicates matters slightly is that, as University of Pennsylvania political scientist John J. Dilulio, Jr. has pointed out, "big government" now encompasses more than just government. Click to read more on our blog. |

State tax collections continue to climb

By Tina Korbe Dzurisin

General Revenue Fund collections in October grew at double the rate of the previous month -- and exceeded the official estimate by nearly 10 percent, according to a press release from the Oklahoma Office of State Finance.

Individual income tax receipts -- at $186 million -- were 7.6 percent higher than they were in October 2011, and sales tax receipts -- at $153.5 million -- were 4.4 percent higher than they were at this time last year.

The numbers this month -- while impressive -- are actually nothing new; they simply continue a trend that essentially began when a small reduction in the income tax rate took effect in early 2011.

As OCPA fiscal policy director Jonathan Small has pointed out, a reduction in tax rates followed by growth in revenues teaches us something useful and, well, obvious: A reduction in tax rates can actually lead to growth in revenues.

Still, that's not the reason we at OCPA advocate the gradual elimination of the state income tax.

State tax collections continue to climb

By Tina Korbe Dzurisin

General Revenue Fund collections in October grew at double the rate of the previous month -- and exceeded the official estimate by nearly 10 percent, according to a press release from the Oklahoma Office of State Finance.

Individual income tax receipts -- at $186 million -- were 7.6 percent higher than they were in October 2011, and sales tax receipts -- at $153.5 million -- were 4.4 percent higher than they were at this time last year.

The numbers this month -- while impressive -- are actually nothing new; they simply continue a trend that essentially began when a small reduction in the income tax rate took effect in early 2011.

As OCPA fiscal policy director Jonathan Small has pointed out, a reduction in tax rates followed by growth in revenues teaches us something useful and, well, obvious: A reduction in tax rates can actually lead to growth in revenues.

Still, that's not the reason we at OCPA advocate the gradual elimination of the state income tax.

The article cited Oklahoma's car insurance rate as evidence that the state cannot get Oklahomans to comply with mandates. (On an interesting side note, the article went on to point out that a significant portion of that number comes from Oklahoma's high illegal immigrant population, begging the question of what the federal government should actually be doing in the first place.)

The Post visited Cattleman's Steakhouse, where they interviewed local patrons and got a real sense of Oklahoma's opinion on the idea of the federal government forcing us to buy health insurance.

The results of any election -- let alone those of an election of "historic proportions," as this election was so frequently billed -- can be mined for insights for weeks, months and years to come. It's unlikely, then, that what we consider the top 5 lessons of Tuesday night now will be what we consider to be the top 5 lessons in the final analysis. Nevertheless, now is as good a time as any to attempt to make sense of an election that was at once predictable and unprecedented.

With that, we give you the list.

Freshman GOP Representatives Encourage Return of Federal "Obamacare" Funds

OKLAHOMA CITY – Freshman Republican representatives are encouraging state officials to not accept federal funds promised to Oklahoma under an "Early Innovator" grant authorized by the federal Affordable Care Act.

In February, the House approved HB 2130, which establishes a state health insurance exchange. The bill did not include a provision to accept or deny the $54M grant.

"What we voted for was a free-market exchange based on choice and competition, which will ultimately lower health care costs," said Rep. Randy Grau, R-Edmond. "We did not vote to accept federal money that may require us to set up a federal health care system."

"Since the vote on HB 2130, it has become increasingly apparent that we cannot accept this money without also accepting the strings attached to it," said Rep. Elise Hall, R-Oklahoma City. "It is time to go on record that we do not want this money, but instead, we want to set up an exchange that is right for Oklahoma, not Washington D.C."

"We join Senator Tom Coburn and many conservative organizations in supporting health insurance exchanges like that established in Utah," said Rep. Tom Newell, R-Seminole. "But we think it is important to sever any ties to Obamacare, which means that the federal funds need to be rejected."

"The idea of an exchange based upon free-market principles comes from the Heritage Foundation, a leading conservative think tank," said Rep. Sean Roberts, R-Hominy. "The idea was around before President Obama, but it appears he is now trying to use exchanges to push federal health care."

"We will continue to work with the Governor and House leadership in promoting Oklahoma health care solutions, not Washington D.C. solutions," said Rep. Marty Quinn, R-Claremore.

"Many of us in the House campaigned on the platform of free market principles. If we accept federal money with strings attached, we are going back on our word," said Rep. Josh Cockroft, R-Tecumseh. "It is time for us to sever any ties to Obamacare and allow the private sector to thrive under these free market principles."

"I strongly support the private sector and oppose Obamacare and the use of federal money for a health care exchange,” said Rep. Dennis Casey, R-Morrison.

“The state must learn to stop accepting federal money and let Oklahomans take care of Oklahoma,” said Rep. Aaron Stiles, R-Norman.

“The attachment of the federal money and its link to federal health care was not fully recognized before the vote on the exchange,” said Rep. Dustin Roberts, R-Durant.

“Clarification of the issue seems to tie federal grant money to the Obamacare effort,” said Rep. Jadine Nollan, R-Sand Springs. “I support an Oklahoma health insurance exchange without any federal ties.”

From our meeting on Thursday, I thought I would send out what I read at that time. Again, keep in mind that this was scratched out from the hip on a yellow pad during session. (my disclaimer) However, there seemed to be some agreement in the meeting the IF we go down this path, this is a good basic messaging. As a reminder, this is a "what if" scenario. We have NOT determined if we will be going down this path. We should know more tomorrow.

Basic message.....

"We received early unofficial indications that the plan/strategy that we were attempting to put in place to hold back a federal health insurance exchange and preserve our state's private healthcare system and private health insurance markets will not be viewed by HHS as any kind of compliance with the ACA and therefore would not prevent nor delay them from moving forward to establish a federal health insurance exchange.

The House, Senate, and Governor's office have no desire to move further into compliance with the ACA prior to the Supreme Court decision and November election.

Therefore, at this point we have decided that we will not move forward. If indeed our two avenues of repeal (legal and ballot) do not materialize and a federal insurance exchange has been established in Oklahoma, at the earliest opportunity, we plan to give HHS 12 month notice of our desire to takeover any federal exchange that has been established."

Hope this helps. We'll be in close touch.

Hi Alex,

Thanks for the note. Reached out to see if you'd be interested in being a part of a series called Resisting Obamacare. So far we've featured Gov. Rick Scott and Gov. Rick Perry. We'd love to share Gov. Fallin's perspective with our readers on what resisting Obamacare looks like in Oklahoma. Is it refusing to implement? Waiting for the election? You get the point.

They're typically 500-850 words. We'd run it shortly after receiving it. We'd want it to be exclusive to The Washington Times for 24 hours and for any outlets running it after that to give us credit.

Please let me know if we may feature the Governor as part of this series.

Thanks much,

- Communicate a vision for reform;
- Identify performance goals and measure progress;
- Engage key leaders from education, business, and philanthropy;
- Build educator capacity;
- Lead transitions in state assessments and accountability policy;
- Support local development and acquisition of new curricula and materials; and
- Maximize resources and share costs.

What's New

RFA Available: Learning Network on Improving Birth Outcomes

As governors continue to seek ways to reduce Medicaid costs while improving care for beneficiaries, one area where some states are seeing success is reducing preterm births. Medicaid and CHIP cover nearly 50 percent of births nationwide and there is a relatively high incidence of premature births across the program. The resulting medical complications of a preterm birth are not only harmful for the infant, but directly translate into increased costs -- from 9 to 33 times the cost of a full-term delivery.

The National Governors Association has launched a Learning Network on "Improving Birth Outcomes" to assist states in developing, implementing and aligning their key policies and initiatives related to the improvement of birth outcomes. Over the next year, NGA will convene in-state sessions in 12 selected states to facilitate this process. This will be the first of three opportunities to apply for this Learning Network. There will be four states selected in each round, which will include a networking conference to facilitate shared learning.

Applications are due on November 21, and the first state visits will take place in January. There will be a conference call on November 2 at 3:00 pm for those interested in learning more about this opportunity. Contact us with any questions and to receive the request for applications.

Strategies for Curbing Health Insurance Costs for State Employees: Benefit Design, Wellness Programs, and Data Mining

With continued strains on state budgets, governors are finding innovative ways to do more with less across state government. Included in those budget strains are the rising health care costs and rising insurance premiums for state employee health care benefits. A new issue brief by the National Governors Association (NGA) examines ways to provide state employees with access to quality care at lower costs rather than simply raising premiums or cutting health benefits.

This issue brief examines several models for employees' insurance plans, including:

- Collecting and analyzing data to understand rising health care costs and inform decisions about changes in health plans;
- Offering wellness programs and incentives for state employees to improve health outcomes by preventing chronic diseases and reducing the costs of treatment; and
- Introducing new health benefit plans such as high-deductible or consumer driven health plans; health plans designed to maximize the value of expenditures; and plans that offer tiered or limited provider networks.

Health Policy Resource Center Now Available

The National Governors Association (NGA) today unveiled a new website, State Health Policy Options. The site, <http://statepolicyoptions.nga.org/>, is a virtual resource center developed by NGA that will make it easier to explore potential solutions to health policy problems that state policymakers face. The website also will provide policymakers with innovative approaches from expert analysis and the experience of states in their efforts to improve health care access, affordability and quality.

The website focuses on various topics, including:

- Planning for 2014: Provides information and analysis relevant to health insurance exchanges, Medicaid and insurance subsidy and tax credit policies that increase health insurance coverage once the Affordable Care Act changes required by 2014 come into effect;
- Cost Containment: Examines state initiatives to reduce Medicaid costs and maintain access to quality care for beneficiaries;
- Improving System Performance: Explores ways to lower health care costs, improve the quality of care and provide access to many people as possible;
- Prevention and Health Promotion: Considers how states can use their various roles to promote better health among state residents;
- Workforce: Focuses on how states can develop effective workforce planning and development strategies to respond to the growing demand on health care; and
- Health Information Technology: Shares ways to improve system performance, support patient self-management, support widespread adoption of electronic health records and design effective health information exchanges.

Each of the topic areas includes policy options for states; case studies of state-led efforts; federal regulations, guidance and grant opportunities for states; and expert sources with subject matter expertise.

Meetings

High Stakes Assessment and the Common Core

Currently more than half of the states administer high-stakes exit examinations to students by tying passage of minimum standards tests to high school graduation. The implementation of the CCSS provides an opening for states to raise the question about whether they plan to continue tying the results of high school assessments to graduation decisions, and if so, what transition steps are necessary in light of the new standards and assessments.

In an effort to engage these issues, NGA invites up to eight state teams to participate in a conversation about high stakes assessments. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams may consist of up to three individuals, including the governor's education policy advisor, state department of education representative (deputy or assistant secretary level or higher is required), state board of education member and/or state legislator (such as chair of House/Senate education committee).

Postsecondary Transitions and the Common Core

The CCSS present an unprecedented opportunity to ensure that recent high school graduates come to college or a career-training program ready for success in credit-bearing work. Involvement of postsecondary educators and faculty in the implementation of these standards is key to their ultimate success, as they affect areas such as preparation for postsecondary success, in- and pre-service teacher and leader education, and placement of students. While many states and postsecondary institutions are engaged in these efforts, support for postsecondary decision-maker involvement has been less robust than it needs to be if these efforts are to be successful.

To advance conversations regarding these issues, NGA invites teams of two (2) from up to eight (8) states to participate in a conversation about postsecondary transition issues. This meeting will be held back-to-back with the High Stakes

Assessment policy forum. Teams may participate in one or both meetings. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams should include the governor's education policy advisor and one higher education official from the higher education executive office or postsecondary system office.

Preparing Effective Pre-K to 12 School Leaders: Learning from Illinois' Experience

The NGA Center's Education Division will hold a learning lab in Chicago on Illinois' efforts to link principals' professional development and the state's early childhood education goals. Participants will also hear about how Illinois' principal preparation redesign is part of a larger state effort to strengthen linkages between early learning and Pre-K to 12 state policies.

Interested states should submit contact information for up to four state team members by September 21st. The team must include the governor's education policy advisor or senior designee and a representative from your state's early childhood advisory council. The NGA Center will reimburse for travel and expenses for up to six teams on a first come, first serve basis. Please contact Amanda Szekely for more information.

National Summit on Government Redesign

Over the past few years, governors have been leading their states to redesign policies and processes in an effort to reduce costs and improve efficiency. The summit will allow state teams to learn about best practices and share experiences around those efforts to reform and streamline state government. Participants will hear from national experts and their peers in other states on topics such as reforming pensions and benefits to attract the state workforce of the future, changing Medicaid to constrain cost growth, managing K-12 and higher education budgets to promote efficiency, using data to design effective policies and track performance, and communicating redesign results to constituents.

Participating individuals or teams should be appointed by the governor. Teams should be comprised of senior state leaders such as, budget directors, policy directors, agency directors, and chiefs of staff, who are in a position to develop and implement substantial changes in policies and practices. Travel-related expenses will be covered for up to two participants from each state. Please contact Erin Sparks for registration information.

What's New

RFA Available: Learning Network on Improving Birth Outcomes

As governors continue to seek ways to reduce Medicaid costs while improving care for beneficiaries, one area where some states are seeing success is reducing preterm births. Medicaid and CHIP cover nearly 50 percent of births nationwide and there is a relatively high incidence of premature births across the program. The resulting medical complications of a preterm birth are not only harmful for the infant, but directly translate into increased costs -- from 9 to 33 times the cost of a full-term delivery.

The National Governors Association has launched a Learning Network on "Improving Birth Outcomes" to assist states in developing, implementing and aligning their key policies and initiatives related to the improvement of birth outcomes. Over the next year, NGA will convene in-state sessions in 12 selected states to facilitate this process. This will be the first of three opportunities to apply for this Learning Network. There will be four states selected in each round, which will include a networking conference to facilitate shared learning.

Applications are due on November 21, and the first state visits will take place in January. There will be a conference call on November 2 at 3:00 pm for those interested in learning more about this opportunity. Contact us with any questions and to receive the request for applications.

Strategies for Curbing Health Insurance Costs for State Employees: Benefit Design, Wellness Programs, and Data Mining

With continued strains on state budgets, governors are finding innovative ways to do more with less across state government. Included in those budget strains are the rising health care costs and rising insurance premiums for state employee health care benefits. A new issue brief by the National Governors Association (NGA) examines ways to provide state employees with access to quality care at lower costs rather than simply raising premiums or cutting health benefits.

This issue brief examines several models for employees' insurance plans, including:

- Collecting and analyzing data to understand rising health care costs and inform decisions about changes in health plans;
- Offering wellness programs and incentives for state employees to improve health outcomes by preventing chronic diseases and reducing the costs of treatment; and
- Introducing new health benefit plans such as high-deductible or consumer driven health plans; health plans designed to maximize the value of expenditures; and plans that offer tiered or limited provider networks.

Health Policy Resource Center Now Available

The National Governors Association (NGA) today unveiled a new website, State Health Policy Options. The site, <http://statepolicyoptions.nga.org/>, is a virtual resource center developed by NGA that will make it easier to explore potential solutions to health policy problems that state policymakers face. The website also will provide policymakers with innovative approaches from expert analysis and the experience of states in their efforts to improve health care access, affordability and quality.

The website focuses on various topics, including:

- Planning for 2014: Provides information and analysis relevant to health insurance exchanges, Medicaid and insurance subsidy and tax credit policies that increase health insurance coverage once the Affordable Care Act changes required by 2014 come into effect;
- Cost Containment: Examines state initiatives to reduce Medicaid costs and maintain access to quality care for beneficiaries;
- Improving System Performance: Explores ways to lower health care costs, improve the quality of care and provide access to many people as possible;
- Prevention and Health Promotion: Considers how states can use their various roles to promote better health among state residents;
- Workforce: Focuses on how states can develop effective workforce planning and development strategies to respond to the growing demand on health care; and
- Health Information Technology: Shares ways to improve system performance, support patient self-management, support widespread adoption of electronic health records and design effective health information exchanges.

Each of the topic areas includes policy options for states; case studies of state-led efforts; federal regulations, guidance and grant opportunities for states; and expert sources with subject matter expertise.

Webinars

Education and Outreach to Engage Consumers in Buying PEVs

Consumer acceptance of PEVs is an important goal for ensuring widespread vehicle adoption. NGA will invite a panel of speakers to share the latest approaches to increase public awareness and acceptance of EVs. Speakers are expected to include federal, state and private sector participants. This is the first webinar of the State Electric Vehicles Learning Network, designed to help state share best practices and lessons learned that advance the deployment of electric vehicles and plug-in hybrids (PEVs). The website focuses on various topics, including:

- Planning for 2014: Provides information and analysis relevant to health insurance exchanges, Medicaid and insurance subsidy and tax credit policies that increase health insurance coverage once the Affordable Care Act changes required by 2014 come into effect;
- Cost Containment: Examines state initiatives to reduce Medicaid costs and maintain access to quality care for beneficiaries;
- Improving System Performance: Explores ways to lower health care costs, improve the quality of care and provide access to many people as possible;
- Prevention and Health Promotion: Considers how states can use their various roles to promote better health among state residents;
- Workforce: Focuses on how states can develop effective workforce planning and development strategies to respond to the growing demand on health care; and
- Health Information Technology: Shares ways to improve system performance, support patient self-management, support widespread adoption of electronic health records and design effective health information exchanges.

Each of the topic areas includes policy options for states; case studies of state-led efforts; federal regulations, guidance and grant opportunities for states; and expert sources with subject matter expertise.

Meetings

High Stakes Assessment and the Common Core

Currently more than half of the states administer high-stakes exit examinations to students by tying passage of minimum standards tests to high school graduation. The implementation of the CCSS provides an opening for states to raise the question about whether they plan to continue tying the results of high school assessments to graduation decisions, and if so, what transition steps are necessary in light of the new standards and assessments.

In an effort to engage these issues, NGA invites up to eight state teams to participate in a conversation about high stakes assessments. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams may consist of up to three individuals, including the governor's education policy advisor, state department of education representative (deputy or assistant secretary level or higher is required), state board of education member and/or state legislator (such as chair of House/Senate education committee).

Postsecondary Transitions and the Common Core

The CCSS present an unprecedented opportunity to ensure that recent high school graduates come to college or a career-training program ready for success in credit-bearing work. Involvement of postsecondary educators and faculty in the implementation of these standards is key to their ultimate success, as they affect areas such as preparation for postsecondary success, in- and pre-service teacher and leader education, and placement of students. While many states and postsecondary institutions are engaged in these efforts, support for postsecondary decision-maker involvement has been less robust than it needs to be if these efforts are to be successful.

To advance conversations regarding these issues, NGA invites teams of two (2) from up to eight (8) states to participate in a conversation about postsecondary transition issues. This meeting will be held back-to-back with the High Stakes Assessment policy forum. Teams may participate in one or both meetings. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams should include the governor's education policy advisor and one higher education official from the higher education executive office or postsecondary system office.

Preparing Effective Pre-K to 12 School Leaders: Learning from Illinois' Experience

The NGA Center's Education Division will hold a learning lab in Chicago on Illinois' efforts to link principals' professional development and the state's early childhood education goals. Participants will also hear about how Illinois' principal preparation redesign is part of a larger state effort to strengthen linkages between early learning and Pre-K to 12 state policies.

Interested states should submit contact information for up to four state team members by September 21st. The team must include the governor's education policy advisor or senior designee and a representative from your state's early childhood advisory council. ## What's New

RFA Available: Learning Network on Improving Birth Outcomes

As governors continue to seek ways to reduce Medicaid costs while improving care for beneficiaries, one area where some states are seeing success is reducing preterm births. Medicaid and CHIP cover nearly 50 percent of births nationwide and there is a relatively high incidence of premature births across the program. The resulting medical complications of a preterm birth are not only harmful for the infant, but directly translate into increased costs -- from 9 to 33 times the cost of a full-term delivery.

The National Governors Association has launched a Learning Network on "Improving Birth Outcomes" to assist states in developing, implementing and aligning their key policies and initiatives related to the improvement of birth outcomes. Over the next year, NGA will convene in-state sessions in 12 selected states to facilitate this process. This will be the first of three opportunities to apply for this Learning Network. There will be four states selected in each round, which will include a networking conference to facilitate shared learning.

Applications are due on November 21, and the first state visits will take place in January. There will be a conference call on November 2 at 3:00 pm for those interested in learning more about this opportunity. Contact us with any questions and to receive the request for applications.

Strategies for Curbing Health Insurance Costs for State Employees: Benefit Design, Wellness Programs, and Data Mining

With continued strains on state budgets, governors are finding innovative ways to do more with less across state government. Included in those budget strains are the rising health care costs and rising insurance premiums for state employee health care benefits. A new issue brief by the National Governors Association (NGA) examines ways to provide state employees with access to quality care at lower costs rather than simply raising premiums or cutting health benefits.

This issue brief examines several models for employees' insurance plans, including:

- Collecting and analyzing data to understand rising health care costs and inform decisions about changes in health plans;
- Offering wellness programs and incentives for state employees to improve health outcomes by preventing chronic diseases and reducing the costs of treatment; and
- Introducing new health benefit plans such as high-deductible or consumer driven health plans; health plans designed to maximize the value of expenditures; and plans that offer tiered or limited provider networks.

Health Policy Resource Center Now Available

The National Governors Association (NGA) today unveiled a new website, State Health Policy Options. The site, <http://statepolicyoptions.nga.org/>, is a virtual resource center developed by NGA that will make it easier to explore potential solutions to health policy problems that state policymakers face. The website also will provide policymakers with innovative approaches from expert analysis and the experience of states in their efforts to improve health care access, affordability and quality.

The website focuses on various topics, including:

- Planning for 2014: Provides information and analysis relevant to health insurance exchanges, Medicaid and insurance subsidy and tax credit policies that increase health insurance coverage once the Affordable Care Act changes required by 2014 come into effect;
- Cost Containment: Examines state initiatives to reduce Medicaid costs and maintain access to quality care for beneficiaries;

- Improving System Performance: Explores ways to lower health care costs, improve the quality of care and provide access to many people as possible;
- Prevention and Health Promotion: Considers how states can use their various roles to promote better health among state residents;
- Workforce: Focuses on how states can develop effective workforce planning and development strategies to respond to the growing demand on health care; and
- Health Information Technology: Shares ways to improve system performance, support patient self-management, support widespread adoption of electronic health records and design effective health information exchanges.

Each of the topic areas includes policy options for states; case studies of state-led efforts; federal regulations, guidance and grant opportunities for states; and expert sources with subject matter expertise.

High Stakes Assessment and the Common Core

Currently more than half of the states administer high-stakes exit examinations to students by tying passage of minimum standards tests to high school graduation. The implementation of the CCSS provides an opening for states to raise the question about whether they plan to continue tying the results of high school assessments to graduation decisions, and if so, what transition steps are necessary in light of the new standards and assessments.

In an effort to engage these issues, NGA invites up to eight state teams to participate in a conversation about high stakes assessments. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams may consist of up to three individuals, including the governor's education policy advisor, state department of education representative (deputy or assistant secretary level or higher is required), state board of education member and/or state legislator (such as chair of House/Senate education committee).

Postsecondary Transitions and the Common Core

The CCSS present an unprecedented opportunity to ensure that recent high school graduates come to college or a career-training program ready for success in credit-bearing work. Involvement of postsecondary educators and faculty in the implementation of these standards is key to their ultimate success, as they affect areas such as preparation for postsecondary success, in- and pre-service teacher and leader education, and placement of students. While many states and postsecondary institutions are engaged in these efforts, support for postsecondary decision-maker involvement has been less robust than it needs to be if these efforts are to be successful.

To advance conversations regarding these issues, NGA invites teams of two (2) from up to eight (8) states to participate in a conversation about postsecondary transition issues. This meeting will be held back-to-back with the High Stakes Assessment policy forum. Teams may participate in one or both meetings. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams should include the governor's education policy advisor and one higher education official from the higher education executive office or postsecondary system office.

What's New

RFA Available: Learning Network on Improving Birth Outcomes

As governors continue to seek ways to reduce Medicaid costs while improving care for beneficiaries, one area where some states are seeing success is reducing preterm births. Medicaid and CHIP cover nearly 50 percent of births nationwide and there is a relatively high incidence of premature births across the program. The resulting medical complications of a preterm birth are not only harmful for the infant, but directly translate into increased costs -- from 9 to 33 times the cost of a full-term delivery.

The National Governors Association has launched a Learning Network on "Improving Birth Outcomes" to assist states in developing, implementing and aligning their key policies and initiatives related to the improvement of birth outcomes. Over the next year, NGA will convene in-state sessions in 12 selected states to facilitate this process. This will be the first of three opportunities to apply for this Learning Network. There will be four states selected in each round, which will include a networking conference to facilitate shared learning.

Applications are due on November 21, and the first state visits will take place in January. There will be a conference call on November 2 at 3:00 pm for those interested in learning more about this opportunity. Contact us with any questions and to receive the request for applications.

Strategies for Curbing Health Insurance Costs for State Employees: Benefit Design, Wellness Programs, and Data Mining

With continued strains on state budgets, governors are finding innovative ways to do more with less across state government. Included in those budget strains are the rising health care costs and rising insurance premiums for state employee health care benefits. A new issue brief by the National Governors Association (NGA) examines ways to provide state employees with access to quality care at lower costs rather than simply raising premiums or cutting health benefits.

This issue brief examines several models for employees' insurance plans, including:

- Collecting and analyzing data to understand rising health care costs and inform decisions about changes in health plans;
- Offering wellness programs and incentives for state employees to improve health outcomes by preventing chronic diseases and reducing the costs of treatment; and
- Introducing new health benefit plans such as high-deductible or consumer driven health plans; health plans designed to maximize the value of expenditures; and plans that offer tiered or limited provider networks.

Health Policy Resource Center Now Available

The National Governors Association (NGA) today unveiled a new website, State Health Policy Options. The site, <http://statepolicyoptions.nga.org/>, is a virtual resource center developed by NGA that will make it easier to explore potential solutions to health policy problems that state policymakers face. The website also will provide policymakers with innovative approaches from expert analysis and the experience of states in their efforts to improve health care access, affordability and quality.

The website focuses on various topics, including:

- Planning for 2014: Provides information and analysis relevant to health insurance exchanges, Medicaid and insurance subsidy and tax credit policies that increase health insurance coverage once the Affordable Care Act changes required by 2014 come into effect;
- Cost Containment: Examines state initiatives to reduce Medicaid costs and maintain access to quality care for beneficiaries;

- Improving System Performance: Explores ways to lower health care costs, improve the quality of care and provide access to many people as possible;
- Prevention and Health Promotion: Considers how states can use their various roles to promote better health among state residents;
- Workforce: Focuses on how states can develop effective workforce planning and development strategies to respond to the growing demand on health care; and
- Health Information Technology: Shares ways to improve system performance, support patient self-management, support widespread adoption of electronic health records and design effective health information exchanges.

Each of the topic areas includes policy options for states; case studies of state-led efforts; federal regulations, guidance and grant opportunities for states; and expert sources with subject matter expertise.

Meetings

High Stakes Assessment and the Common Core

Currently more than half of the states administer high-stakes exit examinations to students by tying passage of minimum standards tests to high school graduation. The implementation of the CCSS provides an opening for states to raise the question about whether they plan to continue tying the results of high school assessments to graduation decisions, and if so, what transition steps are necessary in light of the new standards and assessments.

In an effort to engage these issues, NGA invites up to eight state teams to participate in a conversation about high stakes assessments. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams may consist of up to three individuals, including the governor's education policy advisor, state department of education representative (deputy or assistant secretary level or higher is required), state board of education member and/or state legislator (such as chair of House/Senate education committee).

Postsecondary Transitions and the Common Core

The CCSS present an unprecedented opportunity to ensure that recent high school graduates come to college or a career-training program ready for success in credit-bearing work. Involvement of postsecondary educators and faculty in the implementation of these standards is key to their ultimate success, as they affect areas such as preparation for postsecondary success, in- and pre-service teacher and leader education, and placement of students. While many states and postsecondary institutions are engaged in these efforts, support for postsecondary decision-maker involvement has been less robust than it needs to be if these efforts are to be successful.

To advance conversations regarding these issues, NGA invites teams of two (2) from up to eight (8) states to participate in a conversation about postsecondary transition issues. This meeting will be held back-to-back with the High Stakes Assessment policy forum. Teams may participate in one or both meetings. Participation is on a first-come, first-serve basis. State teams should include the governor's education policy advisor and one higher education official from the higher education executive office or postsecondary system office.

What's New

RFA Available: Learning Network on Improving Birth Outcomes

As governors continue to seek ways to reduce Medicaid costs while improving care for beneficiaries, one area where some states are seeing success is reducing preterm births. Medicaid and CHIP cover nearly 50 percent of births nationwide and there is a relatively high incidence of premature births across the program. The resulting medical complications of a preterm birth are not only harmful for the infant, but directly translate into increased costs -- from 9 to 33 times the cost of a full-term delivery.

The National Governors Association has launched a Learning Network on "Improving Birth Outcomes" to assist states in developing, implementing and aligning their key policies and initiatives related to the improvement of birth outcomes. Over the next year, NGA will convene in-state sessions in 12 selected states to facilitate this process. This will be the first of three opportunities to apply for this Learning Network. There will be four states selected in each round, which will include a networking conference to facilitate shared learning.

Applications are due on November 21, and the first state visits will take place in January. There will be a conference call on November 2 at 3:00 pm for those interested in learning more about this opportunity. Contact us with any questions and to receive the request for applications.

Strategies for Curbing Health Insurance Costs for State Employees: Benefit Design, Wellness Programs, and Data Mining

With continued strains on state budgets, governors are finding innovative ways to do more with less across state government. Included in those budget strains are the rising health care costs and rising insurance premiums for state employee health care benefits. A new issue brief by the National Governors Association (NGA) examines ways to provide state employees with access to quality care at lower costs rather than simply raising premiums or cutting health benefits.

This issue brief examines several models for employees' insurance plans, including:

- Collecting and analyzing data to understand rising health care costs and inform decisions about changes in health plans;
- Offering wellness programs and incentives for state employees to improve health outcomes by preventing chronic diseases and reducing the costs of treatment; and
- Introducing new health benefit plans such as high-deductible or consumer driven health plans; health plans designed to maximize the value of expenditures; and plans that offer tiered or limited provider networks.

Health Policy Resource Center Now Available

The National Governors Association (NGA) today unveiled a new website, State Health Policy Options. The site, <http://statepolicyoptions.nga.org/>, is a virtual resource center developed by NGA that will make it easier to explore potential solutions to health policy problems that state policymakers face. The website also will provide policymakers with innovative approaches from expert analysis and the experience of states in their efforts to improve health care access, affordability and quality.

The website focuses on various topics, including:

- Planning for 2014: Provides information and analysis relevant to health insurance exchanges, Medicaid and insurance subsidy and tax credit policies that increase health insurance coverage once the Affordable Care Act changes required by 2014 come into effect;
- Cost Containment: Examines state initiatives to reduce Medicaid costs and maintain access to quality care for beneficiaries;
- Improving System Performance: Explores ways to lower health care costs, improve the quality of care and provide access to many people as possible;
- Prevention and Health Promotion: Considers how states can use their various roles to promote better health among state residents;
- Workforce: Focuses on how states can develop effective workforce planning and development strategies to respond to the growing demand on health care; and
- Health Information Technology: Shares ways to improve system performance, support patient self-management, support widespread adoption of electronic health records and design effective health information exchanges.

Each of the topic areas includes policy options for states; case studies of state-led efforts; federal regulations, guidance and grant opportunities for states; and expert sources with subject matter expertise.

What concerns me is the misinformation and the uneducated idiots that are screwing up this story and intertwining the $54 million, the refusal to expand Medicaid and the exchange...

For example...does he really have a freakin clue what he's talking about? At ALL?

“I have two concerns,” said State Rep. Ed Cannaday (D-Porum). “One is will the attorney general’s (Scott Pruitt) approach to this be successful and, two, that we don’t want any federal oversight and involvement in our healthcare.”

Cannaday is worried the money, that would have gone to support healthcare initiatives in Oklahoma, will end up as part of an exchange in a neighboring state.

If Fallin had agreed to Medicaid expansion, more than 200,000 additional Oklahoma men, women and children would have been eligible for healthcare coverage.

Healthcare exchange money has been reported at $54 million for Oklahoma, which would include operating expenses.

“Because other states around the country have decided to seek healthcare coverage for their citizens,” Scott Inman (D-Del City) said. “Oklahoma Republican leaders created a situation where Oklahoma tax dollars will be sent to other places to insure their citizens.”

RE: Reconciliation

From day one, House Republicans have been focused on job creation. We understand that the debt and deficit have placed a massive burden on our economy and American families. Testimony before Congress and even the President's own Bowles-Simpson Commission demonstrates that the debt has slowed our economy by about one percentage point, which translates into approximately one million unrealized American jobs. If we do not get the nation's debt under control, our economy and our families will continue to suffer.

That is why one of the many reforms included in the House-passed Budget Resolution is the initiation of a "reconciliation" process, whereby certain House Committees would propose changes to current mandatory spending programs in order to generate a specified amount of savings. The savings generated from these reforms to mandatory programs would first be used to offset the cost (approximately $78 billion)<sup>[1]</sup> of replacing the automatic across-the-board discretionary spending cuts that are scheduled to occur on January 2, 2013, under what is known as sequestration. The additional savings achieved through reconciliation beyond the $78 billion (over $180 billion in the next ten years) would further reduce the deficit.

The six House Committees that received reconciliation instruction under the House-passed Budget Resolution are currently beginning the process of marking up their reconciliation packages which the House will take up as one bill in early May.

This memo will provide you with information on the necessity of replacing sequestration and a summary of the specific savings proposals that we anticipate being part of the final reconciliation bill.

Why it is Necessary to Replace the Sequester

As a result of political posturing by the Democrats, the "Super Committee" failed to report and Congress failed to enact $1.2 trillion in deficit reduction last December. Thus, current law requires that there be across-the-board cuts, known as a "sequester," imposed on January 2, 2013. The sequester will result in a 10% reduction in Department of Defense programs and an 8% reduction in certain domestic programs, such as the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and border security.

Intended as a mechanism to force action, there is bipartisan agreement that the sequester going into place would undercut key responsibilities of the federal government.

As the Administration makes clear in their own Budget, “By design, the sequester is not good policy and is meant to force Congress to take action: it would lead to significant cuts to critical domestic programs such as education and research and cuts to defense programs that could undermine our national security. ... [C]uts of this magnitude done in an across-the-board fashion would be devastating both to defense and non-defense programs.” [The Budget of the United States Government, Fiscal Year 2013, p. 24, February 13, 2012]

Of particular concern is the impact sequestration, if allowed to occur, would have on our national security.

The sequestration cuts would be on top of the savings in discretionary defense spending that were already implemented as part of the debt limit agreement last August.

The House Armed Services Committee has analyzed the impact of the sequestration, and found that if left in place, sequestration would cut the military to its smallest size since before the Second World War – all while we are still a nation at war in Afghanistan, facing increased threats from Iran and North Korea, unrest in the Middle East, and a rising China.

Major consequences include:

- 200,000 soldiers and Marines separated from service, bringing our force well below our pre-9/11 levels;
- Ability to respond to contingencies in North Korea or Iran at jeopardy;
- The smallest ground force since 1940;
- A fleet of fewer than 230 ships, the smallest level since 1915;
- The smallest tactical fighter force in the history of the Air Force;
- Our nuclear triad that has kept the US and 30 of our allies safe for decades will be in jeopardy;
- Reductions of 20 percent in defense civilian personnel; and
- Two BRAC rounds of base closings.

[House Armed Services Committee Memo “Assessment of Impacts of Budget Cuts”, 9/22/2011]

Secretary Panetta and the professional military leadership have also looked at the impact of sequestration and reached similar conclusions:

Secretary Panetta stated, "If the maximum sequestration is triggered, the total cut will rise to about $1 trillion compared with the FY 2012 plan. The impacts of these cuts would be devastating for the Department... Facing such large reductions, we would have to reduce the size of the military sharply. Rough estimates suggest after ten years of these cuts, we would have the smallest ground force since 1940, the smallest number of ships since 1915, and the smallest Air Force in its history." [Secretary Panetta, Letter to Senator John McCain, 11/14/2011]

General Dempsey, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, stated, "[S]equestration leaves me three places to go to find the additional money: operations, maintenance, and training. That's the definition of a hollow force."

The individual branch service chiefs echoed General Dempsey:

- "Cuts of this magnitude would be catastrophic to the military...My assessment is that the nation would incur an unacceptable level of strategic and operational risk." – General Ray T. Odierno, Chief Of Staff, United States Army
- "A severe and irreversible impact on the Navy's future," – Admiral Jonathan W. Greenert, Chief of Naval Operations
- "A Marine Corps below the end strength that's necessary to support even one major contingency," – General James F. Amos, Commandant of the Marine Corps
- "Even the most thoroughly deliberated strategy may not be able to overcome dire consequences," – General Norton A. Schwartz, Chief of Staff, United States Air Force

[Testimony of Service Chief before House Armed Services Committee, 11/2/2011]

Armed Services Ranking Member Adam Smith recently gave a speech about the need to reverse sequestration. During a question and answer period after the speech, he stated, "What I am saying is, we are going to have to re-write the sequestration law before January 1, one way or another, in order to make sure i[t] makes sense and can fit. I believe that between now and then we will find $1.2 trillion in deficit reduction somewhere, somehow, and avoid the immediate sequestration. But as the gentleman asked, the problem is now. If we wait until September we will have done great harm to the economy."

According to an analysis by the House Appropriations Committee, the sequester will also have a significant impact on non-defense discretionary programs, including:

- Automatically reducing Head Start by $650 million, resulting in 75,000 fewer slots for children in the program;
- Automatically reducing the National Institutes of Health (NIH) by $2.4 billion, an amount equal to nearly half of total NIH spending on cancer this year; and

- A reduction of approximately 1,870 Border Patrol Agents (a reduction of nearly 9% of the total number of agents).

Democrats Have Failed to Offer a Credible Solution

While both Republicans and Democrats have warned of the consequences from both immediate sequestration cuts and the looming debt crisis, the President and leading Senate Democrats refuse to advance credible solutions:

- The President insists on taking more money from hardworking families and small businesses, a policy that will only exacerbate our current economic problems.
- Just as bad, Senate Democrats have failed to pass a budget in more than 1,000 days, and have chosen to give up on budgeting again this year.

Common-Sense Republican Reforms

Pursuant to the Budget Resolution, the House will advance a series of reforms that replace across-the-board cuts scheduled in law with common-sense reforms that take steps to address government's autopilot spending.

Six House Committees will advance legislation that will:

- Stop Fraud, by Ensuring that Individuals are Actually Eligible for the Taxpayer Benefits They Receive;
- Eliminate Government Slush Funds and Stop Bailouts;
- Control Runaway, Unchecked Spending;
- Restrain Spending on Government Bureaucracies; and
- Reduce Waste and Duplicative Programs.

The savings from these reforms will replace the arbitrary discretionary sequester cuts and lay the groundwork for further efforts to avert the spending-driven economic crisis before us.

Below is an outline of the reforms being advanced by the four committees (Agriculture, Financial Services, Judiciary, and Ways and Means) that are marking up instructions this week (week of April 16).

This memo will be updated to include the recommendations of the Energy & Commerce Committee and the Oversight and Government Reform Committee once their markups are announced.

Taxpayer Benefits They Receive

- Restricting Categorical Eligibility under the SNAP (Food Stamp) Program: Under current law, an individual can automatically qualify for SNAP based on receipt of benefits through other low-income assistance programs, including the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) block grant, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), or state-run General Assistance (GA) programs.

- The Obama Administration has actively encouraged states to implement a policy called “broad-based categorical eligibility,” which means states are conveying SNAP eligibility based upon a household receiving a TANF-funded brochure or access to an “800” number hotline.

As of January, there are now 43 jurisdictions – 40 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, and the Virgin Islands – implementing this policy. Of the 43 jurisdictions using broad-based categorical eligibility, 39 currently have no asset test and 27 have a gross income limit above 130% of the federal poverty guidelines.

- The proposal from the House Agriculture Committee would restrict categorical eligibility to only those households receiving cash assistance from SSI, TANF, or a state-run General Assistance program. Receiving a TANF-funded brochure or a referral to an “800” number telephone hotline would no longer automatically make a household SNAP eligible. According to CBO, this proposal would save $11.7 billion over ten years.

Note: While this change would render some households no longer eligible for SNAP, any household that meets the eligibility requirements in SNAP law will continue receiving its SNAP benefits. This policy change would only affect those who are not truly eligible for the program under SNAP law.

Eliminating the SNAP “Heat and Eat” Loophole: Under current law, low-income households receiving any Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) payments also qualify for the SNAP Standard Utility Allowance (SUA) which automatically increases their SNAP benefits. Approximately 16 states and DC are abusing this interaction (often at the behest of advocacy groups) by sending $1 or $5 LIHEAP checks to low-income households so they may automatically take advantage of the SUA. In practice, if a participant receives $1 in LIHEAP, they can automatically deduct the SUA from their income, so their net income goes down and they receive more SNAP benefits. For example, this can trigger as much as $130 in additional SNAP benefits per month.

The proposal from the Agriculture Committee would change current law so that a LIHEAP payment no longer automatically triggers the SUA deduction, closing this loophole. This provision in no way prevents those households who are paying their utility bills out-of-pocket from receiving the SNAP SUA. Any household paying their utility bills can still receive this deduction. According to CBO, this proposal would save $14.3 billion over ten years.

Preventing Abuse in the Refundable Child Tax Credit: Current law provides for a child tax credit in the amount of $1,000 per child under the age of 17 ($500 per child beginning in 2013). This credit is partially refundable, meaning that taxpayers may, depending on their income and other tax obligations, receive a government check as a result of this credit. Such checks are considered spending for budget purposes. Under the rules in effect through 2012, the refundable portion of the child tax credit – sometimes referred to as the additional child tax credit (ACTC) – is capped at 15 percent of the taxpayer’s earned income above $3,000.

Also under current law, individuals who are ineligible to work in the United States – and are thus ineligible for a Social Security Number (SSN) – can obtain an Individual Taxpayer Identification Number (ITIN) for tax purposes. In 1996, Congress enacted legislation making those without SSNs ineligible to receive the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), a similar refundable tax credit. However, when the refundable portion of the child tax credit was subsequently enacted in 1997, Congress included no similar limitation, and the Treasury Department has taken the position that it lacks the statutory authority to limit the ACTC to those with an SSN. Thus, the refundable portion of the child tax credit currently remains available to individuals who are unable to obtain an SSN because they are ineligible to work in the United States.

The proposal from the House Ways and Means Committee would close this loophole and individuals (or at least one spouse in the case of a joint return) would be required to include their SSN on their tax return in order to claim the refundable portion of the child tax credit. According to the Joint Committee on Taxation, this proposal would save $7.6 billion over ten years.

Fully Recapture Exchange Subsidy Overpayments: The Democrats’ health care law fails to adequately protect taxpayers from overpayments of health insurance Exchange subsidies, even in the case of fraud. Exchange subsidy eligibility is based on two-year old income tax return data. Because income can change (new job, promotion, spouse returns to the workforce, etc.), the government will conduct an annual review to determine if someone received more taxpayer-funded subsidies than he/she was entitled to.

If an overpayment was made, the recipient is required to repay some or all of the overpayment, subject to certain limits described below. Originally, under the health care law, the maximum amount a subsidy recipient was required to repay was $250 for an individual or $400 for a family, even if he/she/they received thousands of dollars in subsidy overpayments. Since the health care law's enactment, two laws have increased the maximum amount of improper Exchange subsidy payments the government can recoup, but in some instances still fails to require full repayment.

The proposal from the Ways and Means Committee would require those who receive Exchange subsidies to which they are not entitled to repay the full amount of overpayments. Individuals and families would still be allowed to keep the subsidies they are entitled to receive under the law. The Joint Committee on Taxation and CBO estimate this provision would reduce the deficit by $43.9 billion over ten years.

Eliminating Government Slush Funds and Stopping Bailouts

Protecting Taxpayers by Eliminating the Dodd-Frank Bailout Fund: The Dodd-Frank Act granted the FDIC "Orderly Liquidation Authority" that gives government bureaucrats the authority to use taxpayer dollars to bail out the creditors of "too big to fail" institutions and treat similarly situated creditors differently. The Democrats have claimed that they created this new resolution authority to prevent a replay of the 2008 bailouts of Bear Stearns, AIG, Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac, Citigroup, Bank of America, GM and Chrysler. But in reality, Dodd-Frank's Orderly Liquidation Authority mechanism just perpetuates the very taxpayer-funded bailout regime it claims it to abolish.

The proposal from the House Financial Services Committee would end "too big to fail" by repealing this Dodd-Frank fund that paves the way for future bailouts. Eliminating the bailout fund will, according to CBO, save $22 billion over ten years for deficit reduction.

Terminate Ineffective Housing Bailouts: The Obama Administration claimed HAMP, its signature foreclosure prevention initiative, would help up to 4 million struggling homeowners. Instead, HAMP has resulted in only 763,000 loans being permanently modified and has been the target of widespread and bipartisan criticism. Of the $30 billion in TARP funds set aside for HAMP, $2.54 billion has actually been disbursed. The Special Inspector General for TARP (SIGTARP), the Congressional Oversight Panel, the Government Accountability Office and even New York Times editorial page have all reported on the ineffectiveness of HAMP and highlighted how this program has hurt, rather than helped, many struggling homeowners.

The Financial Services Committee approved H.R. 839, the HAMP Termination Act, on March 9, 2011, and the House voted to pass the bill 252-170 on March 29, 2011, but the Senate has yet to act. Terminating this costly and ineffective program as part of reconciliation will, according to CBO, result in deficit reduction of $2.8 billion over ten years.

Reforming the National Flood Insurance Program: The National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 established the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) to minimize the economic impact of floods and to provide flood insurance to individuals and businesses. Congress last enacted a long-term NFIP reauthorization and reform bill in 2004. H.R. 1309, the Flood Insurance Reform Act sponsored by Rep. Judy Biggert, includes a five-year reauthorization of the NFIP and will reform the program by encouraging broader participation, increasing financial accountability and eliminating unnecessary rate subsidies. The NFIP has historically failed to charge sufficient rates to cover its risk. H.R. 1309 eliminates unnecessary rate subsidies by including a phase-in of full-risk, actuarial rates for new and certain existing areas designated as "Special Flood Hazard." This will improve the NFIP's financial health.

The Financial Services Committee passed H.R. 1309 by a 54-0 vote on May 12, 2011 and the House approved the bill 406-22 on July 12, 2011, but the Senate has yet to act. Reforming this program as part of reconciliation will, according to CBO, result in $4.9 billion in savings over ten years.

Controlling Runaway, Unchecked Spending

- Eliminate the Indexing on SNAP Nutrition Education: Under current law, states have the option of providing nutrition education to SNAP recipients as part of their program operations; such education is 100% funded by the federal government. Funding for the SNAP nutrition education program is capped at $375 million but is indexed for inflation so that the amount spent increases each year.

The proposal from the Agriculture Committee eliminates the automatic annual spending increase and, according to CBO, saves $546 million over ten years.

- Terminate the SNAP Increase from the Stimulus: The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA) included an across-the-board increase in SNAP benefits effective in April 2009. The ARRA effectively replaced the increase in SNAP benefits that occurs under the Food and Nutrition Act, which is normally based on annual food-price inflation indexing. The ARRA increase was to stay in place until food-price inflation "caught up" so that families did not see a decrease in their monthly SNAP benefit allotment. Therefore, the ARRA benefit increase was originally expected to terminate after FY 2018, when food-price inflation was estimated to "catch up" with the ARRA increase.

Last Congress, when the Democrat majority needed to pay for their other "priorities," including a teacher's union bailout and increasing school meal standards, the ARRA SNAP increase was used twice to offset other laws. They achieved their savings by moving up the ARRA termination date to October 31, 2013. This proposal from the Agriculture Committee terminates the ARRA increase on July 1, 2012 and would save, according to CBO, $5.9 billion over ten years.

Restrain Spending on Government Bureaucracies

Eliminating Automatic Funding of the New Bureaucracies: The centerpiece of the Dodd-Frank Act is the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB), a large and powerful Federal agency that is – by design – accountable to neither the executive branch nor Congress. Its Director has the unprecedented and sole authority to decide which financial products Americans can and cannot use. In addition, the Dodd-Frank Act authorizes the CFPB to fund itself by drawing money directly from the Federal Reserve to whatever extent the CFPB Director deems “necessary” up to $548 million in FY 2012, $598 million in FY 2013 and 12 percent of the Fed’s operating expenses each fiscal year thereafter. Not Congress, not the President, not even the Federal Reserve which provides its funding can oversee how the CFPB Director spends these hundreds of millions of dollars.

To correct this glaring lack of accountability, the Financial Services Committee proposes to make the CFPB subject to the ordinary congressional appropriations process and authorize the appropriation of $200 million to the agency for FY 2012 and FY 2013. This will ensure proper oversight and accountability, and according to CBO achieve savings of $5.4 billion over ten years.

Reducing Waste and Duplicative Programs

Repeal of the Social Services Block Grant: The Social Services Block Grant (SSBG) is a flexible source of Federal funds that states use for a wide variety of social services. Begun in 1956 as a way to match State spending on services to help families leave welfare, the SSBG is now a 100 percent Federal funding stream that can be used to provide almost any service to anyone regardless of their income. Many of the services funded by SSBG are duplicative of other federal programs including the Community Services Block Grant, Head Start, Foster Care and Adoption Assistance, Promoting Safe and Stable Families, the Child Care and Development Block Grant, Child Welfare Services, Chafee Foster Care Independence Program, and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families, among many others.

Because there are so few strings attached, some of the most common services supported by SSBG funds are:

- Information and Referral Services: The most common service supported with SSBG funds is information and referral to other social welfare programs. In other words, a significant amount of SSBG is spent not to provide services, but to provide people with information about and referrals to other services.
- Case Management Services: States also use the SSBG to pay for “the arrangement, coordination, and monitoring of services.” In other words, SSBG may be used for administrative costs.

- Other Services: Even with a flexible, unaccountable program like SSBG, States frequently report spending on “other” activities and services.

The proposal from the Ways and Means Committee would eliminate the SSBG program saving taxpayers almost $17 billion over 10 years, according to CBO.

Eliminate the 50/50 Cost Share for the SNAP Employment and Training (E&T)

Program: Each fiscal year, USDA provides federal formula grants to state agencies for states to operate a SNAP Employment and Training (E&T) program. In addition to this funding, states have the option of providing more funding towards their state E&T program, which USDA is required to match. According to GAO, there are 47 federal employment training programs and almost all federal employment and training programs overlap with at least one other program in that they provide similar services to similar populations.

The proposal from the Agriculture Committee would maintain the federal formula grants for employment training, but eliminate the 50/50 cost share thus resulting in savings for federal taxpayers and, according to CBO, save $3.1 billion over ten years.

Eliminate State Performance Bonuses: States are responsible for administering the SNAP program and it is their duty to process applications in a timely manner, ensure households receive the accurate amount of SNAP benefits, and make certain the program is administered in the most effective and efficient manner. Under current law, states can receive a bonus for doing a good job. Annually, these bonuses total $48 million.

The proposal by the Agriculture Committee eliminates the bonuses that are given to states for essentially doing their job and would, according to CBO, save $480 million over ten years.

Reforming the Medical Liability System: Many state supreme courts have judicially nullified reasonable litigation management provisions enacted by state legislatures, many of which sought to address the crisis in medical professional liability that reduces patients’ access to health care and increases overall health care costs. Consequently, in such states, passage of federal legislation by Congress may be the only means of addressing the state’s current crisis in medical professional liability, restoring patients’ access to health care, and controlling unnecessary costs.

To address these issues, the House Judiciary Committee has proposed the HEALTH Act, modeled after California’s decades-old and highly successful health care litigation reforms. This reform addresses the current crisis in health care by reigning in unlimited lawsuits and thereby making health care delivery more accessible and cost-effective in the United States. California’s Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act (“MICRA”), which was signed into law by Governor Jerry Brown in 1976, has proved immensely successful in increasing access to affordable medical care.

MICRA’s reforms, which are included in the HEALTH Act, include:

- A $250,000 cap on noneconomic damages;
- Limits on the contingency fees lawyers can charge;
- Provisions creating a “fair share” rule, by which damages are allocated fairly, in direct proportion to fault;
- Reasonable guidelines – but not caps – on the award of punitive damages; and
- A safe harbor from punitive damages for products that meet applicable FDA safety requirements.

The HEALTH Act will accomplish reform without in any way limiting compensation for 100% of plaintiffs’ economic losses (anything to which a receipt can be attached), including their medical costs, their lost wages, their future lost wages, rehabilitation costs, and any other economic out-of-pocket loss suffered as the result of a health care injury. The HEALTH Act also does not preempt any state law that otherwise caps damages.

According to CBO, “under [the HEALTH Act], premiums for medical malpractice insurance ultimately would be an average of 25 percent to 30 percent below what they would be under current law.” Lower health care lawsuit liability premiums would reduce health care costs for everyone and increase the supply of vital doctors by allowing more doctors to continue practicing, including in higher-risk medical fields.

Further, abusive state tort laws drive what is known as “defensive medicine,” which occurs when doctors are forced by the threat of lawsuits to conduct tests and prescribe drugs that are not medically required, simply to avoid liability exposure. Defensive medicine practiced in a variety of federal health care programs costs federal taxpayers billions of dollars. CBO pronounced that the legal reforms contained in the HEALTH Act would reduce the federal budget deficit by an estimated $40 billion over the next ten years.

What concerns me is the misinformation and the uneducated idiots that are screwing up this story and intertwining the $54 million, the refusal to expand Medicaid and the exchange...

For example...does he really have a freakin clue what he's talking about? At ALL?

“I have two concerns,” said State Rep. Ed Cannaday (D-Porum). “One is will the attorney general’s (Scott Pruitt) approach to this be successful and, two, that we don’t want any federal oversight and involvement in our healthcare.”

Cannaday is worried the money, that would have gone to support healthcare initiatives in Oklahoma, will end up as part of an exchange in a neighboring state.

If Fallin had agreed to Medicaid expansion, more than 200,000 additional Oklahoma men, women and children would have been eligible for healthcare coverage.

Healthcare exchange money has been reported at $54 million for Oklahoma, which would include operating expenses.

“Because other states around the country have decided to seek healthcare coverage for their citizens,” Scott Inman (D-Del City) said. “Oklahoma Republican leaders created a situation where Oklahoma tax dollars will be sent to other places to insure their citizens.”

All,

The press release by Sen. Brian Bingman mentioned today on 1170 KFAQ is noted below. ♦Without mentioning any bill numbers, the release implies that the state is not moving forward in developing the health insurance exchange. This is incorrect - the legislature is just changing tactics.

1. HB2130, creating the HUB board governance over the implementation of ♦ the health insurance exchange, is reportedly 'dead'. ♦HOWEVER, ♦ according to Sen. Bill Brown's office the "language they like" in HB ♦ 2130 is going to be put into another bill. ♦This language is going to ♦ be added to HB 1996, by Rep. Dan Sullivan.
2. Link to HB1996 current status:
♦ <http://www.oklegislature.gov/BillInfo.aspx?Bill=HB1996>
3. HB 1996 is assigned to the Retirement and Insurance committee, chaired ♦ by Sen. Bill Brown. (See committee members below.)
4. SB 411, by Sen. Bill Brown/Moore of the House - creates a comprehensive ♦ health care information system and website. ♦This is a key component of ♦ the exchange and so needs to be stopped. This bill is currently in the ♦ House waiting to be put on the House calendar.
5. SB960, by Sen. Bill Brown, a redundant bill creating an insurance ♦ exchange is dead. ♦This bill never had a third reading in the senate ♦ and has missed the deadline to be heard.
6. Attached please find the Oklahoma Health Benefits Overview Logical ♦ Model (the IT support structure necessary to make the health benefit ♦ exchanges work, to be develop with the federal grant money). ♦This ♦ diagram was in a packet of information handed out by the OK Health ♦ Insurance Exchange Steering Committee on March 3, 2011.

Gentlemen and Katie,

These attachments are from a presentation at the NCSL meeting in Tampa. This attorney, now in private practice, was one of the lead drafters of the PPACA. His presentation relates to what many of us know is happening now, in that Insurance Companies are already selling insurance thru private exchanges and how that may intersect with the PPACA's requirement for a State or Federally Run exchange. This guy was hyper informed.

Hi Representative McCullough! I hope you enjoyed the rest of the NCSL Conference. It was a pleasure meeting you at Thursday's Health Reform Implementation/Standing Committee on Health session.

As promised, I wanted to provide you with an electronic version of my presentation on "private" health insurance exchanges. As I mentioned during our conversation, prior to joining Venable, I had the fortunate opportunity to serve as the Tax and Benefits Counsel to the Senate Finance Committee from 2007 to 2010. During my time on the Committee, I had the opportunity to participate in the health care reform debate and develop portions of the new law. In particular, I had a significant amount of involvement in developing the structure of the new health insurance Exchanges and other changes to State insurance laws.

Now that I am back in private practice, I have done a great deal of work on issues relating to the Exchanges. I actually wrote an article on the Exchanges and the minimum standards that apply to insurance policies sold inside and outside of the Exchange. Attached is the article for your review.

Please do not hesitate to contact me – or have any of your colleagues contact me – with any questions about "private" exchanges, the Exchange created under the new health care reform law, or any other issues relating to health care reform. W: 202-344-4231 C: 703-209-0690. As stated, I would be extremely interested in helping you and your colleagues work through the myriad of issues relating to the new Exchanges, and, more broadly, any and all issues relating to the implementation of the new health care reform law.

Again, it was great to meet you. I look forward to talking with you soon. Take care!

Regulatory Cost Impact by State

The American Action Forum is fortunate enough to have Sam Batkins as its Director of Regulation. Sam has compiled a database of every regulation issued by the Obama Administration broken down by total pages, total cost, and paperwork burden hours. He has also broken each regulation down by the type of agencies affected so there is a sub-database for just healthcare regulations.

To derive the attached spread sheet estimating regulatory costs by state, Sam took the largest regulations that impact states and broke down the federal government's estimates proportionately by state to come up with a reasonable estimate of how costly the Affordable Care Act's regulations have already been to the private sector and the public.

Interestingly, Sam has built such an advanced database that we are now able to use it to bracket President during every state visit he makes to talk about jobs. I hope you all check out the database and tell your colleagues because it's a tremendous resources explaining the effect of the Obama Administrations red tape fiasco.

Measuring the Coerciveness of the PPACA Medicaid Expansion

The Medicaid related estimates come directly from the American Action Forum's Supreme Court Amicus brief on Medicaid, which was signed by over 100 economists including multiple Nobel Prize winners.

5 states to watch on Medicaid

By Jason Millman

7/20/12 5:32 AM EDT

The Supreme Court decision making health care reform's Medicaid expansion optional has created a high-stakes guessing game about which states sign up.

A handful of governors who most emphatically refused to implement the Affordable Care Act grabbed the early attention after the court decision. Yet an overwhelming majority of the states aren't ruling it out. And Medicaid advocates are still counting on most of the states to come on board, if not by 2014 then soon after.

"I think based on past history ... it's really likely that most states are eventually going to take part" in the expansion, said Sara Collins, vice president for affordable health insurance at the Commonwealth Fund.

How they get there may not be pretty. Republican governors are talking tough and some Democratic governors are treading carefully. It's not as simple as a governor saying "yes" or "no." Complicated factors come into play, including politics, budget outlooks and Medicaid's own history — including the ways states can shape their own Medicaid programs, or get waivers to test ways of covering more people, improving quality or containing costs.

It all makes for some intense state-level battles over the next year, as long as the health law stays on the books. Here's a look at some of the more interesting states to watch as they decide whether to go ahead and expand Medicaid to bring in millions of Americans up to 133 percent of the federal poverty line.

ARIZONA

Gov. Jan Brewer and the Obama administration have tussled plenty over Medicaid reductions in a very public way — actually earning a mention during Supreme Court oral arguments on the Medicaid question. But a deeper look shows that Arizona is not a lock for rejecting the Medicaid expansion.

Brewer, who says she remains undecided on the expansion, has taken a considerable number of steps for Arizona to run its own health insurance exchange. Whether the state legislature will be on board is another question.

Before the Affordable Care Act passed, Arizona had a history of covering some childless adults — a population excluded by most states but included under the expansion. But Arizona was able to cut some of that enrollment by letting its waiver expire last year. But Manatt's Deborah Bachrach, a former New York Medicaid director, figures Arizona would have something to gain by taking the expansion, because the feds would provide a much more generous financial match for adult populations through the expansion.

“The more a state has used a waiver to provide some limited coverage to childless adults, the more money they will save by doing the expansion,” Bachrach said.

UTAH

When it comes to health policy, the conservative state has to be part of the discussion.

“It’s an interesting state to watch because they’re very engaged in health policy,” said Joan Alker of the Georgetown Health Policy Institute.

Utah Gov. Gary Herbert, who co-chairs the Republican Governors Association’s health committee, has spent the past few weeks laying out a whole host of reasons why Utah wouldn’t expand Medicaid. But he hasn’t flatly turned it down, either, as some of his colleagues have.

Herbert also hasn’t been shy about his frustrations with the Medicaid waiver process. He told POLITICO recently that the court’s Medicaid decision could provide states with new leverage to negotiate for Medicaid changes they’ve been pushing such as block grants or more flexibility on benefit design.

Utah already has some history with expanding Medicaid. In the early 2000s, the state secured a waiver to extend some Medicaid coverage to childless adults — partially by increasing cost-sharing and reducing benefits for some existing enrollees.

“It was a fairly high-profile waiver when they moved forward with it because it had a very limited benefit package and didn’t have inpatient coverage,” Alker said.

MISSOURI

With a Democratic governor and a Republican legislature, Missouri has seen some of the fiercest state-level battles over the ACA. The legislature has already passed a law — albeit a symbolic one — banning the individual mandate, and it approved a ballot initiative for this fall on whether the state should set up an exchange.

So, how does Gov. Jay Nixon play this one? So far, cautiously. He hasn’t said much about this publicly, and a spokesman didn’t return a POLITICO inquiry.

Nixon’s been rebuffed by Republican lawmakers on earlier efforts to expand Medicaid, and he’s up for reelection this year. If he does want to move forward on the expansion, don’t expect to see much before November.

OKLAHOMA

The state was the first to return a sizable exchange grant from HHS last year, but it’s also taken a huge chunk of money to update its Medicaid eligibility system. In fact, Medicaid experts say it’s top-notch.

Oklahoma doesn’t have a very expansive Medicaid program today, and the Medicaid expansion is projected to cover about half of uninsured Oklahomans.

So the big question, says Manatt’s Bachrach, is this: “Will they use that infrastructure to launch the expansion?”

Gov. Mary Fallin, a Republican, isn’t saying yet. Her office says Fallin’s going to take a hard look at the state’s options.

Oklahoma already has updated Medicaid eligibility rules to be “very much in line” with the ACA, Bachrach said. It’s also taken a serious look at delivery system reform.

MINNESOTA

The state is one of a handful to expand part of its Medicaid program ahead of 2014. Whether the Republican legislature would approve more remains a big question mark.

Already, Democratic Gov. Mark Dayton has a tricky relationship with the state legislature over the ACA. His executive order in October starting up Minnesota's exchange isn't sitting well with Republican lawmakers, who complain they've been left out of the process.

Dayton already told HHS that Minnesota plans to run its own exchange, but Republican lawmakers say the issue hasn't been settled. They want the legislature to address it next year, meaning health care politics will already be boiling in the state.

Marie,

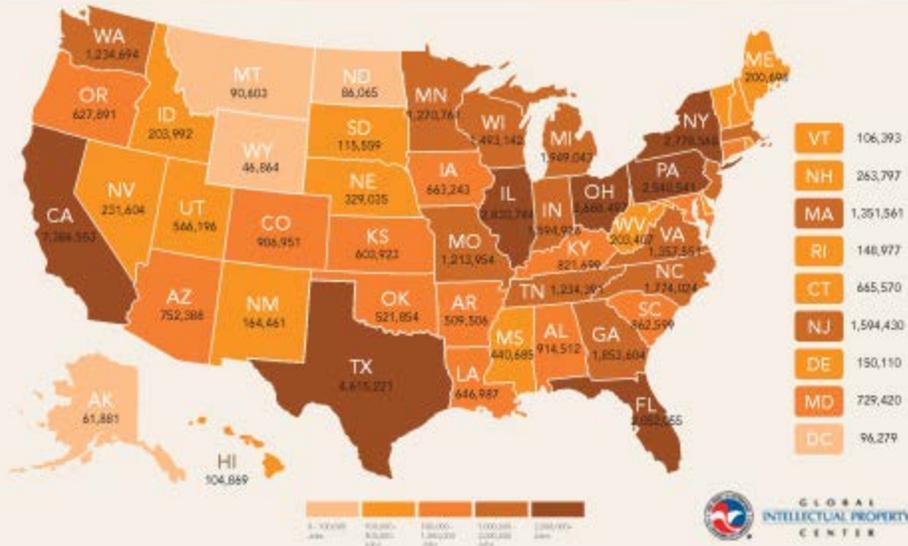

I am pleased to share with you a first-of-its-kind economic study, titled "IP Creates Jobs for America" from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Global Intellectual Property Center (GIPC). We have prepared this report to illustrate the widespread impact and importance of intellectual property as it relates to each state's jobs, economic growth and competitiveness. This study identifies the benefits of IP and the 55 million jobs directly and indirectly supported by IP-intensive industries as a significant driver of GDP, exports, and wages in every state of the Union.

To see the benefits of intellectual property in your specific state, please click HERE.

Would you be willing to push this out to Governors offices and their staff?

Thanks for any help you can be here.

MEDICARE

Look clearly at the 2014 rate compared to the 2013 rate.

For those of you who are on Medicare, read the following. It's short, but important and you probably haven't heard about it in the Mainstream News:

"The per person Medicare Insurance Premium will increase from the present Monthly Fee of $96.40, rising to:

$120.20 in 2013

And

These are Provisions incorporated in the Obamacare Legislation, purposely delayed so as not to confuse the 2012 Re-Election Campaigns. Send this to all Seniors that you know, so they will know who's throwing them under the bus.

I have received an Open Records request from the Tulsa World for correspondence related to the request from HHS to identify points of contact for ACA Medicaid-related enrollment and the point of contact for the state exchange activities. I am going to send this email below along with the attachments in compliance with the request this afternoon. I wanted to give you notice and let you know that you might also get a call from the reporter, Wayne Greene, as a result because some of the correspondence mentions and attaches the letter you received on this issue from Mike.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Importance: High

Good Afternoon,

The Oklahoma Health Care Authority (OHCA), Oklahoma's single state Medicaid agency, has received your request for contact information (name, address, telephone number, email address) for staff who are most knowledgeable about the steps the State has taken or plans to take with regard to implementing the requirements of Sections 1413 and 2201 of the Affordable Care Act, regarding streamlined eligibility and enrollment as it pertains to State Medicaid programs.

The point of contact for the Medicaid requirements is Buffy Heater, MPH, Director of Planning & Development, OHCA, 2401 NW 23rd St., Ste 1A, Oklahoma City, OK, 73107. She can be reached at (405) 522-7545 or Buffy.Heater@okhca.org

We recognize the requests from the GAO and OIG ask for representatives from the Medicaid agency, as well as for appropriate points of contact at other State entities. We understand that the evaluation and survey will not be limited to Medicaid requirements but also include aspects of the required interoperability with a health insurance exchange as of January 1, 2014. To address this request, the CEO of the OHCA, Mike Fogarty, has passed along the GAO and OIG request letters to Oklahoma executive branch leaders. (Letters to Oklahoma Secretary of Health and Policy Director for Governor Mary Fallin attached to this email.) It is anticipated they may identify an additional state point of contact perhaps with broader knowledge of the plans for Oklahoma's health insurance exchange development.

Hello,

Some of you asked for talking points about the amicus/PPACA. Please find those below.

Best,

Mike

Amicus Brief and PPACA Talking Points

Amicus Brief Topline Talking Points

The amicus brief has three main arguments:

1. The presumption of Constitutionality attaching to PPACA is weak owing to the irregular parliamentary process employed in its enactment.
2. The fact that Congress has never before required a citizen to purchase a good or service from another citizen negates the existence of that power.
3. The individual mandate and penalty are contrary to the text of the commerce clause and foundational understandings

While the amicus focuses on the individual mandate, this case is about far more than just the individual mandate. The Obama administration's healthcare takeover grants sweeping authority to the federal bureaucracy to dictate to individuals, churches, charities, hospitals, schools, businesses and states how they must operate. This is the opposite of the vision of America set forth by our nation's founders.

General PPACA Talking Points

1. The Obama Administration has failed to adequately respond to the states requests for more flexibility: unfunded mandates, maintenance of effort, healthcare exchanges, denied waivers.

- a. Essential to note: Republican governors proactively offered 31 specific solutions for reforming and saving Medicaid, but received no response from the White House.
2. True cost of Obamacare after the Democrats' budget gimmicks are removed is $2.5 trillion.
3. States cannot afford Obamacare, and the White House's failure to work with the states creates more uncertainty for both state budgets, which in turns creates uncertainty for businesses who don't know how states will pay for Obamacare's provisions.
4. ObamaCare is driving up premiums and jeopardizing coverage for millions of Americans. President Obama promised he would make our economy stronger, but policies like ObamaCare have made it worse.
  - a. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Service actuaries find that Obamacare will dramatically increase the near-term growth rate of health care costs. In 2014, the actuaries find that growth in the net cost of health insurance will increase by nearly 14 percent, compared to 3.5% if PPACA had never passed.
  - b. A June 2011 report by McKinsey & Co. found that 30-50 percent of employers said they would stop offering health coverage once the bulk of ObamaCare took effect.
  - c. A May 2011 PriceWaterhouseCoopers survey found that 84 percent of employers would make changes to their plan as a result of ObamaCare.
  - d. Candidate Obama repeatedly promised his health care plan would LOWER premiums by $2,500 per family, and do so within his first term. But the price of the average employer-sponsored plan ROSE by more than $2,200 per family since Obama was first elected in 2008, according to studies from the Kaiser Family Foundation. In other words, Obama's abandoned promise has cost American families nearly $5,000 per year – a $2,200 premium increase compared to a $2,500 promised premium reduction.
5. Healthcare Exchanges: CMS continues to provide limited guidance and seeks to mandate a one size fit all approach to exchanges. Contrary to a recent White House report indicating that states are moving for embracing and implementing healthcare exchanges, states remain confused and are either not moving forward under any scenario or moving forward 1) play defense to the federal government, or 2) implement a market based anti-obamacare exchange.
6. The Administration's "compromise" on conscience protections for religious-affiliated employers now places the mandate on insurers to sell contraceptive coverage.

- a. While religious employers will no longer be forced to provide products to which they have moral objections, they will be required to facilitate, directly or indirectly, access to those products. The Administration is forcing religious groups to “wash their hands” of actions they find morally objectionable by placing the mandate elsewhere.
- b. Also, the rule is not fully repealed. The mandate will remain in place for other employers who may have conscience concerns about coverage of contraception and abortifacients. Religious leaders have expressed their strong desire to repeal the entire contraceptive mandate, noting that maintaining this new federal requirement – included in the President’s unpopular health care law – would still create moral difficulties for “good... business people who can’t in good conscience cooperate” with a federal mandate that violates their religious beliefs.

More Detailed Summary of Amicus Arguments

I. THE PRESUMPTION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY ATTACHING TO PPACA IS WEAK OWING TO THE PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS EMPLOYED IN ITS ENACTMENT. There is doctrinal and philosophical support for such a presumption resting upon notions of separation of powers, particularly where it appears PPACA was not passed through any process resembling regular order. The United States Senate passed PPACA late on Christmas Eve 2009 as a floor substitute on a straight party line vote. The legislative vehicle was a House tax bill chosen to satisfy the Originating Clause for the taxes in PPACA. PPACA passed the Senate on cloture with considerable minority protest. To the extent that a presumption of constitutionality arises from regular order and a hard look by Congress at the limits of its own power, those conditions are simply not present.

II. THE FACT THAT CONGRESS HERETOFORE HAS NEVER CLAIMED THE POWER TO REQUIRE A CITIZEN TO PURCHASE A GOOD OR SERVICE FROM ANOTHER CITIZEN TENDS TO NEGATE THE EXISTENCE OF THAT POWER. In the case of PPACA, the lack of historical precedent was well known to Congress before it acted. At the heart of PPACA is § 1501, which generally requires American citizens to purchase a good or service from other citizens, namely, a health insurance policy. When the Senate Finance Committee asked the Congressional Research Service whether a mandate supported by a penalty would be constitutional, the response was equivocal: "Whether such a requirement would be constitutional under the Commerce Clause is perhaps the most challenging question posed by such a proposal, as it is a novel issue whether Congress may use this clause to require an individual to purchase a good or a service."

III. THE MANDATE AND PENALTY ARE CONTRARY TO THE TEXT OF THE COMMERCE CLAUSE AND FOUNDATIONAL UNDERSTANDINGS.

A. The Mandate and Penalty are Not Supported by the Text of the Commerce

Clause. Noah Webster in 1828 defined commerce as "an interchange or mutual change of goods, wares, productions, or property of any kind, between nations or individuals, either by barter, or by purchase and sale; trade; traffick." This is commerce. Its hallmarks are spontaneity and voluntary activity; not a command to buy something. The claim that commerce means not commercial activity but mere passivity is violently discordant with any normal use of the word commerce at the Founding or at any subsequent time.

B. The Historical Context in which the Commerce Clause was Drafted Makes it Highly Unlikely that it Included a Power to Command a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services From Another Citizen. The founding generation would have regarded as preposterous any suggestion that Great Britain could have solved its colonial problems by commanding Americans to purchase tea under the generally conceded power of parliament to regulate commerce.

C. There is No Tradition of Using the Commerce Clause to Require a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services from Another Citizen. Because this regime viewed the regulation even of economic activity as illegitimate unless that activity harmed or threatened harm to someone else, Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45 (1905), it is inconceivable that the Commerce Clause prior to 1938 would have been deemed to validly reach inactivity. The question thus becomes, has the Supreme Court decided any case in the post-Lochner era that has extended the Commerce Clause far enough to cover the mandate and penalty?

D. As this Court Found in Denying the Secretary's Motion to Dismiss, the Mandate and Penalty are Outside the Existing Outer Limits of the Commerce Clause and Associated Necessary and Proper Clause as Measured by Supreme Court Precedent. "[E]ven if [an] activity be local and though it may not be regarded as commerce, it may still, whatever its nature, be reached by Congress if it exerts a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce, and this irrespective of whether such effect is what might at some earlier time have been defined as 'direct' or 'indirect.'" Wickard, 317 U.S. at 125 (emphasis added). Wickard marks the affirmative outer limits of the Commerce Clause.

Since Wickard, the Supreme Court has proceeded no further than to hold that Congress can regulate three things under the Commerce Clause: (1) "use of the channels of interstate commerce" (2) "the instrumentalities of interstate commerce," and (3) "activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." Lopez, 514 U.S. at 558-59. "[T]he Federal balance is too essential a part of our constitutional structure and plays too vital a role in securing freedom for us to admit inability to intervene when one or the other level of Government has tipped the scales too far." Id. at 578.

None of this is changed by an appeal to the Necessary and Proper Clause. This Court elsewhere has emphatically held that the Necessary and Proper Clause is limited by general principles of federalism independent of any direct prohibition. Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999) ("When a 'Law . . . for carrying into Execution' the Commerce Clause violates the principle of state sovereignty reflected in the various constitutional provisions . . . it is not a 'Law . . . proper for carrying into Execution the Commerce Clause,' and is thus, in the words of The Federalist, 'merely [an] act of usurpation' which 'deserves to be treated as such.'") (citing Printz, 521 U.S. at 923-24). It simply does not matter how "necessary" the mandate and penalty might be to the congressional scheme if the end being pursued is improper under the Necessary and Proper Clause.

All:

Please find the updated Amicus Brief documents. A summary and initial draft is attached.

This will be discussed by Martin Kent, COS to Gov. McDonnell on today's Chief of Staff RGPPC COS call at 3 PM EDT.

To confirm on process, the goal is for RGPPC to be named as joining the amicus, as will Governor McDonnell individually. Duncan Getchell of the VA AG office will sign as a SCOTUS admitted attorney. The case will be styled as shown in the attached summary.

What we need from you:

1. Legal teams and General Counsels: Sign off that a majority of our governors are comfortable with RGPPC being named as joining the amicus. Questions or concerns regarding the legal brief should be directed to Martin Kent, COS to Gov Bob McDonnell, or Matt Conrad, Deputy COS to Gov McDonnell. Please respond to Marie at ██████████ once you are comfortable from your state.

Matt Conrad: Matt.Conrad@governor.virginia.gov and is (804) 692-2573

2. Healthcare advisors and Action Officers: We need additional data. Please find attached a document summarizing state mandates and burdens from PPACA. Additional thoughts are welcome and data is encouraged. You may send that information to Marie to be incorporated at ██████████

Thanks in advance for your attention to this matter. About twice a year we have an important issue we need to turn around quickly—this is one of them. We appreciate your patience.

All:

Many of you requested feedback on the RGPPC COS call. Most of the discussion was surrounding the amicus brief, forwarded earlier, and attached again. To clarify, we are seeking your thoughts re RGPPC signing the amicus brief, not your individual governors signing the amicus brief. Please call me if you need more clarification.

COSs agreed to review and respond with their governors thoughts over this weekend, with all substantive edits due by Monday, 2/6 at 12:00 pm EDT.

Thanks again for your attention to this issue. I'm available this weekend should you wish to discuss further.

Anderson calls on Gov. Fallin to reject ObamaCare

State Sen. Patrick Anderson urged Oklahoma's chief executive to join her fellow Republican governors across the country and state for the record that she will not implement ObamaCare. Anderson, a Republican from Enid, said Gov. Mary Fallin needs to be on the front line with those governors who have already announced they won't submit to the federal health care law.

"Bobby Jindal in Louisiana, Chris Christie in New Jersey, Rick Perry in Texas, Scott Walker in Wisconsin, Rick Scott in Florida and Nikki Haley in South Carolina have officially stated they will not implement ObamaCare in their states in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision last Thursday," said Anderson. "Oklahoma needs to join these other states and be a leader, not a follower, in the opposition to this law and the substantial burden that it will place on taxpayers."

Anderson said despite promises from the President, the end results of the federal health care law would be disastrous for citizens, for Oklahoma and for the nation, with many reports pointing to a revised estimate by the Congressional Budget Office saying the price tag for the law had already risen from under $1 trillion to $1.76 trillion.

"In the short-term, the economic brunt will fall on the middle-class. Those who already have insurance will see their out-of-pocket costs skyrocket, while those who don't will be forced to purchase policies far more costly than they would have been without this federal mandate," Anderson said. "Businesses are going to be hamstrung by red tape and regulations that will derail economic growth and recovery. At the federal level, this will dramatically worsen our national debt. At the state level, Oklahoma's Medicaid costs will soar and it will force budget cuts in education, transportation and public safety."

"We have had enough time to consider last Thursday's ruling, and we know that the end result will be larger deficits, greater costs to working Oklahomans, and punitive regulations that will cripple many businesses," said Anderson. "Governor Fallin needs to make Oklahoma's position clear and tell President Obama that she will not choose to implement this new tax on the taxpayers of Oklahoma."

Obama Care/Fallin Care Health Exchange Meeting This Wednesday

The first meeting of the Obama Care/Fallin Care task force is to be held on Wednesday September 14th at 9:00 am in the House Chamber at the State Capitol. I believe they chose this particular meeting place to avoid having to deal with questions from the audience but a good crowd will remind them what is waiting for them should they go ahead and implement Obama Care here in Oklahoma. Below are the Senators and Representatives on the committee, it would be a good idea to call and email to remind them that the majority of the citizens of Oklahoma are dead set against Obama Care/Fallin Care.

Light em up..

Make it clear to them that there will be a political price for supporting Obama Care/Fallin Care in any form or fashion. Remember that they are practiced politicians, they can sell sand to an Arab, don't get in arguments or discussions, tell them what the people of Oklahoma want.

Phil Lakin, George Kaiser, and Obama

A few weeks ago we went over the candidates for Tulsa City Council. One of the candidates for District 8 is Phil Lakin; Phil is also the Chairman of the George Kaiser Family Foundation. George Kaiser is one of the investors of the defunct solar energy company that was in the news last week for going bankrupt owing the U.S. government hundreds of millions of dollars. Lakin is also on the board of the Tulsa Community Foundation and other boards.

Here is an email from a Washington Post reporter responding after a Tulsa activist reached out with info on Phil Lakin and George Kaiser:

Quote:

"We are very interested in George Kaiser and any help you might be able to give us would be greatly appreciated. Our George Kaiser is chairman of Tulsa-based BOK Financial Corp. and owner of Kaiser-Francis Oil Co. He also is one of Solyndra's biggest backers through an organization known as the George Kaiser Family Foundation. He is an Oklahoma oilman who bundled campaign contributions from multiple sources for Obama's 2008 campaign. Kaiser raised, or bundled, $50,000 to $100,000 for Obama's 2008 campaign, according to a list that had been posted on Obama's 2008 campaign website. He gave $2,300 personally, according to the FEC.

As you probably know, the George Kaiser Family Foundation is a charitable organization based in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and backed by donations from Kaiser. It holds about 35.7 percent of the company, according to a Solyndra filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Kaiser made three visits to the White House on March 12, 2009, and one on March 13. Kaiser has denied any direct involvement in the Solyndra deal. In a statement from his foundation he said he "did not participate in any discussions with the U.S. government regarding the loan."

The White House meetings put that statement to a test. He met with former Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors Austan Goolsbee, Senior Advisor Pete Rouse, Deputy Director of the Domestic Policy Council Heather Higginbottom and Deputy Director of the National Economic Council Jason Furman. People who work for him also went to the White House, including chairman and founder Christian Gronet and Board Members Thomas Baruch and David Prend. This information is according to the WH visitor logs. Former Chief of Staff Rahm Emmanuel and Adviser Valerie Jarrett reportedly also met with Kaiser.

Representative Glen Mulready Talking Trash Again

Occasionally one of our members asks why we expose so much of the legislator's dirty laundry and focus on their response to our newsletters. For two reasons:

1. It shows people that the legislators are no better than the rest of us, almost anyone could run for office regardless of what baggage they might have or their "qualifications".
2. Their responses to our newsletters are illuminating, especially when they lash out in anger over the exposure of the seamy side of the legislature.

Last week, one of our old sparing partners, Representative Glen Mulready, just had to open his mouth again. Like the old joke about the hunter and the grizzly bear, one begins to wonder if Representative Mulready is doing this for the sport of it. Representative Mulready was one of the founding members of the Short Bus Caucus, a group of Republican House members that were running their mouth against the Tea Party during one of the Republican Caucus meetings. Here is a link to that May 8th newsletter where Representative Mulready helped us come up with the name transvestite Republican: Transvestite Republicans

So last week Representative Mulready once again shot off his infamous mouth in an email to one of our allies. Here is the email:

Subject: Re: A Jerry Springer Batch of Legislators

Date: Fri, 2 Sep 2011 14:25:06 -0500
From: Glen Mulready
To: Jim Gxxxx xxxxxxx@cox.net

Jim,
I would respectfully suggest to you that your forwarding of this groups "trash" only serves to undermine your own credibility.
Hope you are well.

Best,

Glen Mulready
Sent from my iPhone, please pardon any typos.

End quote.

When challenged by one of the messages recipients, Representative Glen Mulready had this to say:

Quote:

"BL,

So, "relevant to the topic" from your perspective is someones (Sic) innuendo and rumor tossed around without any kind of evidence. This is one radical person, with no evidence, throwing things out there about people he doesn't like....plain and simple.

The bottom line is no different than I tell my young boys daily. Choose your friends wisely...you will be known by those you hang out with. If you wish to be identified closely with this group, then by all means, continue to forward their emails. I'm telling you that this is a quick way for you to move you and your group towards irrelevance by association.

I have a lot more detail about this groups posting of comments and pictures of my family earlier this year that I could share with you, but will not take the time.

Choose your friends wisely!

Best regards,

Glen"

End quote.

Representative Mulready's purpose in taking the time to respond to B.L. is obvious; to try to drive a wedge between the Tea Party and the rural interests.

If you have taken one of my classes on the Real Nature of Politics, you will recognize the classic responses regurgitated by Representative Mulready. He starts by stating that forwarding the Sooner Tea Party newsletter undermines B.L.'s credibility. When a politician tells you something, the first thing you should ask yourself is how it benefits the politician if you believe what he says. Think about it, Representative Mulready is not supporting B.L.'s effort so if B.L. was hurting his credibility then Representative Mulready would just stay silent and let him hang himself.

Next Representative Mulready admits that forwarding something is the same as endorsing something. Using that logic, he supports and endorses the House leaders that voted for the transvestite birth certificate bill, therefore Representative Mulready supports everything else the House leadership stands for: allowing illegal immigration, biometrics on our drivers license for future facial recognition tracking systems, highway cameras watching car license plates for ticketing those without insurance (next will be those that are running an expired tag, next are those driving 5 miles over the speed limit), implementing the Obama Care/Fallin Care Health insurance exchanges (Mulready is heading that interim study), stopping Open Carry, and stopping all the Tea Party/Constitutional bills that support the 2nd, 4th, 9th, and 10th Amendments.

As to the list of immoral legislators cheating on their spouses, multiple sources backed up each instance of infidelity. One case was dropped after a Democrat legislator vouched for the legislator after approaching him on our behalf; five or six others are still under investigation so we did not put them on the newsletter. The Kirby and Osborn affair was checked using both GOP and Democrat sources. The Charles Ortega story was confirmed using legislators and local sources, he is the talk of the town these days... the old goat! The Lee Denney story was verified using local sources as well as multiple legislative sources.

We back up 100% of our info before we use it in the newsletter. As far as ruining a cheating legislator's reputation, they ruined it themselves; we are just spreading the news. As far as the Sooner Tea Party's "agenda", it is simple, force legislators like Representative Mulready to represent their constituents instead of ruling over them like they are royalty and to force the legislators to support the Constitution including the Bill of Rights. It Representative Mulready needs stepped on to force him to do right, we have no problem stepping on him.

As to posting his family picture, we took the picture off his campaign website. If he drags his family into his campaign to claim family values, then what is wrong with using the picture when Representative Mulready is going against family values? We posted his family shot next to a drag queen smoking a cigarette and asked the readers to see if the two men looked alike and to let us know if Mulready didn't look like a transvestite.... not as single email came in against the article, people understood that we were pointing out that Mulready was a hypocrite.

Lastly, Representative Mulready talks big about not slandering people and tossing around innuendo and rumor, yet he doesn't look into the stories before claiming we are "radical" and are slandering people. The difference between Representative Mulready and our group is that we put our info out in public, Representative Mulready prefers to slink about and whisper lies in private. And where is Representative Mulready's outrage over Representative Dan Sullivan's behavior?

But the highest nail gets the hammer so Representative Mulready has earned another article in the newsletter about his character and his refusal to represent the people in his district. He is an elitist, he said so at that meeting in May, said that regardless of how the people in his district want him to vote he is going to vote his way. I've got it on tape, it is going to make a great robo call.

Remember always that the Mulreadys of this world believe that the rest of us are sheep to be sheared. They stay in power only by dividing any that rise against them. They are accomplished liars; the most dangerous of them are the sociopath liars who tend to rise into leadership positions. They truly believe they are not lying, from being so wrapped up in their fantasy world and their belief that they are above everyone else.

Oklahoma Real Estate Commission Whitewashes Sullivan Real Estate Investigation

And after all that documentation of the forged document that we looked at last week, what did the Oklahoma Real Estate Commission do? They whitewashed the investigation, seizing upon a comment from Mrs. Sullivan that stated she didn't know which party altered the document and forged the initials. That is the problem with reasonable people, they talk reasonably, and Mrs. Sullivan was just stating an obvious fact. Most people would understand that an investigation was required to ascertain who altered the document and forged the initial. A bureaucrat on the other hand would jump at the chance to get this issue off their desk and done with! All they had to do was question the realtor about the document and she would have rolled over on either Representative Sullivan or his attorney.

Did Representative Sullivan Lie To Tulsa Police on September 19th 2007?

Two weeks ago we told the story of a terrified woman fleeing her home around 11:30 pm, in her night clothes, barefoot, not even taking the time to grab her cell phone. A source claimed that after an argument over continuing the marriage counseling, Representative Sullivan eyes were so dark with anger that they were like "looking at the end of the world".

Sources say Mrs. Sullivan fled northeast on I-44 in the early hours of September 19th, so afraid for her life, so shocked, so intimidated by her husband's behavior that she could only think of putting distance between them. Remember that reports state that Representative Sullivan had been mixing prescription medicines, over the counter cold medication, and booze. Documents and emails show that he was in dire financial straits, had impregnated a House staffer that worked under him at the capitol during an illicit and illegal affair, and was becoming increasingly unstable.

Mrs. Sullivan could think of only one place to go where her reserve deputy/Judicial Committee Chairman/Representative husband wouldn't likely find her, a bed and breakfast place near Grand Lake that she remembered from a previous trip long ago. She realized that she couldn't hope to find a vacancy at 2:00 or 3:00 am so she parked in the parking lot of the Cherokee Yacht Club near Ketchum, Oklahoma.

It wasn't long before a security guard came over to see why a woman was parked by the lake in the predawn chill. Dressed in night clothes, shoeless, and scared, the officer recognized the signs of an abused woman in need of help. The officer opened up the lobby and allowed Mrs. Sullivan to wait inside until daylight, then after telling her the bed and breakfast she was searching for had closed the previous year, the officer recommended another small business that rented secluded lake cabins.

The innkeeper was a woman that had also had experience with abused women in shelters and immediately recognized the tell tale signs: no shoes, no luggage, night clothing rather than suitable attire, a woman clearly frightened that her husband would find her and do harm. Since Mrs. Sullivan was still terrified of being found, the innkeeper suggested parking the car away from the cabin, lessening the chance that Representative Sullivan could track her down.

And what was Representative Sullivan doing about this time? Well, he had gone to work. Doesn't sound like something that a normal husband would do after his wife fled in terror the night before, most would be out looking for her or calling her friends and family, perhaps even calling the state police since she was the wife of a legislator. But not Representative Sullivan, where most of us would have been worried sick, Representative Sullivan went to work, had lunch, and went home.

Finally around 9:30 pm Representative Sullivan reported his wife missing, twenty two hours after she fled. Representative Sullivan told the officer of the cell phone left behind, that he had called his family and friends in an effort to find her, and had looked online to see if she had used her credit cards or withdrew money from an ATM. The police report states that Representative Sullivan said that he didn't believe that Mrs. Sullivan was suicidal but she had been upset over health issues. No mention of the argument that turned physical, no mention of the marriage counseling as a result of Representative Sullivan's infidelities, Representative Sullivan chose to lie and say Mrs. Sullivan was upset over health issues...

Look for the file labeled: "Missing Person Police Report 9.19.2007".

But much later Representative Sullivan testified under oath as part of the divorce proceedings. During his testimony Sullivan denied that he had told the Tulsa Police that Mrs. Sullivan was worried about her health the night she fled. In fact Representative Sullivan admitted on the witness stand that they had had an argument which caused Mrs. Sullivan to flee.

"Representative Sullivan Deposition Proving He Lied About The Reason Mrs. Sullivan Fleed"

Okay, some of you might say, so Representative Sullivan didn't want to air his dirty laundry. He told a little white lie to save face. If that were all, we wouldn't be reporting this but what came next is absolutely chilling. The missing person report also states:

"Dan, who is also a TCSO reserve deputy, verified that his only owned weapon was accounted for in their home."

Did Representative Sullivan own only one weapon?

Representative Sullivan claimed only one gun in his statement to the Tulsa police on the missing person report. Here is what Sullivan had in the way of weaponry around that time, many of them left loaded around the home.

I counted 16 guns, not one that he told the Tulsa police officer about.

And here are pictures of the guns that Representative Sullivan denied owning.

Now many people collect guns, nothing wrong with that. The problem here is Representative Sullivan lying.

One can only wonder why Representative Sullivan would lie to a police officer about the number of weapons he owned. Was he was covering his tracks in case a body was found and ballistic tests were run? What we can be certain of is that Representative Sullivan has no qualms about lying to a police officer or on the witness stand, if it suits his purpose. All that remains is to ask why Representative Sullivan lies. There are three types of liars:

- 1.Pathological Liar, someone that doesn't lie purposely, they actually believe that they are telling the truth.
- 2.Compulsive Liar, someone that lies out of habit because it feels "right".
- 3.Sociopaths, someone that lies incessantly in order to get their way and does so with little concern for others.

Of the three types of liar, I believe that Representative Sullivan better fits the Sociopath model better than any other. link to list of traits of sociopaths.

Yes, this was a messy divorce! But if character matters, something that the country forgot when they elected Bill Clinton, and if past behavior is indicative of future behavior, do we dare allow Representative Sullivan to walk away from his behavior and crimes without penalty? Do we dare allow the other 148 legislators think that if Representative Sullivan got away with it, that they can get away with it?

Here is the contact info for the Speaker of the House, Kris Steele and for the GRDA, who is considering Representative Sullivan for the top CEO position. Please call them and give them your opinion on this matter.

Oh, and what happened to Mrs. Sullivan? Her brother and her sister in law found her on Thursday, two days after she had gone missing. They had gone online to the Pike Pass website and found the Vinita exit charge, then cruised around till one of them spotted her car.

Representative Sullivan never went looking for her.

Obama Administration Exporting American Jobs DOJ Advises Gibson Guitar to Export Labor to Madagascar

This story has been in the woodworking journals for some time. Gibson Guitar was raided in 2009 and despite their exotic woods coming from certified importers, millions of dollars worth of lumber and finished guitars were confiscated. Their competitors, Martin Guitar and Fender Guitar, use the same importer but they haven't been raided, likely due to the owner of Martin Guitar being an Obama donor and both companies not having the deep pockets that Gibson Guitar possesses. Despite obtaining letters from the Madagascar government stating that the wood in question was exported legally, the Obama administration contends that the wood was imported in violation of Madagascar law (not U.S. law!).

The wood the Government seized on August 24 is from a Forest Stewardship Council certified supplier and is FSC Controlled, meaning that the wood complies with the standards of the Forest Stewardship Council, which is an industry-recognized and independent, not-for-profit organization established to promote responsible management of the world's forests. I've seen articles in the wood working journals about Gibson Guitar's commitment to the Forest Stewardship Council program.

The Obama administration contends that only finished wood products are allowed to be exported from Madagascar and have told the Gibson Guitar company that all of this would go away if they moved production into the country that exported the exotic woods. Gibson is one of those rare companies that has been able to keep ahead of foreign imports by focusing on top quality products, keeping hundreds of jobs right here in the U.S.

I firmly believe that there is no such thing as a crazy person or a crazy law. Most alleged insanity usually looks reasonable once viewed from the correct angle. If one believes the Cloward-Pivens strategy is behind the Obama administration wanting to close down an American factory and send the jobs to Madagascar, then this story begins to make perfect sense.

I am a former employer. I've owned furniture factories and cabinet shops over the years, employing from a few to over 40 employees. My current shop was built to employ ten employees but the most employees we could ever amass at once was eight. The restriction was finding someone willing to actually show up for work, and then once there, be willing to put in a productive eight hour day putting out quality work. Once people stuck around long enough to pick up the skills required to work efficiently, they could earn as much as $15.00 per hour. Not enough, I know, but with the other cabinet shops employing illegal workers at $7.00 to $8.00 per hour, that was the best we could pay. The wood working industry has always had wages up to 60% less than other manufacturing industries, the low barrier of entry for new shops has always caused professional shops to compete with those working in their garages or working on site to build cabinets, with the low overhead giving the unprofessional shops a large advantage.

Low wages in itself isn't 100% of the problem. Once people figure out how to play the system, they don't need to work for low wages if they use Section 8 housing, free medical care at the emergency room, food stamps, and the other welfare programs. So companies like Gibson are hit with both low price foreign competition and finding workers with enough self esteem that they are willing to work rather than sit on the government dole. And then the Obama administration wants to shut them down and ship the jobs overseas.

I started winding down the number of employees I worked years ago. When the internet age came upon us it was obvious that if your quality was not the best, it mattered not what price range you were in, unhappy customers would post bad references about your company online for all to see. I've seen comments where people talked about the price of a set of cabinets being the only standard toward choosing a company because they could always demand quality. Well, cabinets are like any other product, you get what you pay for, all that type of customer can do is set themselves up for problems. So I decided to avoid the low end of the market, focusing on the upper end where one could charge enough to do top notch work and avoid the bad reviews. That meant that I could afford to hire only the best workers, because the old system of bringing in a new hand and absorbing the cost reworking his mistakes wasn't possible anymore.

If a manufacture can manage to get past the foreign competition and the lack of work ethic in the majority of the workers in the lower pay scales, then government regulation is still there to cause problems. It was bad enough back in the mid eighties when I had over 40 workers on my payroll, with untold dozens more producing materials, supplies, or components for my factory. It is ten times worse these days as Gibson Guitar is finding out.

So like John Galt in Atlas Shrugged, I went on strike. Now I work no employees, just do what I can do by myself and I've found I make more than I did with eight employees even carrying the enormous overhead of a 10,000 square foot shop. This strategy is the only safe way to survive in business these days unless you have a very profitable business and can just burn money to solve problems. One wonders how much of the current 9% unemployment and the enormous under employment is due to capitalist like myself just refusing to play the game.

A few months back the ATF got caught letting weapons get smuggled into Mexico. Allegedly part of a sting operation to catch gun shops selling to buyers that weren't legally able to purchase guns, they termed it "gun walking" and as it turned out besides Mexico and Honduras, the ATF might be doing this all over our country. Rep. Key is requesting an appointment with Governor Fallin on either February 7th or 8th to introduce Mr. Benjamin Domenech and Kendal Antekier of The Heartland Institute, and discuss HealthCare Exchanges. Mr. Domenech and Ms. Antekier will be in the state to share expertise on this subject. The dates and times they are sharing the information is listed below:

Tuesday, February 7th @ approximately 9:30am (following session), House Chamber

Wednesday, February 8th @ 9:00am in the State Capitol, room 512A

Wednesday, February 8th @ noon @ OCPAC @ Italiano's, 4801 N. Lincoln Boulevard

Please advise if Governor Fallin has time in her schedule.

Information about The Heartland Institute and Mr. Domenech is listed below:

Benjamin Domenech, managing editor of Health Care News and a research fellow at The Heartland Institute, has agreed to come to the State Capitol and share his expertise on this subject. Kendal Antekier of the Heartland Institute will also be in attendance. The Heartland Institute is a 27-year-old national nonprofit research organization dedicated to finding and promoting ideas that empower people. Founded in Chicago in 1984, its mission is to discover, develop, and promote free-market solutions to social and economic problems. The Heartland Institute distributes six monthly public policy newspapers addressing the major domestic public policy issues to every national and state elected official in the U.S. plus 8,400 county and local officials and thousands of civic and business leaders. It also produces books, policy studies, and booklets. Approximately 130 academics and professional economists participate in its peer review process, and more than 200 elected officials currently serve on its Legislative Forum. A telephone survey of randomly selected state and local elected officials conducted in 2011 found 79% of state legislators and 63% of local elected officials read at least one of Heartland's publications, and 45% of state legislators say a Heartland publication changed their mind or led to a change in public policy. Approximately 1,800 support an annual budget of $6 million. Heartland does not accept government funding.

Mr. Domenech joined The Heartland Institute in 2009 after several years working and writing on national health care policy, beginning with a political appointment as speechwriter to U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson, and continuing as chief speechwriter for U.S. Senator John Cornyn during the Medicare Part D debate on Capitol Hill. In addition to his work with Heartland, Benjamin is currently editor of The City, an academic journal of faith, politics, and culture, published by Houston Baptist University. He previously worked as a book editor for Eagle Publishing, where he edited multiple New York Times bestsellers in the arenas of politics, history, and sports.

He was a founding board member of Redstate, a prominent conservative activist community site, and co-hosts Coffee & Markets, an award-winning daily podcast focused on politics, policy, and the marketplace. Educated at the College of William & Mary and University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Benjamin regularly writes opinion columns for the Washington Examiner and RealClearWorld, and in 2009 he was chosen as a Journalism Fellow by the Peter Jennings Project for Journalists and the Constitution.

Court holds that states have choice whether to join medicaid expansion

The Court's decision on the constitutionality of the Medicaid expansion is divided and complicated. The bottom line is that: (1) Congress acted constitutionally in offering states funds to expand coverage to millions of new individuals; (2) So states can agree to expand coverage in exchange for those new funds; (3) If the state accepts the expansion funds, it must obey by the new rules and expand coverage; (4) but a state can refuse to participate in the expansion without losing all of its Medicaid funds; instead the state will have the option of continue the its current, unexpanded plan as is.

The votes for this outcome are divided among several opinions. Three Justices – the Chief, Justice Kagan, and Justice Breyer – took the position that depriving a state of all of its Medicaid funding for refusing to agree to the new expansion would exceed Congress's power under the Spending Clause. Although Congress may attach conditions to federal funds, they concluded, it may not coerce states into accepting those conditions. And in this case, taking away all the states' funds for the entirety of its Medicaid program just because it disagreed with a piece of the program would be coercive. But the remedy for that constitutional violation is not to declare the expansion unconstitutional – such that even states that want to participate would not have the option. Instead, the plurality held that the provision of the statute that authorized the Government to cut off all funds for non-compliance with the expansion was unconstitutional. The result is that states can choose to participate in the expansion, must comply with the conditions attached to the new expansion funds if they take that new money, but states can also choose to continue to participate only in the unexpanded version of the program if they want.

Justices Ginsburg and Sotomayor would have held the entire expansion program constitutional, even the provision threatening to cut off all funding unless states agreed to the expansion. Their votes created a majority for the proposition that the overall expansion was constitutional, and that states could choose to participate in the expansion and would have to comply with the expansion conditions if they did.

But there was still no majority about what to do about the states that do not want to participate in the expansion – the Chief Justice's 3-Justice plurality voted to strike down the provision allowing the Government to withhold all funds from states that reject the expansion; Justices Ginsburg and Sotomayor voted to uphold it.

The deadlock was broken by the dissenters. Justice Scalia – writing on behalf of himself, and Justices Kennedy, Thomas, and Alito – agreed with the Chief's plurality that the threat to withhold all funds was unconstitutionally coercive. But they would have held that the consequence is that the entire expansion program should be stricken. The result would have been that even states that wanted to participate in the program could not. The plurality's approach of simply striking down the provision that allowed withholding all funds if the state refused the expansion was, in the dissenters' view, tantamount to rewriting the statute.

At this point, that meant that there were 2 votes to uphold the expansion in its entirety, 4 votes to strike the entire expansion down, and 3 votes to strike down only the provision withholding all funds for non-compliance with the expansion mandate. So where does that leave things?

Fortunately (for the sake of clarity at least), Justices Ginsburg and Sotomayor resolved the ambiguity by voting with the plurality on the remedy question. That is, these Justices voted that if the statute was unconstitutionally coercive, then the remedy would be only to strike down the all-or-nothing sanction.

The consequence was a bottom line of 7 Justices – the Chief, Breyer, Kagan and the four dissenters – finding the expansion unconstitutional. But a different majority – the Chief, Ginsburg, Breyer, Sotomayor and Kagan – held that the remedy for the violation was to strike down only the provision allowing the federal government to withhold all Medicaid funds unless a state agrees to the expansion.

Obamacare Is Still Vulnerable

By Michael F. Cannon
November 9, 2012 4:00 A.M.

President Obama has won reelection, and his administration has asked state officials to decide by Friday, November 16, whether their state will create one of Obamacare's health-insurance "exchanges." States also have to decide whether to implement the law's massive expansion of Medicaid. The correct answer to both questions remains a resounding no.

State-created exchanges mean higher taxes, fewer jobs, and less protection of religious freedom. States are better off defaulting to a federal exchange. The Medicaid expansion is likewise too costly and risky a proposition. Republican Governors Association chairman Bob McDonnell (R., Va.) agrees, and has announced that Virginia will implement neither provision.

There are many arguments against creating exchanges.

First, states are under no obligation to create one.

Second, operating an Obamacare exchange would be illegal in 14 states. Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Utah, and Virginia have enacted either statutes or constitutional amendments (or both) forbidding state employees to participate in an essential exchange function: implementing Obamacare's individual and employer mandates.

Third, each exchange would cost its state an estimated $10 million to $100 million per year, necessitating tax increases.

Fourth, the November 16 deadline is no more real than the “deadlines” for implementing REAL ID, which have been pushed back repeatedly since 2008.

Fifth, states can always create an exchange later if they choose.

Sixth, a state-created exchange is not a state-controlled exchange. All exchanges will be controlled by Washington.

Seventh, Congress authorized no funds for federal “fallback” exchanges. So Washington may not be able to impose Exchanges on states at all.

Eighth, the Obama administration has yet to provide crucial information that states need before they can make an informed decision.

Ninth, creating an exchange sets state officials up to take the blame when Obamacare increases insurance premiums and denies care to the sick. State officials won’t want their names on this disastrous mess.

Tenth, creating an exchange would be assisting in the creation of a “public option” that would drive domestic health-insurance carriers out of business through unfair competition.

Eleventh, Obamacare remains unpopular. The latest Kaiser Family Foundation poll found that only 38 percent of the public supports it.

Twelfth, defaulting to a federal exchange exempts a state’s employers from the employer mandate — a tax of $2,000 per worker per year (the tax applies to companies with more than 59 employees, but for such companies that tax applies after the 30th employee, not the 59th). If all states did so, that would exempt 18 million Americans from the individual mandate’s tax of $2,085 per family of four. Avoiding those taxes improves a state’s prospects for job creation, and protects the conscience rights of employers and individuals whom the Obama administration is forcing to purchase contraceptives coverage.

Finally, rejecting an exchange reduces the federal deficit. Obamacare offers its deficit-financed subsidies to private health insurers only through state-created exchanges. If all states declined, federal deficits would fall by roughly $700 billion over ten years.

For similar reasons, states should decline to implement Obamacare’s Medicaid expansion. The Supreme Court gave states that option. All states should exercise it.

Medicaid is rife with waste and fraud. It increases the cost of private health care and insurance, crowds out private health insurance and long-term-care insurance, and discourages enrollees from climbing the economic ladder. There is scant reliable evidence that Medicaid improves health outcomes, and no evidence that it is a cost-effective way of doing so.

My colleague Jagadeesh Gokhale estimates that expanding Medicaid will cost individual states up to $53 billion over the first ten years. That's before an emboldened President Obama follows through on his threats to shift more Medicaid costs to states.

Neither the states nor the federal government have the money to expand Medicaid. If all states politely decline, federal deficits will shrink by another $900 billion.

Now is not the time to go wobbly. Obamacare is still harmful and still unpopular. The presidential election was hardly a referendum, as it pitted the first person to enact Obamacare against the second person to enact it. Since the election, many state officials are reaffirming their opposition to both implementing exchanges and expanding Medicaid.

If enough states do so, Congress will have no choice but to reopen Obamacare. With a GOP-controlled House, opponents will be in a much stronger position than they were when this harmful law was enacted.

Second, operating an Obamacare exchange would be illegal in 14 states. Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Utah, and Virginia have enacted either statutes or constitutional amendments (or both) forbidding state employees to participate in an essential exchange function: implementing Obamacare's individual and employer mandates.

Third, each exchange would cost its state an estimated $10 million to $100 million per year, necessitating tax increases.

Fourth, the November 16 deadline is no more real than the "deadlines" for implementing REAL ID, which have been pushed back repeatedly since 2008.

Fifth, states can always create an exchange later if they choose.

Sixth, a state-created exchange is not a state-controlled exchange. All exchanges will be controlled by Washington.

Seventh, Congress authorized no funds for federal "fallback" exchanges. So Washington may not be able to impose Exchanges on states at all.

Eighth, the Obama administration has yet to provide crucial information that states need before they can make an informed decision.

Ninth, creating an exchange sets state officials up to take the blame when Obamacare increases insurance premiums and denies care to the sick. State officials won't want their names on this disastrous mess.

Tenth, creating an exchange would be assisting in the creation of a "public option" that would drive domestic health-insurance carriers out of business through unfair competition.

Eleventh, Obamacare remains unpopular. The latest Kaiser Family Foundation poll found that only 38 percent of the public supports it.

Twelfth, defaulting to a federal exchange exempts a state's employers from the employer mandate — a tax of $2,000 per worker per year (the tax applies to companies with more than 59 employees, but for such companies that tax applies after the 30th employee, not the 59th). If all states did so, that would exempt 18 million Americans from the individual mandate's tax of $2,085 per family of four. Avoiding those taxes improves a state's prospects for job creation, and protects the conscience rights of employers and individuals whom the Obama administration is forcing to purchase contraceptives coverage.

Finally, rejecting an exchange reduces the federal deficit. Obamacare offers its deficit-financed subsidies to private health insurers only through state-created exchanges. If all states declined, federal deficits would fall by roughly $700 billion over ten years.

For similar reasons, states should decline to implement Obamacare's Medicaid expansion. The Supreme Court gave states that option. All states should exercise it.

Medicaid is rife with waste and fraud. It increases the cost of private health care and insurance, crowds out private health insurance and long-term-care insurance, and discourages enrollees from climbing the economic ladder. There is scant reliable evidence that Medicaid improves health outcomes, and no evidence that it is a cost-effective way of doing so.

My colleague Jagadeesh Gokhale estimates that expanding Medicaid will cost individual states up to $53 billion over the first ten years. That's before an emboldened President Obama follows through on his threats to shift more Medicaid costs to states.

Neither the states nor the federal government have the money to expand Medicaid. If all states politely decline, federal deficits will shrink by another $900 billion.

Now is not the time to go wobbly. Obamacare is still harmful and still unpopular. The presidential election was hardly a referendum, as it pitted the first person to enact Obamacare against the second person to enact it. Since the election, many state officials are reaffirming their opposition to both implementing exchanges and expanding Medicaid.

If enough states do so, Congress will have no choice but to reopen Obamacare. With a GOP-controlled House, opponents will be in a much stronger position than they were when this harmful law was enacted.

Brown urges Governor to halt implementation of Obamacare

OKLAHOMA CITY- Sen. Bill Brown, Chair of the Senate Committee on Retirement and Insurance, on Monday called upon Gov. Fallin to stand with other governors who have announced their refusal to implement the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) following the Supreme Court's recent ruling.

Calling the decision a blow to individual liberty and free markets, Brown said the state must refuse the expansion of Medicaid and federally-run market exchanges. Brown referenced Medicare as an example of the government's tendency to underestimate the cost of its far-reaching programs.

"It is a moral imperative that state leaders do everything in their power to halt the implementation of a program that strikes at the heart of our founding principles,” said Brown, R-Broken Arrow. “Medicare began in 1965 with a cost of $3 billion a year – that doubled every four years until 1980. In 2010, its cost was $523 billion, and now the Congressional Budget Office estimates that by 2020 the cost will be $932 billion.”

“The government has projected the cost of Obamacare will start at $1 trillion each year, which is obviously not a realistic assessment, and it will only get more expensive.”

At its inception, Brown added, the House Ways and Means Committee estimated Medicare would cost $12 billion yearly by 1990. Medicare expenditures totaled $107 billion in 1990.

Brown noted that prior to the Court’s ruling, the so-called penalty was to be justified under the Commerce Clause. Sixty votes would have been needed to repeal the law in the U.S. Senate, a virtual impossibility. Now that the Court has ruled the penalty a tax, Brown added, the law could be overturned with just 51 votes.

“Repeal of this law is a real possibility, and it needs to be the rallying cry for those who value our constitutional freedoms,” Brown said. “Oklahoma must join those states which have refused to implement any part of the Act, including Medicaid provisions and the Exchange program while repeal efforts are alive. I call on Gov. Fallin to stand with governors in other states and join the vital effort to resist and repeal this extraordinary federal power grab.”

Alex:

Sen. Bingman made mention of two things that I think it's important to seek a comment from the governor on:

1. He indicated the Senate will not hear HB 2130 which sets up the health insurance exchanges because he's concerned about the state "falling into a trap of adopting Obamacare." He also indicated he thinks the state should not accept any more of the $54 million offered by the feds to help set up the exchange.
2. Bingman also indicated that he expects cuts to public education will be deeper than the 3 percent Fallin proposed in her executive budget. He said today he anticipates those cuts will be deeper, reaching as high as 5 to 7 percent.

Also, the Senate today approved bills to eliminate trial de novo and to expand the power of the state superintendent, both of which are headed to the governor's desk, as I understand it.

I am interested in Fallin's response to these developments, as well as any statement she may have with regard to former Senate President Pro Tem Mike Morgan being indicted in federal court.

Thanks,

Thanks Katie. If you have any flexibility in your schedule tomorrow, it would be helpful to have a brief conversation about the Health Insurance Exchange (given the article in the paper over the weekend about the Exchange and the Insurance Dept.) and the 92's to Sec. Coffee's office for the interim. Is there any specific time tomorrow that would work for you (I have a cancelled board meeting and therefore a lot of flexibility)? If not, we can go for later in the week. Thanks, TC

State of the State Address

(as prepared)

February 7, 2011

Lieutenant Governor Lamb, statewide elected officials, Speaker Steele, President Pro Tem Bingman, members of the court, Honorable Senators and Representatives, cabinet members, distinguished guests, and citizens of Oklahoma:

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to stand here today as your governor.

I'm joined today by my family, my husband Wade and our wonderful children. Thank you for your love and support.

We are gathered here to discuss the state of the state. I am proud to say, it is strong.

Oklahoma continues to be proud and beautiful ... a wonderful place to live and raise a family, and the only state I would ever choose to call home.

We have one of the lowest unemployment rates in the nation, at 6.9%.

Our economy is propelled by thousands of successful small businesses, our energy and agricultural sectors and a strong aerospace industry.

Oklahomans are helping to feed our nation by raising crops and livestock and helping to power our nation with the extraction of oil and gas and by harnessing the wind.

Oklahoma is the home to the largest aerospace maintenance and repair facilities in the nation, and our aerospace technicians are keeping military and commercial aircraft flying safely throughout the world.

Here in Oklahoma City, we see a new floor added every few days to the Devon Tower, one of the tallest buildings west of the Mississippi river. And we are blessed with a low cost of living, abundant natural resources, ease of travel, great family values and an incredible people who form an unbreakable community.

It hasn't always been easy for Oklahoma. We have felt the affects of the national recession, and it has been hard. However, we have worked through it, and we will come out stronger. As Oklahomans have done for years, we will continue to manufacture goods and build skyscrapers on the land that was once known as the Dust Bowl.

That is the unshakeable spirit of the people of Oklahoma. We are a state that has survived the injustices of the Trail of Tears and the Tulsa Race Riots, the great depression, oil booms and busts and the horrors of the Murrah bombing, only to emerge as a stronger community and a prouder people.

That's the Oklahoma Spirit. It's a pioneer spirit, a spirit of resilience and a love for one's neighbors.

And it is because of the love, appreciation and respect I have for my fellow Oklahomans that it pains me, as I know it pains you, when we fall short in some areas.

It is unacceptable and unimaginable that a people who perfected amazing technical feats in areas like horizontal drilling and hydraulic fracturing cannot successfully address preventable illnesses like diabetes and heart disease that cost our state thousands of lives and hundreds of millions of dollars in medical bills each year.

We don't tolerate mediocrity in our football teams, and yet our student performance continues to lag behind.

We allow overregulation and costly workers compensation and legal systems to slow our recovery and drive jobs out of the state.

And we have allowed our government institutions, in many instances, to become outdated 8-track bureaucracies in an I-pod world, rather than moving forward to adopt more efficient and effective practices, as we must.

None of these problems are insurmountable. But they require action. And for too long, we've kicked the can down the road. And it's our citizens and our state that have paid the price.

Now, going into the next legislative session, we have two distinct sets of challenges.

The first is to deal with an immediate revenue shortfall that has left our state budget with a 600 million dollar gap between revenues and last year's expenditures.

The second challenge is how, even in the midst of that revenue crisis, we can push forward to pursue the reforms that will make Oklahoma more prosperous for years and generations to come.

Voters understand these challenges. And in the last election, the people of Oklahoma had the opportunity to speak, and they sent us a message.

They told us that it's time to get serious about controlling spending, and that the growth of government shouldn't outpace growth in the private sector.

They asked us to eliminate government bureaucracy that holds back private sector growth.

They reminded our government officials that when hard times hit, the public expects a leaner, more efficient government, not one that raises taxes to avoid making tough decisions and sacrifices.

That is the philosophy I've embraced as I've worked with my administration and legislative leaders to put together the governor's budget and our leadership agenda.

The agenda I am presenting today represents a forward thinking plan of action that lays the groundwork for generations of prosperity. It will create jobs and grow the economy. It will reform our government to make it more efficient and effective. It will work towards a healthier, better-educated Oklahoma. Ultimately, it will help to build a state whose future is secure in a competitive global economy.

Our first priority will be to balance our state budget without raising taxes, which we can do by carefully prioritizing our spending and enacting government reform.

I have proposed a series of cost-saving measures that will make government more efficient and effective while focusing on eliminating wasteful spending.

Those cost-saving measures are essential, because the bottom line is we can't spend what we don't have.

Some of the cuts and the reforms I am proposing will be painful. But I am not asking our state agencies to do the impossible. I don't believe there is anyone, either in government or the private sector, who does not believe that our state agencies can't find more ways to save money.

And the fact of the matter is, if we grow the government faster than the economy, then our state will sink under the weight of government spending. To prevent that, every agency will have to tighten its belt, just like families and businesses across the country have done.

We can do that even as we keep our commitments to important public priorities, like keeping our citizens safe, building our transportation infrastructure, educating our children, and caring for the less fortunate, the sick and the elderly. To reflect these priorities in my budget, agencies that deal with those issues will receive lesser cuts than the rest of our state government.

But the reality remains: all of us will have to do more with less. And I am asking our agency heads: resist the urge to tell the people of Oklahoma what you can't do. Instead, tell us what you can do. Find ways to innovate and succeed. And just as countless Oklahomans have found ways to push through this recession, to put food on the table even when times are hard, find a way forward.

All of us in government can find ways to provide our services to our customers – the taxpayers – in a more efficient, cost-effective manner.

That's why I'm asking our legislative leaders to send me a series of reforms that will create a smaller, smarter state government, a better business climate for job growth and job creation, improved access to health care and higher academic achievement for our children.

This is Oklahoma's roadmap to prosperity.

That roadmap begins with one goal: to create the very best business climate to retain and expand jobs and investments in Oklahoma. Our actions must send a signal to the rest of the nation: that Oklahoma is ready and open for business.

I recently attended the National Governor's Association conference and I ran across one of our neighbors, Governor Rick Perry. Governor Perry told me he's been using some scare tactics in Texas. He's been telling legislators they had better get busy and pass his pro-business reforms because Oklahoma and Mary Fallin are nipping at his heels.

And I told him then: you're darn right. And you had better watch out because Oklahoma is on the move, and we are dead serious about building a state that's pro-business, pro-growth and committed to creating more and better jobs for our citizens.

We can start by reforming our workers compensation system into one that takes care of our injured workers in a more timely fashion, reduces fraud and waste, and puts the brakes on runaway costs that have spiraled upwards each year.

Our system is one of the most expensive and inefficient workers compensation systems in the country. In some cases, when our workers get hurt, we pay them to stay at home. We need to start focusing on what workers can do, not what they can't. If at all possible, let's get them healthy, retrained and back into suitable jobs.

So to the legislators here today – I'm challenging you to send me a reform bill that will reduce legal and medical costs, get our workers healthy and back to work, and allow claims to be processed quickly and efficiently without unnecessary expenses to businesses.

I'm also asking our legislators to work with me to get a lawsuit reform package signed into law, one that includes a hard cap of $250,000 for non-economic damages. We believe in justice for every Oklahoman. But we don't believe in jackpot justice. And excessive awards for non-economic damages hurt businesses, destroy jobs and give a bad name to a legal system whose professionals are, for the most part, dedicated to ensuring fair outcomes for all parties.

Moving forward, we should also carefully scrutinize new rules and regulations so that we can study how they might affect our economy and whether they achieve their intended goals or simply throw up more bureaucratic hurdles to growth.

As another tool for economic development, I'm asking the legislature to work with me to create a Governor's closing fund ... so that when a business is deciding between, say, Texas and Oklahoma, we can reel that business in and get those jobs for our citizens and that revenue for our state.

That's why I'll continue to support the implementation of the income tax cut trigger, which lowers taxes for Oklahoma families and businesses and continues to make our state more competitive.

And on the subject of tax credits, I know a lot has been said. Representative Dank and Senator Mazzei are conducting a study to investigate which credits are effective and create jobs, and which do not. I'm looking forward to the results of that study, and our course of action will be simple: only tax credits that create jobs will stay. For instance, my budget begins the process of restoring the Aerospace Engineer Tax Credit, which brings good, high tech jobs to Oklahoma. But those tax credits that do not create jobs must be eliminated.

If we can do these things – reduce the costs of doing business here in Oklahoma, get government and legal hurdles out of the way of private sector growth, and retain jobs and businesses here while attracting new ones – we can do more and think longer-term than just ending the recession. We can make this state more competitive, more prosperous and more successful for many years to come. I'm asking you today to join me in pursuing that goal.

I'm also asking you to join me in pursuing another goal: the goal of creating a modern, efficient and effective state government.

For the past several months, I've worked with some of the most innovative minds in the private and public sector to target waste and inefficiency in government.

Today we are proposing the first round in a series of reforms that streamline and modernize our state agencies.

For starters, we're going to require our state government to finally move from paper to electronic billing and payment services. Currently, the state of Oklahoma pays $13.50 for every check it writes. That's inefficient. Moving to paperless billing and payment will be faster, more efficient and save the state around 3.5 million dollars a year.

We'll create a user-friendly one-stop shop for business licensing, so entrepreneurs looking to start companies can go to one location rather than several to do their paperwork, because it shouldn't be any easier to open a business in Texas than in Oklahoma.

I'm also going to ask our colleges and universities to move off of their individual purchasing card systems and onto the state system, a move that will save $1.6 million annually and bring more accountability and transparency to the process. Oklahoma State University recently made this change, and I'd like to thank the university and President Hargis for their leadership on this issue.

In the next year, I'm also proposing a consolidation of IT services and personnel across state agencies. And while we're at it, I'm going to call on our agencies to use a uniform system for financial and administrative services. The state of Oklahoma doesn't need 76 different programs for financial bookkeeping. It needs one. And by moving towards that one system and consolidating services, we'll save a whopping $146 million each year. I already have commitments from our Secretary of State and the departments of health, agriculture and commerce to move to such a system, and I thank those agencies for their dedication to making government more efficient.

These are the kind of simple, common sense solutions we can pursue to save taxpayer dollars.

I'm challenging our citizens and our government employees: help me find more places to save money and cut waste. Tell us how we can make our state serve our customers – the people of Oklahoma – more efficiently.

If you have an idea, share it with my administration by going to the website www.ideas.ok.gov and tell us where we need to look to find waste or abuse.

Besides finding ways to make government operate more efficiently, we'll also need to work this legislative session to address one of the most serious long term budget problems facing the state: our underfunded and unsustainable pension systems. Currently, Oklahoma has an unfunded liability of $16 billion dollars.

Without taking action, our pension systems will run out of money. The consequences for the state, its employees and our economy will be severe.

I know that our public employees and legislators do not want Oklahoma to go down the same path as states like California, states which refused to fix their pension problems. So I am looking forward to working with both the House and the Senate to passing reforms that protect the solvency of our pension systems. These reforms are necessary if the state of Oklahoma is going to keep its commitments to our current public employees without jeopardizing our future and the health of our economy and our state.

We've talked now about the health of our economy; it is important that we also turn our attention to the health and welfare of our citizens.

Studies now rank Oklahoma 46th in the nation for the health of our citizens. That ranking is unacceptable, and comes hand in hand with lost workforce productivity, hundreds of millions of dollars in medical bills, and thousands of preventable deaths.

For Oklahoma to move forward it must get healthier. We can do that by increasing access to affordable health care through free market initiatives, but also by encouraging personal responsibility. These changes can and should come from the people of our state, not Washington.

Last November, Oklahomans sent a message when they voted to pass a ballot initiative stating that the federal government cannot force our citizens to purchase private health insurance. Many Oklahomans, including myself, feel that the federal mandate is unconstitutional and wrong. That's why Attorney General Scott Pruitt and I have acted to add Oklahoma to the list of states that are now challenging the president's health care law in court.

And while we pursue that challenge, the state of Oklahoma must continue to work on local solutions to help our citizens gain access to affordable health insurance. We can do that by supporting innovative, state-based programs like Insure Oklahoma, a public-private partnership that helps small businesses provide affordable health insurance options to their employees.

Likewise, Speaker Steele has also introduced the foundation for another Oklahoma-based reform effort with potential to help health insurance consumers.

Two years ago Speaker Steele passed legislation authorizing the creation of a website where every health insurance plan in the state could be compared side by side. In the coming years, we'll take that idea and build on it, allowing Oklahoma consumers to actually purchase health insurance through an Oklahoma exchange, knowing that the plan they've chosen has the right benefits at the right price.

Ultimately, the choice to live healthier and be healthier is just that: a choice. But I'm happy to say that the Department of Health has introduced innovative public-private initiatives like the Certified Healthy Businesses program to encourage healthy living and eating.

Currently, over 900 private businesses have become "certified." And I'm excited to see our healthy living initiatives grow to include the Certified Healthy Schools and Certified Healthy Communities programs.

By asking our citizens to take responsibility for their own health, we're building a healthier, more prosperous state, business by business, school by school and block by block.

We're also asking our citizens to take responsibility for their lifestyles and their wellbeing. It's no secret that many Oklahomans struggle with addiction issues that can lead to incarceration. As a result, Oklahoma is one of the highest rated states in the nation for female incarceration.

As we know, the costs to our state and our communities don't end with the original offender. Children with a parent in prison are five times more likely to end up in the correctional system.

As Oklahomans, we must always place a priority on protecting our citizens and keeping our streets safe. But we can be tough on crime and smart on crime.

That's why I'm continuing to offer my full support to programs like "Women in Recovery" and other initiatives that address substance abuse, prevent incarceration, and allow more families to stay together. By fighting the hold that substance abuse has on our communities, we can make Oklahoma healthier and safer while working towards reducing our incarceration rates.

Lastly, there is nothing more important to our future and our long-term prosperity than education. It is the cornerstone of a prosperous society.

We have pockets of excellence in education throughout the state. Many of our teachers – like my sisters in law Rameen and Jane—along with many such as my sisters in law and administrators can be counted as some of the best in the country.

But the unfortunate truth is that Oklahoma too often comes up short when it comes to quality education.

We can do better. And we must do better in a challenging environment, in the midst of a serious and prolonged budget shortfall.

It is critically important that we restructure our spending and our educational programs in order to get more money into the classroom, where it can do the most good. That will require cutting down on overhead and educational bureaucracy by sharing administrative resources.

And like in any industry, we also need to find ways to encourage innovation and good results. That's why I'm working with Superintendent Barresi to find available funds for a new public-private partnership where private money matches state dollars to fund innovative learning programs that are shown to increase student performance and close the achievement gap.

And to address the limited circumstances where teachers are underperforming, I'm asking the legislature to send me a bill eliminating a practice known as "trial de novo;" a system that makes it nearly impossible to dismiss even the most underperforming teacher. By implementing these reforms, we'll make the system more accountable and better able to reward good results.

We have a lot more work to do.

It has been shown that from the first through third grade a child "learns to read," but from the fourth grade on a child "reads to learn." Our children must be able to read at grade appropriate levels to be successful, and so I will work with our superintendent and my secretary of education to take steps towards the elimination of social promotion.

We also need to make some common sense changes that save money, like moving towards electronic textbooks where appropriate. And we must reduce remediation rates and develop better and more accurate systems to track student progress, so we know what's working and what isn't.

In the next few years, I am confident Oklahoma will be the beneficiary of true education reform that delivers on many of these fronts.

Superintendent Janet Barresi and Secretary of Education Phyllis Hudecki are two of the strongest, most dedicated and most qualified women ever to spearhead education reform efforts in Oklahoma.

I know the legislature is committed to improving our schools as well.

And it must be. Because nothing – and I mean nothing – is as important to the success of this state than raising the bar in education.

With the right tools, our children will be the business leaders, the entrepreneurs, the social workers, and the teachers of the future. They will be our innovators and our civic leaders.

But to get there tomorrow, they need us to make the right choices today ... to budget responsibly, to ensure that our government operates efficiently and effectively and to reform those agencies that don't, to pursue an agenda that is pro-jobs and pro-business, to empower our citizens, to improve our health and to recommit ourselves to providing quality education and quality schools.

It won't happen overnight. But it starts now.

One hundred and twenty-two years ago, many thousands of pioneers came in covered wagons to the unsettled lands of Oklahoma. They built tent cities in the unsettled wilderness.

In 2011, we're done with tent cities and covered wagons. Now we build skyscrapers and jet engines, develop new crops and find new cures for disease. And our future is every bit as exciting today as it was then.

We have the tools we need to move Oklahoma forward, to forge a prosperous future and to ensure that the next century of history in this state is as impressive as the last.

Let's work together to build that future, for ourselves, our children and our children's children. In closing, let's share this simple goal: every year, when we return to these chambers, the state of our state will be stronger, healthier, better educated and more prosperous than it was the year before.

Thank you. God bless you and God bless Oklahoma.

Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt has filed a lawsuit challenging the Internal Revenue Service's unlawful attempt to impose ObamaCare's taxes on exempt employers and individuals. (Jonathan Adler and I plumb this issue in our forthcoming Health Matrix article, "Taxation Without Representation: The Illegal IRS Rule to Expand Tax Credits Under the PPACA.")

An article in the current issue of Business Insurance cites a couple of experts on the potential impact of the lawsuit:

While the ramifications of the suit pending in the U.S. District Court in Muskogee, Okla., are huge, the challenge brought last month has gotten little attention...

What is clear is that the outcome of the lawsuit could be crucial for the future of the health care reform law, observers said.

If premium subsidies are not available in federally established exchanges, "No one would go to those exchanges. The whole structure created by the health care reform law starts to fall apart," said Gretchen Young, senior vice president-health policy at the ERISA Industry Committee in Washington.

"The health care reform law would become a meaningless law," added Chantel Sheaks, a principal with Buck Consultants L.L.C. in Washington.

The ObamaCare Rebellion Turns Exchange 'Deadline' into a 'Rolling Deadline'

Posted by Michael F. Cannon

The Obama administration had set a deadline of November 16 for states to signal whether they would create their own health insurance "exchanges," or let the federal government do it.

But the federal government is so desperate to have states do the heavy lifting, and so few states are interested, that for some time (most recently in a National Review Online column that posted yesterday) I have been predicting the Obama administration would push back that deadline. It seems I was right. Well, today's CQ Healthbeat reports:

The federal government is likely to extend the Nov. 16 deadline for states to decide whether they will run their own health insurance exchanges, according to several state officials. ... Instead, HHS officials are expected to set a new deadline for states that want to operate the marketplaces alone but have a rolling deadline with ongoing discussions for states that are interested in a partnership.

What is the difference between a "rolling deadline" and no deadline?

It's "the REAL ID rebellion" all over again.

CBO Says Repeal of Exchange Grants Would Cut Deficit

By Jane Norman, CQ HealthBeat Associate Editor

A bill that would repeal mandatory federal funding for states to set up health insurance exchanges is headed to the House floor next week, and the Congressional Budget Office reports that it would reduce deficits by nearly $13 billion from 2012 through 2016.

A section of the health care overhaul law (PL 111-148, PL 111-152) authorizes grants to states for $1.9 billion between 2012 and 2015 for planning the exchanges that will serve as insurance marketplaces. If the government repeals that provision, the funding would be eliminated.

In addition, passage of the exchanges funding repeal measure (HR 1213) would likely lead to a delay in the establishment of exchanges. So fewer people would have health insurance and federal spending for subsidies would be reduced, CBO said.

The exchanges would become operational more slowly and would enroll fewer people in their first years without federal funds, CBO also said.

The CBO report assumed that states would still move forward to create exchanges but that the federal government would be required to take responsibility for setting them up in more states than if the health care law remained intact.

Under the health care overhaul, the federal government sets up exchanges if states decide not to do so. The secretary of Health and Human Services must approve each state's exchange plan by January 2014. If a state isn't ready to operate its own exchange, the federal government takes over. The exchanges are expected to ramp up enrollment over time and not reach full participation until 2016.

If the repeal bill is approved, there might be some efficiencies in having the federal government operate the exchanges in more states, CBO said. But the process might be slowed because of the need to coordinate with states' Medicaid agencies to establish enrollment rules. Communication and coordination with local health insurers would also have to be set up and would take time, the report said.

States that set up their own exchanges, without federal grants, would be so slowed in becoming fully operational that they might not have the capacity to process enrollment requests, CBO said. Ultimately, that would result in 5 percent to 10 percent lower enrollment than what's expected in current law between 2014 and 2016. CBO estimated that by 2015 there would be almost 2 million fewer people enrolled in exchanges than had been expected.

Energy and Commerce Chairman Fred Upton, R-Mich., the sponsor of the exchange repeal bill, called the grants a "slush fund" designed to push states into doing what the federal government wants. The repeal would help curb the deficit, he said.

"The secretary of Health and Human Services has been given an unlimited tap on the federal treasury to push for the establishment of state-based exchanges," said Upton.

"While a number of states are opting against operating their own exchanges, some administration officials have actually pointed to this unlimited spending power as a way to help alleviate other budget challenges our states are facing."

The House Rules Committee will meet at 5 p.m. Monday to consider the legislation that would repeal funding for exchange grants as well as a separate bill that would repeal the funding in the law for school-based health center construction (HR 1214) and one that would permanently ban taxpayer funding for abortion (HR 3), except in cases of rape, incest or danger to a woman's life.

Please join us for a conference call for state leaders about issues, options, and protections against ObamaCare exchanges Tomorrow, November 22, Noon EST

Please join us for a conference call at noon tomorrow, November 22, to discuss the highly controversial issue of state exchanges. Our guest speakers will be leading state officials from Wisconsin, Utah, Louisiana, and Florida.

States are highly focused on the controversial issue of exchanges as they try to decide what to do to protect themselves from the expensive and coercive mandates in the Affordable Care Act. There has been very little leadership coming from Washington on this issue, leaving states perplexed about what they should be doing.

To help us understand some of the issues and options, we will be joined by Dennis Smith, secretary of HYPERLINK "http://galen.us1.list-manage1.com/track/click?u=c80eb2149ef4fa70ce2c72ef1&id=cdacb0b521&e=fb87d92031" Wisconsin's Department of Health Services, and Robert Spendlove, director of policy for HYPERLINK "http://galen.us1.list-manage1.com/track/click?u=c80eb2149ef4fa70ce2c72ef1&id=b0981ef8e4&e=fb87d92031" Utah Governor Gary Herbert and the governor's liaison to organizations such as the National Governors Association.

Rick Scott. We will then open the lines up for questions from the participants.

As background for the call, here's an example of one state wrestling with the idea of developing its own exchange:

We're taking a look at how the 50 governors stand on implementing parts of the health care reform act. I was hoping you could help me answer a few questions on the issue. Phone or e-mail works equally well. Thanks.

The questions are:

- 1) Does Gov. Falin expect Oklahoma to increase Medicaid eligibility up to the 133% poverty line limit that the federal government says it will pick up most of the cost for?
- 2) Has Oklahoma started forming a health insurance exchange and does Gov. Falin favor the state doing it or letting the federal government do it?
- 3) Will some of these decisions be put on hold until after the November election?

Thanks.

Why States Are Reluctant On National Health Care Reform

By Dennis G. Smith | 7/9/2012

Last week's Supreme Court decision on the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) guarantees the debate over health care will continue. Supporters of PPACA want to convince the public that everything is settled and any opposition is just politics.

But opponents are not out to score political points. We believe now, as we did two years ago, that the economic assumptions used in the debate are flawed and the policies are wrong for the nation.

Since the Court's decision, the law's supporters insist that Obama policies are successful because the cost of health care is declining. But that is not the case. Americans know that cost and spending are not the same thing. If the cost of a car is too high, a family won't buy one, which means their spending is lower.

Health care spending has slowed, but for the wrong reason -- the lingering recession. Demand is lower because fewer people now have health insurance than when the President's term of office began. In 2008, 42.7 million individuals were uninsured according to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS). CMS estimates there will be 48.6 million people without insurance in 2013. It is hard to see how this could be considered an accomplishment.

Even the government's own actuaries say that the slowdown in health spending now and into the future is unrelated to PPACA. PPACA hides and shifts costs; it does not lower them.

Most Americans already believe we are spending too much, not too little, on health care and that is what this debate should be focusing on once again. True health care reform must tackle the root causes of our health care costs and put individuals at the center of decision-making.

Those who support expanding Medicaid insist that a state cannot pass up "free" federal money or that if we don't expand, the money will go to another state. This is the kind of thinking that got us into the deficit and debt troubles we are in.

First, there is no such thing as "free" federal money. The federal government has no money of its own and it gets the money it spends from the same people the state government does. Regardless of who the tax collector is, the impact on the taxpayer is the same.

Second, Wisconsin won't "lose" Medicaid dollars to other states as some argue because each state gets its share of federal Medicaid funding regardless of what happens in another state. Finally, hospitals, doctors, and other health care professionals would receive higher payments under the new tax credits that will be used to purchase private insurance rather than under Medicaid.

The Court's decision reveals that PPACA is an enormous and regressive tax. The result may well be that lower income individuals pay the tax but won't qualify for either PPACA's new tax credits or for Medicaid. Some groups will press states to fix this inequity, but that burden rests with the authors of PPACA who deliberately chose a Medicaid expansion because it would be cheaper for the federal government.

PPACA took a layer cake approach to health care and stratified Americans according to income levels. But Americans should not be required to live their lives according to poorly designed federal government programs and rules. The best way to expand health insurance coverage is to get the economy moving again and Americans back to work.

PPACA was flawed from the start. The American people rightfully expect a new beginning to the health care debate.

Draft of exchange/medicaid expansion press release. We have not reached a decision on timing. Still waiting on some policy content in last paragraph.

Governor Fallin today released the following statement, announcing that Oklahoma would not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the proposed Medicaid expansion under the Affordable Care Act:

For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the possible creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or to the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that the ACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the U.S. while contributing to the nation's growing deficit crisis.

Nevertheless, the ACA remains the law of the land, and Oklahoma has now been placed in a highly undesirable position by the Obama Administration. We are being asked either to join the federal government in helping to implement the ACA by creating a state based exchange approved by the Obama Administration, or else to accept one created and run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma despite the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the ACA through their support of State Question 756 in 2010.

As I do not believe an ACA-compliant state based exchange will further the health care goals of the state of Oklahoma, and because our citizens have spoken loudly and clearly on this issue, I have today informed the federal government that Oklahoma will not be pursuing the creation of a state-based exchange.

After careful consideration, I have also informed the federal government that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration's proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would increase the burden on our state budget and would further our reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future. Massive new costs associated with the Medicaid expansion would also require cuts to other important government priorities, such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a system that people of all ideological stripes have criticized as inflexible and inefficient.

Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt ongoing legal challenge of the ACA. Our second, and equally important task, will be to pursue state-based solutions that offer families better access to more affordable and high quality health care in the private sector [looking for more concrete language from Health Dept/policy shop]. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.

This is really long ... but it is two big issues that we are trying to look thoughtful about so maybe that's ok.

Governor Fallin today released the following statement, announcing that Oklahoma would not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the proposed Medicaid expansion under the Affordable Care Act:

For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the possible creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase access to health care, lower the cost of medical treatment, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state of Oklahoma.

Because the health care industry has become a complicated maze of legal and regulatory restrictions and guidelines, a situation which has only been made worse by the 1,000 plus page Affordable Care Act, any decision regarding the future of Oklahoma's health care policy is a complex one. The decision, for instance, to either create a state-based exchange that is compliant with the ACA, or to let the federal government run one of its own designs, requires a large amount of background and contextual information that the Obama Administration has been unwilling to provide. Basic questions such as 'how much will an insurance exchange cost the state of Oklahoma?' have still been left unanswered. It continues to be disappointing and frustrating that so little information has been provided to states.

At this time, the state of Oklahoma has been placed in a highly undesirable position. As I have said many times before, it is my belief the ACA is both unworkable and unaffordable. The people of Oklahoma have also overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the ACA through their support of State Question XX, which in 2010 made it unconstitutional to mandate the purchase of health insurance in this state. Yet despite the clear rejection of the ACA by voters and elected officials in Oklahoma, it remains the law of the land.

Where health insurance exchanges are concerned, Oklahoma is faced with a choice. We are being asked to either join the federal government in helping to implement the ACA by creating an exchange approved by the Obama Administration, or else to accept one created and run by the federal government. While neither choice is a good one, I have determined the state of Oklahoma does not stand to benefit from committing its own dollars, resources and staff to designing an exchange that our citizens do not want. Furthermore, without more detailed information from the Obama Administration regarding the rules and regulations within the ACA, the state is unable to adequately plan and design an exchange of its own making. With those facts in mind, I have informed the federal government today that Oklahoma will not be pursuing the creation of a state-based exchange.

After careful consideration, I have also informed the federal government that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration's proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable and threaten other vital state services by permanently committing the state of Oklahoma to annual expenses of $50 million to $100 million each year. Expenses of that magnitude would require drastic cuts to other important government priorities, such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a system that people of all ideological stripes have criticized as inflexible and inefficient.

Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our opposition to the Affordable Care Act through the appropriate legal channels. Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt has filed a lawsuit challenging the legality of the ACA, an effort which is fully supported by my office. Our second, and equally important goal, will be to pursue state-based solutions that offer families better access to more affordable and high quality health care in the private sector. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Governor Mary Fallin's "Oklahoma Now" Column

Headline: Rejecting Federal Health Care Bill Right Thing for Oklahoma

By Governor Mary Fallin

This past month, I announced Oklahoma would not implement two key components of President Obama's health care law: the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid. I'm writing this month to let you know why that decision is in the best interests of Oklahoma taxpayers and families.

For several months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both a possible health insurance exchange and the potential expansion of Medicaid.

Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation's growing deficit crisis.

Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, however, the state of Oklahoma found itself legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice was forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law time and time again.

After careful consideration, I decided last month that Oklahoma would not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. As I said at the time, any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be 'state-run' in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that would ultimately be under the control of the federal government and that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans. Furthermore, the creation of such an exchange would further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

With regards to Medicaid, I also announced that Oklahoma would not be participating in the Obama Administration's proposed expansion. Such an expansion would have been unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma hundreds of millions of dollars between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also have furthered Oklahoma's reliance on federal money that may or may not have been available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would also have required cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Finally, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

Moving forward, it is important for the state of Oklahoma to pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt's ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt's lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma's challenge can succeed.

Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.

What do you guys want to do here? I think it's good to have her on tape saying that the exchange is a good thing for Oklahoma and there's no contradiction in taking federal dollars to help speed it up ... but it is something that requires some focus. If she's too busy to do it we might want to think about getting Terry Cline

Hi Alex,

I'm a health policy reporter with Politico, and I just had a quick couple of questions about the Early Innovator grant Oklahoma sent back. I also sent my questions to the insurance department, but thought you might be able to help as well.

I know that Oklahoma said in April of last year it wouldn't participate in the program. I was just wondering if the state had spent any of the grant before deciding not to participate. If so, how much, and did the state pay back the funds?

Thanks in advance. You can reach me at 703-341-4669 with questions.

What do you want me to say here? Question is: "As a follow-up, did anyone on the staff read the entire grant proposal? Were they aware that it proposes storage of personal medical records, a staff of 10 people, interfaces with multiple other state and federal data systems, and that Hewlett Packard had been chosen as a contractor?"

Possible answer:

We were aware the OHCA was requesting federal grant money for an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange, although we were not involved in or fully aware of the line items within the grant. Since receiving the grant, however, the governor and her staff have conducted a thorough review of the application and concluded that it is consistent with the goal of creating a market-based health insurance exchange that would help Oklahomans purchase affordable, quality care and prevent the implementation of a federally run system in 2013. With that said, the governor is happy to hear alternative proposals for the composition and funding of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange and is working with legislators to build consensus on those issues.

Look ok?

Analysis: 20 states will run their health-law exchanges (The Hill)

In their choices, Republican governors face a balancing act — not going too far to embrace the law, which remains divisive with the public and anathema to conservatives, but also not skipping a chance to wrest authority from the federal government.

Feds will run Virginia's health exchange at outset (Daily Press)

McDonnell conceded that Virginia would not meet the Nov. 16 deadline for a blueprint for the state-run exchange and would default instead to a federally run insurance exchange. "The only logical decision is to choose the federal option," he said. "I don't have the answers for Virginia. They're telling us we have two years to build an exchange. It's expensive....I don't want to buy a pig-in-a-poke for Virginia taxpayers."

Ohio iffy on health-insurance exchange (Columbus Dispatch)

What Does the Election Mean for Obamacare? (Heritage Morning Bell)

*Two of the largest elements of the health care law—the massive Medicaid expansion and the costly subsidies scheme funneled through government exchanges—are heavily dependent on state compliance. ### Republican governors scramble over next Obamacare steps (Washington Post)

*States are working on a tight timeline: After the Nov. 16 deadline, they face another checkpoint on Jan. 1, when they have to demonstrate that their marketplace is on track to begin enrolling people in one year. ## HHS Expected to Give States More Time on Exchange Decisions

By Rebecca Adams, CQ HealthBeat Associate Editor

The federal government is likely to extend the Nov. 16 deadline for states to decide whether they will run their own health insurance exchanges, according to several state officials.

State officials were supposed to notify the Department of Health and Human Services by that date about whether they plan to run the insurance exchanges that will launch in 2014, create a state-federal partnership or let the federal government operate the exchange in their area. Instead, HHS officials are expected to set a new deadline for states that want to operate the marketplaces alone but have a rolling deadline with ongoing discussions for states that are interested in a partnership.

A Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services spokesman declined to comment.

The additional time will be a relief for many state officials who are trying to determine whether there is enough political will, technical knowledge and time for them to set up their own new health benefit marketplaces.

Although many governors, especially critics of the 2010 health care law (PL 111-148, PL 111-152), were not ready to commit to a state-run or state-federal hybrid exchange before the election because they did not want it to be interpreted as a show of support for the statute, many may be interested in exerting some control over an exchange in their jurisdictions since the alternative would be one run by Washington.

Before the election, nine states were expected to let the federal government operate an exchange. On Tuesday, Missouri voters in a ballot initiative also banned the state government from creating a state exchange, bringing the total of states refusing to run a state-administered exchange to 10. (See related story, CQ HealthBeat, Nov. 7, 2012)

Sixteen states have indicated that they would like to proceed with their own state-run exchange and 14 of them have sent official letters to CMS officials that are posted on the agency's website.

The decision about how to run an exchange is complicated and in many cases, governors who would like to go ahead will have to win the support of state legislators. On Wednesday, Tennessee Republican Gov. Bill Haslam said he would prefer to have the state run its own insurance exchange program than leave it to federal officials. But state legislators in his party chimed in with criticism, saying that the legislature would not go along with the creation of a state-based exchange. Governors in many states will have to navigate similar political climates.

Ok, so, "At this point in time, it is not certain that the state of Oklahoma will elect to create a health insurance exchange. ## Exchange Week: Essential benefit deadline approaches

By Jason Millman

9/10/12 5:32 AM EDT

With about three weeks to go until states have to decide on essential health benefit packages, there's not a whole lot of time. Though states knew as early as December they'd get to choose their packages, quite a few still don't have a firm answer.

ILLINOIS — Facing a Sept. 30 deadline, the state's Health Care Reform Implementation Council holds a public meeting in Chicago to discuss essential health benefit options. The state is also accepting written comments through the middle of next week.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The exchange board recently put its EHB options out for public comment. The comments are due Sept. 28, and just two days later, the District will have to give HHS its decision.

CONGRESSIONAL HEARING — Expect EHB to play a prominent role at a House Ways and Means Health Subcommittee hearing Wednesday on exchanges. The hearing notice from Chairman Wally Herger (R-Calif.) criticized the Obama administration for failing to publish final rules on essential benefits and other important exchange requirements, and Herger questioned the use of “bulletins” to guide policy.

MORE OUTREACH — HHS continues its series of calls with the department’s different regions to discuss outreach efforts for connecting with the uninsured and small businesses about new coverage options under the ACA. Up this week: Every region, except V and VI.

NEBRASKA — Public meetings to gather feedback on how Nebraska should approach an exchange continue this week. Last week’s meetings seemed to show consensus that Nebraska should run its own exchange — as the insurance department is currently planning — but Gov. Dave Heineman says he won’t make a decision until after the election.

MASSACHUSETTS — The Massachusetts Health Connector board meets Thursday, when it’ll discuss “an update” on the national law. Though no agenda is out yet, the Connector is due to consider policy changes soon that the state may need to align its 2006 law with the ACA.

FLORIDA — The state is planning to start a test run of its long-delayed small business exchange this week. The exchange, known as Florida Health Choices, was enacted into state law in 2008 and isn’t intended to meet ACA standards. The exchange is scheduled for a wider launch this fall.

HAWAII — It was the first state to officially declare that it plans to run its own exchange, and now Hawaii is looking for a firm to bring its work to the public. In a new marketing and outreach RFP, the exchange board notes the importance of reaching out to all of the state’s “diverse populations.”

MINNESOTA — The exchange board is weighing which health plans it will be eligible to sell in the new marketplace, and is accepting feedback on early recommendations. It already decided that certification requirements will be the same inside and outside the exchange, but the much tougher decision is whether the exchange will limit the number of health plans sold. The committee that delivered the recommendations seemed pretty split on that decision.

"Exchange Week" is a subscriber-only, weekly column with guidance on what states will be doing to set up — or block — exchanges. For updates throughout the week, check the Exchange Watch feature on the Pro website.

I actually don't see how this is better than no bill at all. The legislature is not going to touch this issue with a ten foot poll next year, which likely means we're only creating another task force to write another report. I know we want the legislature's buy in on this but if the end goal is to create something that will ultimately keep Obamacare out, I think the state is better off if we ultimately put something in place ourselves if the legislature does not pass a halfway substantive bill.

I know there are other political forces to think about, but from a policy perspective, I don't think this is beneficial.

Louisiana:

The Honorable Kathleen Sebelius
Secretary
Department of Health and Human Services
200 Independence Ave, SW
Washington, DC 20201

November 16, 2012

Dear Secretary Sebelius:

As you know, on March 23, 2011, the State of Louisiana announced that it would not assume the risk of building a health insurance Exchange as outlined by the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA). Given the fact that deadlines established in the guidance issued in the August 13, 2012 request of the United States Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) are not legally binding, the State of Louisiana will not be submitting a Declaration Letter; however, this letter serves as the state of Louisiana's position regarding critical components of the PPACA.

Since the PPACA was signed into law, the State of Louisiana has repeatedly stated that the law has severe legal problems, is bad policy, and is unworkable. Those beliefs remain unchanged. With the Supreme Court's decision in National Federation of Independent Business v. Sebelius, the Court agreed with the State of Louisiana that at least one of the over 450 provisions of the PPACA is unconstitutional and the provision requiring all individuals to have insurance coverage can only be upheld as a tax. Even after the Supreme Court's decision, there remain many questions about the legality of the PPACA involving issues fundamental to all Americans, including religious freedom and unjust taxation.

While the Supreme Court ruled on the Constitutionality of some parts of the PPACA, it was not an endorsement of its policy merits. In fact, Chief Justice Roberts underscored this fact when he wrote, "Members of this Court are vested with the authority to interpret the law; we possess neither the expertise nor the prerogative to make policy judgments." The PPACA remains a flawed piece of legislation that fails to fix the fundamental existing problems in the United States health care system, particularly the unsustainable rising costs faced by American families and small businesses. Instead, we are faced with a more tightly controlled federal-run health insurance market that will increase costs, undermine the private health care marketplace, and weaken private sector job creation.

The Supreme Court's decision also fails to resolve the fact that the PPACA is simply an unworkable piece of legislation. With incomplete regulations and unrealistic deadlines, States and the Federal government will struggle to have a health insurance Exchange ready for open enrollment on October 1, 2013 that is not beset with major complications for the insurance market and the respective residents of the States. The full extent of damage the PPACA causes to small businesses, the nation's economy, and the American health care system will only be revealed with time. The State of Louisiana has no interest in being a party to this failure by implementing a state based exchange.

The PPACA's Legality

Louisiana was one of 26 States that filed suit against the federal government concerning the legality of the PPACA, specifically focusing on two parts: § 1501 (the individual mandate) and Title II (the mandatory expansion of the Medicaid eligible population to 133 percent of the federal poverty level). In June of this year, the Supreme Court agreed that the mandatory Medicaid expansion was unconstitutional. They also ruled that the individual mandate was unconstitutional under Congress's Commerce power, but upheld this provision as an example of Congress's taxing power, admitting that the purported penalty is actually a tax.

While the Supreme Court effectively rewrote the PPACA to uphold the individual mandate, they did not rule on the legality of the remainder of the law. In fact, the Supreme Court is aware that future challenges are likely to occur by its recent actions. With continuing questions about the PPACA's legality, we believe it is prudent to wait until these challenges are completely resolved. Provisions that the Court did not rule on that are still being challenged include:

The Employer Mandate

- The PPACA requires that all employers with fifty or more full-time employees provide adequate health care coverage to their employees. (§ 1513, §1514, and §10106). If they do not, these employers could face a tax of $2,000 or $3,000.

Federally-Facilitated Exchange Subsidy

- In the PPACA, State-based health Exchanges are authorized to provide premium assistance subsidies to individuals from 100% to 400% of the Federal Poverty Level. However, the PPACA does not expressly authorize Federally-facilitated Exchanges to do the same. Subsequent regulations from the Internal Revenue Service have interpreted the law so that all Exchanges are able to provide premium assistance. The legality of these regulations is currently being challenged.

Preventative Care Mandate

- Section 2713 of the PPACA allows for the Secretary to define preventive care services to be provided cost-free by all non-grandfathered insurance plans. In August 2011, the Secretary released a regulation that included contraceptive and some abortifacient services as preventative care. The regulation has been challenged by numerous groups and individuals (in over 35 lawsuits) who have religious objections to paying for health insurance that includes coverage for contraception and some abortifacient services.

Maintenance of Effort

- The Supreme Court's decision invalidated the provision of the PPACA which coerced States to expand their Medicaid program by threatening existing Medicaid funding. Questions remain whether this applies to the maintenance of effort (MOE) requirement, requiring States to maintain their existing Medicaid eligibility until 2014.

Origination Clause

- The Supreme Court decision made it clear that the individual mandate is a tax, not a penalty as claimed by the administration. The PPACA originated in the Senate. The Constitution (Article I, Section 7, Clause 1) is clear that all taxes are to originate in the House, and thus the individual mandate has been contested as an unconstitutional tax.

Independent Payment Advisory Board (IPAB)

- Sections 3403 and 10320 of the PPACA created this 15-member federal board that is granted the authority to make payment changes for the Medicare program without approval from Congress. There are also no administrative or judicial reviews of these decisions.

Legality of Rulemaking/Guidance

- With many of the provisions of the PPACA, formal rules and regulations have been delayed or even non-existent. There are serious questions about the legality of this procedure in light of the Administrative Procedures Act.

Bad Policy

While HHS has repeatedly said that the States serve as incubators of innovation, the PPACA robs States of this ability by limiting their opportunities to enact meaningful state-led health care reform. For example, the concept for an Exchange originated as a free market idea meant to lower the cost of health insurance for those who decide to purchase such insurance. In theory, an increased pool for those deciding to purchase health insurance is a good idea. It provides individuals the ability to select the insurance coverage that they want at a lower cost. If this were truly the framework for the Exchange model outlined in PPACA, the State of Louisiana would be glad to evaluate it as an option, adopting it to our State's needs. However, the PPACA Exchange is only masquerading as free market idea, and instead creates a vehicle for the Federal government to tightly control the coverage options available to consumers, raising costs and limiting choice. Many employers will drop the health insurance coverage they currently provide to employees, leaving individual health care needs to the federal government. Specifically, the consequences of the PPACA Exchange and associated insurance changes include:

Lack of Consumer Choice

- When the PPACA was proposed, the President promised that if individuals liked their current health care insurance, they could keep it. However, the PPACA model will actually force individuals into the broken, government-run Medicaid system and into heavily-regulated, government-run health care plans (deemed "minimal essential coverage" by the Federal government).

Individuals should have the right to select what health care plan is best for them, and not be limited to a one-size-fits-all product that a political process deems is "essential". By mandating that certain benefits be provided in all insurance plans, the price of premiums will increase, leaving individuals unable to continue the coverage they like and a price they can afford

Increased Taxes

- The PPACA requires that all Exchanges be financially self-sufficient by 2015. This will require the Exchange to generate revenue, either by instituting user fees in the Exchange market or in the entire insurance market- essentially a tax on all insurance plans purchased. This will only further drive up the costs of premiums in the Exchange market for consumers and for individuals who will have to pay the premium assistance through their taxes.
- The PPACA also includes a tax on insurance premiums which are proposed to be paid for by "the industry." It is troubling that these same taxes will affect managed care organizations, proven mechanisms for more effectively controlling cost for Medicaid and Medicare, especially needed for States with limited financial resources.

Impact on Employers and Employees

- The employer mandate, a tax on employers with fifty or more employees who decide not to provide "adequate" health insurance coverage to their employees, is a disincentive to provide coverage. Already, businesses are attempting to modify their business structure to avoid the law's mandates (either by laying off employees or reducing the number of hours these employees work). Even those employers who provide coverage can be taxed an additional $3,000 if that employee is eligible and enrolls in coverage on the health insurance Exchange. So instead of building upon the existing insurance market, the PPACA is undermining it.

Unworkable

The deadline for all Exchanges (both State and federally-facilitated) to be ready for open enrollment is October 1, 2013. However, it is likely many exchanges will not be ready by that point, even in those States that are supportive of the PPACA. The guidance received from the Federal government is often delayed or non-existent. For a project as large and complicated as health care reform, this is an insurmountable hurdle for the States to overcome. There are numerous unanswered questions and major problems remaining about Exchanges and the provisions of the PPACA entangled with them. Continuing issues include:

Exchanges in General

- In order for an Exchange to be ready for open enrollment on October 1, 2013, it must be approved or conditionally approved by January 1, 2013. However, there have been no formal regulations regarding what guidelines HHS will use to determine if an Exchange is conditionally approved or not.
- It has been continuously promised by officials at HHS that there will be cost comparisons between the Federally-facilitated Exchange, the State-based Exchange, and the partnership Exchanges. These cost estimates have not yet been made public.

Federally-facilitated Exchanges

- To date, in addition to the incomplete final rule for health insurance Exchanges, there has been no rulemaking regarding the Federally-facilitated Exchanges and their interactions with the respective States' eligibility systems. Promised in the March 2012 final Exchange regulation was further guidance regarding the Federally-facilitated Exchange. Since that point, only a questions and answers document has been released.

- Numerous contracts have been signed for the development of the Federally-facilitated Exchange, but these documents have not been made public. The State of Louisiana filed a Freedom of Information Act request within the last month for these contracts and has still not received these documents. Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah requested similar documents in his role as Ranking Member on the U.S. Senate Committee on Finance and has not received a response. It is necessary for these documents to be made public so that States can make informed decisions concerning Exchanges.

Partnership Exchange

- A partnership Exchange will be a Federally-facilitated Exchange with certain functions run by the State. It is an option first introduced by a power point presentation and further expanded by a document entitled "General Guidance on Federally-facilitated Exchanges," but has yet to be defined in federal regulations. The final Exchange rule proposed no regulations regarding this option.

- There has been no answer from the Federal government concerning whether the Federal government or the States will be responsible to pay for the state-run functions of a partnership Exchange.

The Workings of an Exchange

- The Exchange is required to provide premium tax credits to those between 100% and 400% of the federal poverty line. Originally projected to cost the federal government $462 billion between 2012 and 2019, these subsidies are now projected to be $574 billion during the same period by the Congressional Budget Office. Already, Medicare funding will be cut by $700 billion to pay for these premium tax credits. There is discussion that because these levels of subsidies are unsustainable, the number of Americans eligible for premium assistance subsidies will be reduced in number.

Essential Health Benefits and Actuarial Values

- All plans in the individual and small group markets (including plans sold on the respective State Exchanges) must meet "essential health benefits," benefits not yet defined by the Secretary of HHS in formal rulemaking. Initial informal guidance suggests that these benefits will be based off of the most popular small group plans in each State in addition to benefits specified by the PPACA. The States, insurance companies, and other stakeholders are awaiting formal regulations about essential health benefits.
- The States are awaiting a promised "actuarial value calculator" to accurately determine actuarial values for plans sold on the Exchange. This still has not been delivered and numerous questions remain about how actuarial value of health insurance plans will be determined.

Reforms Needed

It is most disappointing that the PPACA failed to offer sustainable reform of the nation's health care system. Instead of strengthening the market to lower costs and increase consumer choice, the PPACA created a big government "solution" - the type of solution history tells us will only create debt and worry for future generations of Americans. Health care reform should focus on improving the value of health care in America by bringing down costs and improving quality.

There are several ways to do this. Transparency in health care is essential for individuals to be better consumers of care. The cost and success rates of different procedures can be made publically available to help individuals make decisions about their care. Increased competition through individuals being allowed to purchase insurance across State lines can create greater competition and lower costs.

Similarly, just as individuals should have more investment in their health care choices, States should have greater ability to design programs that meet the needs of their people. States know how to take care of their residents more than the bureaucrats in Washington, distant both in geography and in experience. Louisiana, for example, has been able to make remarkable progress in its care of the Medicaid population through an innovative model of managed care, saving money and improving the quality of care. However, constrained by the federal requirements for Medicaid, Louisiana can only do so much. It is time to give the States the option to administer this program through block grants to save both the Federal and State taxpayers money and eliminate the perverse incentives created by federal rules and funding streams.

States need to be given the tools to solve these problems. The PPACA should either be repealed or replaced with a system giving States the ability to truly innovate. At the very least, we ask that you give the States flexibility through waivers exempting States from the burdensome requirements of the PPACA while providing the care their populations need and want in the way the States know best how to deliver.

In addition to these needed reforms, the State of Louisiana fully expects HHS to coordinate its efforts regarding implementation of a Federally-facilitated Exchange in an effort to mitigate the negative impact on either our private insurance market or the Medicaid program. The State expects that the Federal government will adhere to the four guiding principles included in the "General Guidance on Federally-facilitated Exchanges" and intends to hold the Federal government accountable to these principles. Additionally, the impact on our State's budget is a significant concern. In this light we expect that HHS will:

- Provide a full and complete briefing to the State officials regarding on-going implementation efforts;
- Schedule routine meetings to update State officials on the implementation status;
- Notify the State when all stakeholder, consumer, or any other public meetings or public outreach activities are scheduled;
- Work with the State on memorandums of understanding and/or contracts if the Federal-facilitated Exchange expects any support or assistance of the State so that the State is fairly and equitably compensated, including for the use of any State data used by the Federally-facilitated Exchange to verify income;
- Provide the names of all contractors who will be working in the State on the Federally-facilitated Exchange and the details about what activities these contractors will be involved in, including copies of all contracts;
- After the establishment of the Exchange, provide regular (at least semi-annual) updates on its utilization, cost (including long-term financial health), and its impact on the State's insurance market, including, but not limited to the information that must be provided pursuant to §1311(d)(7) of the PPACA;
- If any changes to the Federally-facilitated Exchange model are anticipated, the State is notified immediately; and
- Inform the State of any navigator grant recipients and provide copies of memorandums of understanding between navigators and the Federally-facilitated Exchange.

All further correspondence regarding the PPACA and health insurance Exchange issues is to be directed to the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals (Bruce Greenstein, Secretary), the official agency authorized to collaborate with HHS on issues concerning the PPACA in Louisiana. The State of Louisiana hopes that HHS will listen to its concerns and give the States actual flexibility to improve health care for all Americans.

Sincerely,

Bruce D. Greenstein

Liberty Forge is a social network devoted to connecting voters and groups who support a constitutionally limited government. The power of Liberty Forge is in assigning a discussion forum to each individual voting district. As a member you enroll in your voting district discussion groups and focus

"Governor Fallin is currently reviewing the state's Early Innovator grant to ensure that any federal assistance does not come with unaffordable or unworkable federal mandates, or any other unwanted conditions.

"The governor does, as she stated during her State of the State address, support the creation of an Oklahoma-based based health insurance exchange that would provide consumers with more choices and help to improve access to affordable plans. Regardless of any federal assistance the state does or does not receive in the future, she will continue to support the creation of such an exchange." – Alex Weintz

Subject: Fallin/medicaid expansion

Michael, this article is an accurate representation of the gov's position:

http://www.tulsaworld.com/news/article.aspx?subjectid=336&articleid=20120724\_336\_0\_GovMar820522

She has said she will not make a decision regarding Medicaid expansion until after the November election, largely because of political, policy and economic uncertainties that still loom large.

Her first preference, obviously, is for Governor Romney to be elected president and for him to work with Congress to repeal and replace ObamaCare in its entirety. She plans to actively work to help Gov. Romney in his campaign and hopes that a new Congress and president can make this a reality.

Regardless of who is president, the governor also feels that there are too many economic and public policy questions left unanswered for her to make an immediate decision about Medicaid expansion. It is a fact that any expansion will cost the state of Oklahoma more tax dollars. That cost comes at a time when the federal government may or may not act to suspend the alternative minimum tax, may or may not renew the Bush tax cuts, and may or may not cut over $500 billion in defense spending (which would cost an estimated 16,000 Oklahoma jobs). All of these things would affect Oklahoma's economy and budget. Furthermore, if an Obama White House continues to insist on tax increases and huge cuts in the defense budget, it has the potential to plunge the nation back into recession.

For all of these reasons Gov. Fallin has said she will continue to study the issue and wait until after the November election to announce a decision.

Note that where a potential insurance exchange is concerned, the governor also continues to study that issue. She has not, however, attached a timeline to her decision on an exchange.

Also, here is the governor's position and history with the ACA:

Governor Fallin was disappointed and frustrated with the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the bulk of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). She believes the law is unaffordable and unworkable, and that many aspects of the bill — including the individual mandate — grant Congress power that was not intended by the authors of the Constitution. She voted against the bill as a congresswoman and supported the lawsuit filed by Oklahoma's attorney general as governor. She continues her adamant opposition to the law, and will actively campaign for conservative candidates, including the Republican presidential nominee, who pledge to overturn and replace the ACA.

Hi Diane - The governor is participating in a Heritage Foundation seminar this weekend in San Diego entitled "How the states can limit the federal levitation." We want to arm her with as much info as possible about what the state of Oklahoma has done to push back against the feds, or what we will do, and areas where federal policies have been intrusive.

I know the AG's office has filed several lawsuits that might fall under this subject (including the ObamaCare suit). Would you mind pointing me in the right direction, or shooting me some of the press releases you've sent, so I can start collecting that info? We'd like to make sure to highlight your work. thanks.

Republican Governors Public Policy Committee Files Amicus Brief in Supreme Court Case Challenging Obamacare

The Republican Governors Association policy arm, the Republican Governors Public Policy Committee, filed an amicus brief with the United States Supreme Court arguing against the constitutionality of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. The brief was filed through Virginia Attorney General Ken Cuccinelli and the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The filing marks the first time that the Republican Governors Public Policy Committee has ever submitted an amicus brief to the Supreme Court.

“While the amicus focuses on the individual mandate, this case is about far more than just that component,” said RGA Chairman Bob McDonnell. “The Obama administration’s healthcare takeover grants sweeping authority to the federal bureaucracy to dictate to individuals, churches, charities, hospitals, schools, businesses and states how they must operate. This is the opposite of the vision of America set forth by our nation’s founders.”

“At its core, this case is about the future of America, and whether we maintain our identity as a federal republic, or creep ever closer to a centralized government in which all the power flows out of Washington,” McDonnell concluded.

The full brief can be found by clicking HERE, and a summary of its arguments is below:

SUMMARY

I. THE PRESUMPTION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY ATTACHING TO PPACA IS WEAK OWING TO THE PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS EMPLOYED IN ITS ENACTMENT. There is doctrinal and philosophical support for such a presumption resting upon notions of separation of powers, particularly where it appears PPACA was not passed through any process resembling regular order. The United States Senate passed PPACA late on Christmas Eve 2009 as a floor substitute on a straight party line vote. The legislative vehicle was a House tax bill chosen to satisfy the Originating Clause for the taxes in PPACA. PPACA passed the Senate on cloture with considerable minority protest. To the extent that a presumption of constitutionality arises from regular order and a hard look by Congress at the limits of its own power, those conditions are simply not present.

II. THE FACT THAT CONGRESS HERETOFORE HAS NEVER CLAIMED THE POWER TO REQUIRE A CITIZEN TO PURCHASE A GOOD OR SERVICE FROM ANOTHER CITIZEN TENDS TO NEGATE THE EXISTENCE OF THAT POWER. In the case of PPACA, the lack of historical precedent was well known to Congress before it acted. At the heart of PPACA is § 1501, which generally requires American citizens to purchase a good or service from other citizens, namely, a health insurance policy. When the Senate Finance Committee asked the Congressional Research Service whether a mandate supported by a penalty would be constitutional, the response was equivocal: "Whether such a requirement would be constitutional under the Commerce Clause is perhaps the most challenging question posed by such a proposal, as it is a novel issue whether Congress may use this clause to require an individual to purchase a good or a service."

III. THE MANDATE AND PENALTY ARE CONTRARY TO THE TEXT OF THE COMMERCE CLAUSE AND FOUNDATIONAL UNDERSTANDINGS.

A. The Mandate and Penalty are Not Supported by the Text of the Commerce Clause. Noah Webster in 1828 defined commerce as "an interchange or mutual change of goods, wares, productions, or property of any kind, between nations or individuals, either by barter, or by purchase and sale; trade; traffick." This is commerce. Its hallmarks are spontaneity and voluntary activity; not a command to buy something. The claim that commerce means not commercial activity but mere passivity is violently discordant with any normal use of the word commerce at the founding or at any subsequent time.

B. The Historical Context in which the Commerce Clause was Drafted Makes it Highly Unlikely that it Included a Power to Command a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services From Another Citizen. The founding generation would have regarded as preposterous any suggestion that Great Britain could have solved its colonial problems by commanding Americans to purchase tea under the generally conceded power of parliament to regulate commerce.

C. There is No Tradition of Using the Commerce Clause to Require a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services from Another Citizen. Because this regime viewed the regulation even of economic activity as illegitimate unless that activity harmed or threatened harm to someone else, Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45 (1905), it is inconceivable that the Commerce Clause prior to 1938 would have been deemed to validly reach inactivity. The question thus becomes, has the Supreme Court decided any case in the post-Lochner era that has extended the Commerce Clause far enough to cover the mandate and penalty?

D. The Mandate and Penalty are Outside the Existing Outer Limits of the Commerce Clause and Associated Necessary and Proper Clause as Measured by Supreme Court Precedent. "[E]ven if [an] activity be local and though it may not be regarded as commerce, it may still, whatever its nature, be reached by Congress if it exerts a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce, and this irrespective of whether such effect is what might at some earlier time have been defined as 'direct' or 'indirect.'" Wickard, 317 U.S. at 125 (emphasis added). Wickard marks the affirmative outer limits of the Commerce Clause.

Since Wickard, the Supreme Court has proceeded no further than to hold that Congress can regulate three things under the Commerce Clause: (1) "use of the channels of interstate commerce" (2) "the instrumentalities of interstate commerce," and (3) "activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. at 558-59. "[T]he Federal balance is too essential a part of our constitutional structure and plays too vital a role in securing freedom for us to admit inability to intervene when one or the other level of Government has tipped the scales too far." Id. at 578.

None of this is changed by an appeal to the Necessary and Proper Clause. This Court elsewhere has emphatically held that the Necessary and Proper Clause is limited by general principles of federalism independent of any direct prohibition. Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999) ("When a 'Law . . . for carrying into Execution' the Commerce Clause violates the principle of state sovereignty reflected in the various constitutional provisions . . . it is not a 'Law . . . proper for carrying into Execution the Commerce Clause,' and is thus, in the words of The Federalist, 'merely [an] act of usurpation' which 'deserves to be treated as such.'") (citing Printz, 521 U.S. at 923-24). It simply does not matter how "necessary" the mandate and penalty might be to the congressional scheme if the end being pursued is improper under the Necessary and Proper Clause.

Republican Governors Public Policy Committee Files Amicus Brief in Supreme Court Case Challenging Obamacare

The Republican Governors Association policy arm, the Republican Governors Public Policy Committee, filed an amicus brief with the United States Supreme Court arguing against the constitutionality of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. The brief was filed through Virginia Attorney General Ken Cuccinelli and the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The filing marks the first time that the Republican Governors Public Policy Committee has ever submitted an amicus brief to the Supreme Court.

“While the amicus focuses on the individual mandate, this case is about far more than just that component,” said RGA Chairman Bob McDonnell. “The Obama administration’s healthcare takeover grants sweeping authority to the federal bureaucracy to dictate to individuals, churches, charities, hospitals, schools, businesses and states how they must operate. This is the opposite of the vision of America set forth by our nation’s founders.”

“At its core, this case is about the future of America, and whether we maintain our identity as a federal republic, or creep ever closer to a centralized government in which all the power flows out of Washington,” McDonnell concluded.

The full brief can be found by clicking HERE, and a summary of its arguments is below:

SUMMARY

I. THE PRESUMPTION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY ATTACHING TO PPACA IS WEAK OWING TO THE PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS EMPLOYED IN ITS ENACTMENT. There is doctrinal and philosophical support for such a presumption resting upon notions of separation of powers, particularly where it appears PPACA was not passed through any process resembling regular order. The United States Senate passed PPACA late on Christmas Eve 2009 as a floor substitute on a straight party line vote. The legislative vehicle was a House tax bill chosen to satisfy the Originating Clause for the taxes in PPACA. PPACA passed the Senate on cloture with considerable minority protest. To the extent that a presumption of constitutionality arises from regular order and a hard look by Congress at the limits of its own power, those conditions are simply not present.

II. THE FACT THAT CONGRESS HERETOFORE HAS NEVER CLAIMED THE POWER TO REQUIRE A CITIZEN TO PURCHASE A GOOD OR SERVICE FROM ANOTHER CITIZEN TENDS TO NEGATE THE EXISTENCE OF THAT POWER. In the case of PPACA, the lack of historical precedent was well known to Congress before it acted. At the heart of PPACA is § 1501, which generally requires American citizens to purchase a good or service from other citizens, namely, a health insurance policy. When the Senate Finance Committee asked the Congressional Research Service whether a mandate supported by a penalty would be constitutional, the response was equivocal: "Whether such a requirement would be constitutional under the Commerce Clause is perhaps the most challenging question posed by such a proposal, as it is a novel issue whether Congress may use this clause to require an individual to purchase a good or a service."

III. THE MANDATE AND PENALTY ARE CONTRARY TO THE TEXT OF THE COMMERCE CLAUSE AND FOUNDATIONAL UNDERSTANDINGS.

A. The Mandate and Penalty are Not Supported by the Text of the Commerce Clause. Noah Webster in 1828 defined commerce as "an interchange or mutual change of goods, wares, productions, or property of any kind, between nations or individuals, either by barter, or by purchase and sale; trade; traffick." This is commerce. Its hallmarks are spontaneity and voluntary activity; not a command to buy something. The claim that commerce means not commercial activity but mere passivity is violently discordant with any normal use of the word commerce at the founding or at any subsequent time.

B. The Historical Context in which the Commerce Clause was Drafted Makes it Highly Unlikely that it Included a Power to Command a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services From Another Citizen. The founding generation would have regarded as preposterous any suggestion that Great Britain could have solved its colonial problems by commanding Americans to purchase tea under the generally conceded power of parliament to regulate commerce.

C. There is No Tradition of Using the Commerce Clause to Require a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services from Another Citizen. Because this regime viewed the regulation even of economic activity as illegitimate unless that activity harmed or threatened harm to someone else, Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45 (1905), it is inconceivable that the Commerce Clause prior to 1938 would have been deemed to validly reach inactivity. The question thus becomes, has the Supreme Court decided any case in the post-Lochner era that has extended the Commerce Clause far enough to cover the mandate and penalty?

D. The Mandate and Penalty are Outside the Existing Outer Limits of the Commerce Clause and Associated Necessary and Proper Clause as Measured by Supreme Court Precedent. "[E]ven if [an] activity be local and though it may not be regarded as commerce, it may still, whatever its nature, be reached by Congress if it exerts a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce, and this irrespective of whether such effect is what might at some earlier time have been defined as 'direct' or 'indirect.'" Wickard, 317 U.S. at 125 (emphasis added). Wickard marks the affirmative outer limits of the Commerce Clause.

Since Wickard, the Supreme Court has proceeded no further than to hold that Congress can regulate three things under the Commerce Clause: (1) "use of the channels of interstate commerce" (2) "the instrumentalities of interstate commerce," and (3) "activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. at 558-59. "[T]he Federal balance is too essential a part of our constitutional structure and plays too vital a role in securing freedom for us to admit inability to intervene when one or the other level of Government has tipped the scales too far." Id. at 578.

None of this is changed by an appeal to the Necessary and Proper Clause. This Court elsewhere has emphatically held that the Necessary and Proper Clause is limited by general principles of federalism independent of any direct prohibition. Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999) ("When a 'Law . . . for carrying into Execution' the Commerce Clause violates the principle of state sovereignty reflected in the various constitutional provisions . . . it is not a 'Law . . . proper for carrying into Execution the Commerce Clause,' and is thus, in the words of The Federalist, 'merely [an] act of usurpation' which 'deserves to be treated as such.'") (citing Printz, 521 U.S. at 923-24). It simply does not matter how "necessary" the mandate and penalty might be to the congressional scheme if the end being pursued is improper under the Necessary and Proper Clause.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor Fallin Statement Regarding Supreme Court Decision to Hear Arguments on President Obama's Health Care Reform Law

Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement on the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to hear arguments on the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA), President Obama's controversial health care law:

"President Obama's health care law is unconstitutional and unaffordable. Not only will it limit choice and undermine the quality of American health care, it stands to cost the state of Oklahoma about half a billion dollars in the process.

"Our citizens have already passed a constitutional amendment blocking its implementation in Oklahoma, and it's clear that a majority of states are similarly opposed to the mandates, new taxes, and out-of-control spending proposed in the law.

"The Supreme Court should strike down the president's health care reform as unconstitutional as soon as possible. The uncertainty surrounding the future of PPACA is frustrating to those who believe it stands as an obvious affront to constitutional principles, and a hindrance to crafting serious budget and health care policy on both the state and federal levels."

For the Gov of God

It won't be football season, but people will still be flocking to the home of the Houston Texans this summer. On August 6, Gov. Rick Perry (R-Texas) will be celebrating prayer on his turf with an all-day event at Reliant Stadium. "The Response," which Perry is co-hosting with our friends at the American Family Association (AFA), couldn't come at a better time. Since early spring, the ACLU has been on the graduation circuit, trying to spook students out of their First Amendment rights. Just last weekend, a judge promised to jail seniors at Medina Valley High School for even mentioning the word "amen." Come August 6, there won't be a prison big enough to hold the 71,500 people who will be calling on God in public. "Given the trials that beset our nation and world," Perry said, "I believe it's time to convene the leaders from each of our United States in a day of prayer and fasting... I urge all Americans of faith to pray on that day for the healing of our country, the rebuilding of our communities and the restoration of enduring values as our guiding force." As part of the event, Perry extended a special invitation to the other 49 governors to join him in Houston. Already, Gov. Sam Brownback (R-Kans.) is on board, and three others--Govs. Rick Scott (R-Fla.), Nikki Haley (R-S.C.) and Christine Gregoire (D-Wash.)--are following up with days of prayer in their own states. FRC will help get the prayers rolling during our third annual Call 2 Fall on July 3. You can help give Texas a head-start on their summer event by logging on to our website and joining the 759,000 people already signed up to ask God's blessing on our land during the July 4th weekend.

As Texans know, this isn't the first time Gov. Perry has set aside a day of prayer in the state, but the Secular Coalition for America is hoping it will be his last. Predictably, SCA and other groups are trotting out the same old tired arguments about the "separation of church and state" to blast the rally. Barry Lynn's faith police even went so far as to claim that it's "never OK for government officials to use their positions to meddle in religion." That's interesting, given that almost every president--including our current one--has called the nation to its knees in a time of solemn assembly. In fact, Thomas Jefferson, whose words these organizations twist to make their phony case, declared that the "power to prescribe any religious exercise... [rests] with the States." And last month, all 50 of them took advantage of it by issuing proclamations celebrating the National Day of Prayer. One thing "that must never change" in America, Ronald Reagan said, is that men and women "seek Divine guidance in the policies of their government and the promulgation of their laws." And Rep. Dan Burton (R-Ind.) is working to keep it that way. This week, the Indiana Congressman introduced a bill to beat back some of faith's biggest legal challengers. With the Public Expression of Religion Act (PERA), Rep Burton wants to clamp down on all of the frivolous lawsuits that are trying to paralyze and silence Christians. Right now, the ACLU and other groups can sue state and local governments over things like religious speech and demand attorneys' fees if they prevail. If the defendants lose, they're not only responsible for their own legal fees but the fees of the plaintiff as well. Essentially, it gives liberals like the ACLU a financial incentive to attack expressions of faith. Since it's so costly, state and local authorities are more likely to cave to the demands of the ACLU rather than risk a lengthy lawsuit. PERA would ensure that both sides shoulder their own costs, which should give leaders more motivation to fight back. And you can help. Contact your congressmen and ask them to cosponsor H.R. 2023!

A Berwick under the Senate's Saddle

The President can take away Indiana's Medicaid money, but he can't take their resolve. The Hoosiers are sticking by their new law to exclude Planned Parenthood from the state's "family planning" funds--even after the Department of Health and Human Services threatened to hit them where it hurts. Last week, President Obama's controversial recess appointment, Don Berwick, head of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, ordered Indiana to abandon its law or risk losing $4 billion in federal Medicaid funds. Marcus Barlow, a spokesman for the Hoosiers' Family and Social Services Administration, told reporters that his office has no plans to back down. "The way the law was written, it went into effect the moment the governor signed it," Barlow says. "We were just advised by our lawyers that we should continue to enforce Indiana law." Unlike the Obama administration, which won't enforce any law it doesn't like, Hoosier leaders refuse to bend. And members of the U.S. Senate don't blame them. As a matter of principle and states' rights, Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) drafted a letter to Berwick defending Indiana's H.B. 1210 and encouraged his fellow Senators to sign on. If this administration thinks Planned Parenthood is above the law, it's up to Congress to remind them that they're not. ** It's the "Last Stop for ObamaCare before the Supreme Court!" Click over to the Washington Examiner to see what FRC's Ken Klukowski has to say about the 11th Circuit Court case, which kicks off today in Atlanta.

*** In case you missed it, both of FRC's Kens--Blackwell and Klukowski--were on the Fox Business show with Lou Dobbs talking about their blockbuster new book, *Resurgent*. Check out the video from that interview below.

Jason Murphey (R-Guthrie), authorizes the State Purchasing Director to use a state purchase card for acquisitions with no limit on the amount of the transaction for interagency payments and certain professional services. The measure also modifies what professional service contracts a state agency is required to evaluate performance of. Vote: 93-4.

HB 1007, by Rep. Randy McDaniel (R-Oklahoma City), modifies the method by which dedicated state revenues are transferred to OTRS. Contributions into the teachers' retirement system would be counted in the per pupil spending average. Vote: 69-27.

It allows them to refuse wind production for "any reason or no reason at all." This is an OIPA request bill. The wind industry, OGE and PSO expressed concerns over the bill in its current form. Rep. Trebilcock agreed to work with both sides before the bill reaches the House floor. Vote: 18 to 5.

Health:

HB 2130, by Speaker Steele, is the health insurance exchange bill. Defines the membership and appointments to the Health Care for the Uninsured Board (HUB).

Veterans:

HB 1081, by Rep. John Bennett (R-Sallisaw), would allow a judge to send a military veteran convicted of a crime to the Department of Veterans Affairs for treatment if the defendant was diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder or Traumatic Brain Injury.

HB 1380, by Rep. Corey Holland (R-Marlow), removes different hearing processes for probationary teachers and career teachers recommended for dismissal and provides that all teachers have the right to a hearing before a local board of education. Removes the process of a pretermination hearing for career teachers. Repeals the right to trial de novo.

HB 1585, by Rep. Todd Thomsen (R-Ada), provides that students entering the ninth grade in the year 2010-11, rather than 2008-09, must demonstrate mastery in four subject areas to graduate from high school with a standard diploma. Superintendent Barresi expressed concerns with this bill saying it was a step back.

HB 1914, by Rep. Marty Quinn (R-Claremore), changes the percentage of total expenditures that school districts are allowed to spend on administrative services. School districts with more than 1,500 average daily membership the previous year, may spend 5% rather than 6%. Districts with more than 500 but less than 1,500 average daily membership may spend 7% rather than 8%. Districts with less than 500 average daily membership may spend 8% rather than 10%.

The results of any election -- let alone those of an election of "historic proportions," as this election was so frequently billed -- can be mined for insights for weeks, months and years to come. It's unlikely, then, that what we consider the top 5 lessons of Tuesday night now will be what we consider to be the top 5 lessons in the final analysis. Nevertheless, now is as good a time as any to attempt to make sense of an election that was at once predictable and unprecedented.

With that, we give you the list.

Freshman GOP Representatives Encourage Return of Federal "Obamacare" Funds

OKLAHOMA CITY – Freshman Republican representatives are encouraging state officials to not accept federal funds promised to Oklahoma under an "Early Innovator" grant authorized by the federal Affordable Care Act.

In February, the House approved HB 2130, which establishes a state health insurance exchange. The bill did not include a provision to accept or deny the $54M grant.

"What we voted for was a free-market exchange based on choice and competition, which will ultimately lower health care costs," said Rep. Randy Grau, R-Edmond. "We did not vote to accept federal money that may require us to set up a federal health care system."

"Since the vote on HB 2130, it has become increasingly apparent that we cannot accept this money without also accepting the strings attached to it," said Rep. Elise Hall, R-Oklahoma City. "It is time to go on record that we do not want this money, but instead, we want to set up an exchange that is right for Oklahoma, not Washington D.C."

"We join Senator Tom Coburn and many conservative organizations in supporting health insurance exchanges like that established in Utah," said Rep. Tom Newell, R-Seminole. "But we think it is important to sever any ties to Obamacare, which means that the federal funds need to be rejected.”

“The idea of an exchange based upon free-market principles comes from the Heritage Foundation, a leading conservative think tank,” said Rep. Sean Roberts, R-Hominy. “The idea was around before President Obama, but it appears he is now trying to use exchanges to push federal health care.”

“We will continue to work with the Governor and House leadership in promoting Oklahoma health care solutions, not Washington D.C. solutions,” said Rep. Marty Quinn, R-Claremore.

“Many of us in the House campaigned on the platform of free market principles. If we accept federal money with strings attached, we are going back on our word,” said Rep. Josh Cockroft, R-Tecumseh. “It is time for us to sever any ties to Obamacare and allow the private sector to thrive under these free market principles.”

“I strongly support the private sector and oppose Obamacare and the use of federal money for a health care exchange,” said Rep. Dennis Casey, R-Morrison.

“The state must learn to stop accepting federal money and let Oklahomans take care of Oklahoma,” said Rep. Aaron Stiles, R-Norman.

“The attachment of the federal money and its link to federal health care was not fully recognized before the vote on the exchange,” said Rep. Dustin Roberts, R-Durant.

“Clarification of the issue seems to tie federal grant money to the Obamacare effort,” said Rep. Jadine Nollan, R-Sand Springs. “I support an Oklahoma health insurance exchange without any federal ties.”

Subject: From Meeting

From our meeting on Thursday, I thought I would send out what I read at that time. Again, keep in mind that this was scratched out from the hip on a yellow pad during session. (my disclaimer) However, there seemed to be some agreement in the meeting the IF we go down this path, this is a good basic messaging. As a reminder, this is a "what if" scenario. We have NOT determined if we will be going down this path. We should know more tomorrow.

Basic message.....

"We received early unofficial indications that the plan/strategy that we were attempting to put in place to hold back a federal health insurance exchange and preserve our state's private healthcare system and private health insurance markets will not be viewed by HHS as any kind of compliance with the ACA and therefore would not prevent nor delay them from moving forward to establish a federal health insurance exchange.

The House, Senate, and Governor's office have no desire to move further into compliance with the ACA prior to the Supreme Court decision and November election.

Therefore, at this point we have decided that we will not move forward. If indeed our two avenues of repeal (legal and ballot) do not materialize and a federal insurance exchange has been established in Oklahoma, at the earliest opportunity, we plan to give HHS 12 month notice of our desire to takeover any federal exchange that has been established."

Hope this helps. We'll be in close touch.

PS Sen Stanislawski, please forward to Trait and Nathan...I somehow did not have their emails in my iPad.

Hello,

Some of you asked for talking points about the amicus/PPACA. Please find those below.

Best,

Mike

Amicus Brief and PPACA Talking Points

Amicus Brief Topline Talking Points

The amicus brief has three main arguments:

- <!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->The presumption of Constitutionality attaching to PPACA is weak owing to the irregular parliamentary process employed in its enactment.
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->The fact that Congress has never before required a citizen to purchase a good or service from another citizen negates the existence of that power.
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <!--[endif]-->The individual mandate and penalty are contrary to the text of the commerce clause and foundational understandings

While the amicus focuses on the individual mandate, this case is about far more than just the individual mandate. The Obama administration's healthcare takeover grants sweeping authority to the federal bureaucracy to dictate to individuals, churches, charities, hospitals, schools, businesses and states how they must operate. This is the opposite of the vision of America set forth by our nation's founders.

General PPACA Talking Points

- <!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->The Obama Administration has failed to adequately respond to the states requests for more flexibility: unfunded mandates, maintenance of effort, healthcare exchanges, denied waivers.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->a. <!--[endif]-->Essential to note:
Republican governors proactively offered 31 specific solutions for reforming and saving Medicaid, but received no response from the White House.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->True cost of Obamacare after the Democrats' budget gimmicks are removed is $2.5 trillion.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <!--[endif]-->States cannot afford Obamacare, and the White House's failure to work with the states creates more uncertainty for both state budgets, which in turns creates uncertainty for businesses who don't know how states will pay for Obamacare's provisions.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->4. <!--[endif]-->ObamaCare is driving up premiums and jeopardizing coverage for millions of Americans. President Obama promised he would make our economy stronger, but policies like ObamaCare have made it worse.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->a. <!--[endif]-->The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Service actuaries find that Obamacare will dramatically increase the near-term growth rate of health care costs. In 2014, the actuaries find that growth in the net cost of health insurance will increase by nearly 14 percent, compared to 3.5% if PPACA had never passed.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->b. <!--[endif]-->A June 2011 report by McKinsey & Co. found that 30-50 percent of employers said they would stop offering health coverage once the bulk of ObamaCare took effect.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->c. <!--[endif]-->A May 2011 PriceWaterhouseCoopers survey found that 84 percent of employers would make changes to their plan as a result of ObamaCare.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->d. <!--[endif]-->Candidate Obama repeatedly promised his health care plan would LOWER premiums by $2,500 per family, and do so within his first term. But the price of the average employer-sponsored plan ROSE by more than $2,200 per family since Obama was first elected in 2008, according to studies from the Kaiser Family Foundation. In other words, Obama's abandoned promise has cost American families nearly $5,000 per year – a $2,200 premium increase compared to a $2,500 promised premium reduction.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->5. <!--[endif]-->Healthcare Exchanges: CMS continues to provide limited guidance and seeks to mandate a one size fit all approach to exchanges. Contrary to a recent White House report indicating that states are moving for embracing and implementing healthcare exchanges, states remain confused and are either not moving forward under any scenario or moving forward 1) play defense to the federal government, or 2) implement a market based anti-obamacare exchange.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->6. <!--[endif]-->The Administration’s “compromise” on conscience protections for religious-affiliated employers now places the mandate on insurers to sell contraceptive coverage.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->a. <!--[endif]-->While religious employers will no longer be forced to provide products to which they have moral objections, they will be required to facilitate, directly or indirectly, access to those products. The Administration is forcing religious groups to “wash their hands” of actions they find morally objectionable by placing the mandate elsewhere.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->b. <!--[endif]-->Also, the rule is not fully repealed. The mandate will remain in place for other employers who may have conscience concerns about coverage of contraception and abortifacients. Religious leaders have expressed their strong desire to repeal the entire contraceptive mandate, noting that maintaining this new federal requirement – included in the President’s unpopular health care law – would still create moral difficulties for “good...business people who can’t in good conscience cooperate” with a federal mandate that violates their religious beliefs.

I. THE PRESUMPTION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY ATTACHING TO PPACA IS WEAK OWING TO THE PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS EMPLOYED IN ITS ENACTMENT. There is doctrinal and philosophical support for such a presumption resting upon notions of separation of powers, particularly where it appears PPACA was not passed through any process resembling regular order. The United States Senate passed PPACA late on Christmas Eve 2009 as a floor substitute on a straight party line vote. The legislative vehicle was a House tax bill chosen to satisfy the Originating Clause for the taxes in PPACA. PPACA passed the Senate on cloture with considerable minority protest. To the extent that a presumption of constitutionality arises from regular order and a hard look by Congress at the limits of its own power, those conditions are simply not present.

II. THE FACT THAT CONGRESS HERETOFORE HAS NEVER CLAIMED THE POWER TO REQUIRE A CITIZEN TO PURCHASE A GOOD OR SERVICE FROM ANOTHER CITIZEN TENDS TO NEGATE THE EXISTENCE OF THAT POWER. In the case of PPACA, the lack of historical precedent was well known to Congress before it acted. At the heart of PPACA is § 1501, which generally requires American citizens to purchase a good or service from other citizens, namely, a health insurance policy. When the Senate Finance Committee asked the Congressional Research Service whether a mandate supported by a penalty would be constitutional, the response was equivocal: "Whether such a requirement would be constitutional under the Commerce Clause is perhaps the most challenging question posed by such a proposal, as it is a novel issue whether Congress may use this clause to require an individual to purchase a good or a service."

III. THE MANDATE AND PENALTY ARE CONTRARY TO THE TEXT OF THE COMMERCE CLAUSE AND FOUNDATIONAL UNDERSTANDINGS.

A. The Mandate and Penalty are Not Supported by the Text of the Commerce Clause. Noah Webster in 1828 defined commerce as "an interchange or mutual change of goods, wares, productions, or property of any kind, between nations or individuals, either by barter, or by purchase and sale; trade; traffick." This is commerce. Its hallmarks are spontaneity and voluntary activity; not a command to buy something. The claim that commerce means not commercial activity but mere passivity is violently discordant with any normal use of the word commerce at the Founding or at any subsequent time.

B. The Historical Context in which the Commerce Clause was Drafted Makes it Highly Unlikely that it Included a Power to Command a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services From Another Citizen. The founding generation would have regarded as preposterous any suggestion that Great Britain could have solved its colonial problems by commanding Americans to purchase tea under the generally conceded power of parliament to regulate commerce.

C. There is No Tradition of Using the Commerce Clause to Require a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services from Another Citizen. Because this regime viewed the regulation even of economic activity as illegitimate unless that activity harmed or threatened harm to someone else, Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45 (1905), it is inconceivable that the Commerce Clause prior to 1938 would have been deemed to validly reach inactivity. The question thus becomes, has the Supreme Court decided any case in the post-Lochner era that has extended the Commerce Clause far enough to cover the mandate and penalty?

D. As this Court Found in Denying the Secretary's Motion to Dismiss, the Mandate and Penalty are Outside the Existing Outer Limits of the Commerce Clause and Associated Necessary and Proper Clause as Measured by Supreme Court Precedent. "[E]ven if [an] activity be local and though it may not be regarded as commerce, it may still, whatever its nature, be reached by Congress if it exerts a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce, and this irrespective of whether such effect is what might at some earlier time have been defined as 'direct' or 'indirect.'" Wickard, 317 U.S. at 125 (emphasis added). Wickard marks the affirmative outer limits of the Commerce Clause.

Since Wickard, the Supreme Court has proceeded no further than to hold that Congress can regulate three things under the Commerce Clause: (1) "use of the channels of interstate commerce" (2) "the instrumentalities of interstate commerce," and (3) "activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." Lopez, 514 U.S. at 558-59. "[T]he Federal balance is too essential a part of our constitutional structure and plays too vital a role in securing freedom for us to admit inability to intervene when one or the other level of Government has tipped the scales too far." Id. at 578.

None of this is changed by an appeal to the Necessary and Proper Clause. This Court elsewhere has emphatically held that the Necessary and Proper Clause is limited by general principles of federalism independent of any direct prohibition. Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999) ("When a 'Law . . . for carrying into Execution' the Commerce Clause violates the principle of state sovereignty reflected in the various constitutional provisions . . . it is not a 'Law . . . proper for carrying into Execution the Commerce Clause,' and is thus, in the words of The Federalist, 'merely [an] act of usurpation' which 'deserves to be treated as such.'") (citing Printz, 521 U.S. at 923-24). It simply does not matter how "necessary" the mandate and penalty might be to the congressional scheme if the end being pursued is improper under the Necessary and Proper Clause.

Hello,

Some of you asked for talking points about the amicus/PPACA. Please find those below.

Best,

Mike

Amicus Brief and PPACA Talking Points

Amicus Brief Topline Talking Points

The amicus brief has three main arguments:

1. The presumption of Constitutionality attaching to PPACA is weak owing to the irregular parliamentary process employed in its enactment.
2. The fact that Congress has never before required a citizen to purchase a good or service from another citizen negates the existence of that power.
3. The individual mandate and penalty are contrary to the text of the commerce clause and foundational understandings

While the amicus focuses on the individual mandate, this case is about far more than just the individual mandate. The Obama administration's healthcare takeover grants sweeping authority to the federal bureaucracy to dictate to individuals, churches, charities, hospitals, schools, businesses and states how they must operate. This is the opposite of the vision of America set forth by our nation's founders.

General PPACA Talking Points

1. The Obama Administration has failed to adequately respond to the states requests for more flexibility: unfunded mandates, maintenance of effort, healthcare exchanges, denied waivers.
  - a. Essential to note: Republican governors proactively offered 31 specific solutions for reforming and saving Medicaid, but received no response from the White House.
2. True cost of Obamacare after the Democrats' budget gimmicks are removed is $2.5 trillion.
3. States cannot afford Obamacare, and the White House's failure to work with the states creates more uncertainty for both state budgets, which in turns creates uncertainty for businesses who don't know how states will pay for Obamacare's provisions.
4. ObamaCare is driving up premiums and jeopardizing coverage for millions of Americans. President Obama promised he would make our economy stronger, but policies like ObamaCare have made it worse.
  - a. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Service actuaries find that Obamacare will dramatically increase the near-term growth rate of health care costs. In 2014, the actuaries find that growth in the net cost of health insurance will increase by nearly 14 percent, compared to 3.5% if PPACA had never passed.
  - b. A June 2011 report by McKinsey & Co. found that 30-50 percent of employers said they would stop offering health coverage once the bulk of ObamaCare took effect.
  - c. A May 2011 PriceWaterhouseCoopers survey found that 84 percent of employers would make changes to their plan as a result of ObamaCare.
  - d. Candidate Obama repeatedly promised his health care plan would LOWER premiums by $2,500 per family, and do so within his first term. But the price of the average employer-sponsored plan ROSE by more than $2,200 per family since Obama was first elected in 2008, according to studies from the Kaiser Family Foundation. In other words, Obama's abandoned promise has cost American families nearly $5,000 per year – a $2,200 premium increase compared to a $2,500 promised premium reduction.

5. Healthcare Exchanges: CMS continues to provide limited guidance and seeks to mandate a one size fit all approach to exchanges. Contrary to a recent White House report indicating that states are moving for embracing and implementing healthcare exchanges, states remain confused and are either not moving forward under any scenario or moving forward 1) play defense to the federal government, or 2) implement a market based anti-obamacare exchange.
6. The Administration's "compromise" on conscience protections for religious-affiliated employers now places the mandate on insurers to sell contraceptive coverage.
  - a. While religious employers will no longer be forced to provide products to which they have moral objections, they will be required to facilitate, directly or indirectly, access to those products. The Administration is forcing religious groups to "wash their hands" of actions they find morally objectionable by placing the mandate elsewhere.
  - b. Also, the rule is not fully repealed. The mandate will remain in place for other employers who may have conscience concerns about coverage of contraception and abortifacients. Religious leaders have expressed their strong desire to repeal the entire contraceptive mandate, noting that maintaining this new federal requirement – included in the President's unpopular health care law – would still create moral difficulties for "good... business people who can't in good conscience cooperate" with a federal mandate that violates their religious beliefs.

More Detailed Summary of Amicus Arguments

I. THE PRESUMPTION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY ATTACHING TO PPACA IS WEAK OWING TO THE PARLIAMENTARY PROCESS EMPLOYED IN ITS ENACTMENT. There is doctrinal and philosophical support for such a presumption resting upon notions of separation of powers, particularly where it appears PPACA was not passed through any process resembling regular order. The United States Senate passed PPACA late on Christmas Eve 2009 as a floor substitute on a straight party line vote. The legislative vehicle was a House tax bill chosen to satisfy the Originating Clause for the taxes in PPACA. PPACA passed the Senate on cloture with considerable minority protest. To the extent that a presumption of constitutionality arises from regular order and a hard look by Congress at the limits of its own power, those conditions are simply not present.

II. THE FACT THAT CONGRESS HERETOFORE HAS NEVER CLAIMED THE POWER TO REQUIRE A CITIZEN TO PURCHASE A GOOD OR SERVICE FROM ANOTHER CITIZEN TENDS TO NEGATE THE EXISTENCE OF THAT POWER. In the case of PPACA, the lack of historical precedent was well known to Congress before it acted. At the heart of PPACA is § 1501, which generally requires American citizens to purchase a good or service from other citizens, namely, a health insurance policy. When the Senate Finance Committee asked the Congressional Research Service whether a mandate supported by a penalty would be constitutional, the response was equivocal: "Whether such a requirement would be constitutional under the Commerce Clause is perhaps the most challenging question posed by such a proposal, as it is a novel issue whether Congress may use this clause to require an individual to purchase a good or a service."

III. THE MANDATE AND PENALTY ARE CONTRARY TO THE TEXT OF THE COMMERCE CLAUSE AND FOUNDATIONAL UNDERSTANDINGS.

A. The Mandate and Penalty are Not Supported by the Text of the Commerce Clause. Noah Webster in 1828 defined commerce as "an interchange or mutual change of goods, wares, productions, or property of any kind, between nations or individuals, either by barter, or by purchase and sale; trade; traffick." This is commerce. Its hallmarks are spontaneity and voluntary activity; not a command to buy something. The claim that commerce means not commercial activity but mere passivity is violently discordant with any normal use of the word commerce at the Founding or at any subsequent time.

B. The Historical Context in which the Commerce Clause was Drafted Makes it Highly Unlikely that it Included a Power to Command a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services From Another Citizen. The founding generation would have regarded as preposterous any suggestion that Great Britain could have solved its colonial problems by commanding Americans to purchase tea under the generally conceded power of parliament to regulate commerce.

C. There is No Tradition of Using the Commerce Clause to Require a Citizen to Purchase Goods or Services from Another Citizen. Because this regime viewed the regulation even of economic activity as illegitimate unless that activity harmed or threatened harm to someone else, Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45 (1905), it is inconceivable that the Commerce Clause prior to 1938 would have been deemed to validly reach inactivity. The question thus becomes, has the Supreme Court decided any case in the post-Lochner era that has extended the Commerce Clause far enough to cover the mandate and penalty?

D. As this Court Found in Denying the Secretary's Motion to Dismiss, the Mandate and Penalty are Outside the Existing Outer Limits of the Commerce Clause and Associated Necessary and Proper Clause as Measured by Supreme Court Precedent. "[E]ven if [an] activity be local and though it may not be regarded as commerce, it may still, whatever its nature, be reached by Congress if it exerts a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce, and this irrespective of whether such effect is what might at some earlier time have been defined as 'direct' or 'indirect.'" Wickard, 317 U.S. at 125 (emphasis added). Wickard marks the affirmative outer limits of the Commerce Clause.

Since Wickard, the Supreme Court has proceeded no further than to hold that Congress can regulate three things under the Commerce Clause: (1) "use of the channels of interstate commerce" (2) "the instrumentalities of interstate commerce," and (3) "activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." Lopez, 514 U.S. at 558-59. "[T]he Federal balance is too essential a part of our constitutional structure and plays too vital a role in securing freedom for us to admit inability to intervene when one or the other level of Government has tipped the scales too far." Id. at 578.

None of this is changed by an appeal to the Necessary and Proper Clause. This Court elsewhere has emphatically held that the Necessary and Proper Clause is limited by general principles of federalism independent of any direct prohibition. Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706 (1999) ("When a 'Law . . . for carrying into Execution' the Commerce Clause violates the principle of state sovereignty reflected in the various constitutional provisions . . . it is not a 'Law . . . proper for carrying into Execution the Commerce Clause,' and is thus, in the words of The Federalist, 'merely [an] act of usurpation' which 'deserves to be treated as such.'") (citing Printz, 521 U.S. at 923-24). It simply does not matter how "necessary" the mandate and penalty might be to the congressional scheme if the end being pursued is improper under the Necessary and Proper Clause.

Thank you.

President Ronald Reagan once said that "there are no great limits to growth, because there are no limits of human intelligence, imagination and wonder."

He believed, like I believe—like Mitt Romney and Paul Ryan believe—that the potential for America is limitless.

We can – and we will – overcome any economic challenge IF government lets go of the regulatory chokehold zapping the air out of the economy and deflating the spirits of our entrepreneurs.

We need a president who will applaud and encourage those who work hard to pursue their dreams ... to reach their potential ... and, in doing so, make themselves and America better and stronger. That man is Mitt Romney.

The history of my state of Oklahoma offers a great example of pursuing the American Dream. It was built and settled by pioneers moving West to seek better lives.

During the great Land Run of 1889, thousands of families rushed to put a stake down on empty plots of land.

They built tent cities overnight, they farmed the land and worked hard.

And In 1897, eight years after the Land Run, a handful of adventurous pioneers risked their own money -- NOT, the federal government's -- to drill Oklahoma's first oil well, the Nellie Johnstone.

By doing so, these early-day pioneers changed the future and the fortune of Oklahoma forever, and today Oklahoma is one of the nation's key energy producers and job creators.

President Obama wants us to believe that Oklahomans owe that success to the federal government: to the Department of Energy, to the EPA, the IRS or maybe even to him.

Mr. President, we know better. As we say in Oklahoma, that dog won't hunt.

We owe these remarkable successes to the imagination and ingenuity of people like my friend, Oklahoman Harold Hamm.

The son of sharecroppers, and the youngest of 13 children, Harold grew up in the small town of Lexington, Oklahoma.

As a child, he helped out on the farm and went to school only after the first freeze or Christmas.

While attending high school, he worked for a dollar an hour at a gas station.

After high school, Harold took a job cleaning out oil barrels. At the age of 20, he bought his own truck and began a one man oil field service business.

He made enough money to begin taking college level classes in geology and mineralogy.

At 26 years old, he drilled a wildcat well that produced 75 barrels of oil an hour ... we call that a gusher.

Today, Harold Hamm is the Chairman and CEO of Oklahoma's own Continental Resources, a top ten U.S. producer of crude oil with over 700 employees operating in 18 states and valued at over $13 Billion. Now Harold and his company are helping to power cars, homes and businesses across the nation.

Harold and other energy entrepreneurs have completely transformed the U.S.'s energy outlook. And with a President Romney, we'll reduce America's dependence on foreign oil even further and create even more American jobs.

Harold's success story is not one-of-a-kind; it is an American dream that has been realized by countless men and women since the founding of this country.

He is just one of the many visionaries and innovators in the private sector that are the true drivers of economic growth and job creation.

And that's where President Obama just doesn't get it.

He'll tell you that "if you've got a business, you didn't build that."

Someone else did.”

Well, Mr. President – like who? The IRS? The EPA? Or the federal government?

The president believes that government is responsible for our successes ... and that’s why his solution to everything is more government, bigger spending, more regulation, and more bureaucratic programs like ObamaCare.

He says his plans are working, but look at the results:

- 41 straight months of unemployment over 8%.
- 23 Million Americans out of work.
- A nation threatened by $15 trillion of debt
- Families feeling pinched not just by a bad economy, but by a president who promised hope and change ... and left many Americans with no hope and just change in their pockets

President Obama believes the power of a Big Government is the key to American success.

Mitt Romney believes in the power of the people.

Governor Romney understands that free enterprise and hard work -- not government handouts -- have made the United States the envy of the world.

He will reverse the tide of decline and promote economic security. He knows it’s hardworking American families, not federal bureaucracy that “have built” our great and glorious nation.

Governor Romney is ready to lead. He has the experience and the vision we need to restore America’s economy and its greatness.

I am proud to support his candidacy for president, and as the next leader of the Free World, he’ll make us proud.

This is really long ... but it is two big issues that we are trying to look thoughtful about so maybe that's ok.

Governor Fallin today released the following statement, announcing that Oklahoma would not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the proposed Medicaid expansion under the Affordable Care Act:

For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the possible creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase access to health care, lower the cost of medical treatment, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state of Oklahoma.

Because the health care industry has become a complicated maze of legal and regulatory restrictions and guidelines, a situation which has only been made worse by the 1,000 plus page Affordable Care Act, any decision regarding the future of Oklahoma's health care policy is a complex one. The decision, for instance, to either create a state-based exchange that is compliant with the ACA, or to let the federal government run one of its own designs, requires a large amount of background and contextual information that the Obama Administration has been unwilling to provide. Basic questions such as 'how much will an insurance exchange cost the state of Oklahoma?' have still been left unanswered. It continues to be disappointing and frustrating that so little information has been provided to states.

At this time, the state of Oklahoma has been placed in a highly undesirable position. As I have said many times before, it is my belief the ACA is both unworkable and unaffordable. The people of Oklahoma have also overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the ACA through their support of State Question XX, which in 2010 made it unconstitutional to mandate the purchase of health insurance in this state. Yet despite the clear rejection of the ACA by voters and elected officials in Oklahoma, it remains the law of the land.

Where health insurance exchanges are concerned, Oklahoma is faced with a choice. We are being asked to either join the federal government in helping to implement the ACA by creating an exchange approved by the Obama Administration, or else to accept one created and run by the federal government. While neither choice is a good one, I have determined the state of Oklahoma does not stand to benefit from committing its own dollars, resources and staff to designing an exchange that our citizens do not want. Furthermore, without more detailed information from the Obama Administration regarding the rules and regulations within the ACA, the state is unable to adequately plan and design an exchange of its own making. With those facts in mind, I have informed the federal government today that Oklahoma will not be pursuing the creation of a state-based exchange.

After careful consideration, I have also informed the federal government that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration's proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable and threaten other vital state services by permanently committing the state of Oklahoma to annual expenses of $50 million to $100 million each year. Expenses of that magnitude would require drastic cuts to other important government priorities, such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a system that people of all ideological stripes have criticized as inflexible and inefficient.

Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our opposition to the Affordable Care Act through the appropriate legal channels. Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt has filed a lawsuit challenging the legality of the ACA, an effort which is fully supported by my office. Our second, and equally important goal, will be to pursue state-based solutions that offer families better access to more affordable and high quality health care in the private sector. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.

What are the intentions of the Fallin administration regarding expanding Chinese involvement in Oklahoma?

Does Gov. Fallin intend to partner with a Chinese party official at the July meeting in Salt Lake City and seek increased "sub-national cooperation"?

Does Fallin intend to encourage Chinese foreign direct investment in Oklahoma or seek public-private partnerships with the Chinese in developing Oklahoma's infrastructure ?

These and other questions need to be answered by this "conservative" governor.

Sleeping with the Enemy? National Governors Association Meeting to Pair U.S. Governors and Chinese Party Leaders

OK-SAFE 6/6/11 - U.S. Governors will be saying more than "Ni hau" (Hello) to Chinese party officials at an upcoming National Governors Association (NGA) meeting.

The U.S. - China Governors Forum, scheduled for July 15-17, 2011 in Salt Lake City, Utah, is set to include one-on-one pairing of U.S. Governors with Chinese provincial party secretaries and Governors. The pairings, called "peer-to-peer exchanges," aim to "strengthen bilateral cooperation." Topics are to include items of "mutual interest," i. e. "job creation, education, health and economic cooperation."

A second session will take place in China in late 2011 or early 2012.

This forum is the result of a Memorandum of Understanding concerning the establishment of the U.S.-China Governors Forum to Promote Sub-National Cooperation, signed by Sen. of State Hillary Clinton on January 19, 2011.

The slow-motion collapse of the government status quo across the Western world is obvious, but the reality is the opposite of what Twain said about Wagner's music—it's worse than it sounds. That's the message of a recent report from Richard Ravitch and Paul Volcker that deserves far more attention than it has received.

Since 2010 the former New York Lieutenant Governor and Federal Reserve Chairman have been scrutinizing the balance sheets of six of the largest states—California, Illinois, New Jersey, New York, Texas and Virginia. Their conclusions make clear that Washington is not the only part of the government headed for the fiscal cliff.

Some of the problems the State Budget Crisis Task Force identifies are familiar: growing health-care spending and unfunded pension liabilities, for example. Others are not. Taking in "the totality of the problems," Messrs. Ravitch and Volcker write, "the storm warnings are very serious" and the "existing trajectory of state spending, taxation and administrative practices cannot be sustained."

- Medicaid. This state-federal program that increasingly pays for middle-class health care is the major albatross. Spending has grown faster than the economy every year since the 1960s, 7.2% annually over the last decade. It is now the largest part of state budgets—24% on average—and "the imbalance (or structural budget gap) can no longer be absorbed without significant cuts to other essential state programs like education or unpopular tax increases or both."

The panel also found that these costs are driven by states choosing to increase enrollment and create new benefits, rather than by rising underlying medical costs. One of four New Yorkers is on Medicaid, and 70% of the coverage is not required by federal law.

Some 29% of California's population is in Medicaid, though it only accounts for 11.8% of the Golden State budget, well below the national average of 15.8%. But that share is so low only because California spends so much on other things too. New York spends more on Medicaid than Florida, Texas and Pennsylvania—combined.

Medicaid costs over the decade are due to jump 8.1% annually, as required by the Affordable Care Act's expansion. Without ObamaCare, the yearly rise would still be 6.6%.

- Pensions. The burgeoning retirement benefits that states owe their public employees are well-known. But the Ravitch-Volcker task force emphasizes that, unlike federal entitlements, state pension obligations are almost always constitutionally protected. In other words, they are non-modifiable contracts, not merely political promises.

California has 62 state and local pension systems, Texas 75, Illinois 457. The 1990s and 2000s saw a reckless benefit build-out—California even increased pensions for people who had already retired. The states are supposed to prefund these liabilities so they are able to pay out once vested, but by and large they don't. States then assume an 8% return on their investments, which means they can stint on their taxpayer contributions and make their pensions look healthier than they really are.

The bad news is that today they already look like they belong on a gurney at Antietam, despite such gaming. Using more conservative assumptions, the task force calculates that the unfunded liabilities in the six states comes to $386.2 billion, or about a quarter of every dollar they will eventually be required to spend.

The task force also does the service of noticing retiree health insurance benefits, which states (unlike corporations) are not required to disclose. At a minimum, the panel figures the six states owe $539 billion, with no plan to defuse this time bomb.

Combining pensions and other special public employee privileges, Illinois's total unfunded liability works out to $15,800 per citizen—the only all-in data the task force could acquire. The true number may be far higher in the other five states.

- Budget gimmicks. The other novel Ravitch-Volcker observation is that no one knows for sure how deep these problems run, because the states are running bookkeeping cons that disguise the fiscal realities. The task force uncovered "chronic dependence" on gambits like assets sales, "temporary" raids on rainy-day funds, and shifting current spending to future years "as an ongoing budget strategy."

New York created an Albany-guaranteed "local government assistance corporation" to hide spending that would have run through the general fund.

Illinois is borrowing short term for cash flow to make unpaid bills.

California, Illinois, New Jersey and New York are even securitizing their future tax revenue—that is, not merely borrowing with bonds that must be serviced but selling their projected tax collections to investors. So to "balance" their budgets today, they're making it far harder to correct them in the future and locking in higher tax rates. Even Greece doesn't do that.

The message of the Ravitch-Volcker report is that some large portion of the states are replicating the dysfunctions of Washington—adding to entitlements that crowd out priorities like schools and bridges, and then concealing the real danger when they're not ignoring it. State and local governments now spend $2.5 trillion, and rising. Without 49 more Scott Walkers, the fiscal mayhem has only begun.

New Republican Governors Mark 100 Days

Today marks 100 days since the last of the country's new majority of Republican governors took office. Already, these 18 new governors have made a profound impact on their states as well as the nation at-large.

They have proven that true reform can occur despite opposition from well-funded, powerful interests and have shown Washington that not only can deep-holed budgets be balanced without raising taxes, but that it is possible to implement entitlement reform and restructure government's long-term costs and succeed. From education reform to fiscal and government reform, Republican governors are providing unparalleled political leadership.

Below is a list of the new governors' major initiatives and successes in their first 100 days:

Gov. Robert Bentley (AL)

- Signed the Responsible Budgeting and Spending Act which revises the budgeting process for the Education Trust Fund by allowing a "rolling reserve" process to make the Education Trust Fund resistant to proration.
- Working to implement health insurance exchanges that will increase competition and lower costs.

Gov. Rick Scott (FL)

- Rejected federal high speed rail proposal.
  - o Instead announced support of meaningful infrastructure projects like the dredging of the Port of Miami - a project that will help create 33,000 jobs - to accommodate Post Panamax ships and increased shipping that will result when the Panama Canal is expanded and free trade agreements with Colombia and Panama are ratified.
- Signed an executive order to freeze job-killing regulations and establish the Office of Fiscal Accountability and Regulatory Reform to review all new rules.
  - o This office has already identified more than 1000 unnecessary regulations that can be repealed.
- Signed the Student Success Act into law, establishing a system to pay the best teachers more and eliminate teacher tenure for new teachers.
- Created a Drug Strike Force to attack illegal use of prescription drugs by targeting criminal distributors.
- Sold state-owned aircraft to reduce unnecessary state spending - one of the Governor's campaign promises
- Job Creation: through Gov. Scott's commitment to reduce the size, scope and cost of government, as well as return savings to taxpayers through tax cuts, the Governor has enticed companies like Bing Energy and Chromalloy to move operations to Florida and companies like Vision Airlines to expand business in the Sunshine State.

Gov. Nathan Deal (GA)

- Signed an overhaul of the state's cash-strapped HOPE scholarship into law, which assists students with their educational costs of attending college in Georgia.
- Passed an $18.3 billion budget without controversy.
- Earmarked $32 million in bond money for water infrastructure projects.
- Improved accessibility, holding regular legislative office hours for lawmakers.

Governor Terry Branstad (IA)

- Restored openness in state government:
  - o Launched a weekly video "Ask the Gov" Question and Answer series
  - o Revived weekly press conference after previous administrations abolished it
  - o Webcast live every weekly news conference
  - o Launched the "Call Gov. Branstad" show on WHO Radio
- Opening Iowa back up for business
  - o Signed an executive order rescinding burdensome RICE rule
  - o Announced new businesses bringing hundreds of jobs to Iowa, including Alltech, Cargill and Valent BioSciences Corporation.
  - o Signed an executive order requiring a Jobs Impact Statement for every proposed rule so as to know exactly the ramifications contained therein.
- Improving the state's finances:
  - o Gov. Branstad insists on a biennial budget that balances with five-year revenue projections and spends less than Iowa takes in each year.

Gov. Sam Brownback (KS)

- Sweeping reform of state agencies to find efficiencies, reduce burdensome regulation and focus on the core functions of state government.
  - o Established Office of the Repealer to review state laws and regulations and identify those which are unreasonable, unduly burdensome, duplicative, or contradictory.
  - o Created Citizens Regulatory Review Board to review new rules and regulations proposed by state agencies and provide the Governor with feedback on any concerns raised by its review.
  - o Eliminated, streamlined and/or re-organized seven state agencies.
  - o Streamlined state human resources and homeland security, ensuring efficiency, uniformity and cost-effectiveness for state government agencies and cuts overhead costs.
- Established Rural Opportunity Zones:
  - o Designated 50 counties as "Rural Opportunity Zones" (ROZ), providing an income tax exemption for certain out-of-state taxpayers who relocate to those counties; and authorizing the counties to participate in a state-matching program to repay student loans of up to $15,000 for college graduates who move to ROZ counties.

Gov. Paul LePage (ME)

- Expedited state repayments of a Medicaid debt to hospitals.
- Agreed to allow the Maine Educational Loan Authority (MELA) to proceed with issuance of tax-exempt student loan revenue bonds to fund student loans for the upcoming academic year.
- Worked to remove unnecessary regulation, which will ease the burden on working families.

Gov. Rick Snyder (MI)

- Fundamentally realigning the state's tax structure to encourage investment and job creation.
- Put in place tools to help the state and local governments reduce long-term costs.
- Produced a budget plan that would cut taxes on businesses by more than $1.5 billion – including the elimination of the Michigan Business Tax.

Gov. Susanna Martinez (NM)

- Balanced the budget:
  - o Governor Susana Martinez balanced a nearly-half billion dollar deficit she inherited upon taking office without raising taxes.
  - o Governor Martinez's balanced budget cut unnecessary spending, allowing an increase in state funding levels for top priorities like public education and healthcare for the most vulnerable citizens.
- Education reform:
  - o Governor Martinez worked with a bi-partisan group of legislators to pass a new school evaluation system with overwhelming support. New Mexico schools will now be graded on an easy-to-understand A-F scale, allowing parents to know how well their schools are serving their children and taxpayers to know how effectively their tax dollars are spent. This legislation will also speed up the process of assisting failing schools by targeting resources and providing additional help to struggling students.
- Katie's Law:
  - o This legislation will require a DNA sample from anyone arrested for a felony crime in New Mexico. New Mexico now has one of the strongest versions of Katie's Law in the country, giving law enforcement one of the best available tools to prevent crimes, convict criminals, and exonerate the innocent.
  - o Governor Martinez originally championed this legislation as a district attorney in 2006, but the bill that eventually passed only required a sample to be taken for certain violent felony arrests.

Gov. Jack Dalrymple (ND)

- Proposed budget includes cutting property and income taxes by $500 million and unprecedented investments in infrastructure without borrowing money, while continuing to build the state's reserves to more than $1 billion.
- Signed into law HB 1013, providing $100 million to help communities in North Dakota's oil and gas counties offset direct impacts created by the rapidly developing energy industry.

Gov. Brian Sandoval (NV)

- Balanced the budget in the most challenging time in modern Nevada history.
- Introduced comprehensive education reform package.
- Improving government transparency and accessibility.

Gov. John Kasich (OH)

- Senate Bill 5 levels the playing field between taxpayers and the government workers who serve them, while maintaining government employees' ability to collectively bargain on wages and working conditions.

- Governor Kasich's Jobs Budget would balance an $8 billion deficit while preserving an $800 million tax cut for Ohio families.

- JobsOhio was established through House Bill 1 and is a non-profit economic development corporation that will work more effectively than Ohio's current state-centered efforts to retain and attract businesses. JobsOhio will be managed by a board of directors who are leaders in the business world, and because it is not a government entity, it will move at the speed of the market rather than at the speed of statute.

- Saving Jobs: Companies with major Ohio presences like American Greetings, Bob Evans, Diebold and Goodyear have committed to remaining in the state – preserving 5,500 jobs – and the unemployment rate has dropped below 9 percent for the first time in two years.

- Common Sense Initiative (CSI): Led by Lt. Gov. Taylor, is already eliminating undue burdens on business and helping Ohio companies grow and thrive.

- Statewide Coordination in the Fight Against Opiate Abuse: Through the new Cabinet-level Opiate Task Force will direct addiction prevention efforts across the state. The task force has already led to the raid of two pill mills where important evidence was collected that may assist in this effort.
Gov. Mary Fallin (OK)

- Delivered landmark, comprehensive lawsuit-reform legislation:

- o By placing a hard cap of $350,000 on non-economic damages and pursuing other common-sense legal reforms, Governor Fallin has helped to ensure that our legal system is fair to plaintiffs and victims without the kind of "jackpot justice" that drives jobs out of state.

- Cut Taxes:

- o Allowed the income tax trigger to take place, cutting income taxes in Oklahoma by roughly $120 million annually for businesses and individuals.

- Brought more accountability to public schools:

- o Governor Fallin signed into law important legislation empowering the state superintendent and eliminating "trial de novo," a costly legal appeals process that makes it nearly impossible to terminate ineffective teachers.

- Continued the fight against ObamaCare and federal overreach:

- o The governor worked with Attorney General Scott Pruitt to ensure that the state of Oklahoma joined other states in challenging the constitutionality of President Obama's health care bill.

- o She has also agreed to refuse $54 billion in federal funds to ensure that Oklahoma cannot be tied to ObamaCare.

Gov. Tom Corbett (PA)

- Advocating For a Responsible Budget:

- o When Gov. Corbett came into office in January, Pennsylvania was faced with a $4.3 billion dollar deficit. His budget eliminates the deficit without raising taxes by reducing the cost of government.

- The Fair Share Act:

- o Will end abusive and frivolous civil lawsuits that target parties with "deep pockets" instead of the defendants who are most culpable.

- o Has passed the House and is making its way through the Senate.
- o The measure will improve Pennsylvania's economic climate and competitiveness.
- Pushing for education reform:
  - o Gov. Corbett's plan includes school choice, merit pay, local property tax reform and giving school districts the ability to furlough employees when economic conditions make it necessary.

Gov. Nikki Haley (SC)

- Passed legislation that put more House and Senate votes on the record.
- Took taxpayer cash away from the state's public television and arts operations.
- Set in motion plans to deal with a soaring deficit in Medicaid programs and to restructure state government.

Gov. Dennis Daugaard (SD)

- Signed a balanced budget that completely eliminated the state's structural deficit without raising taxes or using one-time money.
- Proposed and signed package of bills to increase state incentives for economic development.

Gov. Bill Haslam (TN)

- Teacher tenure reform:
  - o Changed probationary period from three to five years.
  - o Included performance evaluations in tenure review.
  - o Gave principals flexibility to keep teachers beyond five year period but not grant tenure.
- Jobs4TN economic development strategy
  - o Regionalized strategies and created target industry clusters where Tennessee already has a clear competitive advantage.
  - o Created ECD field director positions to be the region's 'ombudsman' for businesses.
  - o Put focus more on turning Tennessee-based intellectual property from research hubs such as ORNL, St. Jude and Vanderbilt into Tennessee jobs.
  - o Restructured the Economic and Community Development office.

· Budget proposal -- $1.8 billion less than previous years while still maintaining essential services.

Gov. Scott Walker (WI)

- 24,000 private sector jobs created, including 8,200 manufacturing jobs.
- Eliminated state taxes on Health Savings Accounts.
- Reformed Wisconsin's litigation climate.
- Signed relocation and economic development tax credit legislation.

- Providing tax relief for Wisconsin's job creators: small businesses.
- Transforming the Department of Commerce into the Wisconsin Economic Development Corporation.
- Enacted supermajority for passage of tax increase legislation.
- Right-sizing state government with modest requests on state pension, health care.
- Balancing Wisconsin's FY 2011 Budget.
- Proposed budget that balances $3.6 billion deficit and reduces the structural deficit to lowest point in recent history.
- Introduced 3rd Grade Reading Taskforce to make sure every Wisconsin 3rd grader can read at grade level.
- Aggressively marketed Wisconsin as "Open for Business" after massive Illinois tax increase.

Gov. Matt Mead (WY)

- Began streamlining state government:
  - o Governor Mead and the Republican Legislature combined two state agencies into a single agency.
  - o Governor Mead cut salaries in his Office.
  - o Reviewing all existing executive orders going back decades to remove any that are unnecessary or irrelevant.
- Finished the legislative session while continuing to maintain a surplus and put money into savings.
- Successfully advocated for job creating initiatives that could bring new industries to Wyoming like data centers.
- Kept a tax exemption in place for manufacturers.
  - o Shortly after signing that bill a new employer (Worthing Gestamp) announced they would build a wind tower manufacturing facility in Wyoming.

GOP Governors Detail the Costs of Obamacare on the States

As the Supreme Court today hears arguments about the impact upon the states of expanding Medicaid, the Republican Governors Association released information from states highlighting the costs of expanding Medicaid and implementing the health care law.

“President Obama’s federal health care takeover was enacted by Democrats in Congress over the objection of governors and with little regard for the costs to the states,” said RGA Chairman Bob McDonnell. “The federal health care law shifts billions of dollars in unfunded, long-term costs to state governments while restricting the ability of governors to craft Medicaid solutions for the citizens of their states. This one-size-fits-all approach is yet another reason why the health care law needs to be replaced, and Republican governors have offered a blueprint for true reform. The current law is simply unaffordable, unsustainable and unworkable.”

Costs to the States:

Alabama

The implementation of Obamacare will increase the costs of state government immediately and in the near future.

The overall Medicaid budget alone is expected to increase from $6.3 Billion in 2012 to $13.2 Billion at the beginning of the 2020 fiscal year.

Medicaid Expansion Details

- By 2014, Alabama expects to add up to 534,000 new enrollees to Medicaid. This is due to mandated eligibility to anyone under age 65 who has an income of less than 133% of the federal poverty level.

- Alabama is also required to provide subsidies to adults earning between 134% and 400% and children with incomes between 301% and 400%. This expansion would increase Medicaid eligibility from the current 21% of the state's population to about 40% of the population.
- Nearly 1,000 new primary care physicians will be needed to care for this new population.
- This cost of services for the new eligibles would initially be borne by the federal government, but that support would fade to 90% of the cost by 2020.
- HCR legislation does not provide any additional funds to the state to certify enroll and manage the new recipients.
- Administrative costs alone will require an estimated $389 million in state funds. Eligibility system changes will be required to add new enrollees, to differentiate between those eligible under new vs. previous rules (each with different matching rates) and to allow information to flow back and forth between subsidy plans and Medicaid.

Alaska

Alaska continues to be hampered in its efforts to manage the costs of its Medicaid program and continues to see Medicaid population increases. For the first time in recent history the Budget of the Department of Health and Social Services (Medicaid Authority) has surpassed that of the Department of Education and is projected to continue to grow ahead of inflation.

For FY2013 it is projected that Alaska will need an additional $45 million in state general funds to cope with program growth and another $129 million in state general funds to offset the loss of enhanced federal Medicaid funding. Alaska continues to be faced with substantial growth in Medicaid caseloads and utilization and forecasts an over 20 percent increase in Medicaid state general fund expenditures.

The State of Alaska continues to narrow projections on estimating the total cost of the ACA over the long term. However, a June 2010 preliminary analysis of the Medicaid impacts reflects that cumulative state general fund spending will increase by $100M million, through 2020. While direct care spending in the early years is offset by increased federal match rates, spending in later years paints an even more concerning picture for Alaska's future and the ever increasing impact of Medicaid expansion on the State budget while oil throughput continues to decline.

The mandatory Medicaid expansions in PPACA, and the woodwork created by these expansions, are expected to cost Arizona over $550 million in the next three fiscal years. Once fully implemented in the latter half of this decade, PPACA is anticipated to increase Arizona's annual Medicaid obligations by almost $500 million per year. Furthermore, because Arizona expanded to 100% of the Federal Poverty Level before the passage of the PPACA, it receives a lower matching rate for those populations than other states that did not expand (who will initially receive full federal financing).

Over the four year period of the recession, while overall state spending decreased, Medicaid spending soared by 63 percent, to the point where it accounted for nearly 30 percent of the state general fund in the recently-completed FY 2011. During the recession, Arizona's projected deficits spiked, which necessitated a series of aggressive, unprecedented steps in order to return the State to fiscal stability. An important element of this effort was the paring back of Arizona's

Medicaid program in FY 2012, which will be undermined by the mandated increases in population due to the PPACA.

Florida

According to Florida's Agency for Health Care Administration, ObamaCare's Medicaid expansion will force Florida to spend an additional $1.5 billion and force an additional 1.8 million Floridians to enroll in Medicaid in four years.

Georgia

The projected impact of the Medicaid expansion in Georgia is significant. In January 2014, an estimated 650,000 additional members will be added to our state Medicaid and CHIP programs. This federally mandated expansion will increase state spending by at least $2.4 billion between FY2010-FY2020 alone. That said, the cost could soar substantially higher because there are more federal regulations to come and initial spending could spike because of the pent-up demand of new members. The Georgia Department of Community Health is continually reassessing the impact of the Medicaid expansion mandate.

Idaho

Idaho estimates between 150,000 and 200,000 new eligibles could be added to the Medicaid caseload when new expansion rules are implemented which could mean an 40-percent increase in participation compared to Idaho's current caseloads. The overall Medicaid benefit cost attributed to PPACA Medicaid provisions in the State of Idaho is conservatively estimated to be $228 million in State funds by 2020. In preparation for the PPACA 2014 changes, Medicaid system readiness is estimated to cost $34.8 million, of which Idaho's share will be $3.48 million.

Idaho is purposely holding off on changes related to the Medicaid expansion requirement because of the uncertainty surrounding the Supreme Court's decision, 2012 elections and State legislative decisions which could drastically impact how Medicaid expansion is implemented and designed. The State anticipates the cost to meet the new Medicaid expansion requirement will be approximately $9 million. That does not include the cost of operational and personnel needs related to the expansion.

In addition, the limited nature of the federal timelines and lack of final rules has forced Idaho to design a phased approach to accommodate the uncertainty surrounding Medicaid. Idaho is working on modernization, expansion and connection phases – all of which depend on the Supreme Court decision and 2012 elections.

Indiana

The additional enrollees will cost between $2.5 and $3.1 billion to Indiana's Medicaid expenditures for the period 2014 to 2020.

A fully state-operated Exchange is expected to cost the State between $57.7-$83.4M annually. This is in addition to the cost of the Medicaid expansion. Even if the State decides not to operate an Exchange, there will still be costs associated with eligibility for premium tax credits. Therefore, a fully federal Exchange is expected to cost the State between $10.4-$18.3M annually.

Iowa

As recently as eight years ago, Iowa spent less than $2.5 billion in total Medicaid expenditures. Total Medicaid spending in Iowa now approaches $4 billion and accounts for more than 15% of Iowa General Fund expenditures.

When we entered office in January 2011, we were faced with replacing $540 million in one-time money that was used to fund the on-going Medicaid entitlement. Medicaid remains a complex funding source for health care that we manage very carefully.

It is anticipated that the federal takeover of health care under the Affordable Care Act will increase Medicaid enrollment by at least 150,000 people in Iowa. In 2014, the first year of implementation, our Medicaid population will grow from 400,000 to more than 550,000 covered lives in a state where our population is just over 3 million people. The total cost of this expansion is estimated to be between $180 to $818 million (with mid-point estimate of $255 million) in the first year, with the state picking up an increasing share of this cost over time. The uncertainty surrounding the wide range of potential costs is alone cause for concern.

Despite the federally mandated expansion of the Medicaid program, Iowa and other states will have less flexibility than ever before to effectively and efficiently manage this entitlement that is vital for so many of our vulnerable citizens. Federal maintenance of effort (MOE) requirements continue to tie the hands of state policymakers, forcing a continual squeeze on health care providers and diverting benefits from those who need them most.

Kansas

Without flexibility to reform Medicaid to improve outcomes and reduce costs, Kansas will continue to see increases in Medicaid spending. Kansas' Medicaid budget has ballooned from $2.4 billion in 2008, at the onset of federally mandated maintenance of effort (MOE) requirements, to what will reach nearly $3 billion in 2013 without reforms. In the same period, enrollment will have increased from 293,000 to almost 400,000 -- all before the mandated PPACA expansion.

An example of the rigidity of the MOE requirements in the ARRA, and extended by PPACA, is the federal response to the Kansas Legislature's move in 2010 to adjust family premiums in the CHIP program by $40 a month. CMS did not approve it, citing MOE. Instead, HHS offered an option to raise premiums that would have amounted to about 50 cents per month on a typical premium.

Kansas has proposed to acquire the flexibility it needs to remake Medicaid in a two-track Section 1115 demonstration project. The first track will address authorities needed to implement KanCare, an integrated, person-centered care coordination model that will incorporate nearly all Medicaid and CHIP populations and services, including long term services and supports. The second track proposes a global waiver, more specifically an outcomes-based Medicaid and CHIP program under a per capita block grant, fundamentally redefining the federal-state relationship in Medicaid and providing a model for reform that honors the program's statutory goal of improving the health of Americans in the greatest need.

Louisiana

Obamacare is expected to cost Louisiana a total of $7 billion in additional state general funds over the next 10 years.

Obamacare will increase Medicaid rolls by 645,843 over the next 10 years at a cost of $3.69 billion in state general funds.

High costs of the IT systems needed to implement the expansions and the link to the Exchange (whether state-run or federal) are estimated to cost $162 million in state general funds.

Increase payments to primary care providers, increased utilization for physicians and hospitals are estimated to cost $2.6 billion in state general funds.

Maine

Maine's Medicaid program has experienced an increase in enrollment from 314,000 in June 2009 to 336,000 in June, 2010, and total spending in Maine's Medicaid program has increased by over one billion dollars since 2002. Over the last several years, Medicaid rates for healthcare providers have also been repeatedly cut to address the ongoing financial shortfalls in Medicaid as a result of increasing enrollment and utilization. As a result of these reductions, some Maine physicians have closed their practices to Medicaid patients significantly reducing access to primary care services for Medicaid beneficiaries. All of the above challenges will be exacerbated by ACA. As Maine struggles to confront a shortfall of more than $800 million in the next biennial budget and the requirement to adopt a balanced budget, it is imperative that the Governor and the Legislature have the necessary flexibility to comprehensively manage the Medicaid program and to make necessary changes to effectively reduce total spending in the program.

Mississippi

The overall cost to implement PPACA in Mississippi is estimated to be $1.7 billion over the next ten years, including an additional $443 million in year ten.

Nebraska

In addition, based upon preliminary professional consultant projections, the State of Nebraska estimates that it will cost anywhere from $61.4 million to $86.9 million to build a Health Insurance Exchange in Nebraska. Due to the changing nature of the health insurance exchange project and the instability of the federal government's promulgation of final rules and regulations, the State projects that a state exchange annual operating budget would be $17.5 million per year starting in 2016.

Nevada

In April of 2010, the Nevada Department of Health and Human Services estimated the General Fund impact of implementing the Affordable Care Act was $574 million from 2014 through 2019.

New Mexico

With the implementation of Obamacare, New Mexico is poised to add an additional 130,000 – 175,000 individuals to the Medicaid program with an additional cost of $300 million - $600 million between 2014 and 2019.

North Dakota

With the implementation of Obamacare, North Dakota's current estimate for additional Medicaid spending is $106 million over 10 years.

Ohio

The estimated cost to Ohio from the first year to 2019 is over $2.7 billion for Medicaid services. These estimates do not include the cost of increases in administration of the program. The long-term sustainability of the program is called into question, unless Ohio is given new options on how to manage the program.

Oklahoma

The Oklahoma Health Care Authority estimates that the Obamacare Medicaid expansion will cost an additional $4.6 billion in state and federal funding and will add 250,000 new Oklahoman's to the Medicaid rolls from 2014-2020.

Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania's Medicaid spending has doubled over the past ten years and it now comprises 31% of the state's budget. It has grown four times faster than K-12 spending, and nine times faster than transportation spending. Even before the healthcare bill passed, Medicaid has been on an unsustainable path. Under this law, these statistics will only get worse. Pennsylvania will see an additional 800,000 individuals on the Medicaid rolls adding a significant burden to the budget and taxpayers. As the Medicaid population continues to increase and state revenues continue to not keep pace, the mandates of the maintenance of effort requirement and the lack of any meaningful flexibility within the program will severely hamper virtually all other aspects of the state budget. States simply cannot afford Obamacare. Their budgets will be crushed by the Medicaid expansion that the federal establishment is forcing on them. Americans deserve a vibrant, robust, competitive and transparent health care system that puts patients and quality first, focuses on personal responsibility, not a large government takeover that shifts the costs from the federal government to state tax payers.

South Carolina

Medicaid enrollment will increase by 54% or 510,000 individuals in 2015 as a result of the Affordable Care Act. 176,000 of these persons will drop private insurance to go on Medicaid. The additional costs to state taxpayers between State Fiscal Year 2014 and State Fiscal Year 2020 ranges from $1.15 billion to $2.5 billion dollars depending on assumptions of participation rate and increases in physician fees resulting from physician shortages created by the new law.

South Dakota

South Dakota estimates it will cost at least $99.7 million in state funds through 2019 to comply with the Medicaid requirements of the PPACA.

This burden coupled with the inability to change other parts of the Medicaid program due to the MOE requirements will result in rate cuts to providers.

Providers that cannot absorb these cuts may stop taking people eligible for Medicaid, or may stop providing services altogether.

This would have a hugely detrimental effect on a very rural state, including citizens that rely on Medicaid for their health care and communities that may see their health care providers leave or quit. These unintended consequences of the MOE provisions in the PPACA are counter-productive of its larger goal to help Americans get access to the health care they need.

Tennessee

Tennessee's Medicaid program is continuing to experience budgetary challenges in the coming fiscal year, as state revenues continue their slow climb back to pre-recession levels. Unfortunately, the MOE requirements limit the flexibility needed to make important changes to the program as we deal with such issues. For instance, TennCare could save $16 million alone just by modifying nursing facility level of care requirements that would bring Tennessee in line with the criteria of other states and rebalance its long-term care system in order to serve more people with lesser levels of need in more cost-effective home and community-based settings while targeting the more expensive long-term care services to persons with higher acuity of need. However, we have yet to receive approval to make such a change.

At a time when Tennessee is already facing budget difficulties and the ACA is expected to cost the state in excess of $1.5 billion over five years, we must have the flexibility necessary to make common sense adjustments to the program.

Texas

Medicaid is consistently one of the biggest expenses all states face. It accounts for a quarter of the state budget in Texas. The Affordable Care Act expands Medicaid without reforming the program.

ACA will increase Medicaid enrollment in Texas by nearly 2 million people and cost the state $27 billion over 10 years.

States have received little federal guidance on key ACA provisions, including the primary care rate increases which is required starting in 2013. Additionally, guidance is needed on Medicaid Benchmark Benefits, eligibility changes, FMAP methodology and numerous other provisions.

Lack of timely guidance makes it impossible for states to effectively plan for the mushrooming Medicaid caseloads that the law will create. HHSC needs final, detailed guidance from the federal government to determine the full impact of certain ACA provisions on the Texas Medicaid and CHIP programs, and to make federally-required changes.

ACA does not recognize states' unique needs and prevents each state from tailoring its Medicaid and CHIP programs in accordance with the intent of its elected and appointed representatives.

Utah

The Insurance Department has been tracking hours of work to account for the additional burdens imposed by the ACA. During FY11, we are able to account for over 5,700 hours, equating to approximately $182,000 in personnel costs. Included in the estimate is time spent on rate review which has been supported by a grant from HHS, reimbursing the department $112,757 in personnel costs. In addition to the above, numerous hours have been incurred by the Commissioner or our actuary

Virginia

The Commonwealth of Virginia has estimated the Medicaid cost of federal health reform to the State to be between $1.5 and $2.2 billion through 2022. These estimates have not been updated since August 2010, but because of the length of the recession and the current pace of economic growth, along with other developments in our understanding of the full impact of PPACA, the higher end of the cost range seems more realistic. For example, in a study completed for Medicaid Health Plans of America, Milliman, Inc. has estimated that the PPACA-mandated tax on health insurance companies, which did not exclude Medicaid health plans, will cost Virginia, a heavily managed Medicaid state, approximately $430 - $500 million through 2023; this was not included in Virginia's 2010 estimates of the PPACA cost, meaning this $430 - $500 million would be in addition to the $1.5 to $2.2 billion already estimated. Virginia is in the process of re-estimating impacts in preparation for the 2012 Medicaid forecast due in the fall of 2012. At that time, the estimates should better reflect the current economic environment in Virginia, and reflect a better understanding of the PPACA impact based on subsequent analysis and federal guidance that was not available for the 2010 estimates.”

Wisconsin

If implemented, the PPACA will force a heavy financial burden upon the people of Wisconsin through increased health insurance premiums, the expansion of Medicaid, and a new entitlement that will create new inequities among working families. Moreover, much of the new spending will not be used to increase coverage in Wisconsin, which has already achieved the levels of insurance that is aspired to under PPACA. Public dollars will simply displace private dollars at a higher cost.

New estimates from the Obama Administration and the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office (CBO) demonstrate that Medicaid enrollment will be higher than previously estimated. The Wisconsin Department of Health Services (DHS) believes that increased enrollment among currently eligible individuals and retention of higher income children due to Maintenance of Effort (MOE) requirements will drive up the cost to the state. However, the direct burden on the state budget remains uncertain. New eligibility rules will result in some individuals migrating into and out of Medicaid. Rules on federal matching rates that are critical to our fiscal analysis have not been finalized.

More than 750,000 childless adults, parents, caretakers, and children are already enrolled in Wisconsin Medicaid programs. There will be no additional federal assistance for the vast majority of these individuals and future enrollees. Some additional federal assistance will apply only to a relatively small number of individuals. Whether the federal government will “buy out” the state share of some eligibility groups is unknown at this time. It will matter little to taxpayers whether the costs will count as federal or state expenditures. Increased federal control over the management of the Medicaid program is stifling innovation and threatens to unnecessarily drive up costs.

Wyoming

The costs of maintaining our Medicaid program are fast becoming a serious threat to our state general funds. The 2013-2014 biennial budget for Medicaid in Wyoming includes $560 million in state general fund dollars. This is just the cost to provide care to the current population of approximately 76,000 enrollees. A study of Wyoming impacts from PPACA conducted by The Lewin Group in 2010 estimates an additional 31,000 enrollees due to the Medicaid expansion in 2014 – an increase of over 40%. It is difficult to estimate what the fiscal impact of this huge bolus of new enrollees will be. The State legislature commissioned a Medicaid Cost Study in 2011 and we expect findings in mid-2012. We do know, however, that the cost of implementing a new eligibility and enrollment system for Medicaid will cost over $3.5 million in state general funds after the 90/10 federal match.

The larger and more detrimental impact of the implementation of PPACA is likely to be to our private health insurance markets. An actuarial study of our small group and individual markets conducted by Gorman Actuarial, LLC in 2011 indicates that we can expect premiums to go up an average of 30% to 40% in the individual market due solely to new insurance regulations effective in 2014. When you add the projected impact of higher morbidity of new entrants into the market and essential benefit mandates, we can expect overall 40% to 60% increases in premiums in the individual market.

Given that Wyoming already has a higher percentage of small employers that self-insure than other states, it’s not unreasonable to expect a number of small employers to stop providing insured coverage and either move their employees to the individual market or to self-insure to avoid regulation. During recent town hall meetings, a number of small employers indicated that it would be cheaper for them to pay the PPACA penalties for not providing coverage than it will be to continue to provide coverage. The Lewin Group estimates a net loss of over 8,000 covered lives in the employer sponsored insurance market.

With all the changes in PPACA, Gorman Actuarial estimates over 41,000 people in Wyoming will remain uninsured by 2016. This represents about half of the 83,000 people currently uninsured in our state.

Alex,

Please see below. My understanding of the reason why Gov. Fallin didn't sign is because she is planning/has her own lawsuit, but I don't know if that is public knowledge yet.

How would you like me to respond or should I just refer to your office?

Thanks!

GOP Govs Request Expedited Review of Healthcare Lawsuits

28 Republican governors sent a letter to President Obama today requesting him to direct the United States Department of Justice to support an expedited appellate process for the pending healthcare lawsuits to reach the United States Supreme Court as soon as possible.

A copy of the letter is attached.

The letter states, in part:

"This request for expedited review takes no position on PPACA, but seeks only to obtain the Supreme Court's final determination as soon as possible.

Given the daunting and costly financial and regulatory burdens that our states and the private sector will face in implementing PPACA over the coming years, particularly during this unprecedented budgetary time, public interest requires expediting a final resolution of the litigation to give certainty as soon as possible. We should not endure years of litigation in the circuit courts, when the Supreme Court can promptly provide finality. This resolution can help prevent the states and the private sector from undertaking potentially unnecessary measures and expenses. More importantly, our businesses, health care providers, and citizens of our great nation need to know as soon as possible whether all or part of the law will be upheld or stricken, so they know their options and obligations."

GOP Govs Unveil Medicaid Reform Principles

29 Republican governors unveiled today seven guiding principles for reforming Medicaid in a letter written to Senator Orrin Hatch, Ranking Member of the Senate Committee on Finance and Representative Fred Upton, Chairman of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce.

The principles will serve as the framework for future specific recommendations from the governors as they begin what will be an ongoing dialogue with Congress as it weighs how to reform Medicaid.

“Aside from the full repeal of Obamacare, no issue is more important to fixing our nation’s healthcare system than improving Medicaid,” said RGA Chairman Rick Perry. “Governors must be given the flexibility to craft solutions based on their states’ specific needs without constantly needing to ask the federal government for permission.”

“Medicaid is on an unsustainable trajectory that threatens the fiscal health of our states and the nation,” said RGA Policy Chairman Haley Barbour. “Just as governors answered the call to help reform the welfare system in the 1990’s, today’s Republican governors are committed to working with Congress to reform Medicaid.”

The seven principles are:

1. States and territories are best able to make decisions about the design of their healthcare systems based on the respective needs, culture and values of each state.

2. States and territories should also have the opportunity to innovate by using flexible, accountable financing mechanisms that are transparent and that hold states accountable for efficiency and quality healthcare. Such mechanisms may include a block grant, a capped allotment outside of a waiver, or other accountable and transparent financing approaches.
3. Medicaid should be focused on quality, value-based and patient-centered programs that work in concert to improve the health of our states' citizens and drive value over volume, quality over quantity, at the same time containing costs.
4. States and territories must be able to streamline and simplify the eligibility process to ensure coverage for those most in need, and states must be able to enforce reasonable cost sharing for those able to pay.
5. States and territories can provide Medicaid recipients a choice in their healthcare coverage plans, just as many have in the private market, if they are able to leverage the existing insurance marketplace through innovative support mechanisms.
6. Territories must be ensured full integration into the federal healthcare system so they can provide healthcare coverage to those in need with the flexibility afforded to the states.
7. States must have greater flexibility in eligibility, financing and service delivery in order to provide long-term services and support that keep pace with the people Medicaid serves. New federal requirements threaten to stifle state innovation and investment. In addition, since dual eligibles now constitute 39 percent of Medicaid spending, Medicare policies that shift costs to the states must be reversed and the innovative power of states should be rewarded by a shared-savings program that allows full flexibility to target and deliver services, which are cost-effective for both state and federal taxpayers.

A copy of the letter is attached. Gov. Rick Snyder has sent a separate letter to Chairman Upton.

All –

In a letter sent today to all Oklahoma state senators and representatives, Governor Mary Fallin asked lawmakers to pass legislation (HB 2130) furthering the creation of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange. The letter (attached) explains that an Oklahoma based health insurance exchange:

- Will help to avoid the forced implementation of a federal exchange run by the Obama administration and Washington, D.C.
- Will be run using conservative, free market principles
- Will empower consumers by providing them with more information and ultimately lower health insurance costs in Oklahoma

The full text of the letter is below:

Dear Lawmaker,

As you may know, this Wednesday, March 23, will represent the one year anniversary of the enactment of President Obama's Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA). I believe, as I know many of our legislators and the majority of our citizens do, that the PPACA is unconstitutional, fatally flawed and ultimately harmful to our economy and the health of our citizens. That is exactly what I told both the Obama administration and our federal lawmakers, in no uncertain terms, when I voted against the law as a United States Congresswoman.

As governor of Oklahoma and as a citizen, it is my great hope that the PPACA is either repealed by federal legislators or else is struck down by the United States Supreme Court. Our Oklahoma Congressional delegation has my full support as they work towards the former option, and Attorney General Scott Pruitt has my support and encouragement as he leads Oklahoma's legal challenge. As governor, I have sent multiple letters to the White House explaining the unreasonable economic burdens the PPACA places on Oklahoma and have requested that the White House fast track the lawsuits against President Obama's health care law to the Supreme Court. In short, I have been proud to be part of a united conservative front in Oklahoma opposing what I believe to be one of the most dangerous and counterproductive pieces of legislation to come out of Washington in decades.

I remain deeply concerned, however, that the PPACA will remain the law of the land for some time to come. As long as that is the case, the president's law will continue to actively assault both the rights of our citizens and the tenth amendment rights of our states. For that reason, I believe Oklahoma's lawmakers must continue to find new ways to prevent a federal takeover of our health care system in Oklahoma.

One of the most important ways we can fight that federal takeover is to implement an Oklahoma-based, free-market health insurance exchange so that Washington does not force its own model on the state. While we have already begun to create that exchange, the next step in the process is the passage of HB 2130, which creates a governing board for the program. I am writing now to ask you to support that legislation.

Under current law as outlined by the PPACA, the federal government will begin establishing a federally designed and run health insurance exchange in 2013 in all 50 states except those that have begun implementing their own state-based exchanges. If we do not develop our own exchange, if we instead do nothing, then we will be powerless to oppose the creation of a federally run program in Oklahoma.

As you may know, health insurance exchanges, when done right, have long been a conservative idea. In 2009, our Legislature authorized the creation of such an exchange based on model legislation introduced by the conservative Heritage Foundation.

Using that model, the Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange we are seeking to create will be an online health insurance market that empowers consumers by providing vastly improved access to information on private insurance products and expanding the purchasing power of individuals and small businesses. Private insurance products will be sold to meet individual needs, insurers will compete to promote real choices for consumers and the free-market will work to lower costs. Unlike the federal exchange Washington may try to force on us, the exchange we are trying to build offers a positive, free-market alternative to the big government, tax-and-spend plan that is the PPACA.

If we do not pass HB 2130 and implement an Oklahoma-based exchange, the results will be devastating for those of us who oppose ObamaCare and the federal intrusion it represents. Without an Oklahoma exchange, the state is virtually guaranteed to be subject to a federally run, Washington D.C. substitute. And unlike the one we develop here in Oklahoma, that federal exchange will rely on public health care plans and be funded by public debt for many years to come.

For that reason, a vote against an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange and HB 2130 is a vote to leave Oklahoma defenseless against a federal takeover, as mandated by ObamaCare, beginning in the year 2013.

As a conservative, I hope the PPACA is long gone by then. I join the majority of our lawmakers, as well as the majority of our citizens, in being passionately opposed to the federal health care law. It is my great hope to see it overturned or repealed. But I believe we have an obligation to plan for a future where that may not happen. And in the event the federal health care law is not overturned by 2013, I am not willing to allow the federal government to seize what has been a conservative idea and turn it into something unrecognizable and harmful to the state of Oklahoma and its citizens.

For all these reasons, I hope you will join me in supporting a free-market, conservative exchange and defend Oklahoma against the federalization of our health insurance by voting for HB 2130.

Sincerely,

Governor Mary Fallin

Fantastic. I will book that studio.

The segment will probably be focused on the budget since that's been a big headline throughout the Midwest this week. If things change I'll let you know.

But right now we're confirmed for Wednesday and I will follow up that morning on further details.

Thanks for your help and have a great weekend!!!

And did you have a specific topic? OK has its own lawsuit on Obamacare, cutting state budgets always a good topic too.

Please review answers to NFIB questions below. Due 5pm today:

1. During my first legislative session as governor, we saw many pro-business reforms signed into law all aimed at lowering the cost of doing business in Oklahoma including workers' compensation reform, lawsuit reform, and various government modernizations to cut red tape and make state government more "customer friendly" toward small businesses and the taxpayer
2. My number one priority as governor is to focus on jobs and the economy so that we can get Oklahoma moving forward. To do so we must focus on creating the very best business environment possible in our state in order to create and retain jobs, and attract more investment to our state.
3. We're already seeing workers' comp rates lowered for many Oklahoma businesses, and we expect businesses, especially in the medical field, to reap the benefits of lower business costs due to our comprehensive lawsuit reform measures. Additionally, through the creation of a "one-stop shop" for business licensing, we hope to provide a central location that will make it easier small business owners to get the necessary permits and documents.
4. There is always more that can be done to make Oklahoma more business friendly. The attitude that I bring to the governor's office is that we should always examine ways we can do things more efficiently and in a more cost-effective manner.

Aaron,

I'm following up on our exchange in October regarding an interview with Gov. Fallin on her efforts to reduce red tape for business owners. I'm working against a 5 pm deadline tomorrow. Do you think you could help me get answers to these questions by then?

1. Improving your state's regulatory environment was one of the key initiatives you mentioned in your inaugural address. What actions have you taken since then to reduce red tape for small business owners?
2. Why do you think it's important to revamp your state's regulatory structure?
3. What results do you expect to see given the reforms you're pursuing on the regulatory front?
4. What remains on your legislative wish list for this next session when it comes to regulatory reform?

Thanks,

Adam

Adam wren did such a great job on the economic development story last month he will get another chance with this one. Any states come to mind that he could highlight in the story. Have the my business editorial meeting tomorrow. I need some state story ideas. I think we have just about killed the topics of unemployment insurance, public pension reform, and state budgets. I have a few ideas that I think might make for interesting stories but haven't quite figured out the story-line.

1. Immigration reform --- lots of bills passed this year. Mostly in the south and most had to do with e-verify. Could do a story contrasting the conservative vs. progressive states (Maryland and California passed DREAM act lite bills).
2. Paycheck protection --- look at the states that have passed laws or did it by executive order and how it has impacted union contributions and subsequently election results.
3. Health insurance exchanges --- just do an update on the states dilemma whether to start exchanges or wait for the supreme court decision, and what small business is looking for in the exchanges.
4. Minimum wage I told you so story. How the unemployment rate for teenagers and young adults has increased significantly, interview businesses that say how they won't hire because the young, inexperienced employee does not increase sales or add value to bottom-line
5. Regulatory reform efforts --- followup to last months story on new gov's and their privatized economic development agencies with what they are doing to reduce regulations. Good lead in to our sensible regulations coalition work
6. Tort reform --- highlight victories in 2011, new areas of tort cases like trespassers liability, ADA suits, consumer fraud cases\
7. Amazon issue --- not sure we can write this without a position or a bias but it would make for an interesting story, with the Texas and Tennessee promises, and the California effort to attach nexus to the Kindle subsidiary and subsequent Amazon threat to bring a referendum

Help me out guys. Thanks.

Katie –

I'm still hung up on the cost. $50 million is a lot of money for something that I don't even think is a core government function, and though I may have felt different 10 years ago, I no longer view federal money sent to states as "free money." I don't have any strong dispute with the policy argument presented in this letter, but the cost is really a problem for me. Any argument you have to address that concern is welcome.

Subject: Governor Fallin Letter to Lawmakers in Support of HB 2130, Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange
Importance: High

The letter (attached and in text below) explains that an Oklahoma based health insurance exchange:

- Will help to avoid the forced implementation of a federal exchange run by the Obama administration and Washington, D.C.
- Will be run using conservative, free market principles
- Will empower consumers by providing them with more information and ultimately lower health insurance costs in Oklahoma

Dear Lawmaker,

As you may know, this Wednesday, March 23, will represent the one year anniversary of the enactment of President Obama's Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA). I believe, as I know many of our legislators and the majority of our citizens do, that the PPACA is unconstitutional, fatally flawed and ultimately harmful to our economy and the health of our citizens. That is exactly what I told both the Obama administration and our federal lawmakers, in no uncertain terms, when I voted against the law as a United States Congresswoman.

As governor of Oklahoma and as a citizen, it is my great hope that the PPACA is either repealed by federal legislators or else is struck down by the United States Supreme Court. Our Oklahoma Congressional delegation has my full support as they work towards the former option, and Attorney General Scott Pruitt has my support and encouragement as he leads Oklahoma's legal challenge. As governor, I have sent multiple letters to the White House explaining the unreasonable economic burdens the PPACA places on Oklahoma and have requested that the White House fast track the lawsuits against President Obama's health care law to the Supreme Court. In short, I have been proud to be part of a united conservative front in Oklahoma opposing what I believe to be one of the most dangerous and counterproductive pieces of legislation to come out of Washington in decades.

I remain deeply concerned, however, that the PPACA will remain the law of the land for some time to come. As long as that is the case, the president's law will continue to actively assault both the rights of our citizens and the tenth amendment rights of our states. For that reason, I believe Oklahoma's lawmakers must continue to find new ways to prevent a federal takeover of our health care system in Oklahoma.

One of the most important ways we can fight that federal takeover is to implement an Oklahoma-based, free-market health insurance exchange so that Washington does not force its own model on the state. While we have already begun to create that exchange, the next step in the process is the passage of HB 2130, which creates a governing board for the program. I am writing now to ask you to support that legislation.

Under current law as outlined by the PPACA, the federal government will begin establishing a federally designed and run health insurance exchange in 2013 in all 50 states except those that have begun implementing their own state-based exchanges. If we do not develop our own exchange, if we instead do nothing, then we will be powerless to oppose the creation of a federally run program in Oklahoma.

As you may know, health insurance exchanges, when done right, have long been a conservative idea. In 2009, our Legislature authorized the creation of such an exchange based on a proposal introduced by the conservative Heritage Foundation.

Using that model, the Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange we are seeking to create will be an online health insurance market that empowers consumers by providing vastly improved access to information on private insurance products and expanding the purchasing power of individuals and small businesses. Private insurance products will be sold to meet individual needs, insurers will compete to promote real choices for consumers and the free-market will work to lower costs. Unlike the federal exchange Washington may try to force on us, the exchange we are trying to build offers a positive, free-market alternative to the big government, tax-and-spend plan that is the PPACA.

If we do not pass HB 2130 and implement an Oklahoma-based exchange, the results will be devastating for those of us who oppose ObamaCare and the federal intrusion it represents. Without an Oklahoma exchange, the state is virtually guaranteed to be subject to a federally run, Washington D.C. substitute. And unlike the one we develop here in Oklahoma, that federal exchange will rely on public health care plans and be funded by public debt for many years to come.

For that reason, a vote against an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange and HB 2130 is a vote to leave Oklahoma defenseless against a federal takeover, as mandated by ObamaCare, beginning in the year 2013.

As a conservative, I hope the PPACA is long gone by then. I join the majority of our lawmakers, as well as the majority of our citizens, in being passionately opposed to the federal health care law. It is my great hope to see it overturned or repealed. But I believe we have an obligation to plan for a future where that may not happen. And in the event the federal health care law is not overturned by 2013, I am not willing to allow the federal government to seize what has been a conservative idea and turn it into something unrecognizable and harmful to the state of Oklahoma and its citizens.

For all these reasons, I hope you will join me in supporting a free-market, conservative exchange and defend Oklahoma against the federalization of our health insurance by voting for HB 2130.

Sincerely,

Governor Mary Fallin

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
November 19, 2012

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor Mary Fallin Announcement re/ PPACA Talking Points

- While Governor Mary Fallin has opted not to build a state-based insurance exchange or expand the Medicaid program as proposed in PPACA, she and the Oklahoma legislature remain deeply committed to the health of all Oklahoman’s. One demonstration of this commitment is that they protected the Health and Human Services agencies during the recent economic downturn from significant reductions that would jeopardize the health and safety of our citizens. The end result is that the Health and Human Services area took the smallest reduction of any of the cabinet areas.
- The Governor and her staff have been exploring the impact of PPACA and working with healthcare experts and lawmakers across the country in order to make sound decisions on implementing a state based exchange or expand Medicaid in Oklahoma. The final determination is that this law will not improve the quality of healthcare or address the escalating healthcare costs that are bankrupting our nation, nor does it provide the flexibility needed to improve health outcomes in a financially sound or sustainable manner.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovations in healthcare and the Governor is committed to building upon those innovations to create Oklahoma solutions to our healthcare problems. She welcomes the opportunity to work with the Oklahoma legislature and other stakeholders to develop an Oklahoma plan to reduce the number of uninsured families, provide quality healthcare and address rising healthcare costs.

Insurance Exchange

- There is an absence of critical guidance and regulations that would allow states to understand the full ramifications of building and implementing a state based insurance exchange. Without HHS regulation and guidance it is unclear how much flexibility and freedom of control will be provided to states operating an exchange. State based exchanges will be so in name only and it does not benefit us to fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government.
- The cost of building a PPACA compliant exchange in Oklahoma is estimated at $30 million to $50 million dollars. The cost of implementing PPACA in Oklahoma, and nationwide, is staggering and unsustainable. Governor Mary Fallin will continue to work with the Oklahoma legislature to develop financially sound healthcare solutions.

- While the pricing structure has not yet been released, HHS will likely pass the cost of the federal exchange to the insurers selling products on the exchange. This fee, in turn, will likely be passed on to the purchaser of the healthcare plan.

Medicaid Expansion

- Medicaid is an outdated program that was expanded without true reform in PPACA. The Medicaid expansion does not adequately address needed improvements in the availability or quality of healthcare services and it does not begin to address the ever increasing costs of healthcare. Further, the federal law does not provide flexibility for states to meet the unique needs of their citizens.
- Expanding Medicaid as written in PPACA would cost the State of Oklahoma as much as $475 million between fiscal years 2014 and 2020. Paying for these increases would necessitate significant cuts to other critical parts of the state's budget like education and public safety. The cost of Medicaid expansion is unsustainable and creates an additional burden on taxpayers and the federal deficit.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovative programs and fiscally responsible enhancements to the Medicaid program. In fact, Oklahoma has reduced the rate of uninsured among children to just 7%. Oklahoma has also created an outstanding on-line enrollment system that allows families in need of healthcare real time access to Medicaid coverage. These are the very successes that Oklahoma wants to build upon to create a viable healthcare system that actually begins to reduce the costs of healthcare in our state while improving health outcomes.
- Oklahoma has a history of creating innovative solutions to reducing the number of uninsured, for example the Insure Oklahoma program (created in 2006) offers premium assistance to small businesses to support the purchase of private insurance for their employees. Under PPACA the Insure Oklahoma program would be discontinued and qualifying workers (those under 138%) would be required to enroll in traditional Medicaid. Oklahoma small businesses and their employees should have the same option to purchase private insurance coverage as other large employers and their employees.
- Oklahoma does not anticipate that opting not to expand Medicaid as written in PPACA will jeopardize Oklahoma hospitals when CMS implements the mandated reduction in Disproportionate Share Hospital (DSH) funds. Oklahoma's current DSH payments do not meet the threshold for significant reduction.

Oklahoma Plan

- Governor Fallin recognizes the importance of having healthy citizens. Healthy people create a more productive workforce and children that are able to learn. The governmental system of providing healthcare (Medicaid) is important, but it should not be the primary source of healthcare for so many of our citizens. We need to transform the healthcare system into one that supports individuals and families who need a hand-up while also supporting a robust private insurance market that is focused on making people healthier.
- Oklahoma will be developing an Oklahoma Plan to reduce the number of uninsured and the costs of healthcare. The Oklahoma plan will include some of the following elements:
  - Establish goals that include improved health for our citizens
  - Empower individuals to be engaged in making good healthcare (and health) choices
  - Ensure payment incentives focus on preventive care and improving health
  - Support the purchase of private insurance products
  - Focus on reducing the cost of managing chronic disease, a major cost driver in Oklahoma, including;
    - High-risk case management
    - Chronic disease self management
    - Improving care coordination within communities of care
  - Specifically target the reduction of unnecessary hospitalizations and emergency department visits
  - Realign the public health system to support these goals
- The Oklahoma Plan will address the concerns of healthcare providers about the strain of uncompensated care by reducing the number of uninsured.
- The Oklahoma Plan will be developed with consultation from tribal nations and other stakeholders to ensure the unique needs of our citizens are met.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor Mary Fallin Announcement re/ PPACA Talking Points

- While Governor Mary Fallin has opted not to build a state-based insurance exchange or expand the Medicaid program as proposed in PPACA, she and the Oklahoma legislature remain deeply committed to the health of all Oklahoman’s. One demonstration of this commitment is that they protected the Health and Human Services agencies during the recent economic downturn from significant reductions that would jeopardize the health and safety of our citizens. The end result is that the Health and Human Services area took the smallest reduction of any of the cabinet areas.
- The Governor and her staff have been exploring the impact of PPACA and working with healthcare experts and lawmakers across the country in order to make sound decisions on implementing a state based exchange or expand Medicaid in Oklahoma. The final determination is that this law will not improve the quality of healthcare or address the escalating healthcare costs that are bankrupting our nation, nor does it provide the flexibility needed to improve health outcomes in a financially sound or sustainable manner.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovations in healthcare and the Governor is committed to building upon those innovations to create Oklahoma solutions to our healthcare problems. She welcomes the opportunity to work with the Oklahoma legislature and other stakeholders to develop an Oklahoma plan to reduce the number of uninsured families, provide quality healthcare and address rising healthcare costs.

Insurance Exchange

- There is an absence of critical guidance and regulations that would allow states to understand the full ramifications of building and implementing a state based insurance exchange. Without HHS regulation and guidance it is unclear how much flexibility and freedom of control will be provided to states operating an exchange. State based exchanges will be so in name only and it does not benefit us to fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government.
- The cost of building a PPACA compliant exchange in Oklahoma is estimated at $30 million to $50 million dollars. The cost of implementing PPACA in Oklahoma, and nationwide, is staggering and unsustainable. Governor Mary Fallin will continue to work with the Oklahoma legislature to develop financially sound healthcare solutions.
- While the pricing structure has not yet been released, HHS will likely pass the cost of the federal exchange to the insurers selling products on the exchange. This fee, in turn, will likely be passed on to the purchaser of the healthcare plan.

Medicaid Expansion

- Medicaid is an outdated program that was expanded without true reform in PPACA. The Medicaid expansion does not adequately address needed improvements in the availability or quality of healthcare services and it does not begin to address the ever increasing costs of healthcare. Further, the federal law does not provide flexibility for states to meet the unique needs of their citizens.
- Expanding Medicaid as written in PPACA would cost the State of Oklahoma as much as $475 million between fiscal years 2014 and 2020. Paying for these increases would necessitate significant cuts to other critical parts of the state’s budget like education and public safety. The cost of Medicaid expansion is unsustainable and creates an additional burden on taxpayers and the federal deficit.

- Oklahoma has a history of innovative programs and fiscally responsible enhancements to the Medicaid program. In fact, Oklahoma has reduced the rate of uninsured among children to just 7%. The governmental system of providing healthcare (Medicaid) is important, but it should not be the primary source of healthcare for so many of our citizens. We need to transform the healthcare system into one that supports individuals and families who need a hand-up while also supporting a robust private insurance market that is focused on making people healthier.
- Oklahoma will be developing an Oklahoma Plan to reduce the number of uninsured and the costs of healthcare. The Oklahoma plan will include some of the following elements:
  - Establish goals that include improved health for our citizens
  - Empower individuals to be engaged in making good healthcare (and health) choices
  - Ensure payment incentives focus on preventive care and improving health
  - Support the purchase of private insurance products
  - Focus on reducing the cost of managing chronic disease, a major cost driver in Oklahoma, including;
    - High-risk case management
    - Chronic disease self management
    - Improving care coordination within communities of care
  - Specifically target the reduction of unnecessary hospitalizations and emergency department visits
  - Realign the public health system to support these goals
- The Oklahoma Plan will address the concerns of healthcare providers about the strain of uncompensated care by reducing the number of uninsured.
- The Oklahoma Plan will be developed with consultation from tribal nations and other stakeholders to ensure the unique needs of our citizens are met.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Governor Mary Fallin Announcement re/ PPACA Talking Points

- While Governor Mary Fallin has opted not to build a state-based insurance exchange or expand the Medicaid program as proposed in PPACA, she and the Oklahoma legislature remain deeply committed to the health of all Oklahoman’s. One demonstration of this commitment is that they protected the Health and Human Services agencies during the recent economic downturn from significant reductions that would jeopardize the health and safety of our citizens. The end result is that the Health and Human Services area took the smallest reduction of any of the cabinet areas.
- The Governor and her staff have been exploring the impact of PPACA and working with healthcare experts and lawmakers across the country in order to make sound decisions on implementing a state based exchange or expand Medicaid in Oklahoma. The final determination is that this law will not improve the quality of healthcare or address the escalating healthcare costs that are bankrupting our nation, nor does it provide the flexibility needed to improve health outcomes in a financially sound or sustainable manner.
- Oklahoma has a history of innovations in healthcare and the Governor is committed to building upon those innovations to create Oklahoma solutions to our healthcare problems. She welcomes the opportunity to work with the Oklahoma legislature and other stakeholders to develop an Oklahoma plan to reduce the number of uninsured families, provide quality healthcare and address rising healthcare costs.

Insurance Exchange

- There is an absence of critical guidance and regulations that would allow states to understand the full ramifications of building and implementing a state based insurance exchange. Without HHS regulation and guidance it is unclear how much flexibility and freedom of control will be provided to states operating an exchange. State based exchanges will be so in name only and it does not benefit us to fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government.
- The cost of building a PPACA compliant exchange in Oklahoma is estimated at $30 million to $50 million dollars. The cost of implementing PPACA in Oklahoma, and nationwide, is staggering and unsustainable. Governor Mary Fallin will continue to work with the Oklahoma legislature to develop financially sound healthcare solutions.
- While the pricing structure has not yet been released, HHS will likely pass the cost of the federal exchange to the insurers selling products on the exchange. This fee, in turn, will likely be passed on to the purchaser of the healthcare plan.

Medicaid Expansion

- Medicaid is an outdated program that was expanded without true reform in PPACA. The Medicaid expansion does not adequately address needed improvements in the availability or quality of healthcare services and it does not begin to address the ever increasing costs of healthcare. Further, the federal law does not provide flexibility for states to meet the unique needs of their citizens.
- Expanding Medicaid as written in PPACA would cost the State of Oklahoma as much as $475 million between fiscal years 2014 and 2020. Paying for these increases would necessitate significant cuts to other critical parts of the state’s budget like education and public safety. The cost of Medicaid expansion is unsustainable and creates an additional burden on taxpayers and the federal deficit.

- Oklahoma has a history of innovative programs and fiscally responsible enhancements to the Medicaid program. In fact, Oklahoma has reduced the rate of uninsured among children to just 7%. Oklahoma has also created an outstanding on-line enrollment system that allows families in need of healthcare real time access to Medicaid coverage. These are the very successes that Oklahoma wants to build upon to create a viable healthcare system that actually begins to reduce the costs of healthcare in our state while improving health outcomes.
- Oklahoma has a history of creating innovative solutions to reducing the number of uninsured, for example the Insure Oklahoma program (created in 2006) offers premium assistance to small businesses to support the purchase of private insurance for their employees. Under PPACA the Insure Oklahoma program would be discontinued and qualifying workers (those under 138%) would be required to enroll in traditional Medicaid. Oklahoma small businesses and their employees should have the same option to purchase private insurance coverage as other large employers and their employees.
- Oklahoma does not anticipate that opting not to expand Medicaid as written in PPACA will jeopardize Oklahoma hospitals when CMS implements the mandated reduction in Disproportionate Share Hospital (DSH) funds. Oklahoma's current DSH payments do not meet the threshold for significant reduction.

Oklahoma Plan

- Governor Fallin recognizes the importance of having healthy citizens. Healthy people create a more productive workforce and children that are able to learn. The governmental system of providing healthcare (Medicaid) is important, but it should not be the primary source of healthcare for so many of our citizens. We need to transform the healthcare system into one that supports individuals and families who need a hand-up while also supporting a robust private insurance market that is focused on making people healthier.
- Oklahoma will be developing an Oklahoma Plan to reduce the number of uninsured and the costs of healthcare. The Oklahoma plan will include some of the following elements:
  - Establish goals that include improved health for our citizens
  - Empower individuals to be engaged in making good healthcare (and health) choices
  - Ensure payment incentives focus on preventive care and improving health
  - Support the purchase of private insurance products
  - Focus on reducing the cost of managing chronic disease, a major cost driver in Oklahoma, including;
    - High-risk case management
    - Chronic disease self management
    - Improving care coordination within communities of care
  - Specifically target the reduction of unnecessary hospitalizations and emergency department visits
  - Realign the public health system to support these goals
- The Oklahoma Plan will address the concerns of healthcare providers about the strain of uncompensated care by reducing the number of uninsured.
- The Oklahoma Plan will be developed with consultation from tribal nations and other stakeholders to ensure the unique needs of our citizens are met.

Reporters –

While Republican governors were recognized last week in outlets like Politico and The Wall Street Journal for their reforms and leadership positions within the GOP, the governors speaking at the DNC this week are defined by their records of increased unemployment and higher debt in their states.

There's a tremendous contrast between the results of Republican executive leadership in the GOP-led states and the leadership provided by the governors speaking this week. Please see below for more details on the governors speaking in Charlotte and the impact of President Obama's policies on their states.

- THEN: Vice President Biden Thanked The Stimulus For Helping Reopen The Former GM Plant Fisker Used Its Loan To Purchase. BIDEN: “I was there to celebrate a beginning. NOW: In February 2012, Fisker Halted Work At Its Delaware Plant And Laid Off More Than 60 Workers Because It Failed To Meet Production And Sales Milestones Promised In Its Loan Agreement. “Fisker Automotive, developer of luxury electric cars, halted work at a former GM plant in Delaware and laid off 26 workers there because it ran out of government loan money. Fisker had failed to meet production and sales milestones it had promised in the loan agreement with the Department of Energy, so loan cash was shut off last May. Fisker went on a cash diet, and solicited private investors, while it negotiated a new timetable with the DOE. The cash shortage finally forced the layoff of 26 people at the Delaware factory, which was most of the crew working there to get the former GM plant back into service. Fisker also sped up the layoffs of 40 to 45 engineers at its Anaheim, Calif., headquarters.” (James R. Healy, “Fisker, Out Of Government Money, Begins Layoffs,” USA Today, 2/7/12)

In April 2012, Fisker Laid Off 12 More Workers At Its Delaware Plant. “Fisker Automotive, the startup hybrid-electric carmaker backed by the state and federal governments, has laid off another dozen workers at its Newport-area factory. The layoffs, which occurred quietly Friday, come as the company continues closed-door negotiations with the U.S. Energy Department for a loan that could determine whether Fisker ever builds a car in Delaware. Meanwhile, the state continues to pay the utility bills for the factory, holding out hope that the automaker will still put scores of Delawareans back to work.” (Jonahtan Starkey,

Hi Alex,

This info should be plenty-thank you for sending. The topic will be Gov's position on setting up the exchanges and in the impact Medicaid expansions is having on the state of Oklahoma. Right now those are the topics and if something is added, we'll be sure to let you know.

The studio on Hudiburg Circle is being confirmed right now and I'll make sure you have the confirmation. We've ordered makeup for the governor-does she still want that? If she does we'd like her to arrive to the studio 30 minutes prior to her hit for hair/makeup. Exact hit time TBD but it's looking like 10:20pm EST/ 9:20pm CST.

For any last minute issues or questions contact Samantha Delpriore (cc'd). Her cell is 917.499.0471, desk is 212.301.5360.

Thank you!

I think the statement below pretty thoroughly outlines her position on exchanges/Medicaid expansion. Do you need more?

Also, will we be talking about just exchanges or exchanges and Medicaid expansion? Any other topics we should be prepared to cover?

Can you confirm the studio is the one on Hudiburg Circle in OKC rub by Cox ... and I assume if we arrive 15-20 mins before the hit that will be sufficient?

If for any reason we have last minute issues or questions who should I call tonight?

I will be with the gov and can be reached at: 405-535-7317

Governor Fallin: Oklahoma Will Not Pursue a State-Based Exchange or Medicaid Expansion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement announcing that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of a state-based exchange or participate in the Medicaid expansion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA):

“For the past few months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act. Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that PPACA fails to further these goals, and will in fact decrease the quality of health care across the United States while contributing to the nation’s growing deficit crisis.

“Despite my ongoing opposition to the federal health care law, the state of Oklahoma is legally obligated to either build an exchange that is PPACA compliant and approved by the Obama Administration, or to default to an exchange run by the federal government. This choice has been forced on the people of Oklahoma by the Obama Administration in spite of the fact that voters have overwhelmingly expressed their opposition to the federal health care law through their support of State Question 756, a constitutional amendment prohibiting the implementation of key components of PPACA.

“After careful consideration, I have today informed U.S. Secretary of Health Kathleen Sebelius that Oklahoma will not pursue the creation of its own health insurance exchange. Any exchange that is PPACA compliant will necessarily be ‘state-run’ in name only and would require Oklahoma resources, staff and tax dollars to implement. It does not benefit Oklahoma taxpayers to actively support and fund a new government program that will ultimately be under the control of the federal government, that is opposed by a clear majority of Oklahomans, and that will further the implementation of a law that threatens to erode both the quality of American health care and the fiscal stability of the nation.

“Furthermore, I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration’s proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years. It would also further Oklahoma’s reliance on federal money that may or may not be available in the future given the dire fiscal problems facing the federal government. On a state level, massive new costs associated with Medicaid expansion would require cuts to important government priorities such as education and public safety. Furthermore, the proposed Medicaid expansion offers no meaningful reform to a massive entitlement program already contributing to the out-of-control spending of the federal government.

“Moving forward, the state of Oklahoma will pursue two actions simultaneously. The first will be to continue our support for Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s ongoing legal challenge of PPACA. General Pruitt’s lawsuit raises different Constitutional questions than previous legal challenges, and both he and I remain optimistic that Oklahoma’s challenge can succeed.

“Our second and equally important task will be to pursue state-based solutions that improve health outcomes and contain costs for Oklahoma families. Serious reform, for instance, should be pursued in the area of Medicaid and public health, where effective chronic disease prevention and management programs could address the trend of skyrocketing medical bills linked to avoidable hospital and emergency room visits. I look forward to working with legislative leaders and lawmakers in both parties to pursue Oklahoma health care solutions for Oklahoma families.”

Good Morning,

The 2nd anniversary of Obamacare is this Friday, March 23 and the Supreme Court will hear oral arguments on the Constitutionality of the law March 26-28. An hour of the arguments on 3/28 are reserved for the impact the forced expansion of Medicaid will have on the states.

With this in mind, the RGA is heavily messaging on health care issues the next 7 days.

Today, the RGA released 7 principles for true health care reform via an op-ed by Gov. McDonnell and an event with Gov. Herbert and the American Action Forum. These principles have been developed with the input of every governors' policy shops. We wanted to lead with the principles to show that the GOP is more than just the "party of no."

On Friday, the RGA will be sending out a release marking the 2nd anniversary of Obamacare. (A copy of the release is at the bottom of this email.) We encourage you to echo with similar releases from your governor in your states.

RGA Statement on Anniversary of Obamacare

Republican Governors Association Chairman Bob McDonnell issued the following statement today on the second anniversary of Obamacare.

“The two years following the enactment of President Obama’s national healthcare takeover have made clear that the law is unsustainable, unworkable and unconstitutional. Its estimated costs have already doubled, and premiums continue to rise. The law restricts the abilities of governors and state legislatures to manage healthcare programs for the citizens of their states while simultaneously shifting billions of dollars in unfunded costs to the states. Most alarming, if upheld, President Obama’s healthcare law would usher in a brave new world of federal power that would be wholly foreign to our nation’s founders.

Republicans recognize that our current healthcare system is broken, but know there is a way to improve it that doesn’t require an unprecedented expansion in the size and scope of the federal government. Republican governors are putting forward a realistic healthcare plan that would improve the quality of care, expand access and make healthcare more affordable by focusing on market-centered reforms, eliminating the one-size fits-all approach preferred by the Obama administration and allowing states the flexibility to innovate.”

Last year, Republican governors detailed 31 specific recommendations for transforming Medicaid. This year, Republican governors are taking the next step and developing a comprehensive healthcare reform blueprint that builds on the following principles:

1. Health care reform should emphasize health: Health and well-being are determined by more than health services used. Employment, education and personal choices influence the health of each American. Unfortunately, the health care law undermines employment and limits personal choice. Meaningful reform should emphasize health by expanding economic opportunity and aligning incentives for Americans to make healthier personal choices that can drive improvements throughout the health care system.

2. Responsibility is best fostered through individual incentives and not an oppressive federal mandate that violates the economic freedoms of Americans: Americans should be in control of their health and the decisions regarding their care. Individuals and families, not governments, are best able to decide the right course of action, which is why price and quality transparency are essential to meaningful reform.

3. Health care reform should enable Medicaid to restore and maintain the economic independence as well as health status of the neediest Americans:

Medicaid should be a bridge, not a barrier, to independence. Public assistance programs should be designed to offer support for disabled Americans and help individuals return to or maintain economic independence as well as health status.

4. Health care reform should increase design flexibility in Medicaid and the private insurance market to improve coverage choices: Increasing design flexibility in Medicaid and the private insurance market will strengthen access to care for patients, reduce the regulatory burden that increases the cost of care and lead to innovative programs.

5. Health care reform should align delivery system incentives to improve the value of patient care: Delivery incentives should be aligned to focus on quality, value-based and patient-centered programs that improve health — driving value over volume and quality over quantity while containing costs.

6. Health care reform should foster state innovation to improve health care systems: States are best able to make decisions about the design of their health care systems based on the needs, culture and values of their citizens. Reform should reduce the federal disruption in state and local health care markets while increasing accountability.

7. Health care reform should address unsustainable spending at the family, state and federal levels to ease the debt burden that threatens our future: Families, states and the federal government face a dangerous budgetary outlook made worse by this health care law. The budget problem is spending; correcting it means empowering individuals and fixing the Tax Code to remove hidden costs from the health care system.

Is this OK to send to AP? Has Katie's edits

Governor Fallin was disappointed and frustrated with the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the bulk of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). She believes the law is unaffordable and unworkable, and that many aspects of the bill—including the individual mandate – grant Congress power that was not intended by the authors of the Constitution. She voted against the bill as a Congresswoman and supported the lawsuit filed by Oklahoma's attorney general as governor. She continues her adamant opposition to the law, and will actively campaign for conservative candidates, including the Republican presidential nominee, who pledge to overturn and replace the ACA.

However, in light of the Supreme Court's decision to uphold most of the ACA, Governor Fallin believes it is her responsibility to thoroughly and thoughtfully review the state of Oklahoma's options regarding the future of both Medicaid and the creation of a health insurance exchange.

Her priority is not to make a decision soon; it is to make the right decision. The governor will continue to review how the state of Oklahoma can best meet the health care needs of its citizens. Our office will proactively relay these decisions to Governor Fallin's constituents and to the media as they are made.

I think it is too long...I think we should cut this..."In the coming weeks, the governor will continue to study the issues with the Oklahoma Health Care Authority, which oversees Medicaid in Oklahoma. She and her staff are also continuing to meet with experts in the private and public sector regarding the potential creation of an exchange. Next week, she will visit with dozens of governors at the National Governor's Association meetings, where health care will be discussed at length. Additionally, her administration continues to communicate with doctors, health care providers and Oklahoma families about these issues...Governor Fallin believes these conversations and meetings are necessary to making an informed decision about health care policies that will affect hundreds of thousands of Oklahomans."

I think saying she will review it thoughtfully and thoroughly covers it. If we advertise meetings we are just inviting all kinds of people to line up at the door for mtgs, etc.

I think less is more!

See below for Sean Murphy's questions. I think if we aren't going to decide on Medicaid we can at least beef up our non-statement statement. here is what I sent earlier:

Governor Fallin was disappointed and frustrated with the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the bulk of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). She believes the law is unaffordable and unworkable, and that many aspects of the bill—including the individual mandate – grant Congress power that was not intended by the authors of the Constitution. She voted against the bill as a Congresswoman and supported the lawsuit filed by Oklahoma's attorney general as governor. She continues her adamant opposition to the law, and will actively campaign for conservative candidates, including the Republican presidential nominee, who pledge to overturn and replace the ACA.

However, in light of the Supreme Court's decision to uphold most of the ACA, Governor Fallin believes it is her responsibility to thoroughly and thoughtfully review the state of Oklahoma's options regarding the future of both Medicaid and the creation of a health insurance exchange. In the coming weeks, the governor will continue to study the issues with the Oklahoma Health Care Authority, which oversees Medicaid in Oklahoma. She and her staff are also continuing to meet with experts in the private and public sector regarding the potential creation of an exchange. Next week, she will visit with dozens of governors at the National Governor's Association meetings, where health care will be discussed at length. Additionally, her administration continues to communicate with doctors, health care providers and Oklahoma families about these issues.

Governor Fallin believes these conversations and meetings are necessary to making an informed decision about health care policies that will affect hundreds of thousands of Oklahomans. Her priority is not to make a decision soon; it is to make the right decision. The governor will continue to review how the state of Oklahoma can best meet the health care needs of its citizens. Our office will proactively relay these decisions to Governor Fallin's constituents and to the media as they are made.

Alex/Aaron:

I'm interested in putting together a weekend story on how the state plans to respond now that the new health care law has been upheld.

Now that the governor and her legal team have had a week to digest the new law, is she ready to say how the state should proceed?

Does she plan to take a cue from other GOP governors and attempt to force the feds' hand with respect to the health insurance exchanges, or does she think the state should develop its own exchange? Is there enough time to get a state exchange up and running? Does she think it would be a good idea to partner with other states?

How about the expansion of Medicaid eligibility? Does she think that might be a good idea in any way? What are her thoughts about the costs to the state versus the benefits of having more poor people, especially working poor, covered with health insurance?

Some lawmakers are advocating what appears to be open resistance to complying in any way with a law that has been approved by Congress, signed by the president and upheld as constitutional by the Supreme Court. What does the governor think of that?

I'd love to have a chance to talk tomorrow to the governor or someone in your office about the state's next step.

My plan was to put the story together for papers to use on Sunday or Monday, but since I don't believe the governor's official position has been reported at this point, we could certainly move it spot tomorrow.

Thanks,
Sean

Republican State Action on Health Insurance Exchange Development:

- 1) Three Governors have announced that they have no plans to develop an exchange: Florida (Scott), Louisiana (Jindal) and Texas (Perry)
- 2) Approximately 16 states are studying the issue further before making a final determination
- 3) Approximately nine states have announced plans to develop exchanges (that includes OK)
- 4) Kansas and Wisconsin are developing exchanges and are using the Federal Early Innovator Grant to do so

Medicaid Reform Initiatives:

Several Republican states have publically stated plans to pursue federal waivers to reform Medicaid. Examples of reforms:

- 1) Block grants
- 2) Capping growth in spending and tying it to the growth of other state spending
- 3) Reduction in benefits
- 4) Establishing a capitated rate to incentivize doctors and patients to keep spending under control. It would create a monthly lump sum payment per patient, if the cost of care is higher than the doctor is responsible for the difference, if it is lower the doctor receives a portion of the savings.
- 5) Governor Gregoire in Washington State has also come out in support of block grants

Key Points

- Health care costs are skyrocketing all over the country and Oklahoma is no different.
- Reducing the growth of health care costs can be accomplished through market based solutions such as supporting personal control over health care dollars and expanded consumer choice and competition with an emphasis on innovation, entrepreneurship and private sector health care solutions. The effective use of advances in technology can help curb health care costs.
- We must foster healthy lifestyle choices among Oklahomans such as eating better, exercising more and reducing or eliminating tobacco use.
- Obamacare will raise taxes and erode health care quality. It also fails to recognize the fact that states have the ability and right to craft their own health care solutions.
- Government sponsored universal style plans do nothing but offer inadequate care at an astronomical cost to taxpayers.
- Of Oklahoma's 3.5 million residents, approximately 494,114 are uninsured.
- Excessive mandates raise insurance premiums, in turn making insurance coverage less affordable to more people.

Additional mandates would drive the number of uninsured up.

To: Oklahoma State Representatives and State Senators
From: Governor Mary Fallin

Dear Colleague,

I would like to take this opportunity to visit with you about the extraordinary opportunity Oklahoma has to be a national leader in designing and implementing a conservative, free-market based health insurance exchange.

As you know, the idea of an Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange is not a new one. In 2009, the legislature passed a bill that authorized the creation of a health insurance exchange portal where consumers could compare and research various private health insurance plans in one online location. That online hub was designed to affect the health insurance industry in Oklahoma the same way travel websites like Travelocity and Expedia have empowered consumers across the globe.

As I told lawmakers in my State of the State address, our goal is now to fund the creation of that website and expand its role further, by creating an insurance exchange where small businesses and individuals can pool their money to expand their purchasing power, increase competition and ultimately reduce costs.

To build the IT infrastructure necessary for that exchange, the Oklahoma Health Care Authority applied for and received an Early Innovator Grant in the sum of $54 million. The state needs this money to develop the kind of high quality, free market, patient-centered exchange program that our citizens expect and deserve. Using this money will make Oklahoma one of 48 states that have already accepted such federal aid in order to begin the creation of a state exchange.

I believe the creation of this Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange represents a great opportunity for our state to develop a national model for providing citizens with quality private health insurance. I also believe it represents an important opportunity for conservative policymakers to offer a positive agenda for Oklahoma families.

I invite you to read more about our Oklahoma Health Insurance Exchange, and I've attached what I believe to be a thoughtful and informative article penned by OCPA's Jason Sutton entitled, "Health Insurance Exchanges Done Right." In it, Sutton outlines the conservative case for health insurance exchanges. He writes, "The Heritage Foundation envisioned exchanges as a centralized online marketplace that was lightly regulated, where transaction costs were reduced, where all types of health products could be bought and sold, where all insurers could participate and compete, and where competition would promote real choices for consumers."

This is the exchange that that my administration, the Speaker, the Pro Tem and others are dedicated to creating. We hope you are as excited by this opportunity as we are.

Please do not hesitate to call my office if you have questions about this issue, at 405-522-xxxx.

Sincerely,

Governor Mary Fallin

Subject: Health Insurance Exchange Plan Management Forum Overview

The NAIC hosted its second Health Insurance Exchange Plan Management Forum Dec 12-14 in Washington, DC. A summary of the daily activities during the forum is attached. This meeting brought together state insurance regulators from some 30 states, representatives of national and regional insurance companies and the Department of Health and Human Services to discuss plan management, one of the five core functions of exchanges as described by HHS.

The components of Plan Management were identified and discussed. From there, participants discussed the pieces of exchange insurance plans, the process insurers might use to submit policy forms and rates, how the states would complete their review and how the data and information contained in filing submissions could be shared with each of the states' health exchanges. There was general agreement among those attending on a number of issues including the existing role of state regulators in plan management type functions, the desire to have a single data format and that SERFF is a logical primary workflow tool for plan management supporting an exchange. The need for regulatory simplicity and efficiency was stressed by states and companies, emphasizing the need to leverage existing systems in exchange development.

There was a collective sense of urgency expressed given the requirements of the law. Under the provisions of PPACA, exchanges must be ready to start enrolling consumers into insurance plans on October 1, 2013, which implies the exchanges must be functional by early to mid-2013 to allow issuers to get their plans submitted, reviewed, approved and published on an exchange.

NAIC staff will continue to offer coordination and collaboration opportunities related to plan management for state and federal regulators as well as interested parties from the industry.

Whoops! I typed this several hours ago and forgot to hit send. have a great weekend.

All statements attributable to me.

Exchanges:

“Governor Fallin is continuing to explore the state’s options as they relate to health insurance exchanges. Her priority is to ensure the people of Oklahoma are best served by a system that increases access to health care, controls health care costs and does so in a way that is fiscally responsible. Oklahoma is not in a unique position; many other states are continuing to weigh what options best serve their citizens, as is responsible.

“However, like other states, Oklahoma’s decision making process has been significantly hampered by the failure of the federal government to provide further guidance regarding its own rules and regulations. In a letter dated July 10 of this year (available here), Governor Bob McDonnell, acting on behalf of Republican governors, asked the White House dozens of questions concerning the implementation of insurance exchanges as well as the administration’s proposed Medicaid expansion. To date, these questions have not been answered. Governor Fallin is extremely frustrated that states have been asked to make important decisions regarding the health outcomes of their citizens with little or no information provided by the administration. Basic questions such as ‘how much will an insurance exchange cost the state of Oklahoma?’ have still been left unanswered. It is disappointing and frustrating that so little information has been provided to states. “

Regarding the impending Nov 16 deadline to submit a plan for a health insurance exchange:

“The November 16 ‘deadline’ to submit a plan for an insurance exchange is an internal agency deadline, not in statute, with no obvious penalties for states that do not meet it. After reviewing ACA guidelines and conferring with other states, our policy staff does not believe it is true that Oklahoma will necessarily be subject to a federal exchange if it misses the November 16 deadline. Obama administration officials have confirmed that, calling the deadline a ‘rolling deadline.’ Again, much of the confusion surrounding the ACA and health insurance exchanges is the result of the federal government refusing to answer simple questions about its own law.”

Medicaid expansion:

“The governor did say she would make a decision sometime after the election, when it was clearer what the future of the ACA would be. The election ended a very short time ago, as you know. Her priority is not to make this decision as quickly as possible; it is to make the right decision. Governor Fallin is still conferring with other lawmakers, her cabinet, and health care experts in Oklahoma and around the country as to what course of action best serves the people of Oklahoma.”

Healthcare Advisors and Action Officers:

Before we head into a holiday, we'd like to host a call today, Tuesday at 5 PM EST to recap the governors-only call today and talk about states decisions heading into next week. Please join us for a brief call at 5 PM to discuss moving parts. If you are unable to join, please feel free to follow up with us at another time this afternoon.

As the Action Officers heard yesterday, the governors will consider writing a letter to the President asking a host of questions regarding unanswered questions for PPACA post SCOTUS decision. Everything from exchanges to MOE to Medicaid to financing mechanisms.

If they decide to head down that trail, we'll work with all of you on content. As an FYI, NGA wrote the Secretary last week. Attached is their letter.

We'll be providing you more communication materials for next week as many of you head into NGA in Williamsburg.

Please don't hesitate to call us if you have ideas/questions/ suggestions.

Best,
Marie

Fifteen governors reject or leaning against expanded Medicaid program

by Elise Viebeck
07/03/12

At least 15 governors have indicated they will not participate in the expansion of Medicaid under the healthcare law, striking a blow to President Obama's promise of broader insurance coverage.

Before Thursday's Supreme Court ruling, states had the option of either increasing their Medicaid rolls or being penalized by the federal government. The high court struck down that offer as unconstitutional.

Governors still have a financial incentive to participate in the expansion of coverage for low-income people, since the government will foot most of the bill through 2016. But the decision is also loaded with politics, particularly for Republican governors who are adamantly opposed to "ObamaCare."

"You can make the political call real quick, but the actual decision is a complicated one," said Matt Salo of the National Association of Medicaid Directors. "Governors are going to be looking at the numbers and asking: Does this make sense for us?"

Seven states with Republican governors have given a flat "no" to the Medicaid expansion since the Supreme Court ruling, according to reports and press statements.

States that will decline to participate include Florida, where Gov. Rick Scott (R) turned his opposition to the law into a political career, and Louisiana, where Gov. Bobby Jindal (R) has vowed to help elect Mitt Romney as president in order to repeal it.

In eight other states – seven with GOP governors – the Medicaid expansion seems unlikely, given comments from governors and their offices.

Texas Gov. Rick Perry (R) "has no interest in fast-tracking any portion of this bankrupting and overreaching legislation," spokeswoman Lucy Nashed said in a statement Monday. "We will continue to call for the full repeal of the bill."

Virginia Gov. Bob McDonnell (R), considered a contender to be Romney's vice-presidential nominee, said his focus is on November.

"The only way to stop Barack Obama's budget-busting healthcare takeover is by electing a new president," McDonnell said in a statement following the court's decision.

New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie (R), also the subject of VP speculation, has not announced what his state will do. His political position is trickier, since he leads a blue state where there is more support for the healthcare law.

In its original form, the Affordable Care Act would have pulled all federal funds for state Medicaid programs that did not expand as the law intended.

Chief Justice John Roberts strongly criticized that approach in his opinion for the majority.

“The financial ‘inducement’ Congress has chosen is much more than ‘relatively mild encouragement’ ” to expand Medicaid, Roberts wrote. “It is a gun to the head.”

Past estimates have found that, as designed, the law’s expansion would have provided healthcare access to an additional 17 million low-income Americans.

“States have a lot to consider,” said Robin Rudowitz with the Kaiser Commission on Medicaid and the Uninsured. “That is a lot of federal money sitting on the table.”

Alan Weil with the National Academy for State Health Policy said states that do not comply could raise the ire of some in Congress.

“If states turn down that offer, it leaves a lot of people uninsured. If we end up in that place, a lot of people in Congress are going to say that is a problem,” he said.

Several Democrats have expressed confidence that the bill’s intention to expand healthcare coverage can still be fulfilled.

Peter Orszag, who led the White House budget office during the healthcare debate and had a major role in shaping the legislation, said states might come around eventually.

He said the law’s coverage expansion would be significantly undercut if a large number of states opt out.

“There may be significant gaps that open up, and that would be unfortunate,” he said, noting that more than half of the coverage expansion was set to come through Medicaid.

But Orszag said there is plenty of precedent .for states to expand their Medicaid programs when they don’t have to. About 60 percent of current Medicaid spending goes toward people or benefits that are not mandated by federal law, he said. States decide to provide those optional benefits because the federal government bears most of the cost – and it would cover an even bigger share of the Affordable Care Act’s expansion.

The federal government will cover the entire cost of the expansion for a few years. Its share begins to drop after that, but Orszag said it won't fall far enough to be a bad deal for states.

"A 90 percent subsidy rate is going to be hard to resist," Orszag said Monday on a conference call organized by Foreign Affairs magazine.

All:

Many of you have asked us if we are preparing materials for you to use pre/post Supreme Court decision. The answer is “yes”, and we will provide those documents to you in the next week or so since we are uncertain of a court decision date. We will discuss this preparation further this Monday on our RGPPC Action Officer call. Subsequent healthcare conference calls will be scheduled before Scottsdale to walk through the documents once they are ready. We do intend to have more detailed discussions in Scottsdale at our healthcare symposium about moving parts.

In the meantime, please see a memo below prepared and sent by the Speaker’s Office today. Please don’t hesitate to contact us if you have any questions.

*As mentioned by the Speaker at this morning's House GOP Conference meeting, here are the talking points the Speaker's office is currently using in response to questions about the upcoming Supreme Court ruling on President Obama's health care law***

TALKING POINTS: WHAT WILL REPUBLICANS DO IF THE U.S. SUPREME COURT STRIKES DOWN ALL OR PART OF THE PRESIDENT’S HEALTH CARE LAW?

- The president’s health care law is making things worse -- raising health costs and making it harder for small businesses to hire workers. The only way to change this is by repealing ObamaCare in its entirety.

- Unless the Court throws out the entire law, we need to repeal what is left of ObamaCare and enact common-sense, step-by-step reforms that protect Americans' access to the care they need, from the doctor they choose, at a lower cost.
- Republicans will not repeat the Democrats' mistakes. We won't rush to pass a massive bill the American people don't support.
- Health care coverage has become too expensive for too many people. The number-one health care concern of families and small business is the cost of health care, and Republicans' health care reforms will lower costs.
- Women make 85 percent of the health care decisions in our country, and represent the vast majority of health care professionals. Republican health care reforms will ensure families and doctors make health care decisions -- not Washington.
- We want families to be able to make their own choices in health care, visit the doctor of their choosing, and receive the health care they and their doctor feel is best. Those decisions shouldn't be made by Washington.

Hope all is well. I was looking at the exchange issue and wondered on the impact of Art. 2, sec. 37. According to Art. 2, sec. 37 of the Oklahoma constitution, "a law or rule shall not compel, directly or indirectly, any person, employer or health care provider to participate in any health care system." A health care system is "any public or private entity whose function or purpose is the management of, processing of, enrollment of individuals for or payment for, in full or in part, health care services or health care data or health care information for its participants."

My question is whether a health care exchange may be a health care system because it is a public enrollment of individuals in health care services and calls for the gathering and public disclosure of health care data. Consequently, the state may not be able to pass a law or rule establishing a health care exchange.

Initial Guidance to States on Exchanges

This guidance document is the first in a series of documents that the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) intends to publish over the next three years to provide information to States and the Territories seeking to establish a Health Insurance Exchange (Exchange) under Section 1311(b) of the Affordable Care Act. The Secretary intends to issue regulations for public comment under Section 1321(a) in 2011, but is providing this guidance earlier to assist States and Territories with their overall planning, including legislative plans for 2011.

The first Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM), which will address many of the basic federal requirements outlined below, is scheduled for publication in the spring of 2011. Additional regulations are scheduled for publication later in 2011 and in 2012. These regulations will be subject to public comment.

Following a brief overview, this guidance focuses on four main categories:

- Principles and priorities
- Outline of statutory requirements
- Clarifications and policy guidance
- Federal support for the establishment of State-based Exchanges

What is an Exchange?

An Exchange is a mechanism for organizing the health insurance marketplace to help consumers and small businesses shop for coverage in a way that permits easy comparison of available plan options based on price, benefits and services, and quality. By pooling people together, reducing transaction costs, and increasing transparency, Exchanges create more efficient and competitive markets for individuals and small employers.

Historically, the individual and small group health insurance markets have suffered from adverse selection and high administrative costs, resulting in low value for consumers. Exchanges will allow individuals and small businesses to benefit from the pooling of risk, market leverage, and economies of scale that large businesses currently enjoy.

Beginning with an open enrollment period in 2013, Exchanges will help individuals and small employers shop for, select, and enroll in high-quality, affordable private health plans that fit their needs at competitive prices. Exchanges will assist eligible individuals to receive premium tax credits or coverage through other Federal or State health care programs. By providing one-stop shopping, Exchanges will make purchasing health insurance easier and more understandable.

Principles and Priorities

The following principles and priorities will inform federal funding and technical support for State establishment of Exchanges:

- Establishing a State-based Exchange. Establishment of an Exchange is a critical step that States must take to be on track for achieving certification of an Exchange by January 1, 2013 under Section 1321. Establishment of an Exchange requires a planning process leading to State action, by legislation or other means, to create an Exchange entity with the authority necessary to meet all the Exchange requirements of the Affordable Care Act. In States that choose, now or at a later point in the process, not to establish an Exchange, HHS will work with the State to establish an Exchange.
- Promoting Efficiency. Exchanges must be mindful of costs for consumers, employers, and the federal government. Exchanges should have the flexibility to respond to local market conditions and take actions to facilitate competition among plans on price and quality. Successful Exchanges will adapt to changes in the market by redesigning and modifying business plans as opportunities develop, and will have the flexibility to deal with insurers, agents, and other business partners in a manner that serves the Exchange's interest in maximizing value for consumers.

- Avoiding Adverse Selection. Successful Exchanges will avoid adverse selection by ensuring that those who buy through the Exchange are a broad mix of the healthy and the less healthy. The tax credits, which can only be accessed through the Exchanges, and insurance reforms required by the Affordable Care Act will reduce the potential for adverse selection against the Exchange, but will not eliminate it. States have flexibility to provide consistent regulation inside and outside the Exchange, and to take additional action to prevent adverse selection under section 1311(e)(1)(B). The federal government will work with States to maximize State flexibility in this area.
- Streamlined Access and Continuity of Care. Section 1311(d)(4)(F) requires Exchanges to evaluate and determine eligibility for applicants in Medicaid, the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP), and other health programs. Exchanges must also comply with all applicable federal statutes relating to nondiscrimination. The federal government will provide critical building blocks and financial support for achieving an efficient enrollment process including verification of eligibility for tax credits. Successful Exchanges will use those building blocks to streamline access for consumers, while also promoting seamless access for applicants eligible for other health programs beyond the Exchange coverage options. Successful Exchanges will upgrade information technology (IT) systems and other business operations, and improve continuity of care across health programs.
- Public Outreach and Stakeholder Involvement. Section 1311(d)(6) requires Exchanges to consult with a broad range of stakeholders in carrying out their activities. Successful Exchanges will undertake aggressive and multi-faceted outreach to inform the public of their services and coverage options. Successful Exchanges will work closely with consumer advocates, national insurers, and community-based insurers, including potential new market entrants, to create a competitive climate that will offer purchasers a range of product offerings.
- Public Accountability and Transparency. Accountability requires transparency. Section 1311(d)(7) requires public reports on Exchange activities, and Section 1311(e)(3) requires additional reporting, which should include standardized data reporting on price, quality, benefits, consumer choice and other factors that will help measure and evaluate performance. Successful Exchanges must ensure public accountability in areas such as objective information on the performance of plans; availability of automated comparison functions to inform consumer choice; fair and impartial treatment of consumers, plans and other partners; and prohibitions on conflict of interest.
- Financial Accountability. Section 1313 provides for the efficient and non-discriminatory administration of Exchanges, and seeks to prevent fraud and abuse. Successful Exchanges will streamline enrollment and minimize acquisition expenses; implement policies to prevent waste, fraud and abuse; and promote financial integrity.

Statutory Requirements

The Affordable Care Act includes two basic types of federal requirements for Exchanges, most of which are found in Section 1311. These include: 1) minimum functions Exchanges must undertake directly or, in some cases, by contract; and 2) oversight responsibilities the Exchanges must exercise in certifying and monitoring the performance of Qualified Health Plans (hereafter referred to as “plans”), as defined in Section 1301. Plans participating in the Exchanges must also comply with State insurance laws and federal requirements in the Public Health Service Act.

In defining the authority and duties of an Exchange, States in authorizing legislation or other governing documents should incorporate, by reference or explicit provisions, the federally-required Exchange functions and oversight responsibilities.

a. Exchange Functions

Section 1311(d)(4) specifies core functions that an Exchange must meet:

- Certification, recertification and decertification of plans
- Operation of a toll-free hotline
- Maintenance of a website for providing information on plans to current and prospective enrollees
- Assignment of a price and quality rating to plans
- Presentation of plan benefit options in a standardized format
- Provision of information on Medicaid and CHIP eligibility and determination of eligibility for individuals in these programs
- Provision of an electronic calculator to determine the actual cost of coverage taking into account eligibility for premium tax credits and cost sharing reductions
- Certification of individuals exempt from the individual responsibility requirement
- Provision of information on certain individuals identified in Section 1311 (d)(4)(I) to the Treasury Department and to employers
- Establishment of a Navigator program that provides grants to entities assisting consumers as described in Section 1311(i)

Additional Exchange functions include:

- Presentation of enrollee satisfaction survey results under Section 1311(c)(4)
- Provision for open enrollment periods under Section 1311(c)(6)
- Consultation with stakeholders, including tribes, under Section 1311(d)(6)
- Publication of data on the Exchange’s administrative costs under Section 1311(d)(7)

b. Oversight Responsibilities

Section 1311(c) requires the Secretary to develop regulatory standards in five areas that insurers must meet in order to be certified as qualified health plans by an Exchange:

- Marketing

- Network adequacy
- Accreditation for performance measures
- Quality improvement and reporting
- Uniform enrollment procedures

Additional areas where Exchanges must ensure plan compliance with regulatory standards established by the Secretary include:

- Information on the availability of in-network and out-of-network providers as identified in Section 1311(c)(1)(B) and (C), including provider directories and availability of essential community providers
- Consideration of plan patterns and practices with respect to past premium increases and submission of plan justifications for current premium increases under Section 1311(e)(2)
- Public disclosure of plan data identified in Section 1311(e)(3)(A), including claims handling policies, financial disclosures, enrollment and disenrollment data, claims denials, rating practices, cost sharing for out of network coverage, and other information identified by the Secretary
- Timely information for consumers requesting their amount of cost sharing for specific services from specified providers as described in Section 1311(e)(3)(C)
- Information for participants in group health plans as described in Section 1311(e)(3)(D)
- Information on plan quality improvement activities as specified in Section 1311(g)

Clarifications and Policy Guidance

States should consider the following issues in establishing an Exchange.

- Organizational Form. Section 1311(d) gives States the option to establish the Exchange as a governmental agency or nonprofit entity. Within the governmental agency category, the Exchange could be housed within an existing State office, as it is in Utah, or it could be an independent public authority, as it is in Massachusetts. Regardless of its organizational form, the Exchange must be publicly accountable, transparent, and have technically competent leadership, with the capacity and authority to take all actions necessary to meet federal standards, including the discretion to determine whether health plans offered through the Exchange are “in the interests of qualified individuals and qualified employers” as Section 1311(e)(1) requires. The Exchange also must have security procedures that meet the data and privacy standards necessary to receive tax data and other sensitive information needed for enrollment. The type of organization may affect the federal tax treatment of an Exchange, including potential income taxation (depending upon whether a nonprofit organization qualifies as a tax-exempt organization), annual filing requirements, the availability of tax-exempt bond financing, and FICA liability for employees.

- Operating Model. States have a range of options for how the Exchange operates from an “active purchaser” model, in which the Exchange operates as large employers often do in using market leverage and the tools of managed competition to negotiate product offerings with insurers, to an “open marketplace” model, in which the Exchange operates as a clearinghouse that is open to all qualified insurers and relies on market forces to generate product offerings. In both cases, consumers will end up with options, and States should provide comparison shopping tools that promote choice based on price and quality and enable consumers to narrow plan options based on their preferences.
- Small Business (SHOP) Exchanges. Small business customers offer unique challenges but also powerful opportunities for Exchanges. Successful Exchanges will streamline the process for small businesses. Federal rules will provide a framework for SHOP Exchanges, including options for how employers can provide contributions toward employee coverage that meet standards for small business tax credits.
- Risk Adjustment. Federal rules in 2011 will outline risk adjustment methods and require all health plans to report demographic, diagnostic, and prescription drug data. Further guidance addressing risk adjustment rules and formulas will be provided in subsequent regulations. As specified by the law, federal rules will apply risk adjustment consistently to all plans in the individual and small group markets, both inside and outside of Exchanges. Federal rules on reinsurance payments will apply to all plans in the individual market, and rules on risk corridors will apply to all qualified health plans in the individual and small group market, as specified in the law.
- Performance Measures. Standardized public data reporting will be needed to evaluate Exchange performance and assure transparency. Federal rules will require accurate and timely public disclosure of coverage data and other key performance measures to facilitate research, analysis, and evaluation. Given that Exchanges are likely to pursue diverse strategies on several issues, analysis of performance metrics will be critical to identifying best practices that can be shared and used to improve the performance of all Exchanges.
- State Choices. Federal rules will clarify that the following policy areas, among others, are State decisions, although HHS may offer recommendations and technical assistance to States as they make these decisions:
  - Whether to form the Exchange as a governmental agency or a non-profit entity
  - Whether to form regional exchanges or establish interstate coordination for certain functions
  - Whether to elect the option under the Affordable Care Act to use 50 employees as the cutoff for small group market plans until 2016, which would limit access to exchange coverage to employer groups of 50 or less
  - Whether to require additional benefits in the Exchange beyond the essential health benefits
  - Whether to establish a competitive bidding process for plans

- Whether to extend some or all Exchange-specific regulations to the outside insurance market (beyond what is required in the Affordable Care Act)
- State Authority. The federal government will work with the Governor of the State as the chief executive officer unless authority to operate the Exchange has been delegated to a specific authority through state law.

Federal Support

Forty-eight States and the District of Columbia were awarded their first Exchange grants under Section 1311 in September 2010. Those grants were for planning purposes and the next round of grants will be for the purpose of establishing an Exchange. The opportunity to apply for grants will be announced in February 2011 and will become available on a rolling basis throughout the next three years. States will have to meet certain milestones in order to be awarded grants in 2011, and the size of State awards may be related to the number of milestones met. States that are not able to meet required milestones by spring 2011 may apply for grants later in the year. Necessary Exchange costs will be fully funded by HHS until 2015. After January 1, 2015, Exchanges must be self funded.

Initial Guidance to States on Exchanges

This guidance document is the first in a series of documents that the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) intends to publish over the next three years to provide information to States and the Territories seeking to establish a Health Insurance Exchange (Exchange) under Section 1311(b) of the Affordable Care Act. The Secretary intends to issue regulations for public comment under Section 1321(a) in 2011, but is providing this guidance earlier to assist States and Territories with their overall planning, including legislative plans for 2011.

The first Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM), which will address many of the basic federal requirements outlined below, is scheduled for publication in the spring of 2011. Additional regulations are scheduled for publication later in 2011 and in 2012. These regulations will be subject to public comment.

Following a brief overview, this guidance focuses on four main categories:

- Principles and priorities
- Outline of statutory requirements
- Clarifications and policy guidance
- Federal support for the establishment of State-based Exchanges

What is an Exchange?

An Exchange is a mechanism for organizing the health insurance marketplace to help consumers and small businesses shop for coverage in a way that permits easy comparison of available plan options based on price, benefits and services, and quality. By pooling people together, reducing transaction costs, and increasing transparency, Exchanges create more efficient and competitive markets for individuals and small employers.

Historically, the individual and small group health insurance markets have suffered from adverse selection and high administrative costs, resulting in low value for consumers. Exchanges will allow individuals and small businesses to benefit from the pooling of risk, market leverage, and economies of scale that large businesses currently enjoy.
